19 The way of the wicked is like deep darkness;

stumble over.
20 My child, be attentive to my words;
incline your ear to my sayings.
21 Do not let them escape from
your sight;
keep them within your heart.
22 For they are life to those who find them,
and healing to all their flesh.
23 Keep your heart with all vigilance,
for from it flow the springs of life.
24 Put away from you crooked speech,
and put devious talk far
from you.
25 Let your eyes look directly

See note on 2.18–19. Door, perhaps an allusion to the maw of Sheol (see note on 1.12; 8.34; 9.14). 5.9–14 Loss of social status is as much a form of death as bodily devastation (see 3.1–8; note on 3.4). 5.10 Strangers, alien. The same word pair describes the Strange Woman (see note on 2.16–19), but here in masculine form. As with the female figure, the terminology blends several connotations: outsiders to a man's household, people of foreign nationality, a metaphor for evil persons in general (i.e., anyone who is "not us"). Loss of wealth alludes to the threat of cultural assimilation brought about by foreign trade in the postexilic period (sixth century B.C.E. and later; (see 6.1–5; 7.19–20). House of an alien recalls both the violent men (see 1.13) and the Strange Woman (see notes on 1.13; 2.16–19). 5.11 Flesh and body. See 3.8. 5.12 Hated. See note on 1.22. Discipline, reproof. See note on 1.8. 5.13 See notes on 1.6; 2.2.

5.14 Public dishonor had more meaning in ancient times than today, implying a permanent judgment on one's personhood and social status (see note on 3.4; 6.33–35).

5.15–19 A poem in which water is a metaphor for the male student's sexual enjoyment of his woman. Typically in Prov 1–9, the more abstract female personification of Wisdom (see 1.20–33) is the Strange Woman's counterpart; here the imagery of female sexuality governs the discourse, and the wife replaces Woman Wisdom (see 2.17; 7.4). As elsewhere in these poems, the language of proper and improper sexuality blends with that describing wisdom vs. folly and life vs. death (see note on 1.32–33). 5.15–16 The water imagery referring to the woman in 5.15 balances that referring to the man in 5.16 (see 4.23). 5.17 A difficult verse perhaps referring to 5.10: a man's sexual pleasure with a strange woman will mean sharing his wealth with strange men. 5.18 Fountain. See note on 1.23. 5.19–20 Deer, doe. Celebrating the beloved's beauty by comparison with animals is typical of ancient love poetry, as is delight in anatomical description, here breasts (see Song 1.9–10, 15; 2.9; 4.1–5; 5.10–16; 6.5–7; 7.1–9; cf. Prov 7.18). Be intoxicated. Repeated

- 9 How long will you lie there, O lazybones? When will you rise from your sleep?
- 10 A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to rest,
- 11 and poverty will come upon you like a robber, and want, like an armed warrior.
- 12 A scoundrel and a villain goes around with crooked speech, vocabulary links the wife and the Strange Woman, even in their opposition. 5.21–23 The conclusion of the poem moves abruptly to the larger significance of the metaphor of sexual misbehavior. Folly is equated with the iniquities of the wicked; both lead to death (see note on 1.4: 2.16–19; 3.33–35; 9.13–18). 5.21 Ways, paths. See note on 1.15–16. 5.22 Ensnare, caught. See 1.17; 6.1–5.

6.1–35 These instructions lack the symbolic dimension of the preceding. 6.1–5 Control of one's financial resources is urged (cf. 3.27–28). The motif of ensnarement (6.1, 2, 5), repeated from 5.22, unites these two units with a "stitch word" (see also 1.17). Though material self-interest is strong, one's inheritance was also a sign of the Lord's blessing. 6.1 See also 11.15. My

Could be translated "associate," "stranger," possibly a (foreign?) business partner (see 5.10). 6.2 Verbal agreements were apparently binding; on wisdom and speech, see note on 1.6. 6.3 My child. See note on 1.8. 6.6–11 Wisdom through comparison of human life with the natural world (see also 27.8; 28.1, 15; 30.15–19, 24–31). Diligent labor is a virtue (see, e.g., 10.4–5; 22.13; 24.30–34; 26.13–16; 27.23–27; 31.13–27). 6.11 Robber, armed warrior. Cf. 1.10–19. 6.12–15 These verses are connected to preceding unit by the theme of the evil man. 6.13 Winking, shuffling, pointing, body language as a clear sign of character. 6.15b 29.1b. 6.16–19 A numerical proverb with the typical $x, x + 1$ introductory formula. The last item is emphasized, perhaps originally the answer to a riddle (see 1.6; 30.15–33). The emphasis on discord in a family (lit. “strife between brothers”) may seem surprising, but family solidarity was crucial for survival. Lying is named twice (see note on 1.6; 2.12). 6.16 More typically, the student is advised on what to hate or love (see note on 1.22), but see 8.13 for Woman Wisdom’s hating. 6.17–18 On violent men, see 1.10–19. On listing of body parts, see 4.20–27.

adulteress, misleading translations; although the poem’s topic is adultery, this verse uses the more evocative “evil woman,” “strange woman” (see 2.16). 6.25 Heart. See note on 2.2. 6.26 Adultery violates a man’s exclusive right to his wife’s sexuality, his ability to be sure his sons (inheritors) are his own; hence, it threatens the stability of the social system. As outsiders to the system, prostitutes were tolerated for their services, but they are not worth the instructor’s consideration (see also 7.10; cf. 6.30). 6.27–28 Two proverbs, whose heat imagery makes them particularly appropriate as rhetoric against sexual promiscuity. 6.30 Like the prostitute whose fee is a mere loaf of bread (6.26), the hungry thief is not a major problem. 6.32 Senselessness in sexual behavior is especially deadly (see 5.21–22; 7.7; 9.16–18; see note on 1.4). 6.33–35 The exact nature of the adulterer’s punishment is unclear. The law (Lev 20.10) takes it as an offense against God, thus warranting automatic execution. Here, the offended husband seems to have a choice in exacting punishment. Wounds. Symbolic or literal (see 3.8)? Dishonor, disgrace. See note on 3.4.

7.1–27 A return to the more symbolic dimension of the Strange Woman as an embodiment of evil (see 2.16–19). The poem's inclusio (a symmetrical structure in which the end repeats the beginning) is indicated by scene changes: it opens (7.1–5) and closes (7.24–27) with an instructor in a classroom; 7.6–12 and 7.21–23 describe a scene observed at a distance; in the center, in 7.13–20, a conversation is overheard at close range. 7.1–2 My child. See note on 1.8. Words, commandments, teachings. See notes on 1.6; 1.8; 2.1. Live. See note on 1.32–33. 7.3 See 1.9. Heart. See note on 2.2. 7.4 Sister, a term of endearment for a lover, not biological kin (see 1.20–33; 5.15–19; Song 4.9). 7.6 Could this place of concealment inside a house (see note on 1.13) hint at a female instructor? The "woman looking from a window" was a popular motif on Phoenician ivories (see 2 Kings 9.30; also the place of the waiting lover in Song 2.9). 7.7 See notes on 1.4; 6.32. 7.8 Street, house. See notes on 1.13; 1.15–16; 2.18–19. 7.9 See note on 2.13.

7.10–20 This description of the woman blends several conflicting images. A woman dressed like a prostitute is an ambiguous figure; adultery (see 7.19) was far worse a sin in ancient Israel, punishable by death (Lev 20.10; but cf. 6.26–35). 7.11 Loud. See 9.13. Feet, home. See notes on 1.13; 1.15–16; 2.18–19. 7.12 Street, squares, corner, Woman Wisdom's haunts as well (see 1.20). Lies in wait. See 1.11. 7.13 Seizes. See note on 3.18. Impudent face. The same Hebrew words are translated bold face when applied to the evil man in 21.29. 7.14–20 The woman's words are as imagined by the sage; cf. 1.11–14. 7.14–18 These verses have often been interpreted as the woman's participation in a foreign fertility cult. More likely, they use poetic hyperbole to depict her breaking several Israelite laws regulating sexual activity (cf. Ex 30.22–33; Lev 7.11–21; Deut 23.19), all-punishable by death; the Strange Woman becomes a metaphor for death. Still, the poet does not flinch from the attractiveness of her offer, only adding to her danger. 7.15 Seek you, lit. "seek out your face"; with 7.13, this image provides a close-up of the woman's face pressed close to the man's. (See also note on 1.13). 7.17 Myrrh, aloes, cinnamon, the sources

- aloes, and cinnamon.

 He is like a bird rushing into a not knowing that it will cost him his life.

A change of one Hebrew letter in the first verb produces “seek”; the second verb is lit. “find,” thus creating a favorite word pair (see note on 1.13). 8.13 Fear of the LORD. See note on 1.7. Hatred, hate. See notes on 1.22; 6.16. Way. See note on 1.15–16. Perverved speech. See note on 1.13. 8.18 Prosperity, usually translated righteousness (8.20), though the moral state and its material rewards were inseparable (see note on 1.13). Through parallelism, the couplet shows riches, enduring wealth to be the concrete signs of honor, “righteousness” (see notes on 1.3; 3.4). 8.19 Gold, silver. See note on 1.13. 8.20 Way, paths. See note on 1.15–16.

8.22–31 A remarkable statement of Woman

Wisdom's antiquity and authority. Depending on translation, one of two pictures emerges: Wisdom is a child born of the deity before the creation of the cosmos or she is a preexistent being who aligns herself with God; see also 3.19–20; John 1.1–4. 8.22 Created, usually translated “acquire” (thus in 4.5, 7 get describes the student's approach to wisdom). Also possible is “conceive, engender” in the biological sense, but not “create.” See also note on 8.24–25. 8.23 Set up, used elsewhere only to refer to God's installing of the king in Zion (Ps 2.6). The Hebrew verb can also mean “to weave” and a variant form portrays the divine weaving of baby's sinews in the womb (Ps 139.13; Job 10.11). 8.24–29 Cf. the account of creation in Gen 1. 8.24–25 Depths, springs. Water was taken to be the original substance (Gen 1.2). Brought forth usually refers to the birthing of a child. If one reads “conceived/woven in the womb” for the ambiguous verbs in 8.22–23 (see notes on 8.22; 8.23), then Wisdom is portrayed as born of God as mother (see Isa 49.14–15; 42.14). Mountains, hills, not just features of the natural landscape, but the home of the gods, and the peaks of the pillars that supported the earth; they are lit. “sunk,” not shaped, and they precede the earth (8.26). 8.27–29 God is portrayed ordering

- when he drew a circle on the face of the deep,
28 when he made firm the skies above,
when he established the fountains of the deep, 29 when he assigned to the sea its limit,
so that the waters might not transgress his command, when he marked out the foundations of the earth, 30 then I was beside him, like a master worker;^v
and I was daily his^w delight, rejoicing before him always, 31 rejoicing in his inhabited world and delighting in the human race.
- 32 “And now, my children, listen
to me:
happy are those who keep my ways.
33 Hear instruction and be wise,
and do not neglect it.
34 Happy is the one who listens
to me,
watching daily at my gates, waiting beside my doors.
35 For whoever finds me finds life and obtains favor from the LORD;
36 but those who miss me injure themselves;
all who hate me love death.”

Wisdom's Feast

- 9 Wisdom has built her house,
she has hewn her seven pillars.
2 She has slaughtered her animals,
she has mixed her wine,
she has also set her table.
3 She has sent out her servant-girls, she calls
from the highest places in the town,
4 “You that are simple, turn in here!”
To those without sense she says,
5 “Come, eat of my bread and drink of the wine I have mixed.
6 Lay aside immaturity,^x and live,
and walk in the way of insight.”

General Maxims

- 7 Whoever corrects a scoffer wins abuse;
whoever rebukes the wicked gets hurt.
8 A scoffer who is rebuked will only hate you;
the wise, when rebuked, will love you.
9 Give instruction^y to the wise, and they will become wiser still;
teach the righteous and they will gain in learning.

Repeated verbs in an inclusio, or symmetrical pattern, unite Wisdom's playful activity with God to her delight in humans on earth. 8.32–36 Woman Wisdom's discourse continues. Wisdom's ways lead from the public arena (8.1–3) to her gates and doors (her house; see notes on 1.13; 1.15–16; 2.18–19; 5.8; 9.1). 8.34 Happy. See note on 1.13. Hate, love. See note on 1.22.

9.1–18 Poems on Woman Wisdom (9.1–6) and Woman Folly (9.13–18) frame a central collection of sayings (9.7–12). The focus on the houses of the two women continues familiar themes (see note on 1.13) and also seems to expand upon the proverb in 14.1. On food as metaphor for moral perspective, see note on 1.31. 9.1 Wisdom, the plural form here (cf. the singular in 1.20–33) evokes 14.1a (which is lit. “The wisdom of women builds a house”); perhaps the plural is one of respect (cf. Hebrew Elohim, “gods/God”). Like the house of the capable wife (31.10–31; cf. 5.7–23), Wisdom's house is the center of the good society, though it may be hard to discern from the home of Woman Folly (see 9.13–17). Seven pillars may recall the mythic foundations of the earth (cf. 8.22–31). 9.2 See note on 1.31. Slaughtered. Wise Sayings of Solomon: The Antithetic Collection

- 10 The proverbs of Solomon.
- A wise child makes a glad father,
but a foolish child is a mother's grief.
- 2 Treasures gained by wickedness do not profit,
but righteousness delivers from death.
- 3 The LORD does not let the righteous go hungry,
but he thwarts the craving of the wicked.
- 4 A slack hand causes poverty,
but the hand of the diligent makes rich.
- 5 A child who gathers in summer is prudent,
but a child who sleeps in harvest brings shame.
- 6 Blessings are on the head of the righteous,
but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence.
- 7 The memory of the righteous is a blessing,
but the name of the wicked will rot.
- 8 The wise of heart will heed commandments,
but a babbling fool will come to ruin.

10.1–22.16 The wise sayings of Solomon (see Introduction). This section departs from the generally unified compositions of the theological introduction in chs. 1–9 but continues to take up their teachings in an explicit way in the vehicle of two-lined sayings using parallelism (see Introduction). While many of the sayings are simply observational, most are shaped to recommend a specific virtue or behavior to the students of the sages. 10.1–15.33 The antithetic collection. This section makes use of antithetic parallelisms (the second line contrasts with the first) to drive home the sages' views. Typical themes already seen in chs. 1–9 are taken up in antithetical word pairs (father/mother, e.g., 10.1b; righteous/wicked, e.g., 10.2–3, 24–25, 27–32; wise/fool, e.g., 10.8, 14, 23). Other common concerns of the sages appear: the power of language (e.g., 10.6, 11, 13–14, 18–21, 31–32), the doctrine of retribution (every act contains its own consequence, e.g., 10.2, 4, 16, 28, 30), and the excellence of wisdom (e.g., 10.1, 17). 10.1 Mothers bore the responsibility for teaching the very young (see note on 1.8). 10.3 The righteous are probably equivalent to "the wise." 10.7 Concern for a good reputation was

- 9 Whoever walks in integrity walks securely, but whoever follows perverse ways will be found out.
 - 10 Whoever winks the eye causes trouble, but the one who rebukes boldly makes peace.^a
 - 11 The mouth of the righteous is a fountain of life,
but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence.
 - 12 Hatred stirs up strife,
but love covers all offenses.
 - 13 On the lips of one who has understanding wisdom is found, but a rod is for the back of one who lacks sense.
 - 14 The wise lay up knowledge, but the babbling of a fool brings ruin near.
 - 15 The wealth of the rich is their fortress;
the poverty of the poor is their ruin.
 - 16 The wage of the righteous leads to life,
the gain of the wicked to sin.
 - 17 Whoever heeds instruction is on the path to life,
but one who rejects a rebuke goes astray.
 - 18 Lying lips conceal hatred,
and whoever utters slander is a fool.
 - 19 When words are many,
transgression is not lacking,
but the prudent are restrained in speech.
 - 20 The tongue of the righteous is choice silver;
the mind of the wicked is of little worth.
 - 21 The lips of the righteous feed many,
but fools die for lack of sense.
 - 22 The blessing of the LORD makes rich,

 - 23 Doing wrong is like sport to a fool,
but wise conduct is pleasure to a person of understanding.
 - 24 What the wicked dread will come upon them,
but the desire of the righteous will be granted.
 - 25 When the tempest passes, the wicked are no more,
but the righteous are established forever.
 - 26 Like vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes,
so are the lazy to their employers.
 - 27 The fear of the LORD prolongs life, but the years of the wicked will be short.
 - 28 The hope of the righteous ends in gladness,
but the expectation of the wicked comes to nothing.
 - 29 The way of the LORD is a stronghold for the upright, but destruction for evildoers.
 - 30 The righteous will never be removed,
but the wicked will not remain in the land.
 - 31 The mouth of the righteous brings forth wisdom,
but the perverse tongue will be cut off.
 - 32 The lips of the righteous know what is acceptable,
but the mouth of the wicked what is perverse.
- 11 A false balance is an abomination to the LORD, common with the sages (Job 18.17; Eccl 7.1; see note on 3.4). 10.10 Winking the eye may be a reference to malevolent (e.g., “evil eye”?) or sorcerous behavior (see 6.13; Ps 35.19). The Septuagint reading opts for an antithetic statement. 10.11, 13, 19–21, 31–32 See note on 1.6. 10.15 A purely observational saying. 10.22 See text note b: God’s blessing is sufficient. 10.25a Unlooked-for death was considered a punishment for sin. 10.27 Fear of the LORD. See note on 1.7. 11.1–31 Contrasts between the righteous, upright and gracious and the wicked, crooked, greedy, and godless bind the proverbs of this section together, as the theory of retribution is acted out in daily life. 11.1 A false balance is used to cheat the poor (16.11; 20.10, 23; Deut 25.13–16; Am 8.5–6; Hos 12.8; Mic 6.10–11). Abomination here and in v. 20 recalls the numerical saying of

- but an accurate weight is his delight.

- 17 Those who are kind reward themselves, but the cruel do themselves harm.
- 18 The wicked earn no real gain,
but those who sow righteousness get a true reward.
- 19 Whoever is steadfast in righteousness will live, but whoever pursues evil will die.
- 20 Crooked minds are an abomination to the LORD,
but those of blameless ways are his delight.
- 21 Be assured, the wicked will not go unpunished,
but those who are righteous will escape.
- 22 Like a gold ring in a pig's snout is a beautiful woman without good sense.

but one who utters lies is a betrayer.
- 26 In the fear of the LORD one has strong confidence, and one's children will have a refuge.
- 27 The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life, so that one may avoid the snares of death.
- 28 The glory of a king is a multitude of people;
without people a prince is ruined.
- 29 Whoever is slow to anger has great understanding, but one who has a hasty temper exalts folly.
- 30 A tranquil mind gives life to the flesh,
but passion makes the bones rot.

- 31 Those who oppress the poor insult their Maker, but those who are kind to the needy honor him.
- 32 The wicked are overthrown by their evildoing, but the righteous find a refuge in their integrity.^w
- 33 Wisdom is at home in the mind of one who has understanding, but it is not^x known in the heart of fools.
- 34 Righteousness exalts a nation,
but sin is a reproach to any people.
- 35 A servant who deals wisely has the king's favor,
but his wrath falls on one who acts shamefully.
- 15 A soft answer turns away wrath,
but a harsh word stirs up anger.
- 2 The tongue of the wise dispenses knowledge,^y
but the mouths of fools pour out folly.
- 3 The eyes of the LORD are in every place, keeping watch on the evil and the good.
- 4 A gentle tongue is a tree of life, but perverseness in it breaks the spirit.
- 5 A fool despises a parent's instruction,
but the one who heeds admonition is prudent.
- 6 In the house of the righteous there is much treasure, but trouble befalls the income of the wicked.
- 7 The lips of the wise spread knowledge;
not so the minds of fools.
- 8 The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD,

- 11 Sheol and Abaddon lie open before the LORD, how much more human hearts!
- 12 Scoffers do not like to be rebuked; they will not go to the wise.
- 13 A glad heart makes a cheerful countenance, but by sorrow of heart the spirit is broken.
- 14 The mind of one who has understanding seeks knowledge, but the mouths of fools feed on folly.
- 15 All the days of the poor are hard, but a cheerful heart has a continual feast.
- 16 Better is a little with the fear of the LORD than great treasure and trouble with it.
- 17 Better is a dinner of vegetables where love is than a fatted ox and hatred with it.
- 18 Those who are hot-tempered stir up strife, but those who are slow to anger calm contention.
- 19 The way of the lazy is overgrown with thorns, but the path of the upright is a level highway.
- 20 A wise child makes a glad father, but the foolish despise their mothers.
- 21 Folly is a joy to one who has no sense, but a person of understanding walks straight ahead.
- 22 Without counsel, plans go wrong, but with many advisers they succeed.
- 23 To make an apt answer is a joy to anyone, and a word in season, how good it is!
- 24 For the wise the path of life leads upward, in order to avoid Sheol below.
- 25 The LORD tears down the house of the proud, but maintains the widow's boundaries.
- 26 Evil plans are an abomination to the LORD, but gracious words are pure.
- 27 Those who are greedy for unjust gain make trouble for their households, but those who hate bribes will live.
- 28 The mind of the righteous ponders how to answer, but the mouth of the wicked pours out evil.
- 29 The LORD is far from the wicked, but he hears the prayer of the righteous.
- 30 The light of the eyes rejoices the heart, and good news refreshes the body.
- 31 The ear that heeds wholesome admonition will lodge among the wise.

Wise Sayings of Solomon: The "Royal" Collection

- 16 The plans of the mind belong to mortals, but the answer of the tongue is from the LORD.
- 2 All one's ways may be pure in one's own eyes,
but the LORD weighs the spirit.
- 3 Commit your work to the LORD, and your plans will be established.
- 4 The LORD has made everything for its purpose, even the wicked for the day of trouble.
- 5 All those who are arrogant are an abomination to the LORD;
be assured, they will not go unpunished.
- 6 By loyalty and faithfulness iniquity is atoned for,
and by the fear of the LORD one avoids evil.
- 7 When the ways of people please the LORD,
he causes even their enemies to be at peace with them.
- 8 Better is a little with righteousness than large income with injustice.
- 9 The human mind plans the way,
but the LORD directs the steps.
- 10 Inspired decisions are on the lips of a king;

- his mouth does not sin in judgment.
- 11 Honest balances and scales are the LORD's;
all the weights in the bag are his work.
- 12 It is an abomination to kings to do evil,
for the throne is established by righteousness.
- 13 Righteous lips are the delight of a king,
and he loves those who speak what is right.
- 14 A king's wrath is a messenger of death,
and whoever is wise will appease it.
- 15 In the light of a king's face there is life, and his favor is like the clouds that bring the spring rain.
- 16 How much better to get wisdom than gold!
To get understanding is to be chosen rather than silver.
- 17 The highway of the upright avoids evil;
those who guard their way preserve their lives.
- 18 Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.
- 19 It is better to be of a lowly spirit among the poor than to divide the spoil with the proud.

16.1–22.16 The "royal" collection. Moving into the second half of the wise sayings of Solomon, the sages depart from the mostly antithetic style of the earlier section in favor of synonymous parallelism (second line restates the first). This group of sayings also shows more attempt at thematic arrangement, as well as strong emphasis on court values and settings. It may reflect an urban rather than a rural social setting as the origin of its sayings. 16.1–7, 9, 11, 20, 33 LORD. A series of Yahweh ("the LORD") sayings forms a bridge between this collection and the previous chapters (see 14.2, 26–27; 15.3, 8–9, 11, 16, 25–26, 29, 33). 16.1 Cf. v. 9. Ultimately, the Lord is the source of all things, even though humans do have a measure of freedom in their acts. 16.2 The LORD weighs the spirit, an image probably drawn from the Egyptian belief that the scribal god weighs the heart of the deceased in an underworld hall of judgment. See 21.2. 16.4 The sages here suggest that perhaps negative things are also part of the divine plan; cf. Eccl 3.1–8; 7.13; Rom 9.22. 16.6 Fear of the LORD. See note on 1.7. 16.8 See 15.16–17. 16.10, 12–15 Placement of sayings about the ideal king after those stressing the Lord's ways enhances the idea of the king as God's worthy representative. See also note on 1.1. 16.11 Balances and scales. See note on 11.1. 16.12 In Egypt, wisdom or "Maat" was the foundation of Pharaoh's throne conceptually and perhaps literally, for one of the Egyptian hieroglyphs for Maat represents a sideview of the dais upon which Pharaoh's throne was placed. 16.14 Cf. Joab's counsel to the messenger he sends to David (2 Sam 11.18–24). 16.15 Rain, always a positive image in the arid Near East. 16.16 See 3.14; 4.5. 16.18 See 11.2; 15.33.

- 20 Those who are attentive to a matter will prosper, and happy are those who trust in the LORD.
- 21 The wise of heart is called perceptive, and pleasant speech increases persuasiveness.
- 22 Wisdom is a fountain of life to one who has it,
but folly is the punishment of fools.
- 23 The mind of the wise makes their speech judicious, and adds persuasiveness to their lips.
- 24 Pleasant words are like a honeycomb, sweetness to the soul and health to the body.
- 25 Sometimes there is a way that seems to be right, but in the end it is the way to death.
- 26 The appetite of workers works for them;
their hunger urges them on.
- 27 Scoundrels concoct evil,
and their speech is like a scorching fire.
- 28 A perverse person spreads strife,
and a whisperer separates close friends.
- 29 The violent entice their neighbors, and lead them in a way that is not good.
- 30 One who winks the eyes plans^z perverse things;
one who compresses the lips brings evil to pass.
- 31 Gray hair is a crown of glory;
it is gained in a righteous life.
- 32 One who is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and one whose temper is controlled than one who captures a city.
- 33 The lot is cast into the lap,
but the decision is the LORD's alone.
- 17 Better is a dry morsel with quiet than a house full of feasting with strife.
- 2 A slave who deals wisely will rule over a child who acts shamefully, and will share the inheritance as one of the family.
- 3 The crucible is for silver, and the furnace is for gold, but the LORD tests the heart.
- 4 An evildoer listens to wicked lips;
and a liar gives heed to a mischievous tongue.
- 5 Those who mock the poor insult their Maker;
those who are glad at calamity will not go unpunished.
- 6 Grandchildren are the crown of the aged,
and the glory of children is their parents.
- 7 Fine speech is not becoming to a fool;
still less is false speech to a ruler.^a
- 8 A bribe is like a magic stone in the eyes of those who give it; wherever they turn they prosper.
- 9 One who forgives an affront fosters friendship,
but one who dwells on disputes will alienate a friend.
- 10 A rebuke strikes deeper into a discerning person than a hundred blows into a fool.

21.30–31 Though the sages praise wisdom, no human understanding can fathom God's.

22.1–16 A series of contrasts between the wise way and the fool's way. 22.1 Good name, "reputation." See note on 10.7. 22.2 See 29.13; Job 31.15. The same grammatical frame appears in 20.12. 22.4 Fear of the LORD, an ongoing concern for the sages, praised here, as in 10.27, 14.27, and 19.23, for its beneficial consequences. See note on 1.7. 22.8 Sow, reap, a proverbial word pair (Ps 126.5; Jer 12.13; Hos 8.7; 10.12). 22.13 Sluggards make ludicrous excuses for their behavior (26.13). 22.14 Loose woman. The Hebrew reads "strange woman," i.e., the repository of all the dangers the sages contrast with the figure of Woman Wisdom. See note on 2.16–19. Deep pit, the land of the dead is evoked here, as this major collection ends with the same imagery that shaped chs. 1–9.

22.17–24.22 The sayings of the wise. This section departs from the proverb collections of 10.1–22.16, as it makes a free adaptation from the popular Egyptian wisdom text The Instruction of Amenemope. Many of the topics treated seem especially suited to educating young civil servants for their roles in court life (23.1–3, 6–8; 23.20–21, 29–35), although typical wisdom themes (e.g., the poor, family relationships, fools and kings) also appear. Although inspired by the Egyptian work, sentiments have been thoroughly reworked according to the sages' Yahwistic theology and the order of topics has been altered. 22.17 The words of the wise. The title of this misunderstood collection has been restored from the Septuagint. Notice the use of direct address as the text reverts to the instruction style (cf. 23.19, 26).

- and apply your mind to my teaching;
 18 for it will be pleasant if you keep them within you, if all of them are ready on your lips.
 19 So that your trust may be in the LORD,
 I have made them known to you today—yes, to you.
 20 Have I not written for you thirty sayings of admonition and knowledge, 21 to show you what is right and true, so that you may give a true answer to those who sent you?
 22 Do not rob the poor because they are poor, or crush the afflicted at the gate;
 23 for the LORD pleads their cause and despoils of life those who despoil them.
 24 Make no friends with those given to anger, and do not associate with hotheads, 25 or you may learn their ways and entangle yourself in a snare.
 26 Do not be one of those who give pledges, who become surety for debts.
 27 If you have nothing with which to pay,
 why should your bed be taken from under you?
 28 Do not remove the ancient landmark that your ancestors set up.
 29 Do you see those who are skillful in their work?
 They will serve kings;

they will not serve common people.

- 23 When you sit down to eat with a ruler, observe carefully what^p is before you,
 2 and put a knife to your throat if you have a big appetite.
 3 Do not desire the ruler's^q delicacies, for they are deceptive food.
 4 Do not wear yourself out to get rich;
 be wise enough to desist.
 5 When your eyes light upon it, it is gone;
 for suddenly it takes wings to itself, flying like an eagle toward heaven.
 6 Do not eat the bread of the stingy;
 do not desire their delicacies;
 7 for like a hair in the throat, so are they.^r
 "Eat and drink!" they say to you;
 but they do not mean it.
 8 You will vomit up the little you have eaten, and you will waste your pleasant words.
 9 Do not speak in the hearing of a fool,

 he will plead their cause against you.

22.20 Thirty sayings. The original Amenemope contained thirty "houses" or chapters. 22.22 At the gate, the place where legal matters were decided. 22.28 The moving of boundary markers was also a concern for Amenemope (see note on 22.17–24.22), but see 23.10–11; 25.25; Deut 19.14; 27.17; Isa 5.8–10 for the Hebrew context. Such standing stones established legal ownership of land, the source of life.

23.1 What is before you. The Hebrew reading, who is before you (see text note ^p), might well attest to the sages' concern for circumspect behavior in exalted company. 23.4–5 See Eccl 2 for similar reflections on the fleeting nature of material pleasures. 23.10 See 22.28; Job 24.2–3; Deut 27.19. 23.11 Redeemer, a blood relative charged with prosecuting legal wrongs; the sages may be thinking here of God, often pictured as redeemer to orphans and widows (see Ex 22.22–24).

Further Sayings of the Wise

- 23 These also are sayings of the wise:
- Partiality in judging is not good.
- 24 Whoever says to the wicked, "You are innocent," will be cursed by peoples, abhorred by nations;
- 25 but those who rebuke the wicked will have delight, and a good blessing will come upon them.
- 26 One who gives an honest answer gives a kiss on the lips.
- 27 Prepare your work outside, get everything ready for you in the field; and after that build your house.
- 28 Do not be a witness against your neighbor without cause, and do not deceive with your lips.
- 29 Do not say, "I will do to others as they have done to me; I will pay them back for what they have done."
- 30 I passed by the field of one who was lazy, by the vineyard of a stupid person;

- 31 and see, it was all overgrown with thorns; the ground was covered with nettles, and its stone wall was broken down.
- 32 Then I saw and considered it; I looked and received instruction.
- 33 A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to rest,
- 34 and poverty will come upon you like a robber, and want, like an armed warrior.

Further Wise Sayings of Solomon

25 These are other proverbs of Solomon that the officials of King Hezekiah of Judah copied.

- 2 It is the glory of God to conceal things, but the glory of kings is to search things out.
- 3 Like the heavens for height, like the earth for depth, so the mind of kings is unsearchable.
- 4 Take away the dross from the silver, and the smith has material for a vessel;

Job questions it in Job 21.17. 24.23–34 Further sayings of the wise. 24.23a These also are the sayings of the wise, lit. "also these (belong) to the wise ones," a title linking this short collection with 22.17–22. 24.23b An admonition against partiality in judging; see 18.5; 28.21; 31.5; Lev 19.15; Deut 1.17; 16.19. 24.29 See Mt 6.12, 14–15. 24.30–34 An example story warning against laziness. The tradition is aware that not all poverty is the victim's fault (see 28.15; 29.7; Pss 10.2; 37.14). 24.33–34 6.10–11.

25.1–29.27 Further wise sayings of Solomon, an independent collection (see headings at 25.1; 30.1) composed of two discrete units, chs. 25–27 and 28–29 (see notes on 25.1–27.27; 27.23–27; 28.1–29.27). 25.1–27.27 One scholar argues for considerable thematic and structural unity in this section. Some of the evidence for this view will be noted. 25.1 Solomon. See 1.1; Introduction. The proverbs' artistry and worldview suggest education and wealth, if not the royal court itself. Officials, lit. "men," presumably court bureaucrats or educators. Hezekiah reigned 715–687 B.C.E. The numerical equivalent of one spelling of his name is 140, the number of lines in this collection. 25.2–27 A carefully constructed unit marked by a double inclusio (a symmetrical structure): glory (honor) appears twice and search (seek) once in vv. 2, 27; and the word pair wicked, righteous appears in vv. 5, 26. 25.2–7 These verses establish the hierarchical relationship of God, king, and subject. 25.2–3 God and kings (see 1.1) are intimately related; the glory of each is tied to the other. Hebrew kabod can be translated either "glory," a divine attribute, or "honor" a central social value, the opposite of which is shame (see note on 3.4). Search, unsearchable. See note on 1.13. Heavens, earth. The mind of kings is comparable to the whole of creation, thus, like God, not to be questioned. 25.4–5 The saying in 25.4 provides a metaphor for the main point in 25.5. Moral worth is imaged as refinement (see also 27.21–22). Throne will be established, formulaic language from the Davidic promise (see 29.14b:

- 5 take away the wicked from the presence of the king, and his throne will be established in righteousness.
- 6 Do not put yourself forward in the king's presence or stand in the place of the great;
- 7 for it is better to be told, "Come up here," than to be put lower in the presence of a noble.
- What your eyes have seen
- 8 do not hastily bring into court; for^y what will you do in the end, when your neighbor puts you to shame?
- 9 Argue your case with your neighbor directly, and do not disclose another's secret;
- 10 or else someone who hears you will bring shame upon you, and your ill repute will have no end.
- 11 A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in a setting of silver.
- 12 Like a gold ring or an ornament of gold is a wise rebuke to a listening ear.
- 13 Like the cold of snow in the time of harvest

- 16 If you have found honey, eat only enough for you, or else, having too much, you will vomit it.
- 17 Let your foot be seldom in your neighbor's house, otherwise the neighbor will become weary of you and hate you.
- 18 Like a war club, a sword, or a sharp arrow is one who bears false witness against a neighbor.
- 19 Like a bad tooth or a lame foot is trust in a faithless person in time of trouble.

On righteousness and kingship, see note on 1.1; Ps 72. 25.5 The word pair righteous, wicked (see note on 3.33–35) is common in chs. 25–29 (25.26; 28.1, 4–5, 10, 28; 29.6, 7, 16, 27). 25.6–7 Better to recognize one's subordinate status than to lose face, a form of shame (see note on 3.4; 25.7c–10). On the value of humility, see also 11.2; 27.1–2, 21; 29.23. References to social tensions pervade chs. 25–26. 25.7c–10 These verses are related to what precedes by the motifs of the law court, once under the jurisdiction of the monarchy, and of shame (see note on 3.4). The inability to settle one's own disputes brings loss of face, but was apparently common (see also 25.18; 26.17; 28.25; 29.9, 22, 24; 30.33).

25.11–15 Four elegant metaphors on the power of language (see note on 1.6) culminate in practical advice for the prospective courtier. 25.11–12 Gold, silver. See notes on 1.13; 17.3.

25.12 A rebukey is preferable to flattery (see also 27.5; 28.23; 29.1, 5). Ear. See note on 2.2. 25.13 Cf. 25.25. Weather similes also occur in 25.14, 23; 26.1; 27.15–16. 25.14 What is anticipated does not come forth; see 25.23 for the opposite problem. 25.15 Wise advisers exercise power indirectly, with well-chosen words, not weapons (see note on 1.6; cf. 25.18; 26.6–10, 18–19). 25.16–27 Except for 25.25, a series of visceral images of undesirable relationships. Honey (25.16; 25.27; see 4.17; note on 5.3) creates an inclusio (see note on 25.2–27) for this subsection. 25.16–17 Two admonitions, the first a metaphor to reinforce the point of the second. 25.16 Vomit. See 26.11. 25.17 See 27.10. 25.18 War club, sword, sharp arrow. See 25.15. False witness. is a proverb in the mouth of a fool.
- 10 Like an archer who wounds everybody is one who hires a passing fool or drunkard.^b
- 11 Like a dog that returns to its vomit is a fool who reverts to his folly.
- 12 Do you see persons wise in their own eyes?
There is more hope for fools than for them.
- 13 The lazy person says, "There is a lion in the road!
There is a lion in the streets!"

See also Mt 5.39; Rom 12.20. 25.23 The north wind brings unanticipated rain (cf. 25.14); however, the Hebrew word for "north" can also mean "hidden." Backbiting (lit. See also 27.15. 25.25 See 25.13. 25.26 Spring, fountain, symbols of wisdom (see 1.23), which is lacking here. 25.26–27 Righteous, wicked, seek, honor. See note on 25.2–27. 25.27 The unit concludes with typical advice against overreaching oneself (see 25.6–7, 16–17). Honor. See note on 3.4. 25.28 An odd verse in the overall composition, perhaps added for the sake of the line count (see note on 25.1). Self-control, a virtue of the sages (see also 29.8, 11, 22; 30.33).

26.1–12 A unit on the fool. 26.1–3 Things that "land" where they do not belong (vv. 1–2) and things that land appropriately (v. 3). On animal comparisons, see note on 6.6–11. 26.1 Snow, rain. See 25.13–14. Honor. See note on 3.4. 26.3 The trainable fool. 26.4–5 Proverbs are not timeless absolutes but must be applied in their season (see note on 1.6; cf. 26.6, 7, 9). Wise in their own eyes. See 3.5. 26.6–10 These verses are linked by images of violence and weapons (see 25.25). 26.6–7 "Lame" language (see 26.4–5). 26.6 See 25.13, 15. 26.8 Honor. See note on 3.4. 26.9 See 26.4–5. 26.10 Only a fool hires a fool (see 26.4–5). 26.11 Fools refuse instruction at the price of their own humanity (see 25.16). 26.12 Wisdom bears the seeds of its opposite (see 3.5). 26.12b 29.20b. 26.13–16 A humorous unit on the lazy (see

- 14 As a door turns on its hinges, so does a lazy person in bed.
15 The lazy person buries a hand in the dish,
and is too tired to bring it back to the mouth.
16 The lazy person is wiser in self-esteem
than seven who can answer discreetly.
17 Like somebody who takes a passing dog by the ears is one who meddles in the quarrel of another.
18 Like a maniac who shoots deadly firebrands and arrows, 19 so is one who deceives a neighbor and says, "I am only joking!" 20 For lack of wood the fire goes out,
and where there is no
whisperer, quarreling ceases.
21 As charcoal is to hot embers and wood to fire,
so is a quarrelsome person for kindling strife.
22 The words of a whisperer are like delicious morsels;
they go down into the inner parts of the body.
23 Like the glaze^c covering an

24 An enemy dissembles in speaking while harboring deceit within;
25 when an enemy speaks graciously,
do not believe it,
for there are seven abominations concealed within;

- 26 though hatred is covered with guile,
the enemy's wickedness will be exposed in the assembly.
27 Whoever digs a pit will fall into it,
and a stone will come back on the one who starts it

28 A lying tongue hates its victims, and a flattering mouth works ruin.
27 Do not boast about tomorrow, for you do not know what a day may bring.
2 Let another praise you, and not your own mouth—
a stranger, and not your own lips.
3 A stone is heavy, and sand is weighty,
but a fool's provocation is heavier than both.
4 Wrath is cruel, anger is overwhelming,
but who is able to stand before jealousy?
5 Better is open rebuke than hidden love.
6 Well meant are the wounds a friend inflicts,
but profuse are the kisses of an enemy.
7 The sated appetite spurns honey,

the bitter is sweet.

Though the imagery is largely bucolic, one scholar suggests that riches and crown (v. 24) make the poem a metaphor of proper kingly rule (on king as shepherd, people as flock, see, e.g., Jer 23.1–6; Ezek 34). Clothing, field, food, household, servant-girls, vocabulary and concerns identical to those of the capable wife (31.10–31); this poem may mark the end of the unit beginning in 25.1, as 31.10–31 closes the book as a whole (see note on 25.1–29.27). 27.27 Servant-girls. ^j Meaning of Heb uncertain ^k Cn: Heb A poor person

28.1–29.27 The literary style returns to the independent antithetical proverb favored in chs. 10–16. 28.1 Wicked, righteous. See note on 25.5. Lion. See note on 6.6–11. 28.2–3 Textual difficulties prevent certain translation, but observations about just rule and care for the poor are frequent in chs. 28–29 (28.8, 12, 15, 16, 27, 28; 29.2, 4, 7, 12, 13, 14, 16, 26; see also note on 1.1). Rulers translates a variety of Hebrew words for authority figures; here it probably refers to later foreign rulers, not the Davidic monarchs. 28.2 Intelligent ruler. Just rule requires wisdom (see note on 1.1). 28.4 The law (Hebrew torah). The definite article and moral tone (righteous vs. wicked) suggest Israel's covenant tradition (cf. note on 1.8); such usage is postexilic (sixth century B.C.E. or later). 28.5 A somewhat different sentiment appears in 29.26. 28.6 Poverty is not always a consequence of evil or laziness (see 15.15–16; 28.2–3, 11; cf. 6.6–10; 28.19). Walk, ways. See note on 1.15–16. 28.7 Law. See note on 28.4. Children, parents. See note on 1.8. Gluttons. A metaphor for greed (see note on 1.31). Shame. See note on 3.4. 28.8 Interest. See Ex 22.25. 28.9 Law. See note on 28.4. 28.10 See 1.10–19; 26.27. 28.11–13 These verses are linked by “searching”/“hiding” (see notes on 1.13; 28.11). 28.11 See 28.6. Wise in self-esteem. See 3.5; 26.5. Sees through the pose, lit. “searches him out.” 28.12 See 25.5; 28.2–3. 28.12b 28.28a. People go into hiding, lit. “a man is searched for.” Do the people hide or do they search for a just ruler? 28.14 Happy. See note on 3.13. Hard-hearted, stubborn (see 29.1; Ex 7.3); the allusion to Pharaoh suggests that fear refers to fear of the Lord (see note on 1.7). 28.15–16 See 28.2–3. 28.15 Lion, bear. See note on 6.6–11. 28.17 Burdened, lit. “oppressed,” a catchword tying this verse to preceding. Let that killer . . . no one offer assistance, lit. “let him flee to the pit; do not seize him”; bloodguilt brings its own punishment (the pit is the grave);

- let that killer be a fugitive until death;
let no one offer assistance.
- 18 One who walks in integrity will be safe,
but whoever follows crooked ways will fall into the Pit.¹
- 19 Anyone who tills the land will have plenty of bread, but one who follows worthless pursuits will have plenty of poverty.
- 20 The faithful will abound with blessings,
but one who is in a hurry to be rich will not go unpunished.
- 21 To show partiality is not good — yet for a piece of bread a person may do wrong.
- 22 The miser is in a hurry to get rich
and does not know that loss is sure to come.
- 23 Whoever rebukes a person will afterward find more favor than one who flatters with the tongue.
- 24 Anyone who robs father or mother
and says, "That is no crime," is partner to a thug.
- 25 The greedy person stirs up strife, but whoever trusts in the LORD will be enriched.
- 26 Those who trust in their own wits
are fools;
but those who walk in wisdom
come through safely.
- 27 Whoever gives to the poor will lack nothing,
but one who turns a blind eye will get many a curse.
- 28 When the wicked prevail, people go into hiding;
but when they perish, the righteous increase.
- 29 One who is often reproved, yet remains stubborn,
will suddenly be broken beyond healing.
- 2 When the righteous are in authority, the people
rejoice;
but when the wicked rule, the people groan.
- 3 A child who loves wisdom makes a parent glad,
but to keep company with prostitutes is to squander one's substance.
- 4 By justice a king gives stability to
the land,
but one who makes heavy exactions ruins it.
- 5 Whoever flatters a neighbor is spreading a net for the neighbor's feet.
- 6 In the transgression of the evil
there is a snare,
but the righteous sing and
rejoice.
- 7 The righteous know the rights of
the poor;
the wicked have no such understanding.

minology (so also thus says), though some translate as a place-name, Massa; see also 31.1. I am weary, O God. Some translate "There is no God" or "I am not God," others read proper names in the beginning clauses of the oracle, "to Ithiel, to Ithiel and Ucal" (RSV). The context supplies a sense of distance from a transcendent God, not doctrinal atheism. 30.2–3 A tone more likely ironic than submissive (see Job 9.2). Holy ones, a plural form translated in the singular and meaning God in text note q and 9.10. 30.4 Perhaps a riddle whose answer is "God" (cf. Job 38.5–11); perhaps a challenge to proponents of a know-it-all piety. Person's name . . . person's child, lit. "his name . . . his child's (Greek, children's) name"; thus the referent could be human (sage and pupil) or divine (God and other member[s] of the heavenly realm; cf. v. 3). Surely you know. See Job 38.21. 30.5–6 A pious response to 30.1–4 in the mode of those of Job's friends or Eccl 12.9–14. Word of God possibly refers to written scripture. 30.5 Cf. Ps 18.30. 30.6a Cf. Deut 4.2. 30.7–9 A model of pious prayer (cf. Job 13.20–21). The catchword lying connects the unit to v. 6. The request for neither too much nor too little assesses human nature realistically (cf. Mt 6.11; Mk 10.25). 30.10 An isolated admonition, but for the catchword curse (also in v. 11). Do not interfere in the affairs of other households. 30.11–14 Four reprehensible groups: the unfilial, the hypocritical, the proud, the avaricious. In their own eyes. See 3.5. Fathers, mothers. See note on 1.8; 30.17. Poor, needy. See note on 28.2–3.

30.15–33 A collection of five numerical sayings (30.15b–16, 18–19, 21–23, 24–28, 29–31; see 6.16–19) interspersed with sayings (30.15a, 17, 20, 33) and an admonition (30.32). On the natural world as a source of learning (30.15–16, 19, 24–31), see note on 6.6–11. 30.15a Originally an independent saying connected to the following numerical saying by its use of the number two and its image of things that demand ("give, give") a continuous supply of life substance. 30.15b–16 Sheol. See note on 1.12. Barren womb.

- 20 This is the way of an adulteress:
she eats, and wipes her mouth,
and says, "I have done no

under four it cannot bear up: 22 a slave when he becomes king, and a fool when gluttoned with food;
23 an unloved woman when she gets her mistress.

- 24 Four things on earth are small,
yet they are exceedingly wise: 25 the ants are a people without strength,
yet they provide their food in
the summer;
26 the badgers are a people without power,
yet they make their homes in 27 the locusts have no king, yet all of them march in rank; 28 the lizard^t can be grasped in all the days of her life.

13 She seeks wool and flax,
and works with willing hands.
14 She is like the ships of the

she brings her food from

and provides food for her household

clear. 30.33 This verse contains two wordplays: the effect of pressing anger (line c). Anger is lit. "noses"; see line b and (note on) 29.8; read "law-suit" for strife. The punchline relates two products of physical pressure to an undesirable outcome of social pressure (see 25.7c–10).

31.1–31 Two originally independent poems (vv. 1–9; vv. 10–31) joined here under the heading of a queen mother's instruction and sharing vocabulary, theme, and structure. 31.1 King Lemuel is otherwise unknown. Oracle. See note on 30.1. Mother. See note on 1.8; 31.26, 28. 31.2 Son of my vows. The phrase is unique in the Bible, though the idea of a child granted by God in response to a woman's vow is not (see 1 Sam 1.9–28). 31.3 Strength. The same Hebrew word, translated capable in 31.10 and excellently in 31.29, is used to describe the woman in the second poem, seemingly mitigating this verse's blanket condemnation. 31.4–7 The abuse and use of alcohol (see 23.29–35). While a king should not drink and forget his duty to justice (v. 5; see note on

1.1), those in distress do well to drink and forget their poverty (v. 7). 31.8–9 The capable woman also speaks out (31.26) and cares for the poor and needy (31.20).

31.10–31 An acrostic poem (see Introduction). The capable wife exemplifies wisdom in the world, thus providing a fitting conclusion to a book that begins with Woman Wisdom. Her assumption of kingly duties (see 27.23–27; 31.1–9) may suggest a social context in which the wisdom and order provided the family household replaced that of a vanished monarchy. 31.10 Capable. See note on 31.3. Find, more precious than jewels, both motifs for Woman Wisdom (see note on 1.13; 3.15; cf. Job 28). 31.11 Trusts in her. Elsewhere, gain comes through trust in the Lord or heeding wisdom (1.29–33; 8.17–21; 28.25b; 29.25b). Gain. ECCLESIASTES “ECCLESIASTES” STEMS FROM the ancient Greek translation of the Hebrew title, Qoheleth, the “Teacher,” who assumes the persona of King Solomon, Israel’s archetypal sage (1.1; 1 Kings 4.29–34; Prov 1.1; Song 1.1). Such literary association implicitly identified the book as legitimate Israelite wisdom and lent weight to its teaching.

Date and Author

Scholars are agreed that Ecclesiastes was not written by Solomon, but by a later writer (see note on 1.12–18). The name Solomon does not appear in the book, and Qoheleth’s claim to have wisdom “surpassing all who were over Jerusalem before me” (1.16) does not fit Solomon, whose only predecessor was David. In later chapters Qoheleth takes the viewpoint of a subject rather than king (4.13; 8.2; 9.14–16; 10.16–17, 20), noting conditions of oppression (4.13), injustice (4.8; 5.8), and social upheaval (10.6–7).

The language of Ecclesiastes is a late form of biblical Hebrew, coming closest of any OT book to postbiblical Mishnaic Hebrew. The presence of Persian loanwords requires a date well after Israel’s release from exile in 539 B.C.E. Fragments of the book found among the Dead Sea Scrolls of the Qumran community date to the mid-second century B.C.E. Most scholars date the book’s composition between 300 and 200 B.C.E.

Literary Character

A title (1.1) and an epilogue (12.9–14) frame the body of the book, which is itself framed by an “inclusio” (in which the end repeats the beginning): “Vanity of vanities . . . all is vanity” (1.2; 12.8). An ambiguous cosmological poem (1.4–11) then leads to the royal “didactic autobiography” (1.12–2.16), in which Qoheleth as “Solomon” begins “to search out by wisdom all that is done under heaven” (1.12). Thereafter, the book sets a variety of wisdom forms (proverbs, parables, admonitions) in the loose context of the Teacher’s first-person address to his readers.

Attempts to find a clear structure in the book have not succeeded, and its tension-filled expression of life's contradictions gives the book a puzzlelike character. The book's unity rests on a complex consistency of language, viewpoint, and themes. Its method is to treat themes in a spiral fashion, introducing them, then dropping them only to resume them later. Key words, phrases, and thought patterns are repeated in refrainlike fashion.

Content

Ecclesiastes focuses upon the limits and contradictions of life in order to teach wisdom (see Ps 90). From the pinnacle of human success and power (1.12–2.26), Qoheleth surveys life and finds it “vanity.” Even the best life is limited in knowledge, virtue, and power, troubled by evil and injustice, and ultimately ended by death. This focus on human limits and absurdity attacks those, like Job's friends, who selectively misuse traditional wisdom (see Proverbs) to argue neat connections between godly goodness and success or wickedness and failure (see notes on 7.15; 8.10–17; 9.1–12). Yet, in spite of its limits and destruction by death, Qoheleth maintains wisdom is better than folly (see notes on 2.11, 12–17; 6.8).

In the face of death and “vanity,” Qoheleth repeatedly urges humans to embrace life and its goods—food, drink, love, work, and play—as gifts from God (see note on 9.7–10).

Interpretation

Ecclesiastes is not difficult to read, but its meaning as a whole is difficult. Scholars offer strongly conflicting accounts of its message. Some see it as a portrait of “life without God,” for they do not see how life with God could be described as “vanity.” Some call Qoheleth a skeptic or a pessimist. Some, especially in the past, have attributed the book's references to fearing God, as well as its epilogue, to a pious editor who tried to make the book seem more orthodox than it is. Many scholars have seen the book as being at odds with most expressions of the religion of the Hebrew scriptures. Many scholars now recognize that the tensions and contradictions of Ecclesiastes are precisely its point. Qoheleth is an utter realist, yet he will not let go of God.

The conflict of interpretations can be seen in such translations of the key word “vanity” (Hebrew hevel) as “meaningless,” “absurd,” “emptiness,” and “useless.” The literal meaning of “vanity” is “breath” or “breeze” (see note on 1.2–3). Qoheleth uses this term as a metaphor, often coupled with “striving after wind,” to show the transience, futility, and irrationality of life.

In response to life's vanity, Qoheleth asks what then is good for humans? While recognizing that life has no ultimate or lasting “gain” (1.3), Qoheleth makes two points about the good. The first is summarized in the epilogue: “Fear God, and keep his commandments; for that is the whole duty of everyone” (12.13; see 3.9–17; 5.1–7; 7.13–14, 18; 8.12–13). The second is this: since humans are not masters of the universe, but afflicted by vanity in all its forms, their good is simply to enjoy life—both work and play—as God’s gift and the “lot” for which they are responsible (see notes on 2.10; 9.7–10; 11.9).

1.1 Teacher, or Qoheleth, of uncertain meaning, suggests one who teaches in the “assembly” (Hebrew kahal; Deut 31.30). Son of David, a nonliteral royal title to link the writer with the wise and wealthy Solomon (1.12; 2.7; see Introduction). 1.2–3 The book’s theme and central problem. Vanity translates a metaphor meaning “breath” (Hebrew hevel; Isa 57.13), often parallel to “chasing after wind” (e.g., 1.14, 17). For human life as “breath,” see Job 7.7; Pss 39.4–6; 62.9; 78.33; 144.4. Vanity of vanities, an idiom meaning “utter vanity”; cf. “Song of Songs” (Song 1.1). Ecclesiastes, excluding the epilogue, ends as it begins (12.8; see Introduction). 1.3 What . . . gain? (2.11; 3.9; 5.16; 6.8).

1.4–11 A cosmology as context for human existence (12.2, 7). It represents totality in the east-west journey of sun (1.5), the north-south circuit of the wind (1.6), and the four ancient elements: earth, fire (sun), air (wind), and water (Ps 148.7–8). Some read this passage negatively (both cosmos and life consist of meaningless cycles), and some positively (the cyclical world order remains forever [1.4], thus making life possible; Gen 8.22; Pss 104.1–30; 147.8–9, 16–18). See note on 3.15. 1.5 Hurries, lit. “pants” like a runner (Ps 19.5–6). 1.6 Ironically, the restless wind remains while humans, who come and go (1.4; 5.15–16), are mere “breath” (vanity). 1.7 To the place, Hebrew ambiguous, may also be translated “back to the place from which the streams flow, there they continue to go” so that the rain cycle (12.2) is described, corresponding to the cycles of sun and wind. 1.8–11 A move from cosmology to epistemology, on the limits of human knowledge. 1.8 All things are wearisome. The Hebrew is ambiguous; some translate positively, “All things are constantly active,” though beyond human mastery (1.18; 3.11; 8.17; 12.12). The eye is not satisfied. See Prov 27.20. The ear [is not] filled ironically parallels the sea is not full (1.7). 1.9 See 6.10. 1.11 People of long ago . . . people yet to come may be rendered “things of long ago . . . things yet to come.”

of people yet to come

The Futility of Wisdom

12 I, the Teacher,^c when king over Israel in Jerusalem,¹³ applied my mind to seek and to search out by wisdom all that is done under heaven; it is an unhappy business that God has given to human beings to be busy with. ¹⁴I saw all the deeds that are done under the sun; and see, all is vanity and a chasing after wind.^d

15 What is crooked cannot be made straight, and what is lacking cannot be counted.

16 I said to myself, "I have acquired great wisdom, surpassing all who were over Jerusalem before me; and my mind has had great experience of wisdom and knowledge." ¹⁷And I applied my mind to know wisdom and to know madness and folly. I perceived that this also is but a chasing after wind.^d

18 For in much wisdom is much vexation, and those who increase knowledge increase sorrow.

The Futility of Success

2 I said to myself, "Come now, I will make a test of pleasure; enjoy yourself." But again, this also was vanity. ²I said of laughter, "It is mad," and of pleasure, "What use is it?" ³I searched with my mind how to cheer my body with wine—my mind still guiding me with wisdom—and how to lay hold on folly, until I might see what was good for mortals to do under heaven during the few days of their life. ⁴I made great works; I built houses and planted vineyards for myself; ⁵I made myself gardens and parks, and planted in them all kinds of fruit trees. ⁶I made myself pools from which to water the forest of growing trees. ⁷I bought male and female slaves, and had slaves who were born in my house; I also had great possessions of herds and flocks, more than any who had been before me in Jerusalem. ⁸I also gathered for myself silver and gold and the treasure of kings and of the provinces; I got singers, both men and women, and delights of the flesh, and many concubines.^e

9 So I became great and surpassed all who were before me in Jerusalem; also my wisdom remained with me. ¹⁰Whatever my eyes desired I did not keep from them; I kept my heart from no pleasure, for my heart found pleasure in all my toil, and this was my reward for all my toil. ¹¹Then I considered all that my hands had done and the toil I had spent in doing it, and again, all was vanity and a chasing after wind,^d and there was nothing to be gained under the sun.

^d Or a feeding on wind. See Hos 12.1 ^e Meaning of Heb uncertain

1.12-18 The writer speaks autobiographically as Solomon (1.1; 2.9), a fiction that is not maintained after ch. 2, though first-person address continues. From the pinnacle of success, Qoheleth explores the limits of the human condition and the inscrutability of God. 1.13 Wisdom includes knowledge, insight, and technical or artistic skills. All . . . under heaven, usually under the sun (e.g., 1.3, 9, 14). This quest, to understand all that happens on earth, is an unhappy business because it cannot be attained; see note on 3.11. 1.14-15 Thus, from a human viewpoint, what happens is vanity. Moreover, humans cannot straighten what God has bent (3.14; 7.13). 1.17 Madness and folly may be an interpreter's addition, or, as polar opposite of wisdom, the pair may indicate the universal scope of the Teacher's quest (2.2-3, 12; 7.25). 1.18 See note on 7.3.

2.1-11 The "king" explores greatness and pleasure. 2.2 See 10.19; Prov 14.13. 2.3 Wisdom and folly anticipate 2.12-17; see note on 1.17. Given death and human limits, the "king" seeks what was good . . . to do. 2.4-11 Mastery over nature and culture and over humans as servants and instruments of pleasure. The "king" achieves all his goals, yet this too is vanity (2.11). 2.5-6 In arid Palestine mastery of water is a great work (2.4). 2.10 Toil is ambiguous, denoting both the process and result of work (wealth, etc.; 2.18). Reward, lit. lot (3.22), share (9.6), or portion (9.9), is generally a positive gift of God (5.17-18; 9.9). This important term can be used of land given to heirs (Gen 31.14; Josh 19.9), who are both responsible for their portion and free to enjoy its benefits. 2.11 Nothing . . . gained, an answer to 1.3, but see 2.13, where (literally) "there is more gain in wisdom than in folly."

Wisdom and Joy Given to One Who Pleases God

12 So I turned to consider wisdom and madness and folly; for what can the one do who comes after the king? Only what has already been done. ¹³Then I saw that wisdom excels folly as light excels darkness.

14 The wise have eyes in their head, but fools walk in darkness.

Yet I perceived that the same fate befalls all of them. ¹⁵Then I said to myself, "What happens to the fool will happen to me also; why then have I been so very wise?" And I said to myself that this also is vanity. ¹⁶For there is no enduring remembrance of the wise or of fools, seeing that in the days to come all will have been long forgotten. How can the wise die just like fools? ¹⁷So I hated life, because what is done under the sun was grievous to me; for all is vanity and a chasing after wind.^f

18 I hated all my toil in which I had toiled under the sun, seeing that I must leave it to those who come after me ¹⁹—and who knows whether they will be wise or foolish? Yet they will be master of all for which I toiled and used my wisdom under the sun. This also is vanity. ²⁰So I turned and gave my heart up to despair concerning all the toil of my labors under the sun, ²¹because sometimes one who has toiled with wisdom and knowledge and skill must leave all to be enjoyed by another who did not toil for it. This also is vanity and a great evil. ²²What do mortals get from all the toil and strain with which they toil under the sun? ²³For all their days are full of pain, and their work is a vexation; even at night their minds do not rest. This also is vanity.

24 There is nothing better for mortals than to eat and drink, and find enjoyment in their toil. This also, I saw, is from the hand of God; ²⁵for apart from him^g who can eat or who can have enjoyment? ²⁶For to the one who pleases him God gives wisdom and knowledge and joy; but to the sinner he gives the work of gathering and heaping, only to give to one who pleases God. This also is vanity and a chasing after wind.^f

Everything Has Its Time

3 For everything there is a season, and a time for every matter under heaven:

- ² a time to be born, and a time to die;
a time to plant, and a time to pluck up what is planted;
- ³ a time to kill, and a time to heal;
a time to break down, and a time to build up;
- ⁴ a time to weep, and a time to laugh;
a time to mourn, and a time to dance;
- ⁵ a time to throw away stones, and a time to gather stones together;

^f Or a feeding on wind. See Hos 12.1 ^g Gk Syr: Heb apart from me

2.12–17 Wisdom is better than folly (2.12), yet death destroys both the wise and fools (6.8; Ps 49.10), and the wise are forgotten (Eccl 2.16; 1.11; Wis 2.4). 2.12 Madness and folly, a hendiadys, "senseless folly" (7.25; see note on 1.17). 2.14 The fate or "event" is death (3.19–20; 6.6; 9.2–3). 2.17 I hated life, perhaps, "I was disillusioned with life" because of its limits and vanity; "hate" in Hebrew has a range of meanings opposite to "love." Elsewhere life is positive, despite vanity (2.24–26; 9.4–6; 11.7–8).

2.18–26 Death and heirs; the royal experiment concludes. 2.18 I hated. See note on 2.17. Toil. See note on 2.10. One can leave a business ("toil" as process) or wealth ("toil" as result) to an heir (2.21; 6.2). Toil can bring pleasure (2.10, 24; 3.13, 22; 5.18–19; 9.9) or despair (2.18, 20). 2.19 Who knows? a rhetorical question expecting the answer "nobody," with the implicit exception of God. 2.21 Evil, because humans cut off by death do not reap the good they sow. 2.22–23 What advantage then for human toil? 2.24–26 A modestly positive but realistic answer to the question of 2.22. Qoheleth constantly associates enjoyment with both work (toil) and play (to eat and drink); see notes on 3.12–15, 16–22; 5.18–20; 9.7–10.

3.1–15 Human life in relation to God. 3.1–8 Life's good and evil conditioned by God's time. The contrary pairs are a literary device using opposites to represent life's totality and variety, which are also represented by their sum (twice seven). The times, which simply happen to people or which require appropriate human action (8.5–6; Am 5.13), are inscrutably in God's hands (Eccl 3.1, 11, 13; Ps 31.15; Sir 33.7–15; 39.33–34). The opposed items seem good or bad in themselves, but time or circumstance can invert

- a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing;
 6 a time to seek, and a time to lose;
 a time to keep, and a time to throw away; 7 a time to tear, and a time to sew;
 a time to keep silence, and a time to speak; 8 a time to love, and a time to hate;
 a time for war, and a time for peace.

The God-Given Task

9 What gain have the workers from their toil? ¹⁰I have seen the business that God has given to everyone to be busy with. ¹¹He has made everything suitable for its time; moreover he has put a sense of past and future into their minds, yet they cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end. ¹²I know that there is nothing better for them than to be happy and enjoy themselves as long as they live; ¹³moreover, it is God's gift that all should eat and drink and take pleasure in all their toil. ¹⁴I know that whatever God does endures forever; nothing can be added to it, nor anything taken from it; God has done this, so that all should stand in awe before him. ¹⁵That which is, already has been; that which is to be, already is; and God seeks out what has gone by.^h

Judgment and the Future Belong to God

16 Moreover I saw under the sun that in the place of justice, wickedness was there, and in the place of righteousness, wickedness was there as well. ¹⁷I said in my heart, God will judge the righteous and the wicked, for he has appointed a time for every matter, and for every work. ¹⁸I said in my heart with regard to human beings that God is testing them to show that they are but animals. ¹⁹For the fate of humans and the fate of animals is the same; as one dies, so dies the other. They all have the same breath, and humans have no advantage over the animals; for all is vanity. ²⁰All go to one place; all are from the dust, and all turn to dust again. ²¹Who knows whether the human spirit goes upward and the spirit of animals goes downward to the earth? ²²So I saw that there is nothing better than that all should enjoy their work, for that is their lot; who can bring them to see what will be after them?

Oppression and Toil

4 Again I saw all the oppressions that are practiced under the sun. Look, the tears of the oppressed—with no one to comfort them! On the side of their oppressors there was power—with no one to comfort them. ²And I thought the dead, who have already died, more fortunate than the living, who are still alive; ³but better than both is the one who has not yet been, and has not seen the evil deeds that are done under the sun.

4 Then I saw that all toil and all skill in work come from one person's envy of the value of actions (see 3.11; 7.1–4). 3.11 Suitable. Wisdom requires actions that fit their time (Prov 10.5; 26.1; 27.14; Mt 11.16–19). A sense of past and future (Hebrew ha'olam, lit. “the age” or “the world”), a difficult expression; suggested translations include “the world,” “eternity,” or “darkness” (“ignorance”). The quest to know all things (“the world”) cannot be attained (1.12–13; 7.25; 8.17; 11.5). 3.12–15 In the face of limits, enjoy the good, both play and work (2.10, 24; 3.22; 5.17–18; but see 2.18) as God's gift. God's deeds intend to lead humans to revere him (3.14; see note on 7.18). 3.15 Not a form of “the myth of the eternal return,” for humans do not know what will be (6.12; 8.7). What has gone by. Meaning uncertain.

3.16–22 Qoheleth sees injustice in the law court (see 8.14). He insists on God's timely justice

(v. 17; see v. 1; 12.14) but is uncertain how this can be, since humans lack knowledge beyond death (vv. 21–22). It is best to enjoy one's present work (v. 17; the Hebrew is plural and includes both activities and their products) as divine gift or lot (v. 22; see 2.24–25; 3.13). 3.17 Some seek to resolve the tension concerning ultimate justice by attributing this verse to a later, more “orthodox” editor of the book. See Introduction. 3.18 Is testing them. Hebrew uncertain. Animals, as explained in v. 19. 3.20 One place, Sheol (9.10), the place of the dead (Isa 14.9–20). Dust. See 12.7; Gen 3.19. 3.21 Who knows? See note on 2.19. Spirit. See 12.7; perhaps Prov 15.24.

4.1–3 Oppression and evil can be so great that nonexistence seems better than life; see 6.1–6. 4.4–12 Negative and positive aspects of toil. 4.4 All toil . . . envy of another. Some

- 5 Fools fold their hands and consume their own flesh.
6 Better is a handful with quiet than two handfuls with toil, and a chasing after wind.ⁱ

Solitude and Friendship

7 Again, I saw vanity under the sun:
8 the case of solitary individuals, without sons or brothers; yet there is no end to all their toil, and their eyes are never satisfied with riches. "For whom am I toiling," they ask, "and depriving myself of pleasure?" This also is vanity and an unhappy business.

9 Two are better than one, because they have a good reward for their toil.
10 For if they fall, one will lift up the other; but woe to one who is alone and falls and does not have another to help.
11 Again, if two lie together, they keep warm; but how can one keep warm alone?
12 And though one might prevail against another, two will withstand one. A three-fold cord is not quickly broken.

13 Better is a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king, who will no longer take advice.
14 One can indeed come out of prison to reign, even though born poor in the kingdom.
15 I saw all the living who, moving about under the sun, follow that youth who replaced the king;^k 16 there was no end to all those people whom he led. Yet those who come later will not rejoice in him. Surely this also is vanity and a chasing after wind.ⁱ

Reverence, Humility, and Contentment

5¹ Guard your steps when you go to the house of God; to draw near to listen is better than the sacrifice offered by fools; for they do not know how to keep from doing evil.^m 2ⁿ Never be rash with your mouth, nor let your heart be quick to utter a word before God, for God is in heaven, and you upon earth; therefore let your words be few.

3 For dreams come with many cares, and a fool's voice with many words.

4 When you make a vow to God, do not delay fulfilling it; for he has no pleasure in fools. Fulfill what you vow. 5^l It is better that you should not vow than that you should vow and not fulfill it. 6 Do not let your mouth lead you into sin, and do not say before the messenger that it was a mistake; why should God be angry at your words, and destroy the work of your hands?

7 With many dreams come vanities and a multitude of words;^o but fear God.

8 If you see in a province the oppression of the poor and the violation of justice and right, do not be amazed at the matter; for the high official is watched by a higher, and there are yet higher ones over them. 9 But all things considered, this is an advantage for a land: a king for a plowed field.^o translate, "all toil and all success in work are [inseparable from] human competition." 4.5-6 Proverbial sayings: neither self-destructive sloth nor frenetic toil are good. 4.7-12 Solitary toil (vv. 7-8; see 2.18-23) is pointless compared to toil and life together (vv. 9-12). 4.13-16 An obscure passage portraying paradoxical reversals of traditional expectations concerning roles and qualities (see 9.13-16; 10.5-7, 16-17; Prov 17.2; 20.29 [gray hair means wisdom]; 26.1; 30.21-23).

5.1-7 Admonitions on reverence before God. Though he wrestles with questions of God's justice and knowability, Qoheleth here affirms traditional practices and views. Right worship (including sacrifice and vows), wisdom, speech

(see Jas 1.26), and living all belong together. 5.1 Guard your steps means care for right behavior; to listen means to obey (see 1 Sam 15.22; Ps 15; Isa 1.11-17). 5.4-7 Vows and commitments are to be kept, lest God destroy one's work (v. 6; see Ps 90.11, 17). 5.8 A government hierarchy may or may not be implied here. But watched by means that the high and mighty "look out for" one another, so the poor have no chance for justice. 5.9 There is no satisfactory explanation of this verse.

5.10-20 Wealth in negative (vv. 10-17) and positive (vv. 18-20) perspective. 5.10-12 Three proverbs argue that lust for wealth is insatiable and wealth brings on "freeloaders" and sleepless satisfied with money; nor the lover of wealth, with gain. This also is vanity.

11 When goods increase, those who eat them increase; and what gain has their owner but to see them with his eyes?

12 Sweet is the sleep of laborers, whether they eat little or much; but the surfeit of the rich will not let them sleep.

13 There is a grievous ill that I have seen under the sun: riches were kept by their owners to their hurt, ¹⁴and those riches were lost in a bad venture; though they are parents of children, they have nothing in their hands. ¹⁵As they came from their mother's womb, so they shall go again, naked as they came; they shall take nothing for their toil, which they may carry away with their hands. ¹⁶This also is a grievous ill: just as they came, so shall they go; and what gain do they have from toiling for the wind? ¹⁷Besides, all their days they eat in darkness, in much vexation and sickness and resentment.

18 This is what I have seen to be good: it is fitting to eat and drink and find enjoyment in all the toil with which one toils under the sun the few days of the life God gives us; for this is our lot. ¹⁹Likewise all to whom God gives wealth and possessions and whom he enables to enjoy them, and to accept their lot and find enjoyment in their toil—this is the gift of God. ²⁰For they will scarcely brood over the days of their lives, because God keeps them occupied with the joy of their hearts.

The Frustration of Desires

6 There is an evil that I have seen under the sun, and it lies heavy upon humankind: ²those to whom God gives wealth, possessions, and honor, so that they lack nothing of all that they desire, yet God does not enable them to enjoy these things, but a stranger enjoys them. This is vanity; it is a grievous ill. ³A man may beget a hundred children, and live many years; but however many are the days of his years, if he does not enjoy life's good things, or has no burial, I say that a stillborn child is better off than he. ⁴For it comes into vanity and goes into darkness, and in darkness its name is covered; ⁵moreover it has not seen the sun or known anything; yet it finds rest rather than he. ⁶Even though he should live a thousand years twice over, yet enjoy no good—do not all go to one place?

⁷All human toil is for the mouth, yet the appetite is not satisfied. ⁸For what advantage have the wise over fools? And what do the poor have who know how to conduct themselves before the living? ⁹Better is the sight of the eyes than the wandering of desire; this also is vanity and a chasing after wind.^p nights of worry. 5.13–17 The uncertainty of wealth. Carefully guarded (kept, v. 13) riches are lost in a business venture gone bad. The heirs, like all humans, “come and go” (see 1.3–4). Naked, empty-handed (vv. 15–16; see Job 1.21). 5.16 They came . . . shall go . . . what gain? an echo of 1.3–4. 5.17 Perhaps a description of miserliness, anticipating death, what one scholar has called “the long darkness yet to come.” 5.18–20 On the good, an echo and elaboration of 2.24–26; 3.12–13, 22. While wealth is futile as an attempt to gain security (vv. 10–18), the responsible enjoyment (see 11.9) of life, toil, and even wealth (v. 19) as God's gift is fitting. Cf. Mt 6.25–34. 5.18 Fitting, “suitable” in 3.11; Qoheleth's call to responsible enjoyment, made with awareness of death and uncertainty, is not escapist or ill-timed (Isa 22.12–13), but it presupposes the principle of the right time (Eccl 3.1–15; Prov 6.6–8; 10.5; 2 Kings 5.26) and thus is a balance of play and work (see 8.15; 9.7–10). Lot. See note on 2.10.

6.1–6 Examples of wealth possessed but not enjoyed; see 2.18–21; 4.1–3. 6.3 No burial, an evil fate in ancient Israel; see 8.10; 2 Kings 9.33–37; Jer 16.5–6; 22.18–19. A stillborn child is better off, an inversion of the usual views (Ps 58.8); see Job 3.16–18. 6.6 One place. See note on 3.20.

6.7–12 A loosely connected group of sayings echoing a variety of Qoheleth's concerns and vocabulary and leading into the paradoxical proverbs of 7.1–14. 6.7 See Prov 16.26. 6.8 What advantage? See the positive answer in 7.11–12, 19; 2.13–14. Wisdom is better than folly, but death destroys its advantage. 6.10 See 1.9–11. Named . . . known. The passives indicate that God is the namer and knower. To name something is to express its “nature” or character. Some place a period after it is known (it referring to whatever) and continue, “Human beings are not able to dispute . . .” Those who are stronger. The Hebrew is singular and probably refers to God: “the one who is

Wise Sayings

- 7 A good name is better than precious ointment,
and the day of death, than the day of birth.
- 2 It is better to go to the house of mourning
than to go to the house of feasting;
for this is the end of everyone,
and the living will lay it to heart.
- 3 Sorrow is better than laughter, for by sadness of countenance the heart is made glad.
- 4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning;
but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.
- 5 It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise
than to hear the song of fools.
- 6 For like the crackling of thorns
under a pot,
so is the laughter of fools;
this also is vanity.
- 7 Surely oppression makes the wise foolish,
and a bribe corrupts the heart.

- 8 Better is the end of a thing than its beginning;
the patient in spirit are better than the proud in spirit.
- 9 Do not be quick to anger,
for anger lodges in the bosom of fools.
- 10 Do not say, "Why were the former days better than these?"
For it is not from wisdom that you ask this.
- 11 Wisdom is as good as an inheritance,
an advantage to those who see the sun.
- 12 For the protection of wisdom is like the protection of money,
and the advantage of knowledge is that wisdom gives life to the one who possesses it.
- 13 Consider the work of God;
who can make straight what he has made crooked?
- 14 In the day of prosperity be joyful,
and in the day of adversity consider; God has made the one as well as the other, so that mortals may not find out anything that will come after them.

The Riddles of Life

- 15 In my vain life I have seen everything; there are righteous people who perish in their righteousness, and there are wicked people who prolong their life stronger." 6.11 Words. Ironical, for Qoheleth himself trades in "words" or proverbs such as those following in 7.1–14. How is one the better? lit. "What gain do humans have?" See note on 1.3. 6.12 Who knows? See note on 2.19. What is good does not refer to human activity (see 5.18), but to the divine disposition of events for humans (3.11; 7.14; 8.17).

7.1–14 A series of proverbs mingling traditional wisdom with Qoheleth's critical contradictions (see Prov 26.4–5; 17.27–28), often using the "better . . . than" form. 7.1–6 These sayings encapsulate much of Qoheleth's wisdom: joy in life without awareness of vanity and death is folly. 7.1 Good name, a traditional judgment (Prov 22.1), with a pun on the Hebrew terms shem ("name") and shemen ("ointment"), followed by a paradox; see 7.8; Sir 11.21–28. 7.3 Sorrow. The same Hebrew word (ka'as) is translated as vexation in 1.18, anger in 7.9, and anxiety in 11.10, creating verbal contradictions in Hebrew concerning contrary aspects of the term. Countenance . . . heart, a contrast between inner and outer: a sad face may conceal a joyful heart or vice versa (Prov 14.13). 7.7 See Deut 16.19. Oppression, in the sense of extortion. 7.8 See 7.1–2; 1 Kings 20.11. 7.9 Anger may be translated sorrow; see note on 7.3. 7.10 See 1.11. 7.11–12 An answer to 6.8. Wisdom is as good as or better than wealth (Prov 16.16), but each has its limits (Eccl 9.15–16; Prov 19.21; 21.30–31). 7.13–14 See 1.15; 3.1–15; Sir 11.14; 33.7–15. After them. See 3.11; 6.12; 10.14; 11.6; Prov 27.1.

7.15 See 3.16–17; 8.5, 14; 9.1–2. The normal causal sequence of good actions leading to good consequences and evil to evil sometimes fails.

in their evildoing. ¹⁶Do not be too righteous, and do not act too wise; why should you destroy yourself? ¹⁷Do not be too wicked, and do not be a fool; why should you die before your time? ¹⁸It is good that you should take hold of the one, without letting go of the other; for the one who fears God shall succeed with both.

¹⁹ Wisdom gives strength to the wise more than ten rulers that are in a city.

²¹ Do not give heed to everything that people say, or you may hear your servant cursing you; ²²your heart knows that many times you have yourself cursed others.

²³ All this I have tested by wisdom; I said, "I will be wise," but it was far from me. ²⁴That which is, is far off, and deep, very deep; who can find it out? ²⁵I turned my mind to know and to search out and to seek wisdom and the sum of things, and to know that wickedness is folly and that foolishness is madness. ²⁶I found more bitter than death the woman who is a trap, whose heart is snares and nets, whose hands are fetters; one who pleases God escapes her, but the sinner is taken by her. ²⁷See, this is what I found, says the Teacher,^q adding one thing to another to find the sum, ²⁸which my mind has sought repeatedly, but I have not found. One man among a thousand I found, but a woman among all these I have not found. ²⁹See, this alone I found, that God made human beings straightforward, but they have devised many schemes.

The Limits of Human Power

8 Who is like the wise man?
And who knows the interpretation of a thing?
Wisdom makes one's face shine, and the hardness of one's countenance is changed.

² Keep^r the king's command because of your sacred oath. ³Do not be terrified; go from his presence, do not delay when the matter is unpleasant, for he does whatever he pleases. ⁴For the word of the king is powerful, and who can say to him, "What are you doing?" ⁵Whoever obeys a command will meet no harm, and the wise mind will know the time and way. ⁶For every matter has its time and way, although the troubles of mortals lie heavy upon them. ⁷Indeed, they do not know what is to be, for who can tell them how it will be? ⁸No one has power over the wind^s to restrain the wind,^s or power over the day of death; there is no discharge from the battle, nor does wickedness deliver those who practice it. ⁹All this I observed, applying my mind to all that is done under the sun, while one person

7.16 Do not be too righteous . . . act too wise, in the sense of pretending to be something one is not: very righteous and wise; cf. Prov 13.7; 25.6–7. 7.17 On the other hand, do not abandon yourself to wickedness. Your time. See note on 3.1–8; Prov 10.27. Qoheleth still maintains God is free to judge the wicked with an early death (3.17; 8.13). 7.18 The one . . . the other, the two precepts in 7.16–17. Fears God, includes both worship and daily life in relation to God and his will, sometimes "to stand in awe/fear" of God (3.14; 5.1–7; 8.12–13; 12.13; Gen 20.11; Deut 8.6; Prov 1.7; Job 28.28). 7.20 See 7.29; 9.3; Gen 6.5; 8.21; Ps 14.1–3; Rom 3.9–18. 7.26 Some read this (and 7.28) as misogynist stereotyping of women. More likely it echoes Proverbs' warning against adultery, in which males are responsible for sexual restraint toward women other than their wives (Prov 7.5–27; 9.13–18; 22.14; 23.27). Marital love is good (Eccl 9.9; Prov 5.15–20). 7.28 Like 7.26, this seems misogynist; yet its sense in context is unclear. Perhaps it is a hyperbolic idiom using the image of rarity to express the great value of a good man and woman. Cf. Prov 31.10, where "who can find?" expects the answer "no one" (see Prov 18.22). Cf. the numerical hyperbole in 1 Sam 18.7.

8.1–9 On the limits of human power. 8.2–5 See 10.4; Prov 24.21–22. 8.2–3 Sacred oath . . . terrified may be translated "Concerning an oath before God, do not be hasty." See 5.2, 4; 9.2. 8.5–6 Time and way, lit. "time and judgment," probably a hendiadys, "time of judgment"; see 3.1, 16–17; 11.9. 8.7 See 6.12; 7.14. 8.8 Wind, perhaps ironic in light of the refrains "vanity" ("breath" or "wind") and "chasing after wind" (see Jn 3.8), but it may refer to death ("wind" as "spirit" in Eccl 3.21). Battle. See Prov 21.30–31.

God's Ways Are Inscrutable

10 Then I saw the wicked buried; they used to go in and out of the holy place, and were praised in the city where they had done such things.^t This also is vanity.^u 11 Because sentence against an evil deed is not executed speedily, the human heart is fully set to do evil. 12 Though sinners do evil a hundred times and prolong their lives, yet I know that it will be well with those who fear God, because they stand in fear before him, 13 but it will not be well with the wicked, neither will they prolong their days like a shadow, because they do not stand in fear before God.

14 There is a vanity that takes place on earth, that there are righteous people who are treated according to the conduct of the wicked, and there are wicked people who are treated according to the conduct of the righteous. I said that this also is vanity. 15 So I commend enjoyment, for there is nothing better for people under the sun than to eat, and drink, and enjoy themselves, for this will go with them in their toil through the days of life that God gives them under the sun.

16 When I applied my mind to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done on earth, how one's eyes see sleep neither day nor night, 17 then I saw all the work of God, that no one can find out what is happening under the sun. However much they may toil in seeking, they will not find it out; even though those who are wise claim to know, they cannot find it out.

Take Life as It Comes

9 All this I laid to heart, examining it all, how the righteous and the wise and their deeds are in the hand of God; whether it is love or hate one does not know. Everything that confronts them² is vanity,^u since the same fate comes to all, to the righteous and the wicked, to the good and the evil,^v to the clean and the unclean, to those who sacrifice and those who do not sacrifice. As are the good, so are the sinners; those who swear are like those who shun an oath. 3 This is an evil in all that happens under the sun, that the same fate comes to everyone. Moreover, the hearts of all are full of evil; madness is in their hearts while they live, and after that they go to the dead. 4 But whoever is joined with all the living has hope, for a living dog is better than a dead lion. 5 The living know that they will die, but the dead know nothing; they have no more reward, and even the memory of them is lost. 6 Their love and their hate and their envy have already perished; never again will they have any share in all that happens under the sun.

7 Go, eat your bread with enjoyment, and drink your wine with a merry heart; for God has long ago approved what you do. 8 Let your garments always be white; do not let oil be lacking on your head. 9 Enjoy life with the wife whom you love, all the days of your vain life that are given you under the sun, because that is your portion in life and in your toil at which

8.10-17 Human experience of God's justice is mysterious, even inverted (thus vanity), leading the wicked to think it does not exist. Even the wise cannot know it (8.17; 3.11), yet Qoheleth insists on its reality (3.16-17; 11.9) and commends joy (8.15). 8.17 See note on 3.11.

9.1-12 Humans cannot distinguish good and bad people by what happens to them (7.15; 8.10-17; the fallacy of Job's friends). Death, chance, and the evil in every human heart can level the distinctions between just and unjust, wise and foolish, the competent and incompetent (9.11-12). Yet life is better than death (9.4; cf. 4.2-3) and to be enjoyed (9.7-10). 9.1 Love or hate, of God or humans is uncertain, perhaps the sort of literary device found in 3.1-8 indicating lack of total knowledge (see 9.6; note on 9.1-12). 9.2 For the converse, see Mt 5.45. Qoheleth does not mean that the righteous and the wicked, the good and the evil, etc., are equal, but that death comes to all. 9.3 Hearts . . . evil. See note on 7.20. In biblical terms, the heart is the spiritual center of the self, the ultimate source of thought, will, emotion, and action. See Prov 4.23; Jer 7.24 ("will" here translates the Hebrew word usually rendered "heart"); 31.33; Ezek 18.31: 36.26-27; Mk 7.20-21. 9.7-10 The practical sum of Qoheleth's teaching, given imperative force: in the face of death and vanity, embrace the good in life—both work and play—with ¹¹ Again I saw that under the sun the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, nor bread to the wise, nor riches to the intelligent, nor favor to the skillful; but time and chance happen to them all. ¹²For no one can anticipate the time of disaster. Like fish taken in a cruel net, and like birds caught in a snare, so mortals are snared at a time of calamity, when it suddenly falls upon them.

Wisdom Superior to Folly

¹³ I have also seen this example of wisdom under the sun, and it seemed great to me. ¹⁴There was a little city with few people in it. A great king came against it and besieged it, building great siegeworks against it. ¹⁵Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city. Yet no one remembered that poor man. ¹⁶So I said, "Wisdom is better than might; yet the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heeded."

¹⁷ The quiet words of the wise are more to be heeded than the shouting of a ruler among fools.

¹⁸ Wisdom is better than weapons of war, but one bungler destroys much good.

Miscellaneous Observations

10 Dead flies make the perfumer's ointment give off a foul odor; so a little folly outweighs wisdom and honor.

² The heart of the wise inclines to the right,

³ Even when fools walk on the road, they lack sense, and show to everyone that they are fools.

⁴ If the anger of the ruler rises against you, do not leave your post, for calmness will undo great offenses.

⁹ Whoever quarries stones will be hurt by them; and whoever splits logs will be endangered by them.

¹⁰ If the iron is blunt, and one does not whet the edge, then more strength must be exerted; but wisdom helps one to succeed.

¹¹ If the snake bites before it is charmed, there is no advantage in a charmer.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON

THE SONG OF SOLOMON (also known as the “Song of Songs,” “Canticles,” and “the Song”) is a rich and sensual love song.

Purpose

The Song of Solomon has been understood in radically different ways. In the traditional Jewish understanding, the Song is a religious allegory recounting God’s love for Israel and the history of their relationship. For Christians it is an allegory of Christ’s love for the church. These allegorical interpretations enabled the Song to become sacred scripture. Seen as sacred marriage liturgy, the Song is, or at least is derived from, a Mesopotamian ritual of marriage between two gods, the fertility god Dummuzi-Tammuz (perhaps represented by the king) and his sister Inanna-Astarte (represented by a priestess). A recent mortuary song theory identifies the Song’s setting as funerary repasts (or orgies) that affirmed life by setting the power of love against the power of death. According to the wedding song interpretation (implicitly followed by the NRSV in its choice of verb tenses), the poem describes an actual wedding. The lovers are regarded as bride and groom celebrating their nuptials. Parallels to songs sung at nineteenth-century Palestinian Arab weddings have been used to support this theory. The Song is also seen as secular love poetry. In this view, the poem portrays an erotic love between two young people who are not yet betrothed and whose union is not yet recognized by the girl’s family, but who look forward to public acceptance of their union and to its culmination in marriage. This is the interpretation followed in the following notes. The other approaches do not necessarily deny that the Song depicts an erotic, noncultic love, but they regard this level of meaning as superficial or incomplete. There are, however, no signs that the author intended to depict any sort of experience other than human, sexual love. Nevertheless, one may legitimately bring meanings to a book as well as draw them from it. As a superb portrayal of adolescent erotic love, the words of the Song can—by a bold reinterpretation—be applied to other types of love, such as the divine benevolence that bestows loving blessings on humankind, the human devotion that transcends death, or the mature sexual communion solemnized in marriage.

Setting

Judging from its art and control of language, the Song is a product of deliberate artistry, perhaps composed by a professional singer for entertainment at festivities. Similar Egyptian love songs occasionally define themselves as “entertainment” (lit. “diverting the heart”) and were sung by professional male and female singers at banquets such as are portrayed in many tombs. Similar festivities are a likely setting for the Song’s original use.

Like Proverbs and Ecclesiastes, the Song is attributed to King Solomon (1.1), the archetypal wise man and lover. But nothing in the poem supports that identification, and the title is probably a later addition. The Song’s actual author is unknown.

Opinions on the book’s structure vary greatly. Some scholars believe it is a unified poem constructed on a tight, intricate pattern, while others consider it a loose anthology of originally independent poems from different sources. One view, popular in the nineteenth century, holds that the poem is a drama whose unity resides in a cohesive plot (such as a story of Solomon taking an unwilling rustic maiden to his palace). Others hold that the Song is a single poem written by a single author but lacking any strict overall pattern. Its cohesiveness comes from the presentation of consistent characters who express the same emotions in similar language throughout the Song.

The dating of the Song is uncertain, since there is nothing to tie it to a specific historical setting. It has been assigned dates ranging from the time of Solomon (mid-tenth century B.C.E.) down to the third or second century B.C.E. The linguistic characteristics of the poem tend to confirm a later (fourth or third century) dating for its present form. However, it incorporates themes and usages from much earlier—probably pre-Israelite—times.

The Song belongs to a tradition of love poetry known elsewhere in the ancient Near East. Similar language and motifs appear in Mesopotamian sacred marriage songs. Even closer are the Egyptian love songs (early thirteenth to mid-twelfth century B.C.E.), which speak of love between unmarried young people who express their longings, joys, and pains as well as their fascination with the new experiences of love.

By portraying lovers, the Song represents an idea—and an ideal—of love. It shows a relationship charged with erotic energy and a joyous, sensual world in which the land’s rebirth in spring is the counterpart of the girl’s blossoming into womanhood. Sexuality is treated with restraint and indirection and affirmed without coyness or apology. The love portrayed is thoroughly egalitarian and mutual, with both lovers desiring, behaving, feeling, and speaking in the same way and with the same intensity. The constraints of the patriarchal society do not seem to determine the lovers' behavior toward each other, though they do restrict the girl's freedom of movement.

Love in the Song is seen as a communion of souls, expressed by tightly interlocking dialogue (e.g., 1.9–17; 2.1–3a; 4.1–5.1). It is also a mode of perception, for when the lovers look at each other they see a world of their own. Each describes the other's body, dwelling lovingly on each part as if to caress it with words and capturing its essence in striking (sometimes startling) images. These images come to life on their own and combine to describe a rich and blessed landscape (4.1–7; 5.10–16; 6.4–10; 7.2–10a), the Arcady of love.

your name is perfume

therefore the maidens love you.

The king has brought me into his chambers.
We will exult and rejoice in you;
we will extol your love more than wine;
rightly do they love you.

because the sun has gazed

My mother's sons were angry with me;
they made me keeper of the

but my own vineyard I have not kept!
7 Tell me, you whom my soul loves,
where you pasture your flock, where you make it lie down
at noon;
for why should I be like one who is veiled beside the flocks of your

1.1 Song of Songs, a superlative meaning "the sublime song."

1.2–8 The maiden's complaint. 1.2 Let him . . . your. The lovers sometimes address each other in the third person (e.g., 1.12; 2.1–3), which carries a tone of respect. Let him kiss me. The Hebrew suggests a pun on the term meaning "give to drink" (used in 8.2). Love (Hebrew dodim), meaning physical expressions of love. 1.4 King is probably a term of affection and esteem referring to the youth. 1.5–8 The girl's brothers grew angry at her (for her new love interests?) and tried to coop her up at home. 1.5 Black and beautiful, better "black but beautiful." As 1.6 shows, the maiden does not consider "blackness," i.e., sunburn, to be part of her beauty. The daughters of Jerusalem are the Shulammite's girlfriends, who listen to her effusions and tease her a bit (5.9). Kedar, an Arabian tribe whose name means "dark." Curtains, i.e., tent curtains. Solomon, or read "Salmah," also an Arabian tribe. Vineyard, an allusion to womanhood (cf. 8.12). 1.7–8 One who is veiled, a harlot (Gen 38.14–15). The girl is being provocative and gets teased in return in v. 8. To pasture or "graze" (Hebrew ro'eh), together with homonyms, often enters into wordplays alluding to lovemaking (his beloved is called ra' yati, my love [v. 9], from a homonymous root). As for where this shepherd "grazes," see 2.16; 4.16–5.1.

The Woman's Beauty Extolled

- 4 How beautiful you are, my love, how very beautiful!
Your eyes are doves
behind your veil.
Your hair is like a flock of goats, moving down the slopes of Gilead.
2 Your teeth are like a flock of shorn ewes
that have come up from the washing,
all of which bear twins,
and not one among them is bereaved.
3 Your lips are like a crimson thread,

- and your mouth is lovely.
Your cheeks are like halves of a pomegranate
behind your veil.
4 Your neck is like the tower of David,
built in courses;
on it hang a thousand bucklers,
all of them shields of warriors.
5 Your two breasts are like two fawns,
twins of a gazelle,
that feed among the lilies.
6 Until the day breathes and the shadows flee,
I will hasten to the mountain of myrrh
and the hill of frankincense.
7 You are altogether beautiful,
my love;
there is no flaw in you.
8 Come with me from Lebanon,
my bride;
come with me from Lebanon.
Depart^f from the peak of Amana,
from the peak of Senir and Hermon,
from the dens of lions,
from the mountains of leopards.
9 You have ravished my heart, my sister, my bride,
you have ravished my heart
with a glance of your eyes, with one jewel of your necklace.
10 How sweet is your love, my sister,
my bride!

The alarms by night may be nocturnal demons. 3.9–11 Palanquin, or “pavilion,” not necessarily portable. Inlaid with love. Emendation yields “inlaid with stones”; cf. Esth 1.6. The crown may allude to a floral garland.

4.1–7 A praise song (cf. 5.10–16; 6.4–10; 7.1–9) that describes the beloved part by part with bold and sometimes startling metaphors. The metaphors are often extended by a description pertaining only to the image itself, not to the beloved's appearance. 4.1 Flock of goats suggests wavy black tresses cascading over head and shoulders. 4.3 The girl's veil casts a shadow that recalls the webbing of membranes in a split pomegranate. 4.4 This image suggests a necklace made up of rows of beads, each of which is like a shield hung on a wall (cf. Ezek 27.11). An actual “Tower of David” is otherwise unknown. 4.6 The day breathes and the shadows flee, i.e., at dawn. The hills of myrrh and spices seem to allude to the maiden's breasts.

4.8–5.1 The youth invites his beloved to come away with him, speaking as if she were in far and inaccessible mountains (cf. 2.14), and then lauds her caresses. 4.8 Lebanon, a mountain range north of Israel. Amana, Senir, and Hermon are tall mountains in the Anti-Lebanon range, running along the border of present-day Syria and Lebanon. 4.9 Sister is a term of endearment, as in the Egyptian love songs, and in no way implies consanguinity. Bride too is a term of affection, but it also expresses hopes for the future.

4.11 Your lips distill nectar, my bride, or “drip honeycomb,” a striking assonance in Hebrew, nofet tit-tofnah siftotayik kallah. The scent of Lebanon. The fragrant cedars of Lebanon can be smelled from miles away. 4.12 Garden and fountain are images of feminine sexuality (cf. Prov 5.15–17). The youth extols his beloved’s modesty and sexual exclusiveness, while implying his wish to be admitted. 4.13–14 Channel, rather the area of a garden irrigated by the channel. Saffron, calamus, and the others mentioned are all aromatic spices. The profusion of fruits and spices suggests a fullness of sensual delights. 4.16 The maiden invites the beloved into her garden, her own fresh and fragrant body, which now is his garden too, to taste the fruits of love. 5.1 I come to my garden. He accepts the invitation and enters the garden, which he now calls his. Then a chorus—the daughters of Jerusalem?—encourages the couple to taste their full of love. Be drunk with love (Hebrew dodim, “lovemaking”) means to give oneself over to sexual ecstasy, as in Prov 5.19; 7.18.

5.2–8 Another nighttime visit and search for the beloved (cf. 3.1–4). 5.2 I slept, but my heart was awake. Perhaps the entire passage relates a dream, but the words may also mean that the maiden woke up. 5.4 Into the opening, through a window. 5.5 The girl had prepared for the visit by anointing herself with perfumed unguents: cf. Prov 7.17. 5.6 The maiden runs about the streets at night seeking her lover—a strange and dangerous deed. 5.7 The sentinels who guard the walls—perhaps a symbol of proper society (cf. 8.9)—beat her and strip off her garment. Perhaps the sentinels found me;

ISAIAH

THE BOOK OF ISAIAH is a composite work, the product of several different prophets who ministered at different periods in the history of Israel. Scholars normally distinguish between three main sections in the book: chs. 1–39, referred to as First Isaiah and attributed in general to the eighth-century Judean prophet whose name the book bears; chs. 40–55, referred to as Second Isaiah, or Deutero-Isaiah, and attributed to an unknown prophet who lived in Babylon during the Babylonian exile of the sixth century; and chs. 56–66, referred to as Third Isaiah, or Trito-Isaiah, and attributed to a prophet or prophets who lived in Judah after the return from Babylonian exile in 539 B.C.E.

First Isaiah

According to the superscription (Isa I.1), Isaiah son of Amoz prophesied in Jerusalem during the reign of the four Judean kings Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. If the vision in Isa 6.1 was Isaiah's inaugural vision, he began prophesying in the year of Uzziah's death (ca. 738 B.C.E.), and while the end of his ministry is less certain, it extended at least until 701, and perhaps as late as 688 B.C.E. Isaiah's datable oracles cluster in three main periods: the period of the Syro-Ephraimite war (735–732 B.C.E.), when Syria and Israel attacked Judah (Isa 7.1–2); the period of anti-Assyrian agitation in the west against Sargon II (ca. 720–710 B.C.E.); and the period of Hezekiah's revolt against Sennacherib (ca. 705–701, possibly again in 689–88 B.C.E.). There is evidence that during his long ministry Isaiah adapted and reused early oracles in new historical settings; some oracles originally directed against Syria and Israel at the time of the Syro-Ephraimite war were later given an anti-Assyrian slant.

Though the editorial process cannot be fully recovered, the genuine Isaian oracles seem to have been preserved in several subcollections. Chs. 1–5 primarily contain oracles against God's own people. The core of chs. 6–11 appears to be a collection from the time of the Syro-Ephraimite war. Chs. 13–23 contain oracles against the nations, chs. 28–33 have oracles on the revolt against Sennacherib.

Not all the material in chs. 1–39 can be attributed to Isaiah of Jerusalem, however. In addition to individual oracles whose authenticity is questioned by one scholar or another, three major blocks of material in chs. 1–39 are clearly not the work of Isaiah of Jerusalem. Chs. 36–39 are largely prose narrative taken from 2 Kings 18.13–20.19 and secondarily inserted into the book of Isaiah. Chs. 34–35 are much closer in style and content to Second or Third Isaiah and should probably be dated to the exilic or postexilic period. Chs. 24–27, often referred to as the Isaiah Apocalypse, contain proto-apocalyptic oracles that stand in marked contrast to those of Isaiah of Jerusalem. While Isaiah's oracles are rooted in particular historical contexts and his threats and promises do not dissolve the reality of those contexts, the oracles in chs. 24–27 are very difficult to root in any historical context and are marked by a heavy dependence on mythological motifs. Scholars normally date these chapters to the early sixth century B.C.E. or later.

Isaiah of Jerusalem was rooted in the Zion tradition, which celebrated God as the great king of heaven and earth, Jerusalem (Zion) as the city God chose to be his royal dwelling, and the kings of the Davidic line as God's anointed vice-regents on earth. The influence of all three aspects of this tradition are evident in the prophet's message. Isaiah's inaugural vision (6.1–4) portrays God as the exalted king, from whose terrifying holiness even the most august angels must hide their eyes. That vision colors the prophet's attitude toward anything that humans might lift up as a rival for the fear and allegiance that rightly belong only to the divine suzerain (see 2.12–22; 8.13). Isaiah assumed that God had founded Zion/Jerusalem (14.32), lived in it (8.18), and hence would ultimately save it. Nevertheless, since the holy God would not live in a moral slum, a morally defiled Jerusalem must be purified by judgment before the city could be saved (1.21–28; 29.1–8). Isaiah's adherence to the Davidic royal tradition is clear from his assurance to Ahaz (7.3–17) and his several portrayals of the ideal king (9.1–7; 11.1–10; 32.1–2).

Second Isaiah

Chs. 40–55 presuppose an Israelite audience living in Babylon toward the end of the Babylonian exile (597–539 B.C.E.). The prophet announces to this audience that the end of their exile in Babylon is imminent. Babylon, not Assyria, is Israel's main enemy, and the burden of the prophet's message is the promise of deliverance, not the threat of judgment. Moreover, the prophet twice mentions Cyrus, the Persian ruler (44.28; 45.1), as a figure who has come to the attention of his audience. Such notice certainly presupposes Cyrus's dethroning of his Median overlord Astyages (550 B.C.E.) and perhaps Cyrus's defeat of the Lydian king Croesus (547/6 B.C.E.) as well. Thus this anonymous prophet's work can probably be dated between 545 and 539 B.C.E.

Though clearly dependent on First Isaiah's message, Second Isaiah is also easily distinguishable. Second Isaiah shares the eighth-century prophet's emphasis on the holiness of God and his vision of God as the great king, and he at least adapts the earlier prophet's ideal of the Davidic king, democratizing it to apply it to the entire nation. Unlike First Isaiah, however, the message of Second Isaiah is primarily that of consolation, and this message is couched in a distinctive style. In relatively long, markedly lyrical oracles, Second Isaiah reassures the exiles that God still controls history. Despite present appearances, the Lord will soon demonstrate his power by bringing the Israelites back to their own country in a second exodus more glorious than the first. Before this God, who has created all things, the Babylonian idols are as nothing; God's judgment on both the Babylonians and their gods is imminent.

Third Isaiah

Chs. 56–66 are so similar stylistically to Second Isaiah they must be attributed either to the same author or to some disciple or disciples who used the poetry of Second Isaiah as a model. The historical setting presupposed is different from that of Second Isaiah, however. The audience addressed by Third Isaiah is once more living in the land of Judah. Isa 66.1 suggests work had already begun to rebuild the temple, a work completed in the years 520–515 B.C.E. The initial return from Babylonian exile has already taken place, but this second exodus has not been as glorious as Second Isaiah predicted, and life for the returnees in Judah remains very harsh. In these difficult circumstances there are both economic oppression and, in an attempt to cope with life's problems, a resurgence in the pagan rituals long indigenous in Israel. In response to this situation, Third Isaiah announces God's imminent judgment on the oppressors and syncretists. The prophet promises the righteous that God's glorious deliverance of Israel, long promised by Second Isaiah, is soon to be realized. Soon the wealth of the nations will pour into Jerusalem along with the rest of Israel's exiles, and the shame and sorrow of the recent past will be replaced with eternal joy and prosperity. *J. J. M. for the LORD has spoken:
I reared children and brought them up,
but they have rebelled
against me.
- 3 The ox knows its owner, and the donkey its master's but Israel does not know, my people do not understand.

- 4 Ah, sinful nation,
people laden with iniquity, offspring who do evil,
children who deal corruptly,
who have forsaken the LORD, who have despised the Holy
One of Israel,
who are utterly estranged!

- 5 Why do you seek further beatings?
Why do you continue to rebel?
The whole head is sick,
and the whole heart faint.
- 6 From the sole of the foot even to the head,
there is no soundness in it, but bruises and sores
and bleeding wounds;
they have not been drained, or bound up,
or softened with oil.
- 7 Your country lies desolate,
your cities are burned with fire;
in your very presence
aliens devour your land;
it is desolate, as overthrown by foreigners.
- 8 And daughter Zion is left like a booth in a vineyard, like a shelter in a cucumber field,
like a besieged city.
- 9 If the LORD of hosts had not left us a few survivors, we would have been like Sodom,
and become like Gomorrah.

In contrast to other superscriptions found in Isaiah (2.1; 13.1; 14.28; 15.1; 17.1; 19.1; 21.1, 11, 13; 22.1; 23.1; 30.6), this superscription is intended as a heading for all of chs. 1–39 (cf. Jer 1.1–3; Ezek 1.1–3). It characterizes the book as a prophetic message from God given to Judah by Isaiah, and it puts the message in a limited historical context.

1.2–20 God brings a legal suit against his people because of their breach of the Mosaic covenant. 1.2–3 The accusation. Heavens and earth are summoned as witnesses (cf. Deut 32.1; Ps 50; Mic 6.1–8) in this lawsuit because they were witnesses when the covenant was originally made (Deut 4.23–26; 30.19; 31.24–30). God, the father of the people of Israel, charges them with being rebellious children (Deut 32.5–6), a crime subject to the death penalty in Israelite law (Deut 21.18–21). 1.3 Israel is sometimes used as a specific reference to the Northern Kingdom, but here it is an inclusive designation for God's people, since Zion, the capital city of Judah, the Southern Kingdom, is mentioned (1.8). The nation's behavior shows less understanding than that normally encountered in dumb animals (cf. Jer 8.7). 1.4–9 Direct address to Israel underscoring the folly of its wicked behavior. 1.4 Ah, sometimes translated Ho (55.1), is a simple exclamation to get the attention of those being addressed (5.8, 11, 18). The following words identify them as God's wicked children mentioned in v. 2. Holy One of Israel is one of Isaiah's favorite designations for God (5.19, 24; 10.20; 12.6; 17.7; 29.19; 30.11–12, 15; 31.1; 37.23). It expresses the unapproachable majesty and sanctity of this God (cf. 6.1–5) who nonetheless graciously chose Israel and lives in its midst (12.6; Ex 24.9–11). 1.5–6 To treat such a God with contempt is utter folly. Israel has already been disciplined so harshly that it is like a person whose whole body is covered with untreated wounds yet continues to provoke more punishment. 1.7–8 The historical reality behind Isaiah's metaphor of discipline appears to be the desolation of the land caused by one of the Assyrian invasions, probably that of Sennacherib in 701 B.C.E. Zion is another name for Jerusalem, which Sennacherib isolated and besieged. The expression daughter Zion personifies the city as a young woman and carries an undertone of affection or sympathy. 1.9 LORD of hosts is another of Isaiah's choice designations for God; it occurs fifty-six times in Isa 1–39. The epithet portrays God as the king and leader of the army of heavenly beings (1 Kings 22.19) and thus underscores God's great imperial power (2 Sam 6.2; Ps 24.10; Isa 6.3). Sodom and Gomorrah were proverbial as cities utterly destroyed by God (Gen 19.24–29; Deut 29.23; Isa 13.19; Jer 49.18;

- 10 Hear the word of the LORD,
you rulers of Sodom!
Listen to the teaching of
our God,
you people of Gomorrah!
- 11 What to me is the multitude of your sacrifices?
says the LORD;
I have had enough of burnt offerings of rams
and the fat of fed beasts;
I do not delight in the blood of bulls,
or of lambs, or of goats.
- 12 When you come to appear before me,^a
who asked this from your hand?
Trample my courts no more; 13 bringing offerings is futile; incense is an abomination
to me.
New moon and sabbath and calling of convocation — I cannot endure solemn assemblies with iniquity.
- 14 Your new moons and your appointed festivals
my soul hates;
they have become a burden
to me,
I am weary of bearing them.
- 15 When you stretch out your hands,
I will hide my eyes from you;
even though you make many prayers,
I will not listen;
your hands are full of blood.
- 16 Wash yourselves; make yourselves clean;

- remove the evil of your doings
from before my eyes;
cease to do evil,
17 learn to do good;
seek justice,
rescue the oppressed,
defend the orphan,
plead for the widow.
- 18 Come now, let us argue it out,
says the LORD:
though your sins are like scarlet,
they shall be like snow;
though they are red like crimson,
they shall become like wool.
- 19 If you are willing and obedient,
you shall eat the good of the land;
20 but if you refuse and rebel,
you shall be devoured by the
sword;
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.

Renewal of a Tarnished Jerusalem

- 21 How the faithful city has become a whore!
She that was full of justice, righteousness lodged in her —
but now murderers!
- 22 Your silver has become dross,
your wine is mixed with water.
- 23 Your princes are rebels and companions of thieves.
Everyone loves a bribe
and runs after gifts.
They do not defend the orphan, and the widow's cause does not come before them.

50.40; Am 4.11; Zeph 2.9). 1.10–17 God rejects ritual worship until such rituals are accompanied by a genuine change to moral behavior (cf. 29.13–14; Jer 6.20; 7.1–15; Am 5.21–24). 1.10 Sodom and Gomorrah were also proverbial as utterly wicked cities (3.9; Gen 19.1–23; Deut 32.32; Jer 23.14; Lam 4.6). 1.14 My soul is a Hebrew idiom meaning “I.” 1.15 Hands . . . full of blood, hands stained by murder and violent oppression. 1.17 Because of their relative powerlessness orphans and widows were two classes of people often subject to oppression in ancient Near Eastern societies. Following the Near Eastern legal tradition, Israelite law extended special concern for their protection (Ex 22.21; Deut

24.17; 27.19), and this concern is also reflected in Israel's other religious literature (Job 31.16; Ps 94.6; Jer 7.6; Zech 7.10). 1.18–20 The covenantal choice of life or death (cf. Deut 30.19–20). 1.18 Argue, as in a lawsuit before a judge (cf. Job 23.7). The use of scarlet and crimson as metaphors for wickedness probably arose from the association of these colors with blood (cf. v. 15); cloth of this color was used in certain sin offerings (Lev 14.4–6, 49–52; Num 19.6).

1.21–28 The once-glorious city must be purged to restore it to its former honor. 1.21–23 God laments the city's corruption. Whore. Cf. Jer 3.6–10; Ezek 16, 23; Hos 1–3.

24 Therefore says the Sovereign, the LORD of hosts, the Mighty
One of Israel:

Ah, I will pour out my wrath on my enemies,
and avenge myself on my foes!

25 I will turn my hand against you;
I will smelt away your dross as with lye

and remove all your alloy.

26 And I will restore your judges as at the first,
and your counselors as at the beginning.

Afterward you shall be called the city of righteousness,
the faithful city.

27 Zion shall be redeemed by justice, and those in her who repent,
by righteousness.

28 But rebels and sinners shall be destroyed together,
and those who forsake the LORD shall be consumed.

29 For you shall be ashamed of the oaks
in which you delighted;
and you shall blush for the gardens
that you have chosen.

30 For you shall be like an oak whose leaf withers,
and like a garden without water.

31 The strong shall become like tinder,
and their work^b like a spark;
they and their work shall burn
together,
with no one to quench them.

The Glorified Jerusalem

2 In days to come
the mountain of the LORD's
house
shall be established as the highest
of the mountains,
and shall be raised above
the hills;

all the nations shall stream to it.

3 Many peoples shall come and say,

"Come, let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob;

that he may teach us his ways
and that we may walk in his paths."

For out of Zion shall go forth instruction,
and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

4 He shall judge between the
nations,
and shall arbitrate for many
peoples;
they shall beat their swords into plowshares,
and their spears into pruning hooks;
nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war
any more.

b Or its makers

1.24–28 God's solution is a purging judgment. 1.24 Mighty One of Israel is a unique Isaian variant of the more common epithet Mighty One of Jacob (49.26; 60.16; Gen 49.24; Ps 132.2, 5) and portrays God as a warrior. 1.25 As with lye. A better reading may be "in a furnace" (cf. 48.10), since lye was not used in the smelting process. 1.26 The judges and counselors can only refer to royal officials of the Davidic era, since Jerusalem first became an Israelite city in his day (2 Sam 5.6–9). 1.27–28 Only the repentant will survive the judgment (cf. 1.18–20; 33.14–16). 1.29–31 The prophet condemns sacred groves as pagan cult symbols (17.10–11), and in the religious reform of his contemporary, King Hezekiah, they were destroyed (2 Kings 18.4). 1.31 Strong here refers to the oak (cf. Am 2.9). Its makers (see text note b) is a better translation than their work; it refers to the human keepers of the grove. There is a wordplay in Hebrew between its makers and their work in the following line.

2.1 Second superscription. This can be for ch. 2 or chs. 2–4. 2.2–4 Elevated above all other sites as the divine abode (for this motif, cf. Pss 48.1–2; 78.68–69; Ezek 40.2; Zech 14.10). Jerusalem will one day be acknowledged by the nations as the imperial capital where the divine suzerain will settle international disputes, thus bringing an end to war. This oracle also occurs in Mic 4.1–3.

Judgment Threatened Against Jacob

- 5 O house of Jacob,
come, let us walk
in the light of the LORD!
- 6 For you have forsaken the ways of^c your people,
O house of Jacob.
Indeed they are full of diviners^d
from the east
and of soothsayers like the Philistines,
and they clasp hands with
foreigners.
- 7 Their land is filled with silver and gold,
and there is no end to their
treasures;
their land is filled with horses,
and there is no end to their
chariots.
- 8 Their land is filled with idols;
they bow down to the work of their hands,
to what their own fingers
have made.
- 9 And so people are humbled, and everyone is brought low —
do not forgive them!
- 10 Enter into the rock,
and hide in the dust
from the terror of the LORD,
and from the glory of his majesty.
- 11 The haughty eyes of people shall
be brought low,
and the pride of everyone shall
be humbled;

- and the LORD alone will be exalted on that day.
- 12 For the LORD of hosts has a day against all that is proud and lofty,
against all that is lifted up and high;^e
- 13 against all the cedars of Lebanon, lofty and lifted up;
and against all the oaks of Bashan;
- 14 against all the high mountains;
and against all the lofty hills;
- 15 against every high tower,
and against every fortified wall;
- 16 against all the ships of Tarshish, and against all the beautiful craft.^f
- 17 The haughtiness of people shall
be humbled,
and the pride of everyone shall
be brought low;
and the LORD alone will be
exalted on that day.
- 18 The idols shall utterly pass away.
- 19 Enter the caves of the rocks and the holes of the ground,
from the terror of the LORD,
and from the glory of his
majesty,
when he rises to terrify the
earth.
- 20 On that day people will throw away
to the moles and to the bats

2.5–22 Judgment threatened against Jacob and every rival to God's majesty. 2.5–6a These verses link the preceding and following oracles as logically connected. Since the nations are going to come to God in Jerusalem, Jacob, who has forsaken his people, is also invited to return and once more walk with God. House of Jacob presumably refers to the Northern Kingdom (9.8; 17.4; cf. 8.17; 10.20–21). Mic 4.4–5 ends the oracle differently. 2.6b–22 Jacob's sin is illustrated (2.6–9) and God's judgment is announced (2.10–22). 2.6 Diviners and soothsayers were regarded as pagan fortune-tellers and were not to be consulted in Israel (Deut 18.14). In parallel to the Philistines on the west, east must refer to the Arameans (Isa 9.12). 2.11–12 Just as God's city is exalted above all rivals (2.2), so God is exalted above all rivals (cf. 6.1–5). In that day and the LORD . . . has a

The mention of Lebanon, Bashan, and high mountains may suggest the Aramean state and its Tyrian ally as God's political and religious rival (cf. Ps 68.15–16). 2.16 Ships can symbolize forces hostile to God and his city (33.21–23; Ps 48.7). 2.19–20 Palestine's innumerable limestone caves have always served as a refuge, as hiding places for abandoned goods, and as a home for bats.

Judgment Threatened Against Judah

- 3 For now the Sovereign, the LORD
of hosts,
is taking away from Jerusalem and from Judah
support and staff—
all support of bread,
and all support of water—2 warrior and soldier,
judge and prophet,
diviner and elder,
3 captain of fifty
and dignitary,
counselor and skillful magician and expert enchanter.
4 And I will make boys their princes,
and babes shall rule over them.
5 The people will be oppressed, everyone by another
and everyone by a neighbor;
the youth will be insolent to the elder,
and the base to the honorable.
6 Someone will even seize a relative,

“You have a cloak;
you shall be our leader,
and this heap of ruins
shall be under your rule.” 7 But the other will cry out on that day, saying, “I will not be a healer;
in my house there is neither bread nor cloak;
you shall not make me
leader of the people.”
8 For Jerusalem has stumbled and Judah has fallen, because their speech and their deeds are against the LORD, defying his glorious presence.
9 The look on their faces bears witness against them;
they proclaim their sin like Sodom,
they do not hide it.
Woe to them!
For they have brought evil on
themselves.
10 Tell the innocent how fortunate
they are,
for they shall eat the fruit of their labors.
11 Woe to the guilty! How unfortunate they are,
for what their hands have done
shall be done to them.
12 My people—children are their oppressors,
and women rule over them.
O my people, your leaders mislead you,
and confuse the course of your
paths.

God will replace the experienced officials with inexperienced and naive rulers, and the result will be social chaos, including open oppression and violence. 3.6–7 The breakdown in authority will be so complete that no one will want the thankless task of being leader and ruling Judah. 3.8–9 The look on their faces. Judah's rulers, by their shameless, brazen sinfulness, have brought this judgment on themselves. 3.10–11 A wisdom saying distinguishing the fate of the innocent and the guilty. 3.12–15 An indictment of Judah's leadership. 3.12 Children, women. Judah's childish rulers are unduly influenced by the selfish desires of their women (vv. 16–17; 32.9–14; cf. Am 4.1–3). 3.13–14 The Lord takes the leaders of his people to court. Elders, prominent representatives of the people who had an influential voice in governmental policies and the administration of justice (Deut 21.19–21; 2 Kings 23.1). Princes, govern-

Judgment on the Daughters of Zion

- 16 The LORD said:
Because the daughters of Zion are haughty
and walk with outstretched necks,
glancing wantonly with
their eyes,
mincing along as they go,
tinkling with their feet;
17 the Lord will afflict with scabs the heads of the daughters of Zion,
and the LORD will lay bare their

and the crescents; ¹⁹the pendants, the bracelets, and the scarfs; ²⁰the headdresses, the armlets, the sashes, the per-

The Future Glory of the Survivors in Zion shall be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the land shall be the pride and glory of the survivors of Israel. ³Whoever is left in Zion and remains in Jerusalem will be called holy, everyone who has been recorded for life in Jerusalem, ⁴once the Lord has washed away the filth of the

The Song of the Unfruitful Vineyard

- 5 Let me sing for my beloved my love-song concerning his vineyard:
My beloved had a vineyard
on a very fertile hill.
² He dug it and cleared it of stones,
and planted it with choice
vines;
he built a watchtower in the midst
of it,
and hewed out a wine vat in it;
he expected it to yield grapes,
but it yielded wild grapes.
- ³ And now, inhabitants of Jerusalem
and people of Judah,
judge between me
and my vineyard.
⁴ What more was there to do for my vineyard
that I have not done in it?
When I expected it to yield
grapes,
why did it yield wild grapes?
- ⁵ And now I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard.
I will remove its hedge,
and it shall be devoured;
I will break down its wall,
and it shall be trampled down.

- ⁶ I will make it a waste;
it shall not be pruned or hoed, and it shall be overgrown with briers and thorns;
I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it.
- ⁷ For the vineyard of the LORD
of hosts
is the house of Israel, and the people of Judah
are his pleasant planting;
he expected justice,
but saw bloodshed;
righteousness,
but heard a cry!

Social Injustice Denounced

- ⁸ Ah, you who join house to house,
who add field to field, until there is room for no one but you,
and you are left to live alone
in the midst of the land!
- ⁹ The LORD of hosts has sworn in my hearing:
Surely many houses shall be desolate,
large and beautiful houses,
without inhabitant.
- ¹⁰ For ten acres of vineyard shall yield but one bath,
and a homer of seed shall yield a mere ephah.^h

5.1–7 This unique poem, sung by the prophet on behalf of his friend, operates on several levels—as a love song, judicial parable, and judgment oracle. 5.1 The poem works metaphorically as a love-song, since vineyard is a standard metaphor for “lover” in Israelite love poetry (Song 1.6, 14; 2.3, 15; 4.12–16; 7.6–13; 8.12). 5.2 The friend’s love for the “vineyard” is unrequited. 5.3–4 The prophet’s friend, now quoted directly, calls upon the people of Judah to judge his “vineyard,” but in judging the vineyard the people unwittingly pass judgment on themselves. They are entrapped by Isaiah’s love song much as David was entrapped by Nathan’s parable (2 Sam 12.1–12). 5.7 Vineyard as a metaphor for God’s people is a common figure of speech in Israelite poetry (27.2–6; Ps 80.8–16; Jer 2.21; Ezek 19.10–14; Hos 10.1). The prophet plays on the similarity in sound between the Hebrew words for justice (mishpat) and bloodshed (mispach), righteousness (tsedaqah) and cry (tse’aqah), the cry of the oppressed.

5.8–24 Series of oracles against social injustice (vv. 8–10, 11–13, 14–17, 18–19, 20, 21, 22–24). Such oracles introduced by Ah are often arranged in a series (cf. 28.1; 29.1, 15; 30.1; 31.1; 33.1; Hab 2.6–19). 5.8–10 Against the amassing of property at other’s expense (Mic 2.1–6, 8–9). Bath, a liquid measure of approximately 5.5 gallons, a grotesquely small yield for 10 acres of vineyard. Homer, a dry measure of approximately 6.5 bushels. Ephah, a dry measure equal to

The introduction to this oracle with the explicit denunciation of the city has apparently been lost, leaving only the announcement of judgment. 5.14 Sheol, the

God's judgment is just (cf. 28.23–29). 5.18–19 Against scoffers who urged God to hurry up with the divine work so they could discern it too (v.12; cf. Jer 17.15–16). 5.20 Against moral confusion (32.5; Prov 17.15). 5.21 Against the conceit of the wise (Prov 3.7; 26.5, 12, 16; 28.11). 5.22–23 Against indulgence and bribery (cf. The Call of Isaiah

6 In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, high and lofty; and the hem of his robe filled the temple. ²Seraphs were in attendance above him; each had six wings: with two they covered their faces, and with two they covered their feet, and with two they flew. ³And one called to another and said:

"Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of
hosts;
the whole earth is full of his glory."

⁴The pivots^k on the thresholds shook at the voices of those who called, and the house filled with smoke. ⁵And I said:
"Woe is me! I am lost, for I am a man of unclean lips, and I live among a people of unclean lips; yet my eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts!"

⁶ Then one of the seraphs flew to me, holding a live coal that had been taken from the altar with a pair of tongs. ⁷The seraph^l touched my mouth with it and said: "Now that this has touched your lips, your guilt has departed and your sin is blotted out." ⁸Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" And I said, "Here am I; send me!" ⁹And he said, "Go and say to this people:

'Keep listening, but do not comprehend;
keep looking, but do not understand.'

9.8–21. 5.25 As in 9.8–21, this past judgment on Israel did not lead to its repentance, so God's anger is still unabated (see 9.12, 17, 21; 10.4). 5.26–30 God will summon the Assyrians as his agent to punish Israel (cf. 7.18–20; 8.7; 10.5–6).

6.1–13 Isaiah's prophetic commission is described as a response to an awesome vision of God as divine suzerain (cf. the portrayals of the enthroned deity in 1 Kings 22.19–23; Ezek 1.4–2.1). 6.1 Year, probably 738 B.C.E. A throne high and lofty, the 15-foot-high throne in the inner sanctum of the temple formed by the outspread wings of the two giant cherubim (1 Kings 6.22–29; 2 Kings 19.15; Ezek 10.1–2; 1 Chr 28.18). Hem, the border on the bottom of God's robe or the part hanging down from the knees; the image is that of a God too gigantic to be contained in the temple (66.1; 1 Kings 8.27). 6.2 Seraphs, winged cobras (14.29; 30.6) often represented in Egyptian art, in association with Syro-Phoenician thrones, and on Israelite seals with wings outstretched to protect the deity. Covered their faces. Here they must protect themselves from the glory of God. 6.5 I am lost, a double entendre that could also be rendered "I am silenced." Unclean lips. See 29.13. It was life-threatening for sinful mortals to see God (Ex 33.20; Judg 13.22). 6.6–8 Cleansed by the burning coal from the altar, Isaiah may now speak for God. 6.9–12 The message God gives Isaiah will not lead to repentance, but to the hardening of the people's heart, thus making them ripe for God's judgment. Cf. 29.9–14 and see the NT citations of vv. 9–10 in Mt 13.10–17; Mk 4.10–12;

- 10 Make the mind of this people dull,

11 Then I said, “How long, O Lord?” And he said: “Until cities lie waste and houses without people, and the land is utterly desolate; 12 until the LORD sends everyone

far away,
and vast is the emptiness in the midst of the land.
13 Even if a tenth part remain in it,
it will be trebled again,

The Sign of Shear-jashub

7 In the days of Ahaz son of Jotham son of Uzziah, king of Judah, King Rezin of Aram and King Pekah son of Remaliah of Israel went up to attack Jerusalem, but could not mount an attack against it. ²When the house of David heard that Aram had allied itself with Ephraim, the heart of Ahazⁿ and the heart of his people shook as the trees of the forest shake before the wind.

3 Then the LORD said to Isaiah, Go out to meet Ahaz, you and your son Shear-jashub,^o at the end of the conduit of the upper pool on the highway to the Fuller's Field, ⁴and say to him, Take heed, be quiet, do not fear, and do not let your heart be faint because of these two smoldering stumps of firebrands, because of the fierce anger of Rezin and Aram and the son of Remaliah. ⁵Because Aram—with Ephraim and the son of Remaliah—has plotted evil against you, saying, ⁶Let us go up against Judah and cut off Jerusalem^p and conquer it for ourselves and make the son of Tabeel king in it; ⁷therefore thus says the Lord God:

It shall not stand,
and it shall not come to pass.

- 8 For the head of Aram is Damascus,
and the head of Damascus is Rezin.

(Within sixty-five years Ephraim will be shattered, no longer a people.)

- 9 The head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is the son of Remaliah.

If you do not stand firm in faith,
you shall not stand at all.

The Sign of Immanuel

10 Again the LORD spoke to Ahaz, saying, ¹¹Ask a sign of the LORD your God; let it be deep as Sheol or high as heaven. ¹²But Ahaz said, I will not ask, and I will not put the LORD to the test. ¹³Then Isaiah^q said: “Hear then, O house of David!

7.1–8.18 Isaiah and the Syro-Ephraimite war (735–732 B.C.E.). The prophet's message is organized around the symbolic names given to his three children (see 8.18; cf. Hos 1.4–9). For the historical background, see 2 Kings 15.29–16.20; 2 Chr 28.1–27. 7.1–9 The symbolic name of Isaiah's first child assures Ahaz that Israel and Aram's plan against Judah will not succeed. 7.1 Aram, Syria, with its capital at Damascus. 7.2 Ephraim, the Northern Kingdom; this coalition of Aram and Israel planned to remove Ahaz and end the Davidic dynasty's rule over Judah (see v. 6). 7.3 Shear-jashub in Hebrew means “A remnant shall return”; only a remnant of the hostile Northern Kingdom will survive (v. 8; 10.20–22). 7.6 Tabeel, perhaps a garbled transcription of (1)toaal, king of Tyre in 738 B.C.E.; Tyre was allied with the coalition. 7.8–9 God chose both Jerusalem and the Davidic dynasty (Pss 2.6; 132.11–14), so the humanly chosen kings and capital cities of Judah's enemies cannot prevail against them. 7.8 Sixty-five years. This parenthetical statement refers to no known historical event; it is either a gloss, or, more likely, a misplaced fragment from an originally longer text.

7.10–17 The symbolic name of the second child gives further reassurance to Ahaz. 7.13 The prophet treats Ahaz's pious-sounding remark as merely masking a refusal to trust the Look, the young woman^r is with child and shall bear a son, and shall name him Immanuel.^s ¹⁵He shall eat curds and honey by the time he knows how to refuse the evil and choose the good. ¹⁶For before the child knows how to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land before whose two kings you are in dread will be deserted. ¹⁷The Lord will bring on you and on your people and on your ancestral house such days as have not come since the day that Ephraim departed from Judah—the king of Assyria.”

¹⁸ On that day the Lord will whistle for the fly that is at the sources of the streams of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria. ¹⁹And they will all come and settle in the steep ravines, and in the clefts of the rocks, and on all the thornbushes, and on all the pastures.

²⁰ On that day the Lord will shave with a razor hired beyond the River—with the king of Assyria—the head and the hair of the feet, and it will take off the beard as well.

²³ On that day every place where there used to be a thousand vines, worth a thousand shekels of silver, will become briars and thorns. ²⁴With bow and arrows one will go there, for all the land will be briars and thorns; ²⁵and as for all the hills that used to be hoed with a hoe, you will not go there for fear of briars and thorns; but they will become a place where cattle are let loose and where sheep tread.

The Sign of Maher-shalal-hash-baz

8 Then the Lord said to me, Take a large tablet and write on it in common characters, “Belonging to Maher-shalal-hash-baz,”^t ²and have it attested^u for me by reliable witnesses, the priest Uriah and Zechariah son of Jeberechiah. ³And I went to the prophetess, and she conceived and bore a son. Then the Lord said to me, Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz; ⁴for before the child knows how to call “My father” or “My mother,” the wealth of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria will be carried away by the king of Assyria.

⁵ The Lord spoke to me again: ⁶Because this people has refused the waters of Shiloah that flow gently, and melt in fear before^v Rezin and the son of Remaliah; ⁷therefore, the Lord is bringing up against it the mighty flood waters of the River, the king of Assyria and all his glory; it will rise above all its channels and overflow all its banks; ⁸it will sweep on into Judah as a flood, and, pouring over, divine promise. 7.14 The name Immanuel, in Hebrew “God is with us,” embodies the divine promise of protection to Jerusalem (Ps 46.4–7, 11; cf. Isa 8.9–10). 7.15 Curds and honey were choice foods for a newly weaned child, but hard to obtain in a city under siege. 7.16 Before the child knows . . . good, by the time the child is weaned—within two or three years—the besieging enemies will have long since been destroyed (cf. 8.4). 7.17 Whether the verse is a promise or a threat to Judah is ambiguous. 7.18–25 Four sayings that expand on v. 17. 7.18 Fly, a metaphor for Egyptian troops; bee, a metaphor for Assyrian troops. 7.20 Razor hired beyond the River, a reference to Assyria as the agent God employed to punish Israel (see 10.5–15); the River, the Euphrates. Feet, a euphemism for the genitals (Ex 4.25). 7.21–25 The small remnant left in the devastated land will have sufficient to eat, because with the cultivated land reverted to pasture, there will be abundant grazing for the few livestock remaining.

8.1–4 The symbolic name of yet a third child reaffirms God’s promise to Ahaz. 8.1 Maher-shalal-hash-baz, in Hebrew “The spoil speeds, the prey hastens.” 8.2 Uriah. See 2 Kings 16.10–16. Zechariah, possibly Ahaz’s father-in-law (2 Kings 18.2). 8.3 Prophetess, Isaiah’s wife. 8.4 Before the child knows . . . “My mother,” before the child’s first words—within about a year (cf. 7.15–16).

8.5–10 Oracle threatening the devastation of Israel but the ultimate deliverance of Judah. 8.6 Shiloah, a gentle stream fed by Jerusalem’s Gihon spring (cf. for the LORD, who is hiding his face from the house of Jacob, and I will hope in him. ¹⁸See, I and the children whom the LORD has given me are signs and portents in Israel from the LORD of hosts, who dwells on Mount Zion. ¹⁹Now if people say to you, "Consult the ghosts and the familiar spirits that chirp and mutter; should not a people consult their gods, the dead on behalf of the living, ²⁰for teaching and for instruction?" surely, those who speak like this will have no dawn! ²¹They will pass through the land,^x greatly distressed and hungry; when they are hungry, they will be enraged and will curse^y their king and their gods. The antecedent of the pronoun is probably the LORD in v. 7; while a standard metaphor for God's protection (Deut 32.11; Pss 17.8; 36.7; 57.1; 61.4; 63.7; 91.1–4), wings is never used of rivers, and Immanuel suggests a positive word (see v. 10). 8.9–10 A promise of deliverance for Judah ending with a repetition of the symbolic name God is with us, "Immanuel" (cf. 7.7–9; 17.12–14). 8.11–15 Sanctify and fear God, not what the crowd fears. 8.11 His hand was strong upon me, a technical expression for the onset of prophetic inspiration (Ezek 1.3; 3.14, 22; 33.22). 8.14 God will be both a sanctuary, a place of refuge, and a stone one strikes against, a stumbling stone (cf. 28.16–17).

9.1–7 This passage served originally as an oracle for the coronation of a Judean king, probably Hezekiah. It celebrates the accession of the new king with the traditional ideals of Davidic kingship (see 11.1–9). 9.1 The areas mentioned were turned into three Assyrian provinces by Tiglath-pileser III in 733–32 B.C.E.: Zebulun and Naphtali represent the Assyrian province of Galilee, the way of the sea corresponds to the Assyrian province of Dor, south of Mount Carmel, and the land beyond the Jordan is equivalent to the province of Gilead. 9.2 People, the Israelite inhabitants of

 I have removed the boundaries of
 peoples,
 and have plundered their
 treasures;
 like a bull I have brought down will send wasting sickness among his stout warriors, and under his glory a burning

10.10–11 To the Assyrian king, the God of Judah was just another idol (cf. 36.7–10). 10.12 Work, God's strange work (28.21) of purging Zion by judgment (1.21–28; 29.1–8). 10.13 Removed the boundaries. Assyria absorbed whole nations into its provincial system and used widespread resettlement of their populations to destroy former national identities. 10.15 Rhetorical questions that underscore Assyria's foolish misconception of its significance. 10.16–19 The original target of this oracle may have been Damascus and Israel (cf. the imagery in 17.1–6), but it now portrays the destruction of Assyria. 10.17 Light of Israel, an epithet for God that suggests the image of the deity as a devouring

10.20–23 Originally a threat to the Northern Kingdom, but a promise to Judah. In its present location this oracle conveys the ambiguous message of Judah's salvation through judgment (see 1.21–28; 29.1–8). 10.20 Israel, Jacob, designations for the Northern Kingdom. One who struck them, the Aramean ruler of Damascus (9.11–12). 10.21 A remnant will return, the name of Isaiah's first child, Shear-jashub (7.3). Israel's return to God implied its acceptance of the Davidic dynasty in Jerusalem (2.5–6; 8.5–8); mighty God is a coronation name of the Judean king in 9.6. 10.22 Your people Israel. Note contrast to my people, who live in Zion (v. 24). Sand of the sea, only a small

Israel were like the sand of the sea, only a remnant of them will return. Destruction is decreed, overflowing with righteousness. ²³For the Lord God of hosts will make a full end, as decreed, in all the earth.^g

The Assyrian Yoke Will Be Removed

²⁴ Therefore thus says the Lord God of hosts: O my people, who live in Zion, do not be afraid of the Assyrians when they beat you with a rod and lift up their staff against you as the Egyptians did. ²⁵For in a very little while my indignation will come to an end, and my anger will be directed to their destruction. ²⁶The Lord of hosts will wield a whip against them, as when he struck Midian at the rock of Oreb; his staff will be over the sea, and he will lift it as he did in Egypt. ²⁷On that day his burden will be removed from your shoulder, and his yoke will be destroyed from your neck.

The Approach of the Enemy from the North

He has gone up from Rimmon,^h ²⁸ he has come to Aiath;
he has passed through Migron, at Michmash he stores his baggage;
²⁹ they have crossed over the pass, at Geba they lodge for the night;
Ramah trembles,

Gibeah of Saul has fled.

- ³⁰ Cry aloud, O daughter Gallim!
Listen, O Laishah!
Answer her, O Anathoth!
³¹ Madmenah is in flight, the inhabitants of Gebim flee for safety.
³² This very day he will halt at Nob, he will shake his fist
at the mount of daughter Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

God's Response

- ³³ Look, the Sovereign, the LORD
of hosts,
will lop the boughs with terrifying power;
the tallest trees will be cut down,
and the lofty will be brought low.
³⁴ He will hack down the thickets of the forest with an ax,
and Lebanon with its majestic treesⁱ will fall.

remnant of the North will survive despite the ancient promise (Gen 22.17; 32.12; Hos 1.10).

10.24–27c The promise of deliverance from the rod of Assyria resumes the imagery of vv. 5, 15. 10.26 Oreb. See Judg 7.25. Staff. See Ex 14.16. Over the sea . . . Egypt. God's deliverance of his people from Assyria is compared to the first exodus from Egypt. 10.27 Cf. 9.4.

10.27d–32 This oracle describes the march of an enemy army along the main north-south route from Israelite territory toward Jerusalem in the south. It is the logical approach for the Syro-Ephraimite army to have taken in its attack on the city (7.1), but there is no evidence any Assyrian army ever took this route. 10.27d Rimmon is not in the Hebrew text; a better reading is "Samaria," the Northern capital. 10.28 Aiath, a variant spelling of Ai, a village two miles east-southeast of Bethel; Migron, unidentified site in Benjamin (1 Sam 14.2); Michmash, a village located about seven miles northeast of Jerusalem and just north of a strategic pass across the Wadi es-Suwentin.

10.29 The crossing of the pass at Michmash through Geba, located just south of the Wadi, suggests a wide swing off the main route, probably to bypass the Judean border fortress of Mizpeh, before regaining the main road at Ramah, five miles north of Jerusalem. Gibeah of Saul, modern Tell el-Ful, about three and a half miles north of Jerusalem. 10.30 Gallim, Laishah, unidentified villages near Anathoth, a village three miles north of Jerusalem. 10.31 Madmenah, Gebim, unidentified villages north of Jerusalem. 10.32 Nob, probably situated on Mount Scopus, about a mile northeast of Jerusalem. Shake his fist, a derisive gesture.

10.33–34 God, who founded (14.32) and lives in Zion (8.18), will respond to the enemy's haughty derision by felling his proud troops like a forest (see 2.12–13; 9.18–19; 10.16–19).

11.1–9 This portrayal probably stems from the period of the Syro-Ephraimite war (cf. 9.1–7) when the Davidic dynasty appeared a mere stump compared to its enemies (10.33–34). 11.1 Jesse,

- 2 The spirit of the LORD shall rest on him,
the spirit of wisdom and
understanding,
the spirit of counsel and might,
the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the LORD.
- 3 His delight shall be in the fear of
the LORD.
- He shall not judge by what his eyes see,
or decide by what his ears hear; 4 but with righteousness he shall judge the poor,
and decide with equity for the
meek of the earth;
he shall strike the earth with the rod of his mouth,
and with the breath of his lips
he shall kill the wicked.
- 5 Righteousness shall be the belt around his waist,
and faithfulness the belt around his loins.
- 6 The wolf shall live with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the kid,
the calf and the lion and the
fatling together,
and a little child shall lead
them.
- 7 The cow and the bear shall graze, their young shall lie down
together;
and the lion shall eat straw like
the ox.
- 8 The nursing child shall play over the hole of the asp,
and the weaned child shall put its hand on the adder's den.

- 9 They will not hurt or destroy on all my holy mountain;
for the earth will be full of the knowledge of the LORD
as the waters cover the sea.

Return of the Remnant of Israel and Judah

10 On that day the root of Jesse shall stand as a signal to the peoples; the nations shall inquire of him, and his dwelling shall be glorious.

11 On that day the Lord will extend his hand yet a second time to recover the remnant that is left of his people, from Assyria, from Egypt, from Pathros, from Ethiopia,^j from Elam, from Shinar, from Hamath, and from the coastlands
of the sea.

- 12 He will raise a signal for the
nations,
and will assemble the outcasts
of Israel,
and gather the dispersed of Judah
from the four corners of the
earth.
- 13 The jealousy of Ephraim shall depart,
the hostility of Judah shall be
cut off;
Ephraim shall not be jealous of Judah,
and Judah shall not be hostile towards Ephraim.
- 14 But they shall swoop down on the backs of the Philistines in together they shall plunder the

Such an occasion, rather than the later uncontested surrender of Babylon to Persia (539 B.C.E.), may be the background for this oracle. 13.3 Consecrated ones, the enemy soldiers used by God to carry out the divine judgment (5.26; 10.5–6). 13.5 Distant land. and the earth will be shaken out of its place,
at the wrath of the LORD of hosts in the day of his fierce anger.

down there,
and its houses will be full of howling creatures;
there ostriches will live,
and there goat-demons
will dance.

palaces;
its time is close at hand,
and its days will not be

Restoration of Israel

14 But the LORD will have compassion on Jacob and will again choose Israel, and will set them in their own land; and aliens will join them and attach themselves to the house of Jacob.² And the nations will take them and bring them to their place, and the house of Israel will possess the nations^o as male and female slaves in the LORD's land; they will take captive those who were their captors, and rule over those who oppressed them.

Downfall of the King of Babylon

3 When the LORD has given you rest from your pain and turmoil and the hard service with which you were made to serve, ⁴you will take up this taunt against the king of Babylon:

How the oppressor has ceased!

How his insolence^p has ceased!

5 The LORD has broken the staff of the wicked,

the scepter of rulers,

6 that struck down the peoples in wrath

with unceasing blows,

that ruled the nations in anger with unrelenting persecution.

7 The whole earth is at rest and quiet;

they break forth into singing.

8 The cypresses exult over you, the cedars of Lebanon, saying,

"Since you were laid low, no one comes to cut us down."

9 Sheol beneath is stirred up to meet you when you come;

it rouses the shades to greet you,

all who were leaders of the earth;

it raises from their thrones all who were kings of the nations.

10 All of them will speak and say to you:

"You too have become as weak as we!

You have become like us!"

11 Your pomp is brought down to Sheol, and the sound of your harps; maggots are the bed beneath you, and worms are your covering.

12 How you are fallen from heaven, O Day Star, son of Dawn!

How you are cut down to the ground,

you who laid the nations low!

13 You said in your heart,

"I will ascend to heaven;

I will raise my throne

above the stars of God;

I will sit on the mount of assembly

on the heights of Zaphon;^q

14 I will ascend to the tops of the clouds,

I will make myself like the Most High."

This description fits both Sargon II, whose body was not recovered after he died in battle against mountain tribesmen, and Sennacherib, who was murdered by his own sons and probably did not receive a state funeral.

 the grass is withered, the new growth fails,
 the verdure is no more.

 have gained
 and what they have laid up they carry away

There is probably a word-play here, since the Hebrew word for baldness (qorchah) has the same consonantal spelling as a Moabite place name mentioned several times in Mesha's Moabite Stone. 15.3 The wearing of sackcloth was another sign of mourning. 15.4 Heshbon, modern Hesban, in Moab fifty miles due east of Jerusalem; Elealeh, another city near Heshbon; Jahaz, another Moabite city of disputed location. 15.5–8 Zoar, Eglath-sheleshiah, Luhith, Horonaim, waters of Nimrim, Wadi of the Willows, Eglaim, Beer-elim, sites in Moab of uncertain location. 16.1–5 Moabite refugees seek asylum in Judah, and the Judean crown is urged to give and destruction has ceased, and marauders have vanished

from the land,
5 then a throne shall be established in steadfast love
in the tent of David,
and on it shall sit in faithfulness
a ruler who seeks justice and is swift to do what is right.

- 6 We have heard of the pride of Moab
—how proud he is!—
of his arrogance, his pride, and his insolence;
his boasts are false.
7 Therefore let Moab wail, let everyone wail for Moab.
Mourn, utterly stricken,
for the raisin cakes of Kir-hareseth.

- 8 For the fields of Heshbon languish,
and the vines of Sibmah, whose clusters once made drunk
the lords of the nations, reached to Jazer
and strayed to the desert;

- their shoots once spread abroad and crossed over the sea.
9 Therefore I weep with the weeping of Jazer
for the vines of Sibmah;
I drench you with my tears,
O Heshbon and Elealeh;
for the shout over your fruit harvest
and your grain harvest
has ceased.
10 Joy and gladness are taken away from the fruitful field;
and in the vineyards no songs
are sung,
no shouts are raised;
no treader treads out wine in
the presses;
the vintage-shout is hushed.^x 11 Therefore my heart throbs like a harp for Moab,
and my very soul for Kir-heres.

12 When Moab presents himself, when he wearies himself upon the high place, when he comes to his sanctuary to pray,
he will not prevail.

13 This was the word that the LORD spoke concerning Moab in the past.¹⁴ But now the LORD says, In three years, like the years of a hired worker, the glory of Moab will be brought into contempt, in spite of all its great multitude; and those who survive will be very few and feeble.

An Oracle Concerning Damascus

17 An oracle concerning Damascus.

See, Damascus will cease to be a city,
and will become a heap of ruins.

forever;^y
they will be places for flocks, them shelter. 16.1 Lambs, Moabite tribute to Judah (cf. 2 Kings 3.4). Sela, another unidentified site in Moab. 16.2 Arnon, the modern Wadi el-Mujib that flows into the Dead Sea. 16.5 Tent of David. A future descendant of David will once again rule over Moab in justice. 16.6–11 Lament over the destruction of the vineyards of Moab. Kir-hareseth. See note on 15.1. Sibmah, a Moabite city known for its vineyards; its site is still disputed. Jazer, a site near the border with Ammon (Num 21.24 in the Septuagint). Kir-heres, alternate form of Kir-hareseth. 16.12–14 Moab's prayers will be to no avail; within three years it will be almost completely devastated.

17.1–6 The Aramean and Israelite nations allied against Judah in the Syro-Ephraimite war (735–732 B.C.E.) will be totally destroyed (cf. 7.1–8.4). 17.1 Damascus, the capital of the Ara-

- which will lie down, and no one will make them afraid.
- 3 The fortress will disappear from Ephraim,
and the kingdom from Damascus;
and the remnant of Aram will be like the glory of the children
of Israel,
says the LORD of hosts.
- 4 On that day
the glory of Jacob will be brought low,
and the fat of his flesh will grow lean.
- 5 And it shall be as when reapers gather standing grain
and their arms harvest the ears, and as when one gleans the ears
of grain
in the Valley of Rephaim.
- 6 Gleanings will be left in it,
as when an olive tree is beaten—
two or three berries
in the top of the highest bough, four or five
on the branches of a fruit tree, says the LORD God of Israel.

Turning from Idolatrous Worship

7 On that day people will regard their Maker, and their eyes will look to the Holy One of Israel; ⁸they will not have regard for the altars, the work of their hands, and they will not look to what their own fingers have made, either the sacred poles^z or the altars of incense.

9 On that day their strong cities will be like the deserted places of the Hivites and the Amorites,^a which they deserted because of the children of Israel, and there will be desolation.

- 10 For you have forgotten the God
of your salvation,
and have not remembered the Rock of your refuge;
therefore, though you plant pleasant plants
and set out slips of an alien god, 11 though you make them grow on the day that you plant
them,
and make them blossom in the morning that you sow;
yet the harvest will flee away in a day of grief and incurable pain.

God Will Rebuke Jerusalem's Enemies

- 12 Ah, the thunder of many peoples, they thunder like the thundering of the sea!
Ah, the roar of nations, they roar like the roaring of mighty waters!

of many waters,

they will flee far away, mean state. 17.3 Ephraim, a designation for the Northern Kingdom, Israel. 17.4 Cf. the imagery in 10.16. 17.5 Rephaim, a valley just outside of Jerusalem (2 Sam 5.18); its proximity to the heavily populated city meant that it would be thoroughly gleaned (see Deut 24.19–22; Ruth 2.2–23) by the landless urban poor.

17.7–11 Judgment on idolatry (cf. 1.29–31; 2.8, 20). 17.7–8 After God's judgment on Israel, the people will turn back to him from their idols. The work of their hands. Altars and altars of incense were used in the worship of the Lord; the prophet probably takes exception to these because they were dedicated to either a foreign deity or a Northern form of the Lord, such as the "Yahweh of Samaria" attested from Kuntillet Ajrud, that the Judean prophet considered idolatrous. Sacred pole, a wooden cult object or actual tree that represented the Canaanite goddess Asherah; in syncretistic popular Israelite religion Asherah was sometimes identified as the spouse of the Lord. 17.9 Israel's cities will be as devastated as those of the Hivites and Amorites, the original inhabitants of Palestine (Deut 7.1), when Israel displaced them. 17.10–11 This devastation will befall Israel because it had deserted God, who saved them. 17.10 Rock, a standard metaphor for God as a source of refuge (30.29). Plants, slips, perhaps sacred groves planted in honor of other gods (1.29–31).

17.12–14 Though Jerusalem's enemies roar like the chaotic waters of the stormy sea (Pss 46.1–3; 93.3–4), God will drive them away before morning. Perhaps originally directed against the Syro-Ephraimite coalition, this oracle

- chased like chaff on the mountains before the wind and whirling dust before the storm.
- 14 At evening time, lo, terror!
Before morning, they are no more.
This is the fate of those who
despoil us,
and the lot of those who plunder us.

An Oracle Concerning Ethiopia

waters!
Go, you swift messengers,
to a nation tall and smooth,
to a people feared near and far,
a nation mighty and conquering,
whose land the rivers divide.
- 3 All you inhabitants of the world,
you who live on the earth,
when a signal is raised on the mountains, look!
When a trumpet is blown,
listen!
- 4 For thus the LORD said to me:
I will quietly look from my dwelling
like clear heat in sunshine, like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest.
- 5 For before the harvest, when the blossom is over and the flower becomes a ripening grape,
he will cut off the shoots with pruning hooks,
and the spreading branches he will hew away.

- 6 They shall all be left to the birds of prey of the mountains
and to the animals of the earth.
And the birds of prey will summer on them,
and all the animals of the earth will winter on them.

7 At that time gifts will be brought to the LORD of hosts from^c a people tall and smooth, from a people feared near and far, a nation mighty and conquering, whose land the rivers divide, to Mount Zion, the place of the name of the LORD of
hosts.

An Oracle Concerning Egypt

- 19 An oracle concerning Egypt.

the idols of Egypt will tremble at

and the heart of the Egyptians Egyptians,

and they will fight, one against the other,
neighbor against neighbor,

- 3 the spirit of the Egyptians within them will be emptied out, and I will confound their plans;
they will consult the idols and the spirits of the dead

spirits;

could easily be reapplied to the later threat from Assyria (5.30; 8.7; 28.17; 29.7).

18.1–7 The background for this oracle may be Ethiopia's support for Ashdod's revolt against Assyria in 714 B.C.E. In opposition to the Ethiopian messengers encouraging Judah to join this revolt (see 14.32; 20.1–6), Isaiah insists that one must wait for God's appointed time of harvest.

18.2 A nation tall and smooth, the Nubians of ancient Ethiopia were black, tall, and, unlike the soldiers of most armies Israel encountered, clean shaven. Land the rivers divide, ancient Ethiopia or Nubia, divided by the branches of the Nile.

18.4 My dwelling, Mount Zion (see v. 7).

19.1–15 The Lord will bring judgment on Egypt's gods, its leaders, and its people. 19.1–4 The internal conflict in Egypt may reflect the period before the Ethiopian Piankhi, founder of the twenty-fifth dynasty, united Egypt under his rule beginning ca. 715 B.C.E. 19.4 Hard mas-

Five Additional Sayings About Egypt

16 On that day the Egyptians will be like women, and tremble with fear before the hand that the LORD of hosts raises against them. 17 And the land of Judah will become a terror to the Egyptians; everyone to whom it is mentioned will fear because of the plan that the LORD of hosts is planning against them.

18 On that day there will be five cities in the land of Egypt that speak the language of Canaan and swear allegiance to the LORD of hosts. One of these will be called the City of the Sun.

19 On that day there will be an altar to the LORD in the center of the land of Egypt, and a pillar to the LORD at its border. 20 It will be a sign and a witness to the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt; when they cry to the LORD because of oppressors, he will send them a savior, and will defend and deliver them. 21 The LORD will make himself known to the Egyptians; and the Egyptians will know the LORD on that day, and will worship with sacrifice and burnt offering, and they will make vows to the LORD and perform them.

22The LORD will strike Egypt, striking and healing; they will return to the LORD, and he will listen to their supplications and heal them.

23 On that day there will be a highway from Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian will come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians will worship with the Assyrians.

24 On that day Israel will be the third with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the earth, ²⁵whom the LORD of hosts has blessed, saying, "Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel my heritage."

Isaiah Dramatizes the Conquest of Egypt and Ethiopia

20 In the year that the commander-in-chief, who was sent by King Sargon of Assyria, came to Ashdod and fought against it and took it— ²at that time the LORD had spoken to Isaiah son of Amoz, saying, "Go, and loose the sackcloth from your loins and take your sandals off your feet," and he had done so, walking naked and barefoot. ³Then the LORD said, "Just as my servant Isaiah has walked naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and a portent against Egypt and Ethiopia,^e ⁴so shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians as captives and the Ethiopians^f as exiles, both the young and the old, naked and barefoot, with buttocks uncovered, to the shame of Egypt. ⁵And they shall be dismayed and confounded because of Ethiopia^e their hope and of Egypt their boast. ⁶In that day the inhabitants of this coastland will

20.1–6 Sargon's general put down the revolt against Assyria in Ashdod in 711 B.C.E., and Ashdod's Egyptian and Ethiopian allies proved a vain hope. During the revolt Isaiah walked around naked to symbolize the captivity that would soon overtake Egypt and Ethiopia, thus warning the Judean authorities not to trust these allies nor to join the revolt.

21.1–17 These three oracles all seem to presuppose the Assyrian struggle to gain control of southern Mesopotamia against the Aramean rulers of Babylon and their allies in 691–689 B.C.E. Following the bloody battle at Halule (691), which pitted Sennacherib's Assyrian army against a large coalition led by the king of Elam, Assyria regrouped and continued to campaign against Babylon and its Arab allies, eventually destroying Babylon completely in 689 B.C.E. 21.1–10 Announcement of the fall of Babylon. 21.1 Wilderness of the sea, probably a reference to the steppe regions in lower Mesopotamia, which was known as the Sealand. Negeb, steppe region in southern Palestine. 21.2 Betrayer, destroyer, probably a reference to Assyria (16.4; 33.1). Elam led the large anti-Assyrian coalition, which included contingents from Persia and perhaps Media. 21.3–4 The vision dismays the prophet, because it reveals the fall of Babylon, Israel's ally (39.1–4), rather than the fall of Assyria he longed for. 21.5 Oil the shield, to keep the leather supple (cf.

In shocking contrast to their normal practice, the victorious Assyrians destroyed the images of the Babylonian gods when Babylon fell to Sennacherib in 689 B.C.E. 21.11–12 There is as yet no clear answer on the fate of Dumah. 21.11 Dumah, Adummatu in the northern Arabian desert, plundered by Sennacherib in connection with his campaign against Babylon. Seir. There is a Seir in Edom, but the present context suggests another site of the same name in the northern Arabian desert. 21.13–17 Other Arab groups are urged to give comfort to those Arabs

22.1–14 The occasion for this oracle may have been news of Sennacherib's successful first campaign against Babylon (703 B.C.E.), Judah's ally, that freed the Assyrian king to attack Judah in the west (701 B.C.E.). 22.1 Valley of vision may be a reference to the Babylonian plain seen only in the prophet's vision. 22.2–3 In Sennacherib's first campaign, Merodach-baladan, king of Babylon, fled the battlefield, and his Elamite, Chal-

An Oracle Concerning Tyre

23 The oracle concerning Tyre.

Wail, O ships of Tarshish,
for your fortress is destroyed.^k
When they came in from Cyprus they learned of it.

the coast,
O merchants of Sidon,
your messengers crossed over the sea^l

your revenue was the grain of Shihor,
the harvest of the Nile;
you were the merchant of the
nations.

- 4 Be ashamed, O Sidon, for the sea
has spoken,
the fortress of the sea, saying:

"I have neither labored nor given birth,

I have neither reared
young men
nor brought up young women."

- 5 When the report comes to Egypt, they will be in anguish over the report about Tyre.

- 6 Cross over to Tarshish—wail, O inhabitants of the coast!

- 7 Is this your exultant city whose origin is from days
of old,

whose feet carried her
to settle far away?

- 8 Who has planned this against Tyre, the bestower of crowns,

whose merchants were princes, whose traders were the honored of the earth?

- 9 The LORD of hosts has planned it—
to defile the pride of all glory, to shame all the honored of the
earth.

- 10 Cross over to your own land,

he has shaken the kingdoms;
the LORD has given command

Sheban]yahu who was master of the household." 22.20–23 Shebna's office is promised to Eliakim, who apparently replaced Shebna before the siege of Jerusalem (36.3; 2 Kings 18.18). 22.24–25 Eventually Eliakim, weighed down by his family's claims, also proved to be a disappointment.

23.1–18 The original oracle against Tyre probably reflects an Assyrian campaign against Phoenicia, possibly that of Tiglath-pileser III (734 B.C.E.) or Sennacherib (701 B.C.E.). 23.1 Tar- shish, a seaport in the western Mediterranean, probably Tartessus in southern Spain. Cyprus traded with Phoenicia. 23.2 Sidon was a neighboring city to Tyre. 23.3 Shihor, an area in the Egyptian Delta along the Pelusiac arm of the Nile. 23.4 Sidon is left barren without inhabitants. 23.5–11 Tyre's trading partners will lament their loss of trade with devastated Phoenicia. 23.7 Settle far away. Phoenician settlers founded colonies in Cyprus, North Africa, and other distant sites in the Mediterranean.

13 Look at the land of the Chaldeans! This is the people; it was not Assyria. They destined Tyre for wild animals. They erected their siege towers, they tore down her palaces, they made her a ruin.^o

for your fortress is destroyed.

15 From that day Tyre will be forgotten for seventy years, the lifetime of one king. At the end of seventy years, it will happen to Tyre as in the song about the prostitute:

16 Take a harp,
go about the city,
you forgotten prostitute!
Make sweet melody,
sing many songs,
that you may be remembered.

17 At the end of seventy years, the LORD will visit Tyre, and she will return to her trade, and will prostitute herself with all the kingdoms of the world on the face of the earth. 18 Her merchandise and her wages will be dedicated to the LORD; her profits^p will not be stored or hoarded, but her merchandise will supply abundant food and fine clothing for those who live in the presence of the LORD.

Impending Judgment on the Earth

24 Now the LORD is about to lay waste the earth and make it desolate, and he will twist its surface and scatter its inhabitants.

2 And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest;
as with the slave, so with his master;
as with the maid, so with her mistress;
as with the buyer, so with the seller;

as with the lender, so with the borrower;
as with the creditor, so with the debtor.

3 The earth shall be utterly laid waste and utterly despoiled;
for the LORD has spoken this word.

4 The earth dries up and withers, the world languishes and withers;
the heavens languish together with the earth.

5 The earth lies polluted under its inhabitants;
for they have transgressed laws,
violated the statutes,
broken the everlasting covenant.

6 Therefore a curse devours the earth, and its inhabitants suffer for their guilt;
therefore the inhabitants of the earth dwindled,
and few people are left.

7 The wine dries up,
the vine languishes,
all the merry-hearted sigh.

8 The mirth of the timbrels is stilled, the noise of the jubilant has ceased,
the mirth of the lyre is stilled.

9 No longer do they drink wine with singing;
strong drink is bitter to those who drink it.

10 The city of chaos is broken down,

^o Meaning of Heb uncertain ^p Heb it

23.13 This verse is a later gloss (perhaps the time of Nebuchadnezzar [605–562 B.C.E.], see Ezek 26–28) that attributes the destruction of Tyre to Babylon, the land of the Chaldeans, rather than Assyria. 23.15–18 These verses are probably also from the Babylonian period. 23.17 Seventy years. See Jer 25.11–12. Prostitute herself, make whatever international agreements are necessary for her economic gain. 23.18 Her future wealth, however, will be dedicated to God.

24.1–27.13 The Isaiah Apocalypse. The designation is due to the fact that these chapters, usually attributed to a period at least a hundred years later than the eighth-century Isaiah of Jerusalem, contain a number of themes popular in later apocalyptic writings. Older Isaian material has been reworked in developing these themes, however. 24.1–23 The earth is about to be laid waste in a universal judgment. 24.2 Cf. Hos 4.9. 24.4–6 The whole creation suffers because of human transgressions (33.8–9; Hos 4.1–3). 24.7–11 The vineyards dry up, ending the mirth of the drinking parties (1.11–12; 32.9–14). 24.10 City of chaos, a portrait of a society so

- every house is shut up so that no one can enter.
- 11 There is an outcry in the streets
for lack of wine;
all joy has reached its eventide;
the gladness of the earth is banished.
- 12 Desolation is left in the city, the gates are battered into
ruins.
- 13 For thus it shall be on the earth and among the nations,
as when an olive tree is beaten, as at the gleaning when the grape harvest is ended.
- 14 They lift up their voices, they sing for joy;
they shout from the west over the majesty of the LORD.
- 15 Therefore in the east give glory
to the LORD;
in the coastlands of the sea glorify the name of the LORD, the God of Israel.
- 16 From the ends of the earth we hear songs of praise,
of glory to the Righteous One.
But I say, I pine away,
I pine away. Woe is me!
For the treacherous deal
treacherously,
the treacherous deal very
treacherously.
- 17 Terror, and the pit, and the snare
are upon you, O inhabitant of
the earth!
- 18 Whoever flees at the sound of the terror
- shall fall into the pit;
and whoever climbs out of the pit shall be caught in the snare.
For the windows of heaven are opened,
and the foundations of the earth tremble.
- 19 The earth is utterly broken,
the earth is torn asunder,
the earth is violently shaken.
- 20 The earth staggers like a drunkard,
it sways like a hut;
its transgression lies heavy
upon it,
and it falls, and will not rise again.
- 21 On that day the LORD will punish the host of heaven in heaven, and on earth the kings of
the earth.
- 22 They will be gathered together
like prisoners in a pit;
they will be shut up in a prison,
and after many days they will be punished.
- 23 Then the moon will be abashed,
and the sun ashamed;
for the LORD of hosts will reign on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem,
and before his elders he will manifest his glory.

Praise for Deliverance from Oppression

25 O LORD, you are my God;
I will exalt you, I will praise
your name;

disrupted by famine that every house is shut up against normal social intercourse (3.1–8). 24.13 Survivors will be as rare as the gleaning after a fruit harvest (17.6). 24.14–16 While the whole world praises God's glory, the prophet complains that the judgment has not yet ended the treachery of the evil oppressors. 24.17–23 Universal judgment will overtake the whole world as God manifests his rule on Mount Zion in Jerusalem. 24.17–18b See the identical imagery in Jer 48.43–44 and cf. Am 5.18–19. 24.18c Windows of heaven are opened, imagery taken from the Genesis story of Noah and the flood (see Gen 7.11). There may also be an allusion here to an incident in Canaanite myth in which Baal enters his temple, opens a window, and "utters his voice," (i.e., thunders) whereupon the earth quakes and his enemies flee. 24.18d–20 Earthquake imagery. 24.21–23 The judgment embraces the pagan gods as well as their human worshipers. 24.21 Host of heaven, astral deities (Jer 19.13; Zeph 1.5). 24.22 Pit, the underworld, where God's enemies are imprisoned until the final judgment (14.15; Rev 20.1–3). 24.23 The moon will be abashed, and the sun ashamed, two of the astral deities (Deut 17.3) responding to God's rebuke. Elders. See Ex 24.9–11.

25.1–5 A psalm praising God for saving the weak by his judgment on the mighty oppressors. 25.1 Plans formed of old, an old Isaian theme

- for you have done wonderful things, plans formed of old, faithful and sure.
- 2 For you have made the city a heap,
the fortified city a ruin;
the palace of aliens is a city no more,
it will never be rebuilt.
- 3 Therefore strong peoples will glorify you;
cities of ruthless nations will fear you.
- 4 For you have been a refuge to the poor,
a refuge to the needy in their distress,
a shelter from the rainstorm and a shade from the heat.
When the blast of the ruthless was like a winter rainstorm,
- 5 the noise of aliens like heat in a dry place,
you subdued the heat with the shade of clouds;
the song of the ruthless was stilled.

The Banquet on the Mountain

- 6 On this mountain the LORD of hosts will make for all peoples a feast of rich food, a feast of well-aged wines, of rich food filled with marrow,
of well-aged wines strained clear.
- 7 And he will destroy on this mountain

- the shroud that is cast over all peoples,
the sheet that is spread over all nations;
8 he will swallow up death forever.
Then the LORD God will wipe away the tears from all faces, and the disgrace of his people he will take away from all the earth,
for the LORD has spoken.
- 9 It will be said on that day,
Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, so that he might save us.
This is the LORD for whom we have waited;
let us be glad and rejoice in his salvation.
- 10 For the hand of the LORD will rest on this mountain.

Judgment on Moab

- The Moabites shall be trodden down in their place as straw is trodden down in a dung-pit.
- 11 Though they spread out their hands in the midst of it, as swimmers spread out their hands to swim, their pride will be laid low despite the struggle^q of their hands.
- 12 The high fortifications of his walls will be brought down,

(14.24–27). 25.2 Whether a specific city is in mind is unclear; for the imagery, see 17.1. 25.4 Poor, needy. See 14.30, 32. 25.4c–5 For this imagery of protection from storm and heat, see 4.6; 32.2.

25.6–10a God prepares a joyous banquet for all peoples on his royal mountain. 25.6 This mountain, Mount Zion, the site of God's royal rule (24.23). Feast. A new king celebrated his accession by providing a feast for his supporters (1 Kings 1.24–25); cf. the banquet before God on Mount Sinai (Ex 24.9–11). The motif suggests a new level of communion and intimacy between God and human subjects. 25.7 Destroy and swallow up are translations of the same Hebrew verb meaning to "swallow up." The notion of God's swallowing up death is a reversal of a Canaanite mythological motif in which death "swallows" everything (see 5.14; cf. 1 Cor 15.24–57). Shroud and sheet do not designate burial garments. They are usually taken to refer to garments worn by mourners, but they may refer to the curtains in the tabernacle or temple that shielded the inner sanctum from public view (Ex 26.36; 27.16; Num 3.31), since humans could not look upon God and live (Ex 33.20). In either case, they symbolize the alienation between God and humans that is removed by God's destruction of death. 25.8 Wipe away the tears. See Rev 7.17; 21.4.

25.10b–12 Moab, Judah's hostile neighbor, will be cast down to drown in shame as in a dung heap.

laid low, cast to the ground, even to the dust.

Judah's Song of Victory

26 On that day this song will be sung in the land of Judah:

- We have a strong city;
he sets up victory
like walls and bulwarks.
2 Open the gates,
so that the righteous nation that keeps faith
may enter in.
3 Those of steadfast mind you keep in peace —
in peace because they trust in you.
4 Trust in the LORD forever, for in the LORD GOD^r
you have an everlasting rock.
5 For he has brought low
the inhabitants of the height;
the lofty city he lays low.
He lays it low to the ground, casts it to the dust.
6 The foot tramples it,
the feet of the poor,
the steps of the needy.

Lament and Reassurance

- 7 The way of the righteous is level;
O Just One, you make smooth
the path of the righteous.
8 In the path of your judgments,
O LORD, we wait for you;
your name and your renown
are the soul's desire.
9 My soul yearns for you in
the night,
my spirit within me earnestly seeks you.
For when your judgments are in
the earth,

the inhabitants of the world
learn righteousness.

- 10 If favor is shown to the wicked, they do not learn
righteousness;
in the land of uprightness they deal perversely
and do not see the majesty of
the LORD.
11 O LORD, your hand is lifted up,
but they do not see it.
Let them see your zeal for your people, and be ashamed.
Let the fire for your adversaries consume them.
12 O LORD, you will ordain peace
for us,
for indeed, all that we have done, you have done
for us.
13 O LORD our God,
other lords besides you have ruled over us,
but we acknowledge your name alone.
14 The dead do not live;
shades do not rise —
because you have punished and destroyed them,
and wiped out all memory
of them.
15 But you have increased the nation, O LORD,
you have increased the nation;
you are glorified;
you have enlarged all the borders of the land.
16 O LORD, in distress they sought you,
they poured out a prayer^s when your chastening was on them.

26.7–27.1 The community pleads for God's judgment on the wicked, and a prophetic voice responds with a demand for patience and a promise that God's intervention will soon come. 26.7 O Just One. The characterization of God as just provides the basis for the community's complaint that God's justice is currently anything but evident (cf. Jer 12.1; Hab 1.12–13). 26.9–11 Unless they are punished, the wicked neither acknowledge God nor change their behavior, so the community urges God to punish them. 26.12–15 There will be deliverance for Judah, who acknowledges God, but destruction for its enemies. 26.14 Cf. v. 19. 26.16–18 Judah, under God's chastening, was like a pregnant woman

O LORD;
18 we were with child, we writhed, but we gave birth only to wind.
We have won no victories on
earth,
and no one is born to inhabit
the world.
19 Your dead shall live, their corpses^t shall rise.
O dwellers in the dust, awake and sing for joy!
For your dew is a radiant dew, and the earth will give birth to those long dead.^u

until the wrath is past.
21 For the LORD comes out from
his place
to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity;
the earth will disclose the blood shed on it,
and will no longer cover its

God's Redemption of Israel

- 2 On that day:
A pleasant vineyard, sing
about it!
3 I, the LORD, am its keeper;
every moment I water it.

- I guard it night and day
so that no one can harm it; 4 I have no wrath.
If it gives me thorns and briers,
I will march to battle against it.
I will burn it up.
5 Or else let it cling to me for protection,
let it make peace with me,
let it make peace with me.
6 In days to come^v Jacob shall take root,
Israel shall blossom and put forth shoots,
and fill the whole world
with fruit.
7 Has he struck them down as he struck down those who struck them?
Or have they been killed as their killers were killed?
8 By expulsion,^w by exile you struggled against them;
with his fierce blast he removed them in the day of the east wind.
9 Therefore by this the guilt of Jacob will be expiated, and this will be the full fruit of the removal of his sin:
when he makes all the stones of the altars
like chalkstones crushed
to pieces,
no sacred poles^x or incense altars will remain standing.

Judgment on Corrupt Rulers, Priests, and Prophets

- 28 Ah, the proud garland of the drunkards of Ephraim,
and the fading flower of its
glorious beauty,
which is on the head of those bloated with rich food, of those overcome with wine!
2 See, the Lord has one who is mighty and strong;
like a storm of hail, a destroying tempest,

- like a storm of mighty, overflowing waters;
with his hand he will hurl them down to the earth.
3 Trampled under foot will be the proud garland of the drunkards of Ephraim.
4 And the fading flower of its
glorious beauty,
which is on the head of those
bloated with rich food, will be like a first-ripe fig before
the summer;
whoever sees it, eats it up
as soon as it comes to hand.
5 In that day the LORD of hosts will be a garland of glory,
and a diadem of beauty, to the remnant of his people;
6 and a spirit of justice to the one who sits in judgment,
and strength to those who turn back the battle at the gate.
7 These also reel with wine the priest and the prophet reel

they err in vision,
they stumble in giving

Hos 1.6. 27.12–13 The Lord will gather up the remnant of Israel like the kernels of grain at the grain harvest. 27.12 The Wadi of Egypt marks the traditional southwestern boundary of Canaan (Num 34.5) and is identified with the Wadi el-Arish midway between Gaza and Pelusium. 27.13 As the trumpet summoned Israel to assemble for worship (Num 10.2–10; Joel 2.15), so in the day of salvation it will summon the exiles back to Judah to worship on Mount Zion (cf. Mt 24.31; 1 Thess 4.16).

28.1–33.24 Oracles concerning Ephraim and Judah. 28.1–29 An early oracle against Ephraim (vv. 1–6) is employed to introduce an elaborate oracle against Judah (vv. 7–29).

28.1–6 This oracle against Ephraim was probably originally composed at the time of the Syro-Ephraimite war (7.1–6). 28.1 Garland, a metaphor for the walls of Samaria, capital of the Northern Kingdom. 28.2 Overflowing waters, Assyria (see 8.7). 28.4 Like a first-ripe fig, a simile that underscores how open to hostile attack Israel will be (cf. 17.6). 28.5–6 Israel's remnant will turn to God as their garland of pride (see 10.20–23). 28.7–13 This former judgment on Israel's leaders is now applied to the drunken leaders of Judah (see 5.11–12, 22). 28.7 Strong drink. See note on 5.11. Priest and prophet, presumably those who opposed Isaiah's counsel. 28.9–10 The opponents mocked Isaiah's teaching. The Hebrew behind precept and line may not represent actual words but simply nonsense sounds uttered in mockery of the prophet's

- and to whom will he explain
the message?
Those who are weaned from milk,
those taken from the breast?
10 For it is precept upon precept, precept upon precept,
line upon line, line upon line,
here a little, there a little.”^y
- 11 Truly, with stammering lip and with alien tongue
he will speak to this people, 12 to whom he has said,
“This is rest;
give rest to the weary;
and this is repose”;
yet they would not hear.
- 13 Therefore the word of the LORD will be to them, “Precept upon precept, precept upon precept,
line upon line, line upon line,
here a little, there a little;”^y in order that they may go, and fall backward,
and be broken, and snared,
and taken.
- 14 Therefore hear the word of the LORD, you scoffers
who rule this people in Jerusalem.
- 15 Because you have said, “We have made a covenant with death,
and with Sheol we have an agreement;
when the overwhelming scourge passes through
it will not come to us;
for we have made lies our refuge, and in falsehood we have taken shelter”;
- 16 therefore thus says the Lord God, See, I am laying in Zion a foundation stone,
a tested stone,
a precious cornerstone, a sure foundation:
“One who trusts will not panic.”
17 And I will make justice the line, and righteousness the plummet; hail will sweep away the refuge of lies,
and waters will overwhelm the
shelter.
- 18 Then your covenant with death
will be annulled, and your agreement with Sheol
will not stand;
when the overwhelming scourge
passes through
you will be beaten down by it.
- 19 As often as it passes through, it will take you;
for morning by morning it will pass through,
by day and by night;
and it will be sheer terror to understand the message.
- 20 For the bed is too short to stretch oneself on it,
and the covering too narrow to wrap oneself in it.
- 21 For the LORD will rise up as on Mount Perazim,
he will rage as in the valley of Gibeon
to do his deed — strange is his deed! —
and to work his work — alien is his work!

God's Siege and Deliverance of Jerusalem

29 Ah, Ariel, Ariel, the city where David encamped!

- Add year to year;
let the festivals run their round.
- 2 Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be moaning and
lamentation,
and Jerusalem^z shall be to me like an Ariel.^a
- 3 And like David^b I will encamp
against you;
I will besiege you with towers and raise siegeworks
against you.
- 4 Then deep from the earth you shall speak,
from low in the dust your words shall come;
your voice shall come from the ground like the voice of a ghost,
and your speech shall whisper
out of the dust.
- 5 But the multitude of your foes^c
shall be like small dust, and the multitude of tyrants like flying chaff.
And in an instant, suddenly,
- 6 you will be visited by the LORD
of hosts
with thunder and earthquake and great noise,
with whirlwind and tempest, and the flame of a devouring fire.
- 7 And the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel,
all that fight against her and her stronghold, and who distress her,

his own city Jerusalem (29.1–3). 28.23–29 An agricultural parable showing that just as a farmer adjusts his actions to fit the crop and the season, so even God's strange work makes sense in terms of God's larger purpose. 28.27–28 Just as a farmer is careful not to destroy his crop when harvesting it, so God's work of judgment is measured and is not intended to destroy the harvest (27.12–13).

29.1–8 God first besieges and humiliates Jerusalem before coming to its rescue (cf. 1.21–28). 29.1 Ariel, probably an altar hearth (cf. Ezek 43.15), an allusion to Jerusalem. 29.2 Like an

Ariel. The city will be burned like an altar hearth (1.25; 4.4; 33.14). 29.3 Like David, as David once besieged Jerusalem (2 Sam 5.6–9). 29.4 Jerusalem will be brought down to the underworld (5.14–15); voice of a ghost, a reference to the muttering or chirping sound that necromancers made when invoking the spirits of the dead (see 8.19). 29.5–8 Then after he has punished Jerusalem, the Lord will suddenly intervene to drive away all those nations he has used as his agents to fight against the city (see 10.12). 29.5 Small dust, flying chaff, quickly blown away (17.13). 29.6 Cf. 30.30. 29.7–8 The enemy dreams of eating

and wakes up still hungry, or a thirsty person dreams of drinking
and wakes up faint, still thirsty, so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against Mount Zion.

Judah's Blindness

- 9 Stupefy yourselves and be in a stupor,
blind yourselves and be blind!
Be drunk, but not from wine;
stagger, but not from strong drink!
10 For the LORD has poured out upon you
a spirit of deep sleep;
he has closed your eyes, you
prophets,
and covered your heads, you seers.
11 The vision of all this has become for you like the words of a sealed document. If it is given to those who can read, with the command, "Read this," they say,
"We cannot, for it is sealed." 12 And if it is given to those who cannot read, saying,
"Read this," they say, "We cannot read."
13 The Lord said:
Because these people draw near with their mouths
and honor me with their lips, while their hearts are far
from me,

- and their worship of me is a human commandment
learned by rote;
14 so I will again do amazing things with this
people,
shocking and amazing.
The wisdom of their wise shall perish,
and the discernment of the discerning shall be hidden.
15 Ha! You who hide a plan too deep for the LORD,
whose deeds are in the dark,
and who say, "Who sees us?
Who knows us?"
16 You turn things upside down!
Shall the potter be regarded as the clay?
Shall the thing made say of its maker,
"He did not make me";
or the thing formed say of the one who formed it,
"He has no understanding"?

Hope for the Future

- 17 Shall not Lebanon in a very little while become a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be regarded as a forest?
18 On that day the deaf shall hear the words of a scroll,
and out of their gloom and
darkness
the eyes of the blind shall see.
19 The meek shall obtain fresh joy in the LORD,

vanishes overnight (17.14; 31.4–9; 2 Kings 19.35).

29.9–16 Judah is incapable of discerning what God is doing, so his work seems shocking and amazing, while the plans of its shrewd political counselors come to nought. 29.9–10 Mere drunkenness cannot explain Judah's lack of vision and judgment (28.7); God must have blinded them (cf. 6.9–10; but see 30.10). 29.11 Sealed document, a scroll that cannot be unrolled and read without breaking the seal that secures it. 29.13 Judah's worship is only pretense, not a genuine response to God from the heart (see 1.10–17). 29.14 Thus even Judah's wise cannot discern God's plan (5.12–13). 29.15 Hide a plan. Some try to keep their own political plans secret from God and his prophet (30.1–2), apparently on the premise that international politics is too subtle and complicated for the simple religious mind to grasp (28.9–10). 29.16 But this is to forget who is the creature and who the creator.

29.17–24 These verses reverse earlier judgments and are generally dated to the later period of chs. 40–66. 29.17 Lebanon, a metaphor for God's people; once decimated (10.18–19, 33–34), they will again become as numerous as a forest (4.2; 60.21–22; 61.3). 29.18 A reversal of vv. 9–12. 29.19 Holy One of Israel. See note on 1.4. 29.20–21 The scoffer will no longer rule

- and the neediest people shall exult in the Holy One of Israel.
- 20 For the tyrant shall be no more,
and the scoffer shall cease
to be;
all those alert to do evil shall be
cut off—
- 21 those who cause a person to lose a lawsuit,
who set a trap for the arbiter in
the gate,
and without grounds deny justice to the one in the right.
- 22 Therefore thus says the LORD, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob:
No longer shall Jacob be ashamed,
no longer shall his face grow pale.
- 23 For when he sees his children,
the work of my hands, in his midst,
they will sanctify my name;
they will sanctify the Holy One of Jacob,
and will stand in awe of the God of Israel.
- 24 And those who err in spirit will come to understanding,
and those who grumble will accept instruction.

The Futility of Reliance on Egypt

- 30 Oh, rebellious children, says the LORD,
who carry out a plan, but not mine;
who make an alliance, but against my will,

- adding sin to sin;
2 who set out to go down to Egypt without asking for my counsel, to take refuge in the protection of Pharaoh,
and to seek shelter in the shadow of Egypt;
3 Therefore the protection of Pharaoh shall become your shame,
and the shelter in the shadow of Egypt your humiliation.
- 4 For though his officials are at Zoan
and his envoys reach Hanes, 5 everyone comes to shame through a people that cannot profit them,
that brings neither help nor profit,
but shame and disgrace.

the Negeb.

distress,
of lioness and roaring^d lion,
of viper and flying serpent, they carry their riches on the backs of donkeys,
and their treasures on the

them.

30.1–5 Isaiah condemns Judah's negotiations with Egypt (703–701 B.C.E.) as rebellion against God and the resulting defensive alliance against Assyria as ultimately useless. 30.1 Rebellious children. See 1.2, 4. 30.2 Without asking for my counsel. One normally consulted the deity through prophets or the priestly oracle before making a treaty; the failure to do so implied an impious attitude of human self-sufficiency (29.15; cf. Josh 9.14–21). 30.4 Zoan. See note on 19.11. Hanes, an Egyptian city fifty miles south of Memphis.

30.6–7 The military assistance Judah hoped to acquire by sending a treasure caravan through the desert to Egypt will prove totally useless. 30.6 Land of trouble . . . flying serpent, traditional description of desert between Palestine and Egypt (Deut 8.15). 30.7 Rahab, a mythological sea dragon slain by God in the cosmogonic battle that led to creation (51.9–10; 89.9–10; Job 9.13; 26.12–13; Ps 89.9–10).

A Prophetic Witness for the Future

- 8 Go now, write it before them on a tablet,
and inscribe it in a book,
so that it may be for the time to come
as a witness forever.
- 9 For they are a rebellious people, faithless children,
children who will not hear the instruction of the LORD; 10 who say to the seers, "Do not see";
and to the prophets, "Do not prophecy to us what is right;
speak to us smooth things,
prophecy illusions, 11 leave the way, turn aside from the path,
let us hear no more about the Holy One of Israel."
- 12 Therefore thus says the Holy
One of Israel:
Because you reject this word,
and put your trust in oppression and deceit,
and rely on them;
13 therefore this iniquity shall become for you
like a break in a high wall, bulging out, and about to collapse,
whose crash comes suddenly, in an instant;
14 its breaking is like that of a potter's vessel
that is smashed so ruthlessly that among its fragments not a sherd is found
for taking fire from the hearth, or dipping water out of the cistern.

- 15 For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel:
In returning and rest you shall
be saved;
in quietness and in trust shall be your strength.
But you refused ¹⁶and said,
"No! We will flee upon horses" — therefore you shall flee!
and, "We will ride upon swift steeds" —
therefore your pursuers shall be swift!
- 17 A thousand shall flee at the threat of one,
at the threat of five you shall flee,
until you are left
like a flagstaff on the top of a mountain,
like a signal on a hill.

God's Promise to Zion

- 18 Therefore the LORD waits to be gracious to you;
therefore he will rise up to show mercy to you.
For the LORD is a God of justice; blessed are all those who wait
for him.
- 19 Truly, O people in Zion, inhabitants of Jerusalem, you shall weep no more. He will surely be gracious to you at the sound of your cry; when he hears it, he will answer you. ²⁰Though the Lord may give you the bread of adversity and the water of affliction, yet your Teacher will not hide himself any more, but your

30.8–17 Isaiah is told to record his message as a future witness against Judah, because at the present time the people are unwilling to listen (8.16–18). 30.9 Rebellious people. See 30.1. Faithless children. See 1.2–4. 30.10 They effectively silenced their seers and prophets (see 29.10). Smooth things, illusions, pleasant words confirming their own plans and hopes, even if false. 30.11 Hear no more about the Holy One of Israel, keep silent about God's demands and plans. 30.12 This word, the promise recorded in v. 15. Judah's rival military option involved the oppression of heavy taxation, forced labor, and government appropriation of property (22.8–11) and the deceit of secret alliances (28.15; 29.15). 30.15 Ju-dah's salvation lay in trusting God (cf. 28.12). 30.16 The horses they chose to trust in instead will only speed their cowardly flight (cf. Ps 20.7). 30.17 A thousand shall flee. See Lev 26.36–37; Deut 32.30. Signal on a hill, a metaphor for an isolated and exposed remnant (see 31.9).

eyes shall see your Teacher. ²¹And when you turn to the right or when you turn to the left, your ears shall hear a word behind you, saying, "This is the way; walk in it." ²²Then you will defile your silver-covered idols and your gold-plated images. You will scatter them like filthy rags; you will say to them, "Away with you!"

²³ He will give rain for the seed with which you sow the ground, and grain, the produce of the ground, which will be rich and plenteous. On that day your cattle will graze in broad pastures; ²⁴and the oxen and donkeys that till the ground will eat silage, which has been winnowed with shovel and fork. ²⁵On every lofty mountain and every high hill there will be brooks running with water—on a day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall. ²⁶Moreover the light of the moon will be like the light of the sun, and the light of the sun will be sevenfold, like the light of seven days, on the day when the LORD binds up the injuries of his people, and heals the wounds inflicted by his blow.

Judgment on Assyria

- ²⁷ See, the name of the LORD comes from far away, burning with his anger, and in thick rising smoke;^f
his lips are full of indignation, and his tongue is like a devouring fire; ²⁸ his breath is like an overflowing stream that reaches up to the neck—
to sift the nations with the sieve of destruction, and to place on the jaws of the peoples a bridle that leads them astray.

²⁹ You shall have a song as in the night when a holy festival is kept; and gladness of heart, as when one sets out to the sound of the flute to go to the mountain of the LORD, to the Rock of Israel. ³⁰And the LORD will cause his majestic voice to be heard and the descending blow of his arm to be seen, in furious anger and a flame of devouring fire, with a cloudburst and tempest and hailstones. ³¹The Assyrian will be terror-stricken at the voice of the LORD, when he strikes with his rod. ³²And every stroke of the staff of punishment that the LORD lays upon him will be to the sound of timbrels and lyres; battling with brandished arm he will fight with him. ³³For his burning place^g has long been prepared; truly it is made ready for the king,^h its pyre made deep and wide, with fire and wood in abundance; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of sulfur, kindles it.

Alliance with Egypt Is Futile

- 31 Alas for those who go down to Egypt for help and who rely on horses, who trust in chariots because they are many
and in horsemen because they are very strong, but do not look to the Holy One of Israel or consult the LORD!
² Yet he too is wise and brings disaster;
he does not call back his words,
but will rise against the house of the evildoers,
and against the helpers of those who work iniquity.
³ The Egyptians are human, and not God;
their horses are flesh, and not spirit.
When the LORD stretches out his hand,
the helper will stumble, and the one helped will fall,
and they will all perish together.

God's Ultimate Deliverance of Jerusalem

- 4 For thus the LORD said to me,
As a lion or a young lion growls over its prey,
and — when a band of shepherds is called out against it —
is not terrified by their shouting or daunted at their noise, so the LORD of hosts will come down to fight upon Mount Zion and upon its hill.
- 5 Like birds hovering overhead, so
the LORD of hosts
will protect Jerusalem;
he will protect and deliver it,
he will spare and rescue it.
- 6 Turn back to him whom youⁱ have deeply betrayed, O people of Israel. 7 For on that day all of you shall throw away your idols of silver and idols of gold, which your hands have sinfully made for you.
- 8 "Then the Assyrian shall fall by a sword, not of mortals;
and a sword, not of humans,
shall devour him;
he shall flee from the sword,
and his young men shall be put to forced labor.
- 9 His rock shall pass away in terror,
and his officers desert the standard in panic," says the LORD, whose fire is in Zion,
and whose furnace is in Jerusalem.

Government with Justice Predicted

32 See, a king will reign in
righteousness,

- and princes will rule with justice.
- 2 Each will be like a hiding place
from the wind,
a covert from the tempest,
like streams of water in a dry place,
like the shade of a great rock in a weary land.
- 3 Then the eyes of those who have sight will not be closed, and the ears of those who have hearing will listen.
- 4 The minds of the rash will have good judgment,
and the tongues of stammerers will speak readily and distinctly.
- 5 A fool will no longer be called noble,
nor a villain said to be honorable.
- 6 For fools speak folly,
and their minds plot iniquity:
to practice ungodliness, to utter error concerning
the LORD,
to leave the craving of the hungry unsatisfied,
and to deprive the thirsty of
drink.
- 7 The villainies of villains are evil;
they devise wicked devices to ruin the poor with lying words, even when the plea of the needy is right.
- 8 But those who are noble plan
noble things,
and by noble things they stand.

O peoples, give heed!
Let the earth hear, and all that
fills it;
the world, and all that comes from it.
- 2 For the LORD is enraged against all the nations,
and furious against all their hordes;
he has doomed them, has given them over for slaughter.

the mountains shall flow with their blood.

Sennacherib Threatens Jerusalem

36 In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, King Sennacherib of Assyria came up against all the fortified cities of Judah and captured them. ²The king of Assyria sent the Rabshakeh from Lachish to King Hezekiah at Jerusalem, with a great army. He stood by the conduit of the upper pool on the highway to the Fuller's Field. ³And there came out to him Eliakim son of Hilkiyah, who was in charge of the palace, and Shebna the secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, the recorder.

⁴ The Rabshakeh said to them, "Say to Hezekiah: Thus says the great king, the king of Assyria: On what do you base this confidence of yours? ⁵Do you think that mere words are strategy and power for war? On whom do you now rely, that you have rebelled against me? ⁶See, you are relying on Egypt, that broken reed of a staff, which will pierce the hand of anyone who leans on it. Such is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all who rely on him. ⁷But if you say to me, 'We rely on the LORD our God,' is it not he whose high places and altars Hezekiah has removed, saying to Judah and to Jerusalem, 'You shall worship before this altar'? ⁸Come now, make a wager with my master the king of Assyria: I will give you two thousand horses, if you are able on your part to set riders on them. ⁹How then can you repulse a single captain among the least of my master's servants, when you rely on Egypt for disabilities of God's people will be corrected (see 42.18–20). 35.6b–7 Cf. 41.18–19. 35.8 There will be a highway through the wilderness that no one can miss (40.3–4; 42.16). 35.9 Cf. 11.6–9. 35.10 See 51.11.

chronism with the Israelite king Hoshea (2 Kings 18.1, 9), but that synchronism is probably artificial and certainly less reliable than the synchronism with the Assyrian king. All the fortified cities, forty-six according to the Assyrian account. 36.2 Rabshakeh, "chief steward," Assyrian title for a high official; Lachish, a major Judean fortress city lying southwest of Jerusalem midway between Jerusalem and Gaza; Sennacherib's siege of Lachish is graphically portrayed on a bas-relief from Sennacherib's palace in Nineveh. 36.3 Eliakim, Shebna. See 22.15–25. 36.6 Cf. 31.1–3. 36.7 Sennacherib misconstrues the character of Hezekiah's religious reform (2 Kings 18.3–6; 2 Chr 29.3–31.21); for a similar Assyrian misunchariots and for horsemen? ¹⁰Moreover, is it without the LORD that I have come up against this land to destroy it? The LORD said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it."

¹¹ Then Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah said to the Rabshakeh, "Please speak to your servants in Aramaic, for we understand it; do not speak to us in the language of Judah within the hearing of the people who are on the wall." ¹² But the Rabshakeh said, "Has my master sent me to speak these words to your master and to you, and not to the people sitting on the wall, who are doomed with you to eat their own dung and drink their own urine?"

¹³ Then the Rabshakeh stood and called out in a loud voice in the language of Judah, "Hear the words of the great king, the king of Assyria! ¹⁴ Thus says the king: 'Do not let Hezekiah deceive you, for he will not be able to deliver you. ¹⁵ Do not let Hezekiah make you rely on the LORD by saying, The LORD will surely deliver us; this city will not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria.' ¹⁶ Do not listen to Hezekiah; for thus says the king of Assyria: 'Make your peace with me and come out to me; then everyone of you will eat from your own vine and your own fig tree and drink water from your own cistern, ¹⁷ until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of grain and wine, a land of bread and vineyards. ¹⁸ Do not let Hezekiah mislead you by saying, The LORD will save us. Has any of the gods of the nations saved their land out of the hand of the king of Assyria? ¹⁹ Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Have they delivered Samaria out of my hand? ²⁰ Who among all the gods of these countries have saved their countries out of my hand, that the LORD should save Jerusalem out of my hand?'"

²¹ But they were silent and answered him not a word, for the king's command was, "Do not answer him." ²² Then Eliakim son of Hilkiah, who was in charge of the palace, and Shebna the secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, the recorder, came to Hezekiah with their clothes torn, and told him the words of the Rabshakeh.

Hezekiah Consults Isaiah

37 When King Hezekiah heard it, he tore his clothes, covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. ² And he sent Eliakim, who was in charge of the palace, and Shebna the secretary, and the senior priests, covered with sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz. ³ They said to him, "Thus says Hezekiah, This day is a day of distress, of rebuke, and of disgrace; children have come to the birth, and there is no strength to bring them forth. ⁴ It may be that the LORD your God heard the words of the Rabshakeh, whom his master the king of Assyria has sent to mock the living God, and will rebuke the words that the LORD your God has heard; therefore lift up your prayer for the remnant that is left."

⁵ When the servants of King Hezekiah came to Isaiah, ⁶ Isaiah said to them, "Say to your master, 'Thus says the LORD: Do not be afraid because of the words that you have heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have reviled me. ⁷ I myself will put a spirit in him, so that he shall hear a rumor, and return to his own land; I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.'"

Sennacherib Sends a Message to Hezekiah

⁸ The Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria fighting against derstanding of the religious situation in Judah, see Isa 10.10–11. 36.9 Cf. 10.8. 36.10 This is typical Assyrian propaganda. 36.11 Aramaic was the diplomatic language of the period; the language of Judah was Hebrew. The average Judean did not understand Aramaic. 36.12 Horrible conditions resulting from a prolonged siege. 36.13–20 A propaganda speech aimed at the rank and file of Jerusalem's defenders. 36.19 Hamath, Arpad, Samaria. See note on 10.9. Sepharvaim ("Sibraim," Ezek 47.16), a city located between Damascus and Hamath.

37.1–35 From 2 Kings 19; also cf. 2 Chr 32.16–23. 37.1–7 Hezekiah's first consultation with Isaiah. 37.1 Tore his clothes, covered himself with sackcloth, signs of mourning. 37.2 Delegations sent from the king to consult a prophet were normal in such circumstances (2 Kings 22.11–14; Jer 37.3). 37.5–7 Isaiah reassures Hezekiah. Rumor, report of problems back in Assyria. 37.8–13 Sennacherib's second message. 37.8 Libnah, the precise identification and location of this Judean fortress is still debated. Lachish (see note on 36.2) had apparently been captured in Libnah; for he had heard that the king had left Lachish. ⁹Now the king^w heard concerning King Tirhakah of Ethiopia,^x "He has set out to fight against you." When he heard it, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, ¹⁰"Thus shall you speak to King Hezekiah of Judah: Do not let your God on whom you rely deceive you by promising that Jerusalem will not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria. ¹¹See, you have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, destroying them utterly. Shall you be delivered? ¹²Have the gods of the nations delivered them, the nations that my predecessors destroyed, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the people of Eden who were in Telassar? ¹³Where is the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad, the king of the city of Sepharvaim, the king of Hena, or the king of Ivvah?"

Hezekiah's Prayer

¹⁴ Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then Hezekiah went up to the house of the LORD and spread it before the LORD. ¹⁵And Hezekiah prayed to the LORD, saying: ¹⁶"O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, who are enthroned above the cherubim, you are God, you alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; you have made heaven and earth. ¹⁷Incline your ear, O LORD, and hear; open your eyes, O LORD, and see; hear all the words of Sennacherib, which he has sent to mock the living God. ¹⁸Truly, O LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations and their lands, ¹⁹and have hurled their gods into the fire, though they were no gods, but the work of human hands—wood and stone—and so they were destroyed. ²⁰So now, O LORD our God, save us from his hand, so that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you alone are the LORD."

God's Response

²¹ Then Isaiah son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying: "Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Because you have prayed to me concerning King Sennacherib of Assyria, ²²this is the word that the LORD has spoken concerning him:

She despises you, she scorns you—

the meantime. 37.9 Sennacherib mentions a battle with an Egyptian army, but it is questionable whether Tirhakah was already king in 701 B.C.E., a fact that has led some to posit a second campaign of Sennacherib against Jerusalem in 689–88 B.C.E., when Tirhakah was king of Ethiopia. 37.12 Sites in Mesopotamia: Gozan, on the Habor (Khabur) River (2 Kings 17.6); Haran, on the Balikh River (Gen 11.27–32); Rezeph, near the west end of the Jebel Singar; Eden, territory of Bit-adini between the Euphrates and the Balikh (Amos 1.5; Ezek 27.23); Telassar, a city of Bit-adini. 37.13 The location of Hena and Ivvah is unknown.

37.14–20 Hezekiah shows God the Assyrian's boastful letter, and, after the Lord has read it, Hezekiah prays to God for deliverance.

37.14 Before the LORD, before the ark within the Most Holy Place in the temple (1 Kings 8.6–7).

37.16 Enthroned above the cherubim. The cherubim that overshadowed the ark in the temple were thought of as God's throne (see 6.1).

37.17–20 The Assyrian reproach is a threat to God's own reputation among the nations (see Ex 32.12; Num 14.13–16).

37.21–35 God's response through Isaiah is to taunt the proud Assyrian king and assure Hezekiah of deliverance. 37.23–25 By mocking God,

I dried up with the sole of my foot
all the streams of Egypt.’

- 26 “Have you not heard

I planned from days of old
what now I bring to pass, that you should make fortified cities

are dismayed and confounded; they have become like plants of

and like tender grass,
like grass on the housetops,

- 28 “I know your rising up^z and your your going out and coming in,

and your raging against me.
29 Because you have raged
against me
and your arrogance has come to my ears,
I will put my hook in your nose
and my bit in your mouth;
I will turn you back on the way
by which you came.

30 “And this shall be the sign for you:
This year eat what grows of itself, and in the second year what springs from that;
then in the third year sow, reap, plant vineyards, and eat their fruit. ³¹The surviving remnant of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward; ³²for from Jerusalem a remnant shall go out, and from Mount Zion a band of survivors. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will do this.

33 “Therefore thus says the LORD concerning the king of Assyria: He shall not come into this city, shoot an arrow there, come before it with a shield, or cast up a siege ramp against it. ³⁴By the way that he came, by the same he shall return; he shall not come into this city, says the LORD.
³⁵For I will defend this city to save it, for my own sake and for the sake of my servant David.”

Sennacherib's Defeat and Death

36 Then the angel of the LORD set out and struck down one hundred eighty-five thousand in the camp of the Assyrians; when morning dawned, they were all dead bodies. ³⁷Then King Sennacherib of Assyria left, went home, and lived at Nineveh. ³⁸As he was worshiping in the house of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer killed him with the sword, and they escaped into the land of Ararat. His son Esar-haddon succeeded him.

Hezekiah's Illness

38 In those days Hezekiah became sick and was at the point of death.
The prophet Isaiah son of Amoz came to him, and said to him, “Thus says the LORD: Set your house in order, for you shall die; you shall not recover.” ²Then Hezekiah turned his face to the wall, and prayed to the LORD: ³“Remember now, Sennacherib overreached himself (see 10.7–15; 14.4–15). 37.26–27 God was simply using Sennacherib for God's own purposes (10.5–6).

37.28–29 Now God will silence Sennacherib's arrogance by leading him back home (see 30.28).
37.30 The sign confirming this oracle of salvation is the time limit: within three years the siege will be long over and agriculture will be back to normal. For similar signs, cf. 7.14–16; 8.4.
37.33–35 God promises that Sennacherib will not capture Jerusalem.

37.36–38 God takes vengeance on Sennacherib by first destroying his army and then later, long after Sennacherib had returned to Assyria, by having the Assyrian king assassinated.
37.36 Angel of the LORD, a transcendental explanation for plague (2 Sam 24.15–17), which apparently devastated the besieging Assyrian army; the historian Herodotus (in Persian Wars II, 141) speaks of a plague of mice that overran the Assyrian camp. 37.38 Sennacherib died in 681 B.C.E., apparently murdered in a quarrel among his sons over the right of succession.

38.1–22 Hezekiah becomes ill and God tells him he will die, but in response to Hezekiah's prayer God grants him fifteen more years.
38.1 In those days, a vague temporal phrase found again in 39.1; though the date of Hezekiah's illness is still disputed, the concerns of 38.6 and the connection with the Babylonian embassy in 39.1 suggest the period just prior to the revolt against Assyria (ca. 705–703 B.C.E.). 38.3 For the con-

O LORD, I implore you, how I have walked before you in faithfulness with a whole heart, and have done what is good in your sight." And Hezekiah wept bitterly.

4 Then the word of the LORD came to Isaiah: ⁵"Go and say to Hezekiah, Thus says the LORD, the God of your ancestor David: I have heard your prayer, I have seen your tears; I will add fifteen years to your life. ⁶I will deliver you and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria, and defend this city.

7 "This is the sign to you from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he has promised: ⁸See, I will make the shadow cast by the declining sun on the dial of Ahaz turn back ten steps." So the sun turned back on the dial the ten steps by which it had declined.^a tent of this petition, cf. Ps 26. 38.8 Dial, steps or stairs on which the movement of the shadow of a nearby object was used to mark the passage of time. 38.9–20 This song, attributed to Hezekiah as a written votive offering celebrating his recovery, is a typical thanksgiving song used when presenting a thank offering for personal deliverance in the temple liturgy (see Ps 30).

38.10–16 These verses quote the earlier lament and petition of the psalmist. 38.17–20 Then the psalmist announces the deliverance for which he gives thanks. Death cannot praise you. If God had allowed Hezekiah to die, God would have lost a voice to sing God's praises; because God cured him, Hezekiah will continue to sing to others of God's faithfulness (see Pss 6.5; 30.9).

21 Now Isaiah had said, “Let them take a lump of figs, and apply it to the boil, so that he may recover.” ²²Hezekiah also had said, “What is the sign that I shall go up to the house of the LORD?”

Envoys from Babylon Welcomed

39 At that time King Merodach-baladan son of Baladan of Babylon sent envoys with letters and a present to Hezekiah, for he heard that he had been sick and had recovered. ²Hezekiah welcomed them; he showed them his treasure house, the silver, the gold, the spices, the precious oil, his whole armory, all that was found in his storehouses. There was nothing in his house or in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them. ³Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and said to him, “What did these men say? From where did they come to you?” Hezekiah answered, “They have come to me from a far country, from Babylon.” ⁴He said, “What have they seen in your house?” Hezekiah answered, “They have seen all that is in my house; there is nothing in my storehouses that I did not show them.”

⁵ Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, “Hear the word of the LORD of hosts: ⁶Days are coming when all that is in your house, and that which your ancestors have stored up until this day, shall be carried to Babylon; nothing shall be left, says the LORD.

⁷Some of your own sons who are born to you shall be taken away; they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.” ⁸Then Hezekiah said to Isaiah, “The word of the LORD that you have spoken is good.” For he thought, “There will be peace and security in my days.”

38.21–22 These verses would fit better between vv. 6 and 7 (see 2 Kings 20.7–8).

39.1–8 Isaiah is disturbed by Hezekiah's open reception of a delegation from the king of Babylon. 39.1 Merodach-baladan. This Chaldean king of Babylon, subjugated by Tiglath-pileser III of Assyria, revolted against Sargon II and succeeded in ruling an independent Babylon for twelve years (721–709 B.C.E.) before Sargon recaptured it. After Sargon's death (705), Merodach-baladan again revolted and, though he soon lost Babylon (703 B.C.E.), remained a thorn in Assyria's side for another ten years. 39.2 Hezekiah's display of his treasure house and armory to these envoys suggests that the real motivation for this visit was an attempt to forge an anti-Assyrian alliance between Babylon and Judah. 39.3–4 Isaiah suspected such intrigue. 39.5–7 The judgment appears to refer to the later events of 597 B.C.E. (2 Kings 24.10–17).

40.1–55.13 Consolation of Judah. These chapters, which console the people of Judah with the promise of a joyous return to their homeland, presuppose the Babylonian exile and probably date from the period between 545 and 539 B.C.E. 40.1–11 God commissions the divine council to issue a message of consolation to the people of Israel, and the prophet, who overhears the voices of the council, clarifies the message. 40.1–2 Comfort, speak, cry. These imperatives are all plural, addressed to the angelic members of God's royal council (see 6.8; 1 Kings 22.19–22). My people . . . your God, covenant language (Jer 31.33). Served her term. The period of punishment in exile is passed (see Jer 29.10). Double. See Ex 22.7. 40.3–5 Quoted in Lk 3.4–6 (cf. Mt 3.3; Mk 1.3; Jn 1.23). Way of the LORD, the highway God will use to come to his people; behind this imagery are the roads especially prepared by the Babylonians for the festive processions of their gods. Desert, the road will extend across the desert from Babylon to Judah. The glory of the LORD will

The Incomparability of God the Creator

- 12 Who has measured the waters in the hollow of his hand
and marked off the heavens
with a span,
enclosed the dust of the earth in a measure,
and weighed the mountains
in scales
and the hills in a balance?
- 13 Who has directed the spirit of
the LORD,
or as his counselor has instructed him?
- 14 Whom did he consult for his enlightenment,
and who taught him the path of justice?
Who taught him knowledge,
and showed him the way of understanding?
- 15 Even the nations are like a drop from a bucket,
and are accounted as dust on
the scales;
see, he takes up the isles like fine dust.
- 16 Lebanon would not provide fuel enough,
nor are its animals enough for a burnt offering.
- 17 All the nations are as nothing
before him;
they are accounted by him as less than nothing and emptiness.

be seen when he returns to Judah on this road (vv. 9–10). 40.6–8 A voice from God's council proclaims the eternal reliability of God's word (55.10–11) in contrast to the transitoriness of human existence (see 1 Pet 1.24–25). 40.7 Breath, wind. 40.9 Jerusalem is called upon to be the herald to announce the good news of God's return to the rest of the cities of Judah. 40.10–11 God is portrayed in the typology of a Jacob returning from Mesopotamia with his flock (the Judean exiles) as his wages (see Gen 31.1–33.14). This portrait reflects traditional royal imagery; the Babylonian king Hammurabi describes himself as “the beneficent shepherd” and asserts, “In my bosom I carried the peoples of the land of Sumer and Akkad” (Code of Hammurabi, Prologue).

40.12–31 The God who created all things is more than a match for Judah's oppressors and their idols. 40.12–14 A series of rhetorical questions intended to show the incomparable power and wisdom of God. 40.15–17 Neither nature nor the nations can thwart the will of such a God; they are as insignificant as obstacles to the accomplishment of God's purpose as a few specks of fine dust on the scales are to a merchant when weighing produce. 40.18–20 God cannot be compared to idols made by human hands (see 42.17; 45.16, 20; 46.1–2; Jer 10.1–16).

The LORD is the everlasting God,
the Creator of the ends of

He does not faint or grow weary;
his understanding is 40.21–24 God who created the world and its peoples also controls their history (44.24–28).

40.24 He blows upon them, and they wither. See v. 7. 40.26 Far from being rival gods, the heavenly host (24.21) were created by God and are subject to him, appearing promptly at God's call. 40.27–31 God is aware of his people's situation and by his creative power the Lord will renew their strength if they wait on him (49.23; see Ps 103.5).

41.1–10 The nations are called upon to go to court with God to resolve the question of who actually controls history. The early victories of Cyrus of Persia, who was becoming a threat to Babylon, form the background to this oracle. 41.2 Victor from the east, Cyrus of Persia (44.28;

45.1). Summoned him to his service. God is the real power behind the rise of Cyrus, who is simply an agent in God's service (10.5; Jer 27.6). 41.3 Scarcely touching the path, a reference to the speed of the Persian army. 41.4 First . . . last, the God of Israel controls history from beginning to end; the Lord has no rival (43.10; 44.6). 41.5–6 Terrified by the victorious advance of Cyrus, the nations try to encourage one another against him—a reference perhaps to the defensive treaties concluded between Babylon, Lydia, and Egypt. 41.7 Securing their idols is part of the nations' defensive preparations. 41.8–10 Just as God is summoning Cyrus from the east, so God called Abraham and his descendants from the ends of the earth (Gen 12.1–3). That summons to be God's special people still stands, so Israel, God's servant, need not fear like the other nations.

41.11–20 God will protect Israel against its enemies and meet its needs in the wilderness. 41.11–13 Israel's enemies will vanish, because God is with Israel. 41.14 Worm Jacob . . . insect Israel. Israel seemed insignificant in comparison to its powerful enemies (cf. Ps 22.6). Redeemer, the one who avenges or liberates an oppressed kinsman (cf. Lev 25.47–55). Holy One of Israel, an epithet for God (see note on 1.4). 41.15–16 Just as Cyrus treated his enemies as stubble (v. 2), so Israel will thresh its enemies. Mountains, hills suggest the strength of Israel's enemies. 41.17–20 God will provide water and shade for Israel when it crosses the desert in its return from exile. 41.20 The hand of the LORD has done this. God's care for Israel in the wilderness will prove that it was God who raised up Cyrus to defeat Babylon and bring about Israel's restoration. 41.21–29 The idols of the nations are called upon to provide some proof that they are gods and that they, rather than the Lord, the God of Israel, control the destiny of nations. 41.21 King of Jacob, God. 41.22–23 The idols are called upon to cite their past prophecies that have now been fulfilled or to predict the outcome of present events in order to prove that they know and control the course of history. Do good, or do harm—a god that neither blesses nor harms humans is nothing of which humans need to be afraid or terrified; such a god can safely be ignored (see Zeph 1.12). 41.24 Nothing. An idol is a nonentity incapable of action. Abomination. The one who chooses such a god becomes as detestable as the idol chosen (see Hos 9.10). 41.25 God, in contrast, is the one who called Cyrus. Earlier used of enemies from Assyria (14.31) and Babylon (Jer 6.22), the phrase from the north here refers to the Medo-Persian territory north and east of Babylon. 41.26–27 No other god announced the rise of Cyrus; God proclaimed it first to Jerusalem.

The Servant, a Light to the Nations

- 42 Here is my servant, whom I uphold,
my chosen, in whom my soul delights;
I have put my spirit upon him;
he will bring forth justice to the
nations.
2 He will not cry or lift up his voice,
or make it heard in the street;
3 a bruised reed he will not break, and a dimly burning wick he will not quench;
he will faithfully bring forth
justice.

- 4 He will not grow faint or be crushed
until he has established justice in the earth;
and the coastlands wait for his teaching.
5 Thus says God, the LORD, who created the heavens and stretched them out,
who spread out the earth and what comes from it,
who gives breath to the people
upon it
and spirit to those who walk
in it:
6 I am the LORD, I have called you
in righteousness,
I have taken you by the hand
and kept you;
I have given you as a covenant to the people,ⁿ
a light to the nations, 7 to open the eyes that are blind, to bring out the prisoners from the dungeon,
from the prison those who sit in darkness.
8 I am the LORD, that is my name;
my glory I give to no other,
nor my praise to idols.

m Cn: Heb First to Zion—Behold, behold them

n Meaning of Heb uncertain

41.28–29 The silence of the idols of the nations demonstrates their nonexistence.

42.1–9 This text, or a part of this text (vv. 1–4), is one of four texts (49.1–6; 50.4–11; 52.13–53.12) that some scholars have identified as "servant songs." Both the isolation of these songs from their larger context and the identification of the servant in them are disputed. Those who isolate the songs often identify the servant as an individual. The position taken here is that the songs should be read in context and that the servant is the nation Israel. 42.1 My servant, whom I uphold, my chosen. The language points to the identification of Israel as the servant (41.8–10; 44.1–2; 44.21); God only used Cyrus for the sake of God's servant Israel (45.1–4). Spirit, bring forth justice. Israel is equipped for (cf. 44.3) and given the task assigned to the ideal king in 11.1–5. 42.2–3 However, unlike that ideal king, the servant neither strikes the earth nor kills the wicked with his royal command (11.4); his voice is not even heard. He brings forth justice in a different way. 42.4 Be crushed. It is his endurance of suffering that leads to the establishment of justice (see 53.11). Wait for his teaching. Cf. 11.10. 42.5–6a Despite appearances, Israel will not fail in its mission, for the one who called and sustains Israel is the creator and sustainer of the whole world. 42.6b–7 The light imagery used here is traditional imagery for a king's establishment of justice. God's servant will be a model to make that justice clear to all the nations. 42.6b A covenant to the people (49.8), a difficult expression, perhaps better "a cleansing for the people." 42.7 The subject of the infinitives to open and to bring out is not the servant, but God, a sense that would be conveyed better by the translation, "that I might open the eyes that are blind, bring out the prisoners from the dungeon." The same Hebrew construction is found in 51.16, where stretching out the heavens and laying the foundations of the earth clearly refers to God's actions, not those of Israel. 42.8 The LORD, Yahweh, the name of the only true God, a God who will allow no rival (Deut 4.23–24).

and new things I now declare;
before they spring forth,
I tell you of them.

A Hymn of Praise

- 10 Sing to the LORD a new song, his praise from the end of the
earth!
Let the sea roar^o and all that
fills it,
the coastlands and their
inhabitants.
11 Let the desert and its towns lift up their voice,
the villages that Kedar inhabits;
let the inhabitants of Sela sing
for joy,
let them shout from the tops of the mountains.
12 Let them give glory to the LORD, and declare his praise in the coastlands.
13 The LORD goes forth like a soldier,
like a warrior he stirs up his fury;
he cries out, he shouts aloud,
he shows himself mighty against his foes.
14 For a long time I have held my peace,
I have kept still and restrained myself;
now I will cry out like a woman
in labor,
I will gasp and pant.
15 I will lay waste mountains and hills,
and dry up all their herbage;
I will turn the rivers into islands,
and dry up the pools.
16 I will lead the blind
by a road they do not know,

by paths they have not known
I will guide them.
I will turn the darkness before them into light,
the rough places into level
ground.
These are the things I will do,
and I will not forsake them.
17 They shall be turned back and utterly put to shame—
those who trust in carved images,
who say to cast images, “You are our gods.”

Israel the Blind and Deaf Servant

- 18 Listen, you that are deaf;
and you that are blind, look up
and see!
19 Who is blind but my servant,
or deaf like my messenger whom I send?
Who is blind like my dedicated one,
or blind like the servant of
the LORD?
20 He sees many things, but does^p not observe them;
his ears are open, but he does not hear.
21 The LORD was pleased, for the sake of his righteousness, to magnify his teaching and make it glorious.
22 But this is a people robbed and plundered,
all of them are trapped in holes
and hidden in prisons;
they have become a prey with no one to rescue,
a spoil with no one to say, “Restore!”

Israel has been punished for transgressing God's teaching, though Israel did not understand. 42.24 Law, same word translated teaching in v. 21. 42.25 Israel's failure to learn from the fire of God's judgment is a recurring motif in First Isaiah (1.5–7; 9.18–21).

43.1–7 Now this period of punishment is ended, and God will redeem Israel. 43.1 Israel need not fear, for God its creator (44.2, 21, 24) and redeemer (41.14; 48.17; 49.7) has claimed Israel as his own (Ex 19.5–6). By name indicates the intimate personal relationship to God (45.3–4; Ex 33.17). 43.2 God will protect his people

King.
16 Thus says the LORD,
who makes a way in the sea,
a path in the mighty waters, 17 who brings out chariot and horse,
army and warrior;
they lie down, they cannot rise,
they are extinguished,
quenched like a wick:

- 18 Do not remember the former
things,
or consider the things of old.
19 I am about to do a new thing;
now it springs forth, do you not perceive it?
I will make a way in the wilderness
and rivers in the desert.
20 The wild animals will honor me,
the jackals and the ostriches;
for I give water in the wilderness, rivers in the desert,
to give drink to my chosen
people,
21 the people whom I formed for myself
so that they might declare my praise.

Israel Suffered for Its Own Sins

- 22 Yet you did not call upon me, O Jacob;
but you have been weary of me,
O Israel!
23 You have not brought me your sheep for burnt offerings, or honored me with your sacrifices.
I have not burdened you with
offerings,
or wearied you with frankincense.
24 You have not bought me sweet cane with money,
or satisfied me with the fat of
your sacrifices.
But you have burdened me with
your sins;
you have wearied me with your iniquities.

^r Meaning of Heb uncertain

tive Israel is referred to in the plural as God's witnesses and in the singular as God's servant. 43.11–13 God has no rival or opponent worthy of the name.

43.14–21 God will break Israel out of its Babylonian exile in a new exodus. 43.14 The mention of Babylon and the Chaldeans shows that this oracle presupposes the Babylonian exile (597–539 B.C.E.). Bars, the wooden or metal crosspieces that held gates shut; to break them was to open the gates, allowing Israel to leave Babylon. 43.15 God was Israel's king (52.7).

43.16–17 An allusion to the exodus from Egypt (Ex 14–15; cf. Isa 51.9–11). 43.18–19 The new exodus from Babylon, when God will lead Israel home to Palestine through the wilderness, will be even more glorious than the former exodus. 43.20 Water in the wilderness. See Ex 15.22–25; 17.1–7; Num 20.2–13. 43.21 See v. 7.

43.22–28 God did not wrong Israel; rather it is Israel who has sinned against God and brought punishment upon itself. 43.22–23 Cf. Mic 6.3. 43.24 Sweet cane. See Ex 30.23; Jer 6.20.

- 25 I, I am He who blots out your transgressions for my own
 sake,
 and I will not remember
 your sins.
- 26 Accuse me, let us go to trial;
 set forth your case, so that you may be proved right.
- 27 Your first ancestor sinned, and your interpreters
 transgressed against me.
- 28 Therefore I profaned the princes of the sanctuary,
 I delivered Jacob to utter destruction,
 and Israel to reviling.

God's Blessing on Israel

- 44 But now hear, O Jacob
 my servant,
 Israel whom I have chosen!
- 2 Thus says the LORD who made you,
 who formed you in the womb
 and will help you:
 Do not fear, O Jacob my servant,
 Jeshurun whom I have chosen.
- 3 For I will pour water on the thirsty land,
 and streams on the dry ground;
 I will pour my spirit upon your descendants,
 and my blessing on your offspring.
- 4 They shall spring up like a green
 tamarisk,
 like willows by flowing streams.
- 5 This one will say, "I am the LORD's,"
 another will be called by the name of Jacob,

yet another will write on the hand, "The LORD's,"
 and adopt the name of Israel.

The LORD Alone Is God

- 6 Thus says the LORD, the King
 of Israel,
 and his Redeemer, the LORD
 of hosts:
 I am the first and I am the last;
 besides me there is no god.
- 7 Who is like me? Let them proclaim it,
 let them declare and set it forth
 before me.
 Who has announced from of old the things to come?^s Let them tell us^t what is yet
 to be.
- 8 Do not fear, or be afraid;
 have I not told you from of old and declared it?
 You are my witnesses!
 Is there any god besides me?
 There is no other rock; I know not one.

The Absurdity of Idol Worship

9 All who make idols are nothing, and the things they delight in do not profit; their witnesses neither see nor know. And so they will be put to shame. ¹⁰Who would fashion a god or cast an image that can do no good? ¹¹Look, all its devotees shall be put to shame; the artisans too are merely human. Let them all assemble, let them stand up; they shall be terrified, they shall all be put to shame.

43.25 God forgives Israel for God's own sake, not because Israel is worthy of forgiveness. 43.26–28 If Israel wants to challenge this view of Israel's history, Israel should present its evidence that God is the transgressor. For this point of view, see Ps 44.9–26. 43.27 First ancestor, Jacob (Gen 27–38; Hos 12.2–4). Interpreters, perhaps prophets and priests who were supposed to speak God's word to the people (Hos 4.4–6; Jer 23.9–15). 43.28 Princes of the sanctuary, priests (2 Kings 25.18–21).

44.1–5 Now, however, God will restore his blessings to his people. 44.1–2 My servant. Note the identification of the servant as Jacob/Israel, Jacob/Jeshurun. 44.2 Jeshurun (Deut 32.15; 33.5, 26), an old poetic name for Israel, perhaps meaning "upright one" in Hebrew. 44.3–4 God's spirit causes the people to flourish like plants in a well-watered land (see 32.15). 44.5 Then the people will exult in their relationship to the Lord (cf. 4.3; Ps 87.5–6).

44.6–8 The Lord alone has demonstrated his control of history by the prophetic word; there is no other god to challenge the Lord (see 41.21–24). 44.8 Rock, an epithet for God as Israel's protector (17.10; 26.4; 30.29; Deut 32.4, 18).

44.9–20 A prose satire on the absurdity of 12 The ironsmith fashions it^u and works it over the coals, shaping it with hammers, and forging it with his strong arm; he becomes hungry and his strength fails, he drinks no water and is faint. 13 The carpenter stretches a line, marks it out with a stylus, fashions it with planes, and marks it with a compass; he makes it in human form, with human beauty, to be set up in a shrine. 14 He cuts down cedars or chooses a holm tree or an oak and lets it grow strong among the trees of the forest. He plants a cedar and the rain nourishes it. 15 Then it can be used as fuel. Part of it he takes and warms himself; he kindles a fire and bakes bread. Then he makes a god and worships it, makes it a carved image and bows down before it. 16 Half of it he burns in the fire; over this half he roasts meat, eats it and is satisfied. He also warms himself and says, "Ah, I am warm, I can feel the fire!" 17 The rest of it he makes into a god, his idol, bows down to it and worships it; he prays to it and says, "Save me, for you are my god!"

18 They do not know, nor do they comprehend; for their eyes are shut, so that they cannot see, and their minds as well, so that they cannot understand. 19 No one considers, nor is there knowledge or discernment to say, "Half of it I burned in the fire; I also baked bread on its coals, I roasted meat and have eaten. Now shall I make the rest of it an abomination? Shall I fall down before a block of wood?" 20 He feeds on ashes; a deluded mind has led him astray, and he cannot save himself or say, "Is not this thing in my right hand a fraud?"

Israel Is Not Forgotten

- 21 Remember these things, O Jacob, and Israel, for you are my servant;

I formed you, you are my servant;

O Israel, you will not be forgotten by me.

- 22 I have swept away your transgressions like a cloud, and your sins like mist; return to me, for I have redeemed you.

- 23 Sing, O heavens, for the LORD has done it; shout, O depths of the earth; break forth into singing, O mountains, O forest, and every tree in it! For the LORD has redeemed Jacob, and will be glorified in Israel.

- 24 Thus says the LORD, your Redeemer, who formed you in the womb: I am the LORD, who made all things, who alone stretched out the heavens, who by myself spread out the earth; 25 who frustrates the omens of liars, and makes fools of diviners; who turns back the wise, and makes their knowledge foolish; 26 who confirms the word of his servant, and fulfills the prediction of his messengers; who says of Jerusalem, "It shall be inhabited," and of the cities of Judah, "They shall be rebuilt, and I will raise up their ruins"; 27 who says to the deep, "Be dry —

Because of Israel's special status as God's uniquely created servant, God will never forget Israel. 44.22 God has swept away Israel's sins as completely as the morning mists vanish before the sun. 44.23 All of nature is called upon to praise God for his redemption of Israel (cf. 42.10-12;

The Lord, the God of Israel, created the whole world without any assistance from any other deity (40.12-26; 42.5). 44.25-26 God by his guidance of history frustrates the predictions of the pagan diviners and confirms the predictions of the Israelite prophets who promised the restoration of Judah (cf. 41.21-29; 42.9; 43.8-13; 44.7-8). 44.27 Deep, double allusion to Babylon as the site of the new exodus

Cyrus, God's Instrument

45 Thus says the LORD to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have grasped
 to subdue nations before him and strip kings of their robes, to open doors before him—
 and the gates shall not be closed:
 2 I will go before you

 I will break in pieces the doors of bronze
 and cut through the bars of iron,
 3 I will give you the treasures of darkness
 and riches hidden in secret
 places,
 so that you may know that it is I,
 the LORD,
 the God of Israel, who call you
 by your name.
 4 For the sake of my servant Jacob,
 and Israel my chosen,
 I call you by your name,
 I surname you, though you do not know me.

5 I am the LORD, and there is no other;
 besides me there is no god.
 I arm you, though you do not know me,
 6 so that they may know, from the rising of the sun
 and from the west, that there is no one besides me;
 I am the LORD, and there is

 7 I form light and create darkness,
 I make weal and create woe;
 I the LORD do all these things.

 righteousness;
 let the earth open, that salvation
 may spring up,^w
 and let it cause righteousness to sprout up also;
 I the LORD have created it.

45.1–8 God's commission to Cyrus. 45.1 Cyrus is the only non-Israelite designated in the OT as God's anointed (i.e., messiah), a term usually reserved for Israel's kings or high priests. 45.2–3 God will assist and reward Cyrus for carrying out God's commission so that Cyrus will recognize that God is responsible for his success. 45.4–5 Though Cyrus does not know the Lord, the God of Israel, it is the Lord who has summoned and armed Cyrus for the sake of God's servant Israel. 45.6–7 The Lord is doing this so that the whole world will recognize that the Lord alone is God, creator of nature and controller of history. 45.7 Light . . . darkness, weal . . . woe. by God just like heaven and earth and the rest of humanity. 45.13 God is the one who raised up Cyrus, and he will free Israel and rebuild Jerusalem for God. 45.14 The nations will bring their wealth to Israel as tribute, will serve Israel, and will acknowledge that Israel's God alone is God (49.22–23; 60.4–16; 61.5–6). 45.15 Hides himself, a reference to God's penchant for temporarily withdrawing from visible involvement in the world (8.17) and working in strange ways (28.21) that suggests that God's use of Cyrus is totally in character. 45.16–17 Those who make idols will be put to shame, but Israel will be saved. 45.18–19 Israel's exile in Babylon is not God's final purpose for Israel. As the creator, God did not intend Israel to live in a disordered and chaotic universe, but in a habitable one of order, truth, and right. Chaos, the disordered state prior to creation (Gen 1.2).

their idols are on beasts and cattle;
these things you carry are loaded
as burdens on weary animals.
- 2 They stoop, they bow down

they cannot save the burden, but themselves go into captivity.

4 even to your old age I am he, even when you turn gray I will

I have made, and I will bear;
I will carry and will save.

If two consultations did not produce the favorable response from the deity that one wanted, one tried again and again; since each consultation required another sacrificial animal, one could exhaust oneself and one's economic resources in attempting to get a reliable response from the deity. Those who study the heavens. Astrology was an important so that you could not say, “I already knew them.”

- 8 You have never heard, you have never known,
from of old your ear has not been opened.
For I knew that you would deal
very treacherously,
and that from birth you were called a rebel.
- 9 For my name’s sake I defer my
anger,
for the sake of my praise I restrain it for you,
so that I may not cut you off.
- 10 See, I have refined you, but not like^f silver;
I have tested you in the furnace of adversity.
- 11 For my own sake, for my own sake, I do it,
for why should my name^g be profaned?
My glory I will not give to another.
- 12 Listen to me, O Jacob,
and Israel, whom I called:
I am He; I am the first,
and I am the last.
- 13 My hand laid the foundation of
the earth,
and my right hand spread out
the heavens;
when I summon them,
they stand at attention.
- 14 Assemble, all of you, and hear!
Who among them has declared these things?
The LORD loves him;
he shall perform his purpose
on Babylon,
and his arm shall be against the Chaldeans.
- 15 I, even I, have spoken and
called him,
I have brought him, and he will prosper in his way.
- 16 Draw near to me, hear this!
From the beginning I have not spoken in secret,
from the time it came to be I have been there.
And now the Lord God has sent me and his spirit.
- 17 Thus says the LORD,
your Redeemer, the Holy One
of Israel:
I am the LORD your God,
who teaches you for your own good,
who leads you in the way you should go.
- 18 O that you had paid attention to my commandments!
Then your prosperity would have been like a river, and your success like the waves
of the sea;
- 19 your offspring would have been
like the sand,
and your descendants like its grains;
their name would never be

The Servant's Mission

- 49 Listen to me, O coastlands, pay attention, you peoples from far away!
The LORD called me before I was born,
while I was in my mother's womb he named me.
2 He made my mouth like a sharp sword, in the shadow of his hand he hid me;
he made me a polished arrow,
in his quiver he hid me away.
3 And he said to me, "You are my servant, Israel, in whom I will be glorified."

- 4 But I said, "I have labored in vain,
I have spent my strength for nothing and vanity;
yet surely my cause is with the LORD, and my reward with my God."
5 And now the LORD says, who formed me in the womb to be his servant,
to bring Jacob back to him,
and that Israel might be gathered to him,
for I am honored in the sight of the LORD, and my God has become my strength—6 he says,
"It is too light a thing that you should be my servant
to raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the survivors of Israel; I will give you as a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach to the end of the earth."
7 Thus says the LORD,
the Redeemer of Israel and his Holy One,
to one deeply despised, abhorred by the nations,
the slave of rulers,
"Kings shall see and stand up,
princes, and they shall prostrate themselves,

81.13–16), fulfilling the ancient promises (Gen 22.17). 48.20–21 Israel's departure from Babylon is seen as a new exodus (Ex 17.1–7). 48.22 This salvation will not benefit those who persist in their wickedness (57.20–21).

49.1–7 The second of the so-called servant songs (see note on 42.1–9). Despite Israel's present reputation among the nations, God has chosen it to be his servant, and Israel will ultimately manifest God's glory and salvation to the whole world. 49.1 Before I was born, in my mother's womb. See Jer 1.5; Gal 1.15. 49.2 God made the servant's mouth like a sharp sword through the words God gave him to speak (51.16; Eph 6.17; Heb 4.12). Arrow, quiver. Cf. Ps 127.4–5. 49.3 The identification of the servant with Israel is here explicit. 49.4–7 In the despair of exile it seemed to Israel that its labor had been for nought (cf. Hab 2.13), but God reassures Israel of its significance. 49.5 To bring Jacob back to him is not a description of the servant's mission, but a statement of God's action; hence a better rendering would be "in that he brings Israel back to himself." 49.6 The subject of to raise up, to restore is again God, which suggests that the beginning of the verse be translated "It is too light a thing, you being my servant, that I should only raise up . . ." End of the earth. God will not only restore Israel, but this restoration of Israel will be the means by which God's salvation will extend to the whole earth (42.4, 6). 49.7 One deeply despised. The nations had no regard for Israel as long as it was in exile, apparently rejected by God (53.2–3). Kings shall . . . prostrate themselves, in response to Israel's unexpected deliverance and exaltation (52.10–15).

has chosen you.”

Zion's Children to Be Brought Home

- 8 Thus says the LORD:
In a time of favor I have answered you,
on a day of salvation I have helped you;
I have kept you and given you as a covenant to the people,^h to establish the land,
to apportion the desolate
heritages;
9 saying to the prisoners,
“Come out,”
to those who are in darkness, “Show yourselves.”
They shall feed along the ways, on all the bare heightsⁱ shall be their pasture;
10 they shall not hunger or thirst, neither scorching wind nor sun
shall strike them down, for he who has pity on them will lead them,
and by springs of water will guide them.
11 And I will turn all my mountains into a road,
and my highways shall be raised up.
12 Lo, these shall come from far
away,
and lo, these from the north and from the west,
and these from the land of Syene.^j

- 13 Sing for joy, O heavens, and exult, O earth;
break forth, O mountains, into singing!
For the LORD has comforted his
people,
and will have compassion on his suffering ones.

- 14 But Zion said, “The LORD has forsaken me,
my Lord has forgotten me.” 15 Can a woman forget her nursing child,
or show no compassion for the child of her womb?
Even these may forget,
yet I will not forget you.
16 See, I have inscribed you on the palms of my hands;
your walls are continually
before me.
17 Your builders outdo your destroyers,^k
and those who laid you waste go away from you.
18 Lift up your eyes all around
and see;
they all gather, they come
to you.
As I live, says the LORD, you shall put all of them on like an ornament,
and like a bride you shall bind them on.

49.8–26 A collection of sayings celebrating God's deliverance of his people. 49.8 The subject of to establish, to apportion is God, not the servant; this part of the verse would be better translated “establishing the land, apportioning the desolate heritages.” See 42.6–7. 49.9 Prisoners, the Israelite exiles. Come out. See 48.20. 49.9c–12 The restoration of Israel to Palestine is described in the imagery of a new exodus (41.17–20; 42.16; 43.19–21; 48.21). 49.11 See 40.3–4. 49.12 The exiles will return from all directions, not just from Babylon (see 43.5–7). Syene, modern Assuan, in southern Egypt at its ancient boundary with Ethiopia (Ezek 29.10).

49.13 See 44.23. 49.14–16 God refutes Zion's complaint that God has forgotten his city. 49.16 Inscribed. God cannot forget Zion, because its plan is tattooed on God's palms. 49.17 The very slight distinction in one vowel between the Hebrew words for your builders and your children (see text note k) suggests an intentional double entendre. 49.18 The imagery shifts from builders/children, and the exiles returning to repopulate Jerusalem are portrayed as ornaments of jewelry worn by the city (cf. Lam 4.1–2). 49.19–21 Jerusalem will be surprised at the size of its new population, because of the large numbers of returnees who were born in exile.

- surely now you will be too crowded for your
inhabitants,
and those who swallowed you up will be far away.
- 20 The children born in the time of your bereavement
will yet say in your hearing:
"The place is too crowded
for me;
make room for me to settle."
- 21 Then you will say in your heart,
"Who has borne me these?
I was bereaved and barren, exiled and put away —
so who has reared these?
I was left all alone —
where then have these come from?"
- 22 Thus says the Lord God:
I will soon lift up my hand to the
nations,
and raise my signal to the
peoples;
and they shall bring your sons in their bosom,
and your daughters shall be carried on their shoulders.
- 23 Kings shall be your foster fathers, and their queens your nursing mothers.
With their faces to the ground
they shall bow down to you, and lick the dust of your feet.
Then you will know that I am the LORD;
those who wait for me shall not
be put to shame.
- 24 Can the prey be taken from the mighty,
or the captives of a tyrant^l be rescued?
- 25 But thus says the LORD:

Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken,
and the prey of the tyrant be
rescued;
for I will contend with those who contend with you,
and I will save your children.

26 I will make your oppressors eat their own flesh,
and they shall be drunk with their own blood as with wine.
Then all flesh shall know that I am the LORD your Savior, and your Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

God Can Still Save

- 50 Thus says the LORD:
Where is your mother's bill of divorce
with which I put her away?
Or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you?
No, because of your sins you were sold,
and for your transgressions
your mother was put away.
- 2 Why was no one there when I came?
Why did no one answer when I called?
Is my hand shortened, that it cannot redeem?
Or have I no power to deliver?
By my rebuke I dry up the sea,
I make the rivers a desert;
their fish stink for lack of water, and die of thirst.^m
- 3 I clothe the heavens with blackness,
and make sackcloth their covering.

49.22–23 At God's signal the nations will bring Jerusalem's children home (11.10–12; 62.10), and the royalty of the nations will serve Israel (60.9–10, 16). Bow down . . . and lick the dust, obedience normally given to a great king (Ps 72.9). 49.24–26 Even though Babylon still seems a mighty power, God will destroy it to rescue his people (see Jer 50–51), and all flesh will acknowledge the Lord as God (45.14–17, 22–25; 52.10; 60.16).

50.1–3 Nothing in Israel's past signifies God's inability to save his people. 50.1 There is no bill of divorce to mark God's putting away of Israel as irrevocable (Deut 24.1–4; Jer 3.1), nor did God have to sell his people to pay off a creditor; Israel's suffering was not due to God's weakness, but to Israel's sin. 50.2–3 Despite Israel's failure to respond, God still has the power and will to save, just as in the first exodus.

The Servant's Humiliation and Vindication

- 4 The Lord God has given me the tongue of a teacher,ⁿ that I may know how to sustain the weary with a word.
Morning by morning he wakens—
wakens my ear
to listen as those who are taught.
- 5 The Lord God has opened
my ear,
and I was not rebellious,
I did not turn backward.
- 6 I gave my back to those who struck me,
and my cheeks to those who pulled out the beard;
I did not hide my face
from insult and spitting.
- 7 The Lord God helps me; therefore I have not been disgraced;
therefore I have set my face
like flint,
and I know that I shall not be put to shame;
- 8 he who vindicates me is near.
Who will contend with me?
Let us stand up together.
Who are my adversaries?
Let them confront me.
- 9 It is the Lord God who helps me;
who will declare me guilty?
All of them will wear out like a garment;
the moth will eat them up.

- 10 Who among you fears the LORD and obeys the voice of his servant,
who walks in darkness
and has no light,
yet trusts in the name of the LORD
and relies upon his God?
- 11 But all of you are kindlers of fire, lighters of firebrands.^o Walk in the flame of your fire, and among the brands that you have kindled!
This is what you shall have from
my hand:
you shall lie down in torment.

Blessings in Store for God's People

righteousness,
you that seek the LORD.

were hewn,
and to the quarry from which you were dug.
- 2 Look to Abraham your father and to Sarah who bore you;

but I blessed him and made him many.

he will comfort all her waste
places,
and will make her wilderness

50.4–11 The third of the so-called servant songs (see note on 42.1–9). The speaker, either the prophet or the servant proclaimed by the prophet, portrays himself in imagery borrowed from the experience of prophets like Jeremiah. 50.4 Constantly instructed by God (Jer 1.4–10), the speaker encourages the discouraged exiles (42.3; 49.5–6). 50.5–6 Unlike Israel as a whole (1.4; 30.9–11), the speaker did not turn away from God, though he was persecuted for his faithfulness (53.3–5, 7–8; Jer 20.1–2; 26.7–24). 50.7–9 Despite these persecutions, the speaker is confident that God will vindicate him against these adversaries (53.10–12; Jer 11.20–12.3; 20.7–13). 50.7 Set my face like flint. The speaker will be just as adamant as his persecutors (Ezek 3.8–9). 50.9 His opponents will perish like old moth-eaten clothes (51.7–8). 50.10–11 But who among his listeners will obey the servant remains a question (42.23); the majority (all of you) are disobedient and destined to burn in judgment (1.25–28; 31.9; 33.11–14; 42.25; 47.14).

51.1–8 Three sayings (vv. 1–3; 4–6; 7–8), each introduced with a similar command to listen, containing promises to God's people. 51.1–3 The example of Abraham is proof that God can fulfill the divine promises even if the people are few in number. 51.1 You that pursue righteousness . . . seek the LORD. At least some of the exiles were trying to follow God's teaching (see v. 7; 50.10). Rock, quarry, Israel's ancestors, Abraham and Sarah (Gen 11.26–25.11). 51.2 For he was but one. Cf. Ezek 33.24. 51.3 Eden . . . garden of the LORD. The time of salvation is often portrayed in prophetic literature as a return to the conditions of paradise (Ezek 36.35; 47.1–12).

and my justice for a light to the peoples.
- 5 I will bring near my deliverance
swiftly,
my salvation has gone out and my arms will rule the
peoples;
the coastlands wait for me,
and for my arm they hope.
- 6 Lift up your eyes to the heavens,
and look at the earth beneath;
for the heavens will vanish like smoke,
the earth will wear out like a and those who live on it will die like gnats;^p

but my salvation will be forever, and my deliverance will never

Apostrophe to the Arm of the LORD

- 9 Awake, awake, put on strength,
O arm of the LORD!
Awake, as in days of old,
the generations of long ago!
Was it not you who cut Rahab in pieces,
who pierced the dragon?
- 10 Was it not you who dried up
the sea,
the waters of the great deep;
who made the depths of the sea
a way
for the redeemed to cross over?
- 11 So the ransomed of the LORD shall return,
and come to Zion with singing;
everlasting joy shall be upon their heads;
they shall obtain joy and gladness,
and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

51.4–6 God's salvation will soon go forth to the whole world. 51.4 Teaching, justice. See 2.2–5. 51.5 Even the pagan nations hope for the imposition of God's righteous rule (see Ps 82). 51.6 The present order of reality with its old heavens and earth will vanish, but God's salvation will last (24.21–23; 65.17). 51.7–8 Those who follow God should not fear the reproaches of those who revile them, for their persecutors will perish (50.9).

51.9–11 In response to the preceding promises the arm of the Lord is called upon to demonstrate anew its ancient victories (Hab 3.2). 51.9–10 Awake, a cry sometimes addressed to God in laments when the deity's inaction suggests

God is asleep (see Ps 44.23). Arm is a traditional metaphor for God's power, particularly as it was displayed in God's mighty signs at the exodus (Ex 6.6; 15.16; Deut 4.34; 2 Kings 17.36; Ps 136.12–13; Jer 32.21; Ezek 20.33–34). The exodus is here identified with God's cosmogonic victory over the primeval chaos-dragon (Ps 74.12–17). Rahab. See Isa 30.7; Job 26.12. Dragon. See Isa 27.1; Ezek 29.3. Sea. See Job 26.12. Great deep. See Gen 7.11; Am 7.4. 51.11 The ransomed of the LORD, those freed from the Babylonian exile (35.8–10; 43.1–21).

51.12–16 Israel need not fear, for God who created Israel and the world is more powerful than Israel's mortal oppressors. 51.12 Fades like

- a human being who fades like

13 You have forgotten the LORD, your Maker,
who stretched out the heavens and laid the foundations of
the earth.
You fear continually all day

because of the fury of the oppressor,
who is bent on destruction.
But where is the fury of the oppressor?
14 The oppressed shall speedily be released;
they shall not die and go down to the Pit,
nor shall they lack bread.
15 For I am the LORD your God, who stirs up the sea so that its
waves roar —
the LORD of hosts is his name.
16 I have put my words in your mouth,
and hidden you in the shadow of my hand,

Appeal to Jerusalem

- 17 Rouse yourself, rouse yourself!
Stand up, O Jerusalem,
you who have drunk at the hand
of the LORD
the cup of his wrath,
who have drunk to the dregs
the bowl of staggering.
18 There is no one to guide her

- among all the children she has borne;
there is no one to take her by the hand
among all the children she has brought up.
19 These two things have befallen you
— who will grieve with you? — devastation and destruction, famine and sword —
who will comfort you?^r 20 Your children have fainted, they lie at the head of every street
like an antelope in a net;
they are full of the wrath of
the LORD,
the rebuke of your God.
21 Therefore hear this, you who are wounded,^s
who are drunk, but not
with wine:
22 Thus says your Sovereign, the LORD,
your God who pleads the cause of his people:
See, I have taken from your hand
the cup of staggering;
you shall drink no more
from the bowl of my wrath.
23 And I will put it into the hand of your tormentors,
who have said to you,
"Bow down, that we may walk
on you";
and you have made your back like the ground
and like the street for them to walk on.

grass. See 40.6–8. 51.14 Oppressed. The Babylonian exiles are portrayed as prisoners bending over in a cramped dungeon (42.7). Pit, realm of the dead (14.9–11, 15). 51.15 Who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar, better "who stills the sea though its waves roar" (Job 26.12–13); Israel need not fear the fury of the oppressor, for God will still the fury of Babylon just as he once stilled the fury of the cosmogonic sea. 51.16 See 49.2. 51.17–23 Jerusalem is called upon to stand up, because her punishment is ended, and now her oppressors will receive their punishment.

51.17 Cup of his wrath. This common symbol of judgment plays on the disorientation, shame, and vulnerability of intoxicated individuals to point to the same characteristics among the politically oppressed (Jer 25.15–29; Hab 2.15–16). 51.18–20 The depopulation of Jerusalem is portrayed through the image of a woman who has no children left to help or comfort her in her old age. 51.21 Not with wine. Jerusalem's disorientation was caused by the oppression of her tormentors (v. 23).

Let Zion Rejoice

- 52 Awake, awake,
 put on your strength, O Zion!
 Put on your beautiful garments,
 O Jerusalem, the holy city;
 for the uncircumcised and the unclean
 shall enter you no more.
- 2 Shake yourself from the dust,
 rise up,
 O captive^t Jerusalem;
 loose the bonds from your neck,
 O captive daughter Zion!
- 3 For thus says the LORD: You were sold for nothing, and you shall be redeemed without money. 4 For thus says the Lord God: Long ago, my people went down into Egypt to reside there as aliens;
 the Assyrian, too, has oppressed them without cause. 5 Now therefore what am I doing here, says the LORD, seeing that my people are taken away without cause?
 Their rulers howl, says the LORD, and continually, all day long, my name is despised. 6 Therefore my people shall know my name; therefore in that day they shall know that it is I who speak; here am I.
- 7 How beautiful upon the
 mountains
 are the feet of the messenger who announces peace,
 who brings good news,
 who announces salvation,
 who says to Zion, "Your God reigns."

- 8 Listen! Your sentinels lift up their voices,
 together they sing for joy;
 for in plain sight they see the return of the LORD to Zion.
- 9 Break forth together into singing,
 you ruins of Jerusalem;
 for the LORD has comforted his
 people,
 he has redeemed Jerusalem.
- 10 The LORD has bared his holy arm before the eyes of all the
 nations;
 and all the ends of the earth shall see
 the salvation of our God.
- 11 Depart, depart, go out from there!
 Touch no unclean thing;
 go out from the midst of it,
 purify yourselves,
 you who carry the vessels of
 the LORD.
- 12 For you shall not go out in haste,
 and you shall not go in flight;
 for the LORD will go before you, and the God of Israel will be your rear guard.

Other nations have mistreated Israel without sufficient justification, and because they have done this with impunity God's name has been despised (see 10.10–11). 52.6 My people shall know my name. God will soon act to restore the reputation of the divine name. 52.7–10 God's salvation is announced to Jerusalem and displayed before the whole world. 52.7–8 The imagery is that of a king returning in triumph from victory over his enemies (Pss 24.7–10; 47.1–9). 52.10 Arm is a standard metaphor for God's power (Ex 6.6; 15.16); for holy arm, see Ps 98.1. 52.11–12 The exiles are called upon to leave Babylon. As in the first exodus, God will guide and protect Israel (Ex 14.19–20), but unlike the first exodus (Ex 12.33–39), this one will not be in haste.

52.13–53.12 The last and most striking of the so-called servant songs (see note on 42.1–9). The early church identified the servant in this passage with Jesus (Acts 8.32–35), and Jesus' own sense of identity and mission may have been shaped by this figure (Mk 8.31; 9.30–32; 10.33–34). In the original historical context, however, the servant appears to have been exiled Israel. 52.13–15 God's deliverance and exaltation of Israel will astound the nations who formerly

- 14 Just as there were many who were astonished at him^u
—so marred was his appearance, beyond human semblance,
and his form beyond that of mortals—
- 15 so he shall startle^v many nations;
kings shall shut their mouths
because of him;
for that which had not been told them they shall see,
and that which they had not heard they shall

- 53 Who has believed what we have heard?
And to whom has the arm of the LORD been revealed?
- 2 For he grew up before him like a young plant,
and like a root out of dry
ground;
he had no form or majesty that we should look at him, nothing in his appearance that we should desire him.
- 3 He was despised and rejected
by others;
a man of suffering^w and acquainted with infirmity;
and as one from whom others hide their faces^x
he was despised, and we held him of no account.
- 4 Surely he has borne our infirmities
and carried our diseases;
yet we accounted him stricken, struck down by God, and afflicted.
- 5 But he was wounded for our
transgressions,

- crushed for our iniquities;
upon him was the punishment that made us whole,
and by his bruises we are healed.
- 6 All we like sheep have gone astray;
we have all turned to our own way,
and the LORD has laid on him
the iniquity of us all.
- 7 He was oppressed, and he was
afflicted,
yet he did not open his mouth;
like a lamb that is led to the
slaughter,
and like a sheep that before its shearers is silent,
so he did not open his mouth.
- 8 By a perversion of justice he was taken away.
Who could have imagined his future?
For he was cut off from the land of the living,
stricken for the transgression of
my people.
- 9 They made his grave with the wicked
and his tomb^y with the rich,^z although he had done no violence,
and there was no deceit in
his mouth.
- 10 Yet it was the will of the LORD to crush him with pain.^a

56.1–66.24 Admonitions to Judah. These

The Corruption of Israel's Rulers

they are all without knowledge;
they are all silent dogs
that cannot bark;

and oppress all your workers.
- 4 Look, you fast only to quarrel and to fight
and to strike with a wicked fist.
Such fasting as you do today will not make your voice heard

- 5 Is such the fast that I choose,
a day to humble oneself?
Is it to bow down the head like a bulrush,
and to lie in sackcloth and ashes?
Will you call this a fast,
a day acceptable to the LORD?
- 6 Is not this the fast that I choose:
to loose the bonds of injustice,
to undo the thongs of the yoke,
to let the oppressed go free,
and to break every yoke?

your own kin?

58.1–14 The prophet here contrasts mere religious ritual with the service God desires. 58.1–2 Israel must be made aware of its sin (Mic 3.8); its delight in ritual does not make it the right-

Salvation for Sinful Israel Is by God's Grace

- 59 See, the LORD's hand is not too short to save,
nor his ear too dull to hear.
2 Rather, your iniquities have been barriers
between you and your God, and your sins have hidden his face from you
so that he does not hear.
3 For your hands are defiled with blood,
and your fingers with iniquity;
your lips have spoken lies,
your tongue mutters
wickedness.
4 No one brings suit justly,
no one goes to law honestly;
they rely on empty pleas, they speak lies,
conceiving mischief and begetting iniquity.

The Good News of Deliverance

61 The spirit of the Lord God is upon me,
because the LORD has
anointed me;
he has sent me to bring good news to the oppressed,
to bind up the brokenhearted,
to proclaim liberty to the captives,
and release to the prisoners;
2 to proclaim the year of the LORD's favor,
and the day of vengeance of
our God;
to comfort all who mourn;
3 to provide for those who mourn in Zion —
to give them a garland instead of ashes,
the oil of gladness instead of
mourning,
the mantle of praise instead of a faint spirit.
They will be called oaks of
righteousness,
the planting of the LORD, to display his glory.
4 They shall build up the ancient
ruins,
they shall raise up the former devastations;
they shall repair the ruined cities,
the devastations of many generations.

5 Strangers shall stand and feed
your flocks,
foreigners shall till your land
and dress your vines;
6 but you shall be called priests of
the LORD,
you shall be named ministers of
our God;
you shall enjoy the wealth of
the nations,
and in their riches you shall
glory.
7 Because their^t shame was double,
and dishonor was proclaimed as their lot,
therefore they shall possess a double portion;
everlasting joy shall be theirs.
8 For I the LORD love justice, I hate robbery and wrongdoing;^u
I will faithfully give them their recompense,
and I will make an everlasting covenant with them.
9 Their descendants shall be known
among the nations,
and their offspring among the
peoples;
all who see them shall acknowledge
that they are a people whom the LORD has blessed.
10 I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my whole being shall exult in my God;

61.1–11 The prophet brings good news to Zion of its deliverance and glorification. 61.1 The speaker, either the prophet or the servant portrayed by the prophet, announces that God has commissioned him through an anointing with the spirit (see 11.2; 42.1–4). The portrayal of the speaker's task is reminiscent of that of the servant in Second Isaiah (42.1–9); Luke saw this passage fulfilled in Jesus' ministry (Lk 4.16–21). 61.2 Year of the Lord's favor, 49.8. 61.3 Oaks of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, the agricultural metaphor of Israel as God's planting is com-

In contrast to the other nations, Israel will have a special priestly relationship to God (Ex 19.6). 61.7 Double portion, a double reward in place of the double punishment Jerusalem once received (40.2). 61.8–9 When God has redeemed his people, the nations will change their estimate of Israel (52.13–53.12) and acknowledge that God has blessed Israel. Everlasting covenant. See 54.9–10. 61.10 While God dresses himself in salvation and righteousness as armor for battle (59.17), God dresses Israel or Zion in garments of salvation and robes of righteousness as the festive clothing or ornaments that a bride-

The Vindication and Salvation of Zion

62 For Zion's sake I will not keep silent,
and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest,
until her vindication shines out
like the dawn,
and her salvation like a burning torch.
2 The nations shall see your vindication,
and all the kings your glory;
and you shall be called by a new name
that the mouth of the LORD will give.
3 You shall be a crown of beauty in the hand of the LORD,
and a royal diadem in the hand of your God.
4 You shall no more be termed Forsaken,^v
and your land shall no more be termed Desolate;^w

but you shall be called My Delight Is in Her,^x
and your land Married;^y
for the LORD delights in you, and your land shall be married.
5 For as a young man marries a young woman,
so shall your builder^z
marry you,
and as the bridegroom rejoices
over the bride,
so shall your God rejoice
over you.
6 Upon your walls, O Jerusalem,
I have posted sentinels;
all day and all night
they shall never be silent.
You who remind the LORD,
take no rest,
7 and give him no rest until he establishes Jerusalem and makes it renowned throughout the earth.
8 The LORD has sworn by his right hand
and by his mighty arm:
I will not again give your grain to be food for your enemies, and foreigners shall not drink
the wine
for which you have labored; 9 but those who garner it shall eat it
and praise the LORD,
and those who gather it shall drink it

See 60.1–3. A new name implies a change in status (1.26). 62.3 Crown of beauty. The encircling walls of a city set on the crest of a hill lie behind this image of Jerusalem as

God will delight in Zion and rejoice over her land with all the attention that a bridegroom gives to a new bride. 62.6–9 The prophets must remind God of his sworn promise to glorify Jerusalem. 62.8 God swears by symbols of his own power—his right hand (48.13) and his arm (59.16). The threat that enemies would enjoy the food, drink, or other goods for which one had labored was a traditional curse or punishment for breach of covenant (Deut 28.30–34). 62.10–11 Zion's vindication is

- prepare the way for the people;
build up, build up the highway,
clear it of stones,
lift up an ensign over the
peoples.
- 11 The LORD has proclaimed to the end of the earth:
Say to daughter Zion, “See, your salvation comes;
his reward is with him,
and his recompense
before him.”
- 12 They shall be called, “The Holy People,
The Redeemed of the LORD”;
and you shall be called,

Vengeance on Edom

- 63 “Who is this that comes from Edom,
from Bozrah in garments stained crimson?
Who is this so splendidly robed, marching in his great might?”
- “It is I, announcing vindication, mighty to save.”
- 2 “Why are your robes red,
and your garments like theirs who tread the wine press?”
- 3 “I have trodden the wine press alone,
and from the peoples no one was with me;
I trod them in my anger and trampled them in my wrath;
their juice spattered on my garments,
and stained all my robes.

- 4 For the day of vengeance was in my heart,
and the year for my redeeming work had come.
- 5 I looked, but there was no helper;
I stared, but there was no one to sustain me;
so my own arm brought me victory,
and my wrath sustained me.
- 6 I trampled down peoples in my
anger,
I crushed them in my wrath, and I poured out their lifeblood on the earth.”

A Communal Psalm of Lament

- 7 I will recount the gracious deeds

LORD,
because of all that the LORD has done for us,
and the great favor to the

that he has shown them

according to the abundance of his steadfast love.
- 8 For he said, “Surely they are
my people,
children who will not deal

63.1–6 The triumphant return of the Divine Warrior. 63.1 Who is this? Challenged by the prophet, the majestic figure coming from Edom identifies himself as the mighty Savior (see Ps 24.8–10). Edom, a symbol of wicked, foreign enemies (Jer 49.7–22); Bozrah, a major city of Edom (34.6). 63.2–3 In response to the question why his robes are red, God the Warrior explains that he has been trampling the wine press, a symbol of judgment (Joel 3.13; Rev 14.19–20), and his clothes have been spattered by its juice, a metaphor for the lifeblood of his enemies (v. 6). 63.4 Day of vengeance. See 34.8; 61.2. 63.5 Cf. 59.16.

10 But they rebelled

11 Then they^c remembered the days of old,
of Moses his servant.^d Where is the one who brought them up out of the sea

Where is the one who put to march at the right hand of Moses,

who divided the waters before
them
to make for himself an everlasting name, 13 who led them through the depths?
Like a horse in the desert,
they did not stumble.

14 Like cattle that go down into
the valley,
the spirit of the LORD gave them rest.
Thus you led your people,
to make for yourself a glorious name.

15 Look down from heaven and see,
from your holy and glorious habitation.
Where are your zeal and your might?
The yearning of your heart and your compassion?
They are withheld from me.

16 For you are our father, though Abraham does not know us
and Israel does not acknowledge us;
you, O LORD, are our father;

our Redeemer from of old is
your name.

17 Why, O LORD, do you make us stray from your ways and harden our heart, so that we do not fear you?
Turn back for the sake of your servants,
for the sake of the tribes that are your heritage.

18 Your holy people took possession for a little while;
but now our adversaries have trampled down your sanctuary.

19 We have long been like those whom you do not rule,
like those not called by your
name.

64 O that you would tear open the heavens and come down, so that the mountains would quake at your presence — ^{2e} as when fire kindles brushwood and the fire causes water to boil —
to make your name known to your adversaries,
so that the nations might tremble at your presence!

3 When you did awesome deeds that we did not expect, you came down, the mountains
quaked at your presence.

4 From ages past no one has heard, no ear has perceived,
no eye has seen any God
besides you,
who works for those who wait
for him.

5 You meet those who gladly do
right,
those who remember you in your ways.

of old (Judg 5.4–5; Ps 68.7–8; Hab 3.2–15). 64.5–7 Confession of sins. 64.8–12 Prayer that God turn aside from his anger and comfort his people against the enemies who have destroyed God's cities (Ps 79). 64.8–9 Since God fathered and fashioned Israel as his own people, why should he destroy the work of his own hand (see Job 10.8–12). 64.12 Restrain yourself, either from further acts of wrath or from continuing indifference to Israel's plight (see 42.14–17). Either way, the plaintive question constitutes a mild rebuke of God.

65.1–25 As if to answer the rebuke implicit in the questions of 64.12, this chapter provides a defense of God's action. Israel's judgment is deserved; nevertheless God will save a remnant. 65.1–7 Israel will be judged because of its constant rebellion. 65.1–2 God spoke, but Israel did not listen (Rom 10.20–21). Held out my hands, a gesture of prayer or entreaty (1.15; 1 Kings 8.22, 38, 54; Ps 143.6; Lam 1.17). 65.3–5 Israel continues the pagan rituals that anger God: sacrificing in gardens, presumably a syncretistic fertility ritual; sit inside tombs, for consulting the dead (Deut 18.11–12); eat swine's flesh (Deut 14.8). Too holy. The participants in these pagan practices claimed a dangerous holiness that set them apart from others. 65.6–7 God will not keep silent

my chosen shall inherit it,

- 11 But you who forsake the LORD, who forget my holy mountain, of spirit.

- 15 You shall leave your name to my

A Critique of False Worship

66 Thus says the LORD:
Heaven is my throne
and the earth is my footstool;

- what is the house that you would build for me,
and what is my resting place?
- 2 All these things my hand has made,
and so all these things are mine,^l
says the LORD.
But this is the one to whom I will look,
to the humble and contrite in spirit,
who trembles at my word.
- 3 Whoever slaughters an ox is like whoever makes a memorial offering of frankincense, like one who blesses an idol.

These have chosen their own ways,
and in their abominations they take delight;
- 4 I also will choose to mockⁿ them,
and bring upon them what they fear;
because, when I called, no one

when I spoke, they did not

66.1–5 True worship differentiated from false worship. 66.1 What is the house that you would build for me? This question presupposes the work of rebuilding the temple in Jerusalem after the return from exile (520–515 B.C.E.). In contrast to Haggai and Zechariah, this prophet does not show much enthusiasm for the rebuilding project. 66.2 Since the creator of the whole world cannot be contained in a temple built by humans (1 Kings 8.27), it is not the temple, but the right attitude among God's worshipers that guarantees God's continuing presence with the people (33.14–16; 57.15). 66.3 Like one. Each of the four occurrences of this phrase links a ritual action normally considered appropriate with a sinful action. The NRSV translation suggests a blanket condemnation of the sacrificial system, but this is only one possible interpretation. The word like is not in the Hebrew, and the verse may be translated in a way that simply condemns normal worship practices when the worshiper is also engaging in pagan rituals or an immoral life (1.10–17; 65.1–7, 11). The latter interpretation fits better with the complaint that the wicked have chosen their own ways. 66.4 God will choose to mock the wicked, because they refused to listen to God's word and chose what displeased God

- but they did what was evil in my sight,
and chose what did not
please me.
5 Hear the word of the LORD,
you who tremble at his word:
Your own people who hate you and reject you for my name's sake.

glorified,
so that we may see your joy";
but it is they who shall be put

The Vindication of Zion

- 6 Listen, an uproar from the city!
A voice from the temple!
The voice of the LORD, dealing retribution to his enemies!
7 Before she was in labor
she gave birth;
before her pain came upon her she delivered a son.
8 Who has heard of such a thing?
Who has seen such things?
Shall a land be born in one day?
Shall a nation be delivered in one moment?
Yet as soon as Zion was in labor
she delivered her children.
9 Shall I open the womb and not deliver?
says the LORD;
shall I, the one who delivers, shut the womb?
says your God.
10 Rejoice with Jerusalem, and be glad for her,
all you who love her;

- rejoice with her in joy,
all you who mourn over her — 11 that you may nurse and be satisfied
from her consoling breast;
that you may drink deeply with delight
from her glorious bosom.
12 For thus says the LORD:
I will extend prosperity to her like a river,
and the wealth of the nations
like an overflowing stream;
and you shall nurse and be carried on her arm,
and dandled on her knees.
13 As a mother comforts her child,
so I will comfort you;
you shall be comforted in Jerusalem.
14 You shall see, and your heart shall rejoice;
your bodies^o shall flourish like
the grass;
and it shall be known that the hand of the LORD is with his servants,
and his indignation is against his enemies.
15 For the LORD will come in fire, and his chariots like the whirlwind,
to pay back his anger in fury,
and his rebuke in flames
of fire.
16 For by fire will the LORD execute judgment,
and by his sword, on all flesh;
and those slain by the LORD shall be many.

(65.12–16). 66.5 Let the LORD be glorified so that we may see your joy, the mocking words of those Israelites who reject God's promises and hate those who take these promises (cf. 5.19; Jer 17.15).

66.6–16 Contrary to what the sceptics say, God's promises to Jerusalem are about to be fulfilled. 66.6–9 God's vindication of the righteous and punishment of the wicked in Zion is as imminent and certain as birth to a woman in labor. 66.7 Before she was in labor she gave birth. Zion's delivery will be quick and painless. 66.8 This is incredible because the prophet is talking about the rebirth of a whole nation, which normally does not happen in a day or a moment. 66.9 God's rhetorical questions may be a response to an Israelite complaint that Israel's distress was as desperate as that of pregnant woman who could not give birth (see 26.18; 37.3). 66.10–13 When Zion gives birth to her children, those who love her will delight in Mother Zion's consolations. 66.12 Cf. 60.4–5. 66.13 The prophet switches from the image of Zion as comforting mother to that of God who comforts like a mother. 66.14–16 While the righteous rejoice, God will come in fire to punish the wicked (30.27–33; 33.10–14).

Concluding Comments

17 Those who sanctify and purify themselves to go into the gardens, following the one in the center, eating the flesh of pigs, vermin, and rodents, shall come to an end together, says the LORD.

18 For I know^p their works and their thoughts, and I am^q coming to gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come and shall see my glory, ¹⁹and I will set a sign among them. From them I will send survivors to the nations, to Tarshish, Put,^r and Lud—which draw the bow—to Tubal and Javan, to the coastlands far away that have not heard of my fame or seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the nations. ²⁰They shall bring all your kindred from all the nations as an offering to the LORD, on horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and on mules, and on dromedaries, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, says the LORD, just as the Israelites bring a grain offering in a clean vessel to the house of the LORD.

²¹And I will also take some of them as priests and as Levites, says the LORD.

22 For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, says the LORD; so shall your descendants and your name remain.

23 From new moon to new moon, and from sabbath to sabbath, all flesh shall come to worship before me, says the LORD.

24 And they shall go out and look at the dead bodies of the people who have rebelled against me; for their worm shall not die, their fire shall not be quenched, and they shall be an abhorrence to all flesh.

JEREMIAH

Personal Background

THE PROPHET JEREMIAH CAME FROM ANATHOTH, a village in the hill country of Benjamin, a small tribe to the north of Judah. Though often controlled by its powerful neighbor to the south, Benjamin was culturally and religiously more at home with the tribes who comprised the Northern Kingdom.

Jeremiah was a descendant of Abiathar, one of the two chief priests of King David (1 Sam 22–23; 2 Sam 20.25). Abiathar was a Levitical priest, belonging to a priesthood that was prominent during the period of the judges (ca. 1200–1000 B.C.E.). David's other chief priest, Zadok, was the founder of the Zadokite priesthood, which contended with the Levites for priestly control of royal religion in Jerusalem. Solomon banished Abiathar to Anathoth, because he supported the efforts of Adonijah, Solomon's rival, to succeed David to the throne (1 Kings 2.26–27). Allied with Solomon, Zadok and his descendants gained control of the temple in Jerusalem and were strong supporters of the Davidic monarchy. Jeremiah's strong criticism of the house of David and the Jerusalem temple is due in part to his Levitical and Benjaminite heritage.

Jeremiah's Mosaic theology derived from the older traditions of the exodus from Egypt, the wilderness wandering, the gift of the land of Canaan, and the covenant of Sinai. Indeed, Jeremiah is presented as the "prophet like Moses" whom, like the early lawgiver, people were to hear.

Historical Background

The prose narratives and sermons (1.2; 25.3) place the call in the "thirteenth year of King Josiah" (627 B.C.E.) and note that Jeremiah was active in this king's reign (cf. 3.6; 36.2). The year 627 B.C.E. was an auspicious time in the history of Judah. This year marked the death of Ashurbanipal, the last powerful Assyrian king. Judah had become a vassal of the Assyrian Empire in 735 B.C.E. With Ashurbanipal's death, the Assyrian Empire began to crumble. Asshur, a major city in the Assyrian Empire, fell to the Medes in 614 B.C.E., and Nineveh, the capital, in 612 B.C.E. After Nebuchadrezzar's (also spelled Nebuchadnezzar; see note on 21.2) defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish in 605 B.C.E., Babylonia conquered much of the ancient Near East.

In 627 B.C.E., the vassal nations in the Assyrian Empire revolted, including Judah, ruled by King Josiah, whose ambition was to reestablish the empire of David and Solomon. Five years later, Josiah launched a reform that reaffirmed the covenant of Moses and centralized the worship of Yahweh in Jerusalem. Judah was initially successful, but its dreams of independence ended with the death of Josiah at the hands of the Egyptians at Megiddo (609 B.C.E.).

Within a year or two after the battle of Carchemish, Judah became a part of the Babylonian Empire. A later king of Judah, Jehoiakim (609–598 B.C.E.), died during an unsuccessful revolt against Babylon, and the first exiles were taken to Babylon (597 B.C.E.). A second rebellion, led by the last king of Judah, Zedekiah (597–587 B.C.E.), resulted in the destruction of Jerusalem and the second, more comprehensive exile in 587 B.C.E. After zealots assassinated the Judean governor, Gedaliah, Jeremiah was forced to accompany a group of Jews seeking exile in Egypt. The Babylonian captivity lasted until 539 B.C.E., when the Persian king, Cyrus, conquered Babylon and allowed the exiles to return home (538 B.C.E.; see Ezra 1.1–4).

Jeremiah's prophetic career coincided with these critical events in Judah's history. The early period of his life is difficult to reconstruct. It is most likely that he opposed the unabashed enthusiasm for the political ambitions of Josiah and spoke of a "foe from the north" who would bring destruction (see chs. 4–10). This foe was not clearly identified as Babylon until the battle of Carchemish. If active at the time, Jeremiah may have initially supported Josiah's reform, though this reformation ended with the king's death in 609 B.C.E. Before coming to Jerusalem after Josiah's death, the prophet preached both repentance by returning to the ancestral faith (ch. 3) and acquiescence to the Babylonians as the sole means of avoiding national destruction, thus gaining for himself powerful enemies within Judah. The "laments of Jeremiah" (see 11.18–20.18) reflect his experience of persecution.

Jeremiah's temple sermon (see chs. 7, 26), dating to the beginning of Jehoiakim's reign (609 B.C.E.), assaulted the theological undergirding of royal religion by arguing that obedience to the commandments and the covenant of Moses, not temple worship, was Judah's only hope for survival. Comparable are Jeremiah's oracles of judgment against Jerusalem and the kings of the house of David (21.11–23.8). In Jeremiah's view, temple worship and the covenant of God with the dynasty of David, so central to royal religion in Jerusalem, were a "false" (Hebrew sheqer) religion, sure to fail.

After the exile of 587 B.C.E., Jeremiah chose to stay in Jerusalem to help those who remained rebuild their lives. Now he spoke oracles not of judgment, but of hope. The remnants of both Israel and Judah would enter into a new covenant and faithfully follow God's law, for it would be written upon their hearts

(chs. 30–31). After the assassination of Gedaliah by Jewish partisans, Jeremiah was forced to go into Egyptian exile. Sometime later the prophet disappears from history.

Composition and Literary Character

The book of Jeremiah consists of several kinds of literature that underwent numerous editions before the book achieved its present form. Three major types of literature comprise much of the book. Poetic oracles of judgment are found throughout chs. 1–25. These may contain much that was original with the prophet. Narratives about incidents in the life of Jeremiah are found mainly in chs. 26–45. Prose sermons in the literary style of speeches in Deuteronomy and the books of Samuel and Kings are embedded among the materials of the first forty-five chapters. Indeed, both the narratives and the prose sermons may derive from later scribes, called by scholars Deuteronomic redactors because of their affinities in thought and style to the Deuteronomic literature (Deut–2 Kings), who were responsible for editing much of the book. Their efforts were designed to enable Jeremiah to speak to later exilic and early postexilic Jewish communities.

Several independent collections of various materials appear to have been compiled and transmitted separately, at least for a time, before being brought together in the present book. These collections include the oracles “concerning the house of David” (21.11–23.8), speeches “concerning the prophets” (23.9–40), speeches “concerning the nations” (46–51), and possibly two others: the “laments of Jeremiah” (found throughout 11.18–20.18) and the oracles concerning the “foe from the north” (found throughout chs. 4–10).

In addition, several clues to the composition and growth of the book are given in ch. 36. This chapter mentions two “scrolls of Baruch,” Jeremiah’s scribe, who is presented as writing down in the first scroll the oracles the prophet spoke from the “days of Josiah” until the battle of Carchemish. After the first scroll’s destruction, Baruch wrote a second scroll that repeated the contents of the first and added “many similar words.” The call of Jeremiah (ch. 1), his laments (found in parts of 11.18–20.18), and the oracles concerning the “foe from the north” (chs. 4–10) may have comprised the book’s first scroll (or edition). The second scroll made allowances for the additions of other materials, including those of later hands.

Part of the literary history of the book also may be reconstructed by comparing the Septuagint (Greek) of Jeremiah with its Masoretic (Hebrew) counterpart. The Septuagint is one-eighth shorter than the Masoretic Text and represents a different arrangement of materials (especially the location of the “oracles against the nations,” chs. 46–51). The manuscript evidence for Jeremiah contained in the Qumran scrolls, discovered near the Dead Sea in the 1940s, suggests that the Septuagint is based on an older Hebrew edition of Jeremiah. Some later editor or editors supplemented that early edition to produce what became the canonical form of the present book.

The rather complex composition and editing of the book should obscure neither the beauty of its literary character nor the power of its prophetic message. Here indeed was a prophet who combined elegance of form with the ethical and redemptive content of the “word of the Lord.” And perhaps more than anyone in his time, Jeremiah provided the means by which a despairing people could hope for a new future. Leo G. Benjamin), reception of the revelation (to whom the word of the LORD came), whom the revelation concerned (the nations, see 1.4–10), and the date (vv. 2–3). See Isa 1.1; Am 1.1; Mic 1.1; Zeph 1.1. 1.1 The name Jeremiah in Hebrew means “Yahweh exalts.” Priests . . . in Anathoth. The superscription dates Jeremiah's prophetic activity from 627 to 587 B.C.E.

1.4–19 Jeremiah's call and commission. The date of Jeremiah's call is a matter of debate. The prose texts (1.2; 25.3) place the call in the thirteenth year of King Josiah (627 B.C.E.) and note that Jeremiah was active in this king's reign (see 3.6; 36.2). However, the poetry may imply Jeremiah was born in 627 B.C.E., was called from the “womb,” and then, as a “boy,” began to prophesy in 609 B.C.E. Ch. 1 presents an overture to the book. Key themes and words are introduced and later repeated throughout the various collections. The chapter contains the poetic call of Jeremiah (1.4–10), two accompanying visions (1.11–14), and two editorial expansions (1.15–16; 1.17–19). Of the two forms of prophetic call, the encounter with (the word of) God (Ex 3.1–4.17; Judg 6.11–18; 1 Sam 3) and the vision of God in the heavenly court (1 Kings 22.19–22; Isa 40.1–11; Ezek 1.1–3.11), Jeremiah's followed the first. The first form consists of the divine confrontation (the word of the LORD came to me, v. 4), introductory word (Before I formed you . . . consecrated you, v. 5a), commission (I appointed you . . . nations, v. 5b), objection (Ah, LORD God . . . only a boy, v. 6), reassurance (Do not say . . . to deliver you, vv. 7–8), and sign (Then the LORD put out his hand . . . to build and to plant, vv. 9–10). The striking parallels with the call of Moses (Ex 3.1–4.17) present Jeremiah as the “prophet like Moses” (Deut 18.15–22). 1.5 Jeremiah is predestined to be a prophet even before his birth and to be a prophet to the nations (see “oracles against the nations,” chs. 46–51). The origins of the world and of the individual (conception, formation in the womb, birth, and nurture) comprise the two major creation traditions in the Hebrew Bible (world: Gen 1.1–2.4a; Pss 33; 74.12–17; 104; individual: Gen 2.4b–25; Job 3; 10; Ps 139.13–16; both are combined in the birth of Wisdom, Prov 8.22–31). In his final lament, Jeremiah curses his birth, thus negating his call (20.14–18). 1.6 Ah, Lord God introduces a complaint against God (see 4.10; 14.13; 32.17; Josh 7.7; Ezek 4.14: 9.8; 11.13; 20.49). I do not know how to speak refers to the role of the prophet not know how to speak, for I am only a boy." ⁷But the LORD said to me,

"Do not say, 'I am only a boy';
for you shall go to all to whom I and you shall speak whatever I

⁸ Do not be afraid of them,
for I am with you to deliver you,
says the LORD."

⁹Then the LORD put out his hand and touched my mouth; and the LORD said to me,

And I said, "I see a boiling pot, tilted away from the north."

¹⁴ Then the LORD said to me: Out of the north disaster shall break out on all the inhabitants of the land. ¹⁵For now I am calling all the tribes of the kingdoms of the north, says the LORD; and they shall come and all of them shall set their thrones at the entrance of the gates of Jerusalem, against all its surrounding walls and against all the cities of Judah. ¹⁶And I will utter my judgments against them, for all their wickedness in forsaking me; they have made offerings to other gods, and worshiped the works of their own hands. ¹⁷But you, gird up your loins; stand up and tell them everything that I command you. Do not break down before them, or I will break you before them. ¹⁸And I for my part have made you today a fortified city, an iron pillar, and a bronze wall, against the whole land—against the kings of Judah, its princes, its priests, and the people of the land. ¹⁹They will fight against you; but they shall not prevail against you, for I am with you, says the LORD, to deliver you.

as one who speaks on behalf of God (see Ex 4.10–12). Boy may refer to a child, adolescent, or young man. The term echoes the call of another "prophet like Moses," the lad Samuel (1 Sam 3). 1.8 I am with you to deliver you promises divine presence and aid in the face of persecution (see the laments in 11.18–20.18). 1.9 Touching and placing divine words in the mouth reflects the "prophet like Moses" (Deut 18.15–22; cf. Jer 15.19). 1.10 God appoints Jeremiah, not kings, over nations to destroy and then to build. To pluck up . . . overthrow refers to the oracles of judgment in chs. 2–25. To build and to plant echoes the oracles of salvation in chs. 30–31. The theme of this verse is a recurring motif aptly summarizing the message of the prophet. See 18.7–9; 24.6; 31.28; 42.10; 45.4 (cf. 31.4, 40; 32.41). 1.11–14 Vision reports consist of several parts: introduction (God shows or the prophet sees something), description of what is seen, dialogue between God and the prophet, and interpretation (God explains the meaning of the vision). See ch. 24; Am 7.1–9.10. A wordplay, branch of an almond tree (Hebrew shaged) and watching (Hebrew shoqed), in the first vision stresses that God will enact the content of the prophetic word. The vision of the boiling pot points to destruction from the north (see "foe from the north" oracles, chs. 4–10). 1.15–16 An exilic or postexilic editorial expansion of the second vision, explaining the Babylonian conquest resulted from violation of the Mosaic covenant. 1.17–19 A second editorial expansion in which Jeremiah is encouraged to fight against his enemies, the leaders of Judah: kings of Judah, its princes (i.e., royal officers), its priests (both Levitical and Zadokite), and the people of the land (landowners in the countryside). Unlike Jerusalem, he is to be invincible, a fortified city, an iron pillar, a bronze wall (see 15.20), because the Lord will sustain and deliver him (see 1.8).

2.1–37 Ch. 2 is an oracular poem dealing with the theme of Israel's and Judah's religious and political disloyalty to the Lord and the covenant. With the deterioration of Assyrian power after 627 B.C.E., Josiah moved into the territory of the former Northern Kingdom to bring it under his control. The oracles in ch. 2, perhaps from the first stage of Jeremiah's activity, assume the form of a "lawsuit" (Hebrew riv, 2.9), in which the Lord serves as both plaintiff and judge (see Isa 5.1–7;

- I remember the devotion of your youth,

Hos 9.10–13; 13.4–8; Mic 6.1–8). "Lawsuits" include an appeal to heaven and earth as witnesses, a summons to the defendant to hear the charges, a listing of charges, rhetorical questions, a description of the Lord's gracious acts on behalf of the accused, and an announcement of guilt and punishment. The poem has five parts, arranged in the following literary pattern: vv. 1–3 (Israel and Judah's faithfulness as a young bride), vv. 4–13 (religious apostasy – Baal worship), vv. 14–19 (political disloyalty – alliances with Assyria and Egypt), vv. 20–28 (religious apostasy – Baal worship), and vv. 29–37 (political disloyalty – alliance with Egypt). The pattern is A, B, C, B', C'. The wilderness and bridal imagery of the first oracle is repeated in the final one, thus forming an inclusio (a repetition signaling the beginning and end of a unit). Echoing Hosea, a Northern prophet of the eighth century B.C.E., Jeremiah contrasts Israel's faithfulness in the Sinai wilderness with its disloyalty after entrance into Canaan. 2.1–2 The prose introduction (The word of the Lord . . . Jerusalem) has been inserted by a postexilic editor. 2.2 Devotion (Hebrew chesed) means love or faithfulness within a covenant relationship (marriage, friendship, and covenant between God and Israel). Bride is a common metaphor for Israel in the relationship with God, the husband (Isa 49.18; 61.10; 62.5; see esp. Hos 2). The wilderness is the Sinai wilderness, where Israel entered into covenant with the Lord after the exodus from Egypt. 2.3 Holy means "set apart, consecrated for divine service." The first fruits are the initial and presumably the best yield of the harvest given as an offering to the Lord (see Ex 23.19; 34.26; Deut 26.2, 10). 2.4–13 The oracle contrasts exodus theology (God's liberation of Israel from Egyptian slavery, guidance through the treacherous Sinai wilderness, and gift of the land of Canaan) with Israel's later disloyalty in following the Canaanite god Baal (lit. "husband" in Canaanite and Hebrew). 2.5 Worthless things, idols, false gods (8.19; Deut 32.21; 1 Kings 16.13, 26; 10.8; 14.22). 2.7 Plentiful land, the land of Canaan. 2.8 Priests, rulers, and prophets led the people into religious apostasy. 2.10–11 Cyprus, an island in the eastern Mediterranean, is approximately sixty miles west of the coast of Phoenicia. It was a center for maritime trade. Kedar refers to a powerful league of Arab tribes in the north Arabian desert east of the Transjordan who raided surrounding countries and controlled the eastern trade route from Arabia to the Fertile Crescent (49.28–33; Isa 21.16–17; Ezek 27.21). From west to east (including all areas crisscrossed by trade routes), Jeremiah contends, no nation changes its gods, even though they are not real. Yet Israel exchanges its glory (lit. "divine presence," God) for false gods who do not profit. 2.12 The heavens are personified as witnesses at Israel's trial. 2.13 Rock-cut cisterns were normally plastered to protect against leakage. 2.14–19 Israel's political apostasy, establishing alliances with Egypt and Assyria, is another example of covenant faithlessness. Unlike a slave or a homeborn servant (i.e., one born to a family as a slave) who is property to be bought and sold, Israel was a nation of slaves liberated by God for responsible freedom within a covenant relationship. Yet this freedom is willingly sacrificed to become a slave of Assyria (lions) and of Egypt. 2.16 Memphis is situated on the west bank of the Nile and about fifteen miles south of Cairo. It was the capital of Egypt during the Old Kingdom (ca. 2700–2200 B.C.E.) and the cultic center of Ptah, a creator deity and patron of skilled crafts (44.1; Isa 19.13; Ezek 30.13; Hos 9.6). While no longer the capital in Jeremiah's day, it was still a politically and religiously important city. Tahpanhes is modern Tell Defenneh, located on Lake Menzaleh in the northeast Delta. King Psammetichus I (664–610 B.C.E.) built a garrison there for Greek mercenaries to defend against the Assyrians. Both cities would have been places where emissaries from Judah would have met with Egyptian officials to discuss alliances against Babylonia. Jewish refugees fled to these cities in the aftermath of the Babylonian invasion of Judah (43.7–9; 44.1). 2.19 Israel is condemned for abandoning the Lord of the exodus for alliances with human kings. 2.20–28 Judah is charged with religious infidelity in worshiping Baal. Graphic images of apostasy include an insatiable whore, an ox that breaks its yoke, a vine that bears strange fruit, a Normally, Asherah (an earth mother goddess) is associated with a tree, while a male deity like Baal is represented by a matzebah (Hebrew term for an upright stone serving as a phallic symbol). Jeremiah sarcastically reverses the sexual imagery.

Unlike the Lord who redeems, the fertility deities are idols created by their worshipers and incapable of saving them (see the idol satires in 10.1-16; Isa 40.18-20; 41.5-7, 21-29; 44.6-20; 46; Pss 115; 135). 2.29-37 Israel's social injustice will lead to its humiliation at the hands of the very nations with whom it sought alliances. 3.1–4.4 Jeremiah's call to repentance is a collection primarily of poetic oracles directing Israel to return to the Lord (i.e., “repent,” Hebrew shuv). The Hebrew word shuv occurs sixteen times in this collection and provides the key theme. The “summons to repentance” occurs four times: 3.12b; 3.14a; 3.22a; 4.1a. 3.1–5 is a continuation of the lawsuit in ch. 2, while the other poetic sections comprise a “call to repentance” (see Am 5.4–7; 14–15; Hos 14.2). The poetic sections include: 3.1–5 (the adulterous wife and the faithless child); 3.12b–13 (the adulterous wife); 3.14, 19–20 (faithless children); 3.21–23 (faithless sons); and 4.1–4 (faithless Israel and Judah exhorted to repent). The poetic call to repentance is addressed to Israel and Judah. It was most likely issued during the early stage of Jeremiah's activity. The contingents of Israelites in Assyrian exile, those remaining in the North after the destruction of Samaria in 722 B.C.E., the Israelite refugees who migrated south to Judah, especially to the western hill in Jerusalem, and Judah are addressed by Jeremiah. Using two metaphors, an unfaithful wife and rebellious children, Jeremiah urges Israel to repent, i.e., return to God, who is both husband and father. Jeremiah's use of these two metaphors follows Hosea. Editors, sometime after the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.E., inserted three prose speeches: 3.6–12a; 3.15–18;

3.24–25. These additions indict false sister Judah (3.7) for being more guilty of religious adultery than Israel, promise a new future with faithful rulers who dwell in a Jerusalem that is the throne of God and the city to which the nations will come, and express hope for the return of a united Israel and Judah from exile in Mesopotamia. 3.1–5 Israel and Judah are presented as both the Lord's faithless wife, who has become a prostitute, and his disobedient child. The lawsuit draws on the legal case of divorce in Deut 24.1–4 and its application in Hos 2. The case in Deuteronomy forbids a man who divorces his wife to remarry her, even if her second husband has died or divorced her. Jeremiah replaces the law in Deut 24.1–4 with two rhetorical questions: will he [the husband] return to her? Would not such a land be greatly polluted? (v. 1). While the Lord has not divorced his people, they have forsaken the marriage by having many lovers (false gods). For Jeremiah divine grace allows a repentant people to return. This sets the stage for the four “summons to repentance” that follow. Immoral actions pollute the land, i.e., desecrate the holiness of the land, which God both gave to Israel and Judah and blesses with divine presence and fertility (see Lev 19.29; Num 35.33–34). Desecration leads to God's withholding the rain. Forehead of a whore may refer to a phylactery or crown of cord worn

6 The LORD said to me in the days of King Josiah: Have you seen what she did, that faithless one, Israel, how she went up on every high hill and under every green tree, and played the whore there? ⁷And I thought, "After she has done all this she will return to me"; but she did not return, and her false sister Judah saw it. ⁸She saw that for all the adulteries of that faithless one, Israel, I had sent her away with a decree of divorce; yet her false sister Judah did not fear, but she too went and played the whore. ⁹Because she took her whoredom so lightly, she polluted the land, committing adultery with stone and tree. ¹⁰Yet for all this her false sister Judah did not return to me with her whole heart, but only in pretense, says the LORD.

11 Then the LORD said to me: Faithless Israel has shown herself less guilty than false Judah. ¹²Go, and proclaim these words toward the north, and say:

Return, faithless Israel,
says the LORD.
I will not look on you in anger,
for I am merciful,

I will not be angry forever.

14 Return, O faithless children,
says the LORD,
for I am your master;
I will take you, one from a city
and two from a family,
and I will bring you to Zion.

15 I will give you shepherds after my own heart, who will feed you with knowledge and understanding. ¹⁶And when you have multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, says the LORD, they shall no longer say, "The ark of the covenant of the LORD." It shall not come to mind, or be remembered, or missed; nor shall another one be made. ¹⁷At that time Jerusalem shall be called the throne of the LORD, and all nations shall gather to it, to the presence of the LORD in Jerusalem, and they shall no longer stubbornly follow their own evil will. ¹⁸In those days the house of Judah shall join the house of Israel, and together they shall come from the land of the north to the land that I gave your ancestors for a heritage.

around the head by cult prostitutes. 3.6–11 A prose commentary on 3.1–5 set in the reign of Josiah. Israel did not return and is divorced by the Lord, i.e., sent into Assyrian exile. False sister Judah did not learn from Israel's experience. She too became a prostitute by following false gods. Judah also did not return. Indeed, Israel was judged less guilty than Judah. This commentary explains the Babylonian exile. 3.8–9 Decree of divorce. See Deut 24.1–4. Adultery with stone and tree. Cf. note on 2.27. 3.12–13 Merciful (Hebrew chasiḏ). The loyalty between two covenant partners includes divine grace as the basis for forgiveness and reconciliation. 3.14, 19–21 A second "summons to repentance," addressed to Israel. The faithful refugees from the former Northern Kingdom will return to Zion as a part of the new people of God. 3.15–18 A prose speech by later editors that comments on v. 14. God was the true shepherd of Israel (Ps 23; Ezek 34). 3.16 The ark of the covenant, a chest that was originally a portable shrine signifying divine presence and considered the throne of God (cf. Ex 25.10–15; Deut 10.8). Originally kept in the "tent of meeting" (2 Sam 6.17), it contained the two tablets of the law (Deut 10.2, 5) and perhaps the sacred lots (Urim and Thummim, Judg 20.27; 1 Sam 14.17–18). David brought the ark to Jerusalem, signifying the unification of the Northern and Southern kingdoms (2 Sam 6), and Solomon placed it in the Holy of Holies of the new temple (1 Kings 8.4–7). Here it was considered a throne, guarded by two cherubim (2 Kings 19.15). The ark was captured or destroyed by the Babylonians in 587 B.C.E. 3.22–23 The third "summons to repentance," also addressed to Israel. Hills and mountains were important locations for shrines and temples. These sacred sites are sometimes identified as "high places" (Hebrew bamot; see 1 Kings 3.2; 2 Kings 12.4). Orgies refers to fertility rites involving sacred prostitution, a central feature of Canaanite religion. Fertility rites were believed to secure the fecundity of flocks and people, as well as bountiful crops. 3.24–25 A third editorial addition that places a liturgical confession of sin in the mouth of the exilic or postexilic community. It comprises a ritual response to the prophetic "summons to repentance." 4.1–4 The final poem in the section 3.1–4.4 is also a "summons to repentance," though shaped as a conditional clause (if you return . . .) to conform to the opening line of the unit (3.1, if a man . . .). This provides an inclusio for the entire section. 4.1 Abominations refers primarily to idols and practices associated with idol worship (7.30; 13.27; 16.18; Deut 29.17). 4.2 Swear refers to oaths that either began with or implied as the LORD lives. The Lord is thus the guarantor of the oath, and lies or broken oaths would be punished. This oath probably refers to ritual swearing during occasions of covenant renewal (Gen 26.28). Oaths are sacred words of promise, and to violate them is to take God's name in vain (Ex 20.7; Lev 19.12). Blessed also refers to sacred language. A blessing is a ritual pronouncement, usually by God through a priest, that effectuates good fortune or well-being for the recipient. This may include life, health, longevity, children, fertility, prosperity, and/or peace. Both swearing and blessing are power-laden forms of language; they enact the content of the words they contain. 4.3a A prose insertion specifying, at least in the mind of the editor, the recipient of the last "summons." 4.4 Circumcise, to ritually remove the foreskin of the penis, an action signifying a male's membership in the covenant community (Gen 17.9–27; Lev 12.1–5). Here circumcision is used metaphorically to describe repentance and submission of the human will to divine purpose.

4.5–10.25 A collection of oracular poems of Jeremiah with the theme of the “foe from the north” comprises the majority of materials in chs. 4–10. These oracles consist mainly of prophecies of judgment containing the following features: commission/appeal for attention (e.g., 5.20–21), indication of the situation (often introduced by “Thus says the LORD”; e.g., 5.22–28), prediction of disaster (e.g., 5.29), and concluding characterization (5.30–31). These poetic prophecies of judgment were probably delivered in the early stage of Jeremiah’s prophetic career, prior to his coming to Jerusalem in 609 B.C.E. They are addressed to both Israel and Judah, partially reunited during the reign of Josiah. The identification of the foe is not clear from the poetry itself. The prose identifies the foe as Babylonia (25.8–14). The collection dealing with the “foe from the north” consists of eleven sections: 4.5–31; 5.1–9; 5.10–17; 5.20–31; 6.1–8; 6.9–15; 6.16–30; 8.4–13; 8.14–9.11; 9.17–22; 10.17–25. Edited during the exile (after 587 B.C.E.) and following it (after 539 B.C.E.), the following prose speeches were inserted: 4.27; 5.18–19; 7.1–8.3; 9.12–16; 9.23–26. These additions indicate that the destruction by the “foe from the north” will not be total, that the failure to be faithful to the Mosaic covenant led to the destruction of the Jerusalem temple and the Babylonian exile, and that the uncircumcised foreign nations and Jews uncircumcised in the heart will be punished.

4.5–31 The invasion from the north threatened. This section is addressed to Judah and Jerusalem. God is sending an unidentified enemy to invade and devastate the Southern Kingdom. There will be mass destruction, likened to the end of the world. Three oracles of judgment, plus two interludes, are woven together into a literary masterpiece: first prophecy of judgment (4.5–8), first interlude (4.9–12), second prophecy of judgment (4.13–18), second interlude (4.19–26), and third prophecy of judgment (4.28–31). The inclusio (a repetition signaling the beginning and end of a unit) for the section is Jerusalem/Zion in vv. 5–6 and Zion in v. 31. 4.5–8 This speech describes the sounding of the alarm to signal people in the countryside and unfortified villages to take refuge in Zion, because of an approaching invader. 4.8 Put on sackcloth, lament and wail, a ritual of lamentation designed to arouse the Lord to defend his city (see Pss 44; 60; 74; 79; 80; 83; 89; 123; 129). 4.9–12 First interlude. The prophet’s anguish over the invasion is expressed in vv. 9–10 (the leaders are appalled and . . . astounded over the invasion, and the prophet objects). Ah, Lord God. See note on 1.6. The prophet accuses God of deception by promising peace but then bringing destruction (see 1 Kings 22).

- 13 Look! He comes up like clouds, his chariots like the whirlwind;
his horses are swifter than eagles—
woe to us, for we are ruined!
- 14 O Jerusalem, wash your heart clean of wickedness
so that you may be saved.
How long shall your evil schemes lodge within you?
- 15 For a voice declares from Dan and proclaims disaster from Mount Ephraim.
- 16 Tell the nations, "Here they are!"
Proclaim against Jerusalem,
"Besiegers come from a distant
land;
they shout against the cities of Judah."
- 17 They have closed in around her like watchers of a field, because she has rebelled
against me,
says the LORD.
- 18 Your ways and your doings have brought this upon you.
This is your doom; how bitter it is!
It has reached your very heart."

Sorrow for a Doomed Nation

- 19 My anguish, my anguish! I writhe in pain!
Oh, the walls of my heart!
My heart is beating wildly;
I cannot keep silent;
for I^m hear the sound of the trumpet,
the alarm of war.
- 20 Disaster overtakes disaster,
the whole land is laid waste.
Suddenly my tents are destroyed,
my curtains in a moment.

- 21 How long must I see the standard,
and hear the sound of the
trumpet?
- 22 "For my people are foolish,
they do not know me;
they are stupid children,
they have no understanding.
They are skilled in doing evil,
but do not know how to do good."
- 23 I looked on the earth, and lo, it was waste and void;
and to the heavens, and they had no light.
- 24 I looked on the mountains, and lo, they were quaking,
and all the hills moved to
and fro.
- 25 I looked, and lo, there was no one at all,
and all the birds of the air
had fled.
- 26 I looked, and lo, the fruitful land
was a desert,
and all its cities were laid in
ruins
before the LORD, before his fierce anger.
- 27 For thus says the LORD: The whole land shall be a desolation; yet I will not make a full end.
- 28 Because of this the earth shall mourn,
and the heavens above grow black;
for I have spoken, I have purposed;
I have not relented nor will I
turn back.

m Another reading is for you, O my soul,

4.13–18 Second prophecy of judgment. The enemy lays siege to Jerusalem, and Jeremiah urges its inhabitants to repent and engage in lamentation (v. 14). 4.19–26 The anguish of God is experienced by the prophet who sees the holocaust rendered by the invaders (vv. 19–22). Vv. 23–26 contain a macabre poem depicting the results of the invasion as the return of chaos (i.e., the state of reality prior to creation). The strong literary allusions to Gen 1.1–2.4a (the first creation account) point to a reversal of creation. While hyperbolic, the poem indicates that the devastation of war is like the end of the world and a return to primordial nothingness. 4.27 A later prose insertion promising the devastation will not be total. 4.28–31 The final prophecy of judgment in the larger poem describes the lamentation of earth and the heavens, the two spheres of creation (see Gen 1.1; 2.1, 4), the destruction of the nation, and the failure of Zion, personified as a woman, to escape death. Zion (Jerusalem) takes on the appearance of a prostitute to offer herself to the invaders to avoid death, but to no avail (see 3.2–3; Jezebel in 2 Kings 9.30–37).

- 29 At the noise of horseman and archer every town takes to flight;
they enter thickets; they climb among rocks;
all the towns are forsaken,
and no one lives in them.
- 30 And you, O desolate one, what do you mean that you dress
in crimson,
that you deck yourself with ornaments of gold,
that you enlarge your eyes with paint?
In vain you beautify yourself.
Your lovers despise you;
they seek your life.
- 31 For I heard a cry as of a woman
in labor,
anguish as of one bringing forth her first child,
the cry of daughter Zion gasping for breath,
stretching out her hands, “Woe is me! I am fainting before killers!”

The Sinfulness of God's People

Search its squares and see if you can find one person who acts justly
and seeks truth—
so that I may pardon Jerusalem.ⁿ
- 2 Although they say, “As the LORD lives,”
yet they swear falsely.
- 3 O LORD, do your eyes not look for truth?
You have struck them,
but they felt no anguish;
you have consumed them, but they refused to take correction.
They have made their faces harder than rock;
they have refused to turn back.

- 4 Then I said, “These are only
the poor,
they have no sense;
for they do not know the way of
the LORD,
the law of their God.
- 5 Let me go to the rich^o
and speak to them;
surely they know the way of
the LORD,
the law of their God.”
But they all alike had broken
the yoke,
they had burst the bonds.
- 6 Therefore a lion from the forest shall kill them,
a wolf from the desert shall destroy them.
A leopard is watching against their cities;
everyone who goes out of them shall be torn in pieces—because their transgressions are many,
their apostasies are great.
- 7 How can I pardon you?
Your children have
forsaken me,
and have sworn by those who are no gods.
When I fed them to the full,
they committed adultery and trooped to the houses of prostitutes.
- 8 They were well-fed lusty stallions, each neighing for his neighbor's wife.
- 9 Shall I not punish them for these
things?
says the LORD;
and shall I not bring retribution
on a nation such as this?

the cities and countryside of Israel and Judah for being unfaithful to the covenant. 5.13 The prophets are nothing but wind is a play on the Hebrew word ruach ("spirit," "wind," "breath"). One of the forms of prophetic inspiration is the "spirit" or "breath" of God (see Num 27.18; 2 Kings 2.15; Isa 29.10). Jeremiah, in effect, calls the false prophets "windbags" or "full of hot air." 5.18–19 A prose speech inserted by a later editor that, while promising that destruction is not to be total, still explains the invasion as punishment for unfaithfulness to God. 5.20–31 A prophecy of judgment against Israel (house of Jacob, v. 20) and Judah. God's power as creator to still the powers of chaos and to bring fertility to the land does not inspire fear and covenantal obedience in the people. 5.22 The sea (Hebrew yam) is often personified as chaos or its ruler (Prince Yam). In Canaanite mythology Prince Yam was the nemesis of Baal, the god of fertility, with whom he contended for rulership of the earth. Chaos is a destructive power that threatens the order of creation (see Job 38.8–11; Ps 74.12–14), but one that is limited here by the Lord.

in the form of suffering, death, and exile. 6.16–30 Forsaking the ancient paths. The ancient paths (v. 16) are the covenant of Moses and its laws, which were to guide the religious and moral lives of the people. In this prophecy of judgment against Zion (Jerusalem), the people have disobeyed the covenant and not given heed to the warnings of the prophets (sentinels, v. 17). The fierce enemy from the north will destroy all (parents and children . . . neighbor and friend, v. 21) without distinction and without mercy. 6.20 Sacrifices and gifts do not appease God's wrath (see Hos 9.4). Frankincense is a fragrant gum resin from the Boswellia tree, which grows in southern Arabia, northeastern Africa, and India. It was imported into Israel by caravans from Sheba (a country in southwest Arabia; see 1 Kings 10.1–13; Isa 60.6; Ezek 27.22–23) and was used as perfume (Song 3.6; 4.6, 14) and ritual incense (Ex 30.34–38). Sweet cane, also known as calamus, could refer to several varieties of cane or grasses yielding sweet-scented and volatile oils. It was used in holy anointing oil (Ex 30.23). Burnt offerings and sacrifices cover the array of animal sacrifices connected with the temple. Animals offered as burnt offerings were totally consumed by fire on the altar, while the edible parts of sacrifices were to be eaten by the worshipers. Acceptable refers to the Lord's willingness to receive the offering and the spirit with which it is given. The sacrificial laws in Leviticus specify the type and condition of acceptable animals (see Lev 1–7).

6.26 Rites of lamentation do not avail.
6.27–30 Jeremiah is a tester and a refiner who, like a metalsmith, examines the metal or religious character of the people and discards them like rejected silver, i.e., metal not containing enough silver to use for jewelry and decorations (see Job 23.10; Zech 13.9).

7.1–8.3 This section comprises a series of prose speeches written by editors: the temple sermon (7.1–15), Jeremiah's intercession forbidden by God, (7.16–20), disobedience and rejection of sacrificial ritual (7.21–28), the fate of Judah and the disinterment of the faithless dead (7.29–8.3). These speeches were written during the exilic or postexilic period to explain that illicit worship and disobedience to the Mosaic covenant were the reasons for the exile. The theme of illicit worship continues in 10.1–16, a poetic polemic against idol worship. 7.1–15 The temple sermon (an abbreviated version appears in 26.1–6). Although

26.1 places the sermon in the accession year of King Jehoiakim (609 B.C.E.), shortly after the death of Josiah, the sermon we have was most likely written later, during or after the exile. However, it is probable that Jeremiah delivered an oracle of judgment against the temple and that the content of the prose sermon reflects his own views. Josiah's death marked both the end of Judah's political ambitions for self-determination and the religious reform. Neco II's victory over Judah's army at Megiddo and the death of Josiah in 609 B.C.E. led to Egyptian control of Israel, until the defeat of Egypt by the Babylonians at the battle of Carchemish in 605 B.C.E. Israel and Judah were soon incorporated into the Babylonian Empire. The son who succeeded Josiah to the throne, Jehoahaz, only ruled for three months. Neco II took him to Egypt and placed on the throne Jehoiakim, another son of Josiah. Jehoiakim received neither the endorsement of the LORD, all you people of Judah, you that enter these gates to worship the LORD. ³Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Amend your ways and your doings, and let me dwell with you^x in this place. ⁴Do not trust in these deceptive words: "This is^y the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD."

⁵ For if you truly amend your ways and your doings, if you truly act justly one with another, ⁶if you do not oppress the alien, the orphan, and the widow, or shed innocent blood in this place, and if you do not go after other gods to your own hurt, ⁷then I will dwell with you in this place, in the land that I gave of old to your ancestors forever and ever.

⁸ Here you are, trusting in deceptive words to no avail. ⁹Will you steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsely, make offerings to Baal, and go after other gods that you have not known, ¹⁰and then come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, "We are safe!"—only to go on doing all these abominations? ¹¹Has this house, which is

You know, I too am watching, says the LORD. ¹²Go now to my place that was in Shiloh, where I made my name dwell at first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel. ¹³And now, because you have done all these things, says the LORD, and when I spoke to you persistently, you did not listen, and when I called you, you did not answer, ¹⁴therefore I will do to the house that is called by my name, in which you trust, and to the place that I gave to you and to your ancestors, just what I did to Shiloh. ¹⁵And I will cast you out of my sight, just as I cast out all your kinsfolk, all the offspring of Ephraim.

¹⁶ As for you, do not pray for this people, do not raise a cry or prayer on their behalf, and do not intercede with me, for I will not hear you. ¹⁷Do you not see what they are doing in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? ¹⁸The children gather wood, the fathers kindle fire, and the women knead dough, elders of the land nor prophetic anointing. With the death of Josiah and the end of the dreams for national destiny, the people of Judah make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem to celebrate a festival, possibly the Festival of Booths (Tabernacles, September–October), an eight-day festival that gave thanks for the autumn harvest and recalled God's guidance of Israel during the wilderness wanderings (Lev 23.39–43). This festival was also the time when Solomon's temple was dedicated (1 Kings 8). Every seven years the Torah was read publicly during this festival (Deut 31.10–11). Jeremiah's sermon (7.1–15) consists of the following parts: introduction (vv. 1–2), first admonition (vv. 3–4), second admonition (vv. 5–8), two rhetorical questions (vv. 9–11), and threat (vv. 12–15). 7.2 Gate of the LORD's house, gate of the Jerusalem temple. 7.3 The Hebrew may be read two ways: let me dwell with you in this place (i.e., divine presence in the temple), or I will let you dwell in this place (i.e., not go into exile). 7.4 Deceptive words (Hebrew sheqer, "lie, falsehood"). Repeated three times for emphasis, the temple of the LORD is rejected as a false basis of security, grounded in the belief that God will defend Zion against its enemies (see Pss 46; 48; 76; Isa 31.4–5). 7.5 Repentance (returning to the Mosaic covenant), not the temple and its worship, is the one hope for divine presence and the people's continued dwelling in Judah. 7.6 The alien, the orphan, and the widow. See Deut 10.18–19; 24.17–22; 27.19. The alien is a resident foreigner, while the orphan is one who is fatherless. In Deuteronomy, Judah's responsibility for the destitute is linked with God's merciful deliverance of Israelite slaves in Egypt at the time of the exodus. 7.9 Five of the Ten Commandments (Ex 20.1–17; Deut 5.6–21) are mentioned. Although other law codes were eventually added, the Ten Commandments were the primary religious and moral requirements for keeping the Mosaic covenant. 7.11 Den of robbers. See Mt 21.13. 7.12–15 Shiloh, eighteen miles north of Jerusalem, is Khirbet Seilun. The seat of the Levitical priesthood and the location of an important sanctuary (Josh 21.1–2; 1 Sam 1.3, 9), the town was a major religious center during the period of the judges (twelfth century B.C.E.). It was destroyed, probably by the Philistines, in the eleventh century B.C.E. (see Jer 26.6–9). Jeremiah's threat of destruction and exile parallels that of Micah in the eighth century B.C.E. (see Mic 3.9–12). 7.15 Offspring of Ephraim, the Northern Kingdom, which fell to the Assyrians in the eighth century B.C.E. 7.16–20 Jeremiah is forbidden to intercede to save the nation. Intercession is a primary function of the prophetic office (see 11.14; 15.1; Am 7–9). 7.18 The queen of heaven (see 44.15–30) is the Assyro-Babylonian goddess Ishtar, an astral deity associated with Venus. She was a goddess to make cakes for the queen of heaven; and they pour out drink offerings to other gods, to provoke me to anger. ¹⁹Is it I whom they provoke? says the LORD. Is it not themselves, to their own hurt? ²⁰Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: My anger and my wrath shall be poured out on this place, on human beings and animals, on the trees of the field and the fruit of the ground; it will burn and not be quenched.

²¹ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Add your burnt offerings to your sacrifices, and eat the flesh. ²²For in the day that I brought your ancestors out of the land of Egypt, I did not speak to them or command them concerning burnt offerings and sacrifices. ²³But this command I gave them, "Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and you shall be my people; and walk only in the way that I command you, so that it may be well with you." ²⁴Yet they did not obey or incline their ear, but, in the stubbornness of their evil will, they walked in their own counsels, and looked backward rather than forward. ²⁵From the day that your ancestors came out of the land of Egypt until this day, I have persistently sent all my servants the prophets to them, day after day; ²⁶yet they did not listen to me, or pay attention, but they stiffened their necks. They did worse than their ancestors did.

²⁷ So you shall speak all these words to them, but they will not listen to you. You shall call to them, but they will not answer you. ²⁸You shall say to them: This is the nation that did not obey the voice of the LORD their God, and did not accept discipline; truth has perished; it is cut off from their lips.

²⁹ Cut off your hair and throw it away;
raise a lamentation on the bare heights,^z for the LORD has rejected and forsaken the generation that provoked his wrath.

³⁰ For the people of Judah have done evil in my sight, says the LORD; they have set their abominations in the house that is called by my name, defiling it. ³¹And they go on building the high place^a of Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire—which I did not command, nor did it come into my mind. ³²Therefore, the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when it will no more be called Topheth, or the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of Slaughter: for they will bury in Topheth until there is no more room. ³³The corpses of this people will be food for the birds of the air, and for the animals of the earth; and no one will frighten them away. ³⁴And I will bring to an end the sound of mirth and gladness, the voice of the bride and bridegroom in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; for the land shall become a waste.

8 At that time, says the LORD, the bones of the kings of Judah, the bones of its officials, the bones of the priests, the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be brought out of their tombs; ²and of both war and fertility. 7.21–28 Obedience, including moral behavior, not sacrifice, is the basis for the covenantal relationship with God. 7.21 Eating the flesh of burnt offerings was forbidden by ritual law, for the flesh was to be burned and thus reserved for God (Lev 1). 7.25 My servants the prophets suggests the image of a king sending his couriers and emissaries to announce royal proclamations (see 23.1; 25.4). God has sought to address the covenant people with a long series of emissaries, but to no avail. 7.29–8.3 A prose sermon on the fate of Judah and the disinterment of its leaders. 7.29 An earlier poetic fragment from Jeremiah, embedded within the prose. Cut off your hair, part of the ritual of lamentation (16.6; Mic 1.16). 7.31 Topheth (from an

Aramaic word meaning "fireplace") was pronounced with the vowels of the word "shame" in Hebrew. This cultic place for child sacrifice was located in the valley of the son of Hinnom (Gehenna), just west and south of the walls of Jerusalem. The valley received notoriety for being the site of idolatrous practices, including child sacrifice (2 Chr 28.3; 33.6). The law requiring the giving of the firstborn to God (Ex 22.29–30) may have been interpreted to mean child sacrifice, a view Jeremiah counters (see Lev 18.21). 7.32 Valley of Slaughter, lit. "valley of murder". 8.2 The sun . . . moon and . . . host of heaven are astral deities (Deut 4.19; 17.3; 2 Kings 23.5). In Assyrian practice, corpses of leaders were disinterred when a vassal violated a treaty (see 2 Kings they shall be spread before the sun and the moon and all the host of heaven, which they have loved and served, which they have followed, and which they have inquired of and worshiped; and they shall not be gathered or buried; they shall be like dung on the surface of the ground. ³Death shall be preferred to life by all the remnant that remains of this evil family in all the places where I have driven them, says the LORD of hosts.

Judgment from the North

- 4 You shall say to them, Thus says the LORD:
When people fall, do they not get up again?
If they go astray, do they not turn back?
5 Why then has this people^b turned away in perpetual backsliding?
They have held fast to deceit,
they have refused to return.
6 I have given heed and listened,
but they do not speak honestly;
no one repents of wickedness, saying, "What have I done!"
All of them turn to their own course, like a horse plunging headlong into battle.
7 Even the stork in the heavens knows its times;
and the turtledove, swallow, and crane^c

but my people do not know the ordinance of the LORD.

- 8 How can you say, "We are wise, and the law of the LORD is with us," when, in fact, the false pen of the scribes has made it into a lie?
9 The wise shall be put to shame, they shall be dismayed and taken;
since they have rejected the word of the LORD,
what wisdom is in them?
10 Therefore I will give their wives to others and their fields to conquerors, because from the least to the greatest everyone is greedy for unjust gain; from prophet to priest
everyone deals falsely.
11 They have treated the wound of my people carelessly, saying, "Peace, peace,"
when there is no peace.
12 They acted shamefully, they committed abomination;
yet they were not at all ashamed,

8.4–10.25 These chapters return to the theme of the "foe from the north" (see 4.5–6.30). This section contains the following poetic oracles of judgment: 8.4–13; 8.14–9.11; 9.17–22; 10.17–25. Later prose additions include 9.12–16; 9.23–26. Inserted within these chapters is a diatribe against idol worship (10.1–16) with a prose addition (10.11). See 7.1–8.3. 8.4–13 An oracle of judgment consisting of two parts: an indictment of the people for their refusal to repent (vv. 4–7) and a diatribe against the religious leaders (scribes, prophets, and priests, vv. 8–13). 8.4–6 The Hebrew root shuv meaning "repent" or "turn" occurs six times in these verses: go astray, turn back, turned away, backsliding, return, turn. Repents in v. 6 is translated from a different Hebrew word (nicham). See ch. 3. 8.7 Birds instinctively know and act in accord with the natural order, but the people do not know God's revealed order of justice. 8.8–13 Prophetic "word" (revealed through the prophet's encounter with God) conflicts with written law, if the latter is corrupted and misinterpreted. The wise are scribes who served two institutions, the royal court and the temple. Temple scribes wrote religious legislation, interpreted priestly law, and taught the nation God's Torah. Royal sages formulated civil legislation, served in legal settings as judges and lawyers, gave advice to kings and other high officials, and administered the kingdom. The "wise" were often in conflict with prophets over the proper discernment and source of the divine will (see 18.18; Isa 3.1–4; 30.1–5; 31.1–3; Ob 8). Wisdom is the ability to discern God's righteous order and to teach people and the king how to act in conformity with that order. 8.14–9.26 This lengthy poem is fashioned out of several prophetic speeches: 8.14–17 (the people's resignation to divine destruction and the approach of the “foe”); 8.18–9.3 (an interlude describing Jeremiah's and God's anguish over the coming destruction); 9.4–9 (an indictment of the neighbor's deceit); 9.10–22 (three admonitions to lament over imminent destruction). Two prose additions are inserted in 9.12–16; 9.23–26. The first blames the destruction on disobedience to God's law. The second reassures the exiles of God's covenant love (Hebrew chesed) and justice and promises future

Israel and Judah Have Broken the Covenant

11 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ²Hear the words of this covenant, and speak to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ³You shall say to them, Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Cursed be anyone who does not heed the words of this covenant, ⁴which I commanded your ancestors when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, from the iron-smelter, saying, Listen to my voice, and do all that I command you. So shall you be my people, and I will be your God, ⁵that I may perform the oath that I swore to your ancestors, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as at this day. Then I answered, "So be it, LORD."

6 And the LORD said to me: Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: Hear the words of this covenant and do them. ⁷For I solemnly warned your ancestors when I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, warning them persistently, even to this day, saying, Obey my voice. ⁸Yet they did not obey or incline their ear, but everyone walked in the stubbornness of an evil will. So I brought upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do, but they did not.

9 And the LORD said to me: Conspiracy exists among the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ¹⁰They have turned back to the iniquities of their ancestors of old, who refused to heed my words; they have gone after other gods to serve them; the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken the covenant that I made with their ancestors. ¹¹Therefore, thus says the LORD, assuredly I am going to bring disaster upon them that they cannot escape; though they cry out to me, I will not listen to them. ¹²Then the cities of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods to whom they make offerings, but they will never save them in the time of their trouble. ¹³For your gods have become as many as your towns, O Judah; and as many as the streets of Jerusalem are the altars to shame you have set up, altars to make offerings to Baal.

14 As for you, do not pray for this people, or lift up a cry or prayer on their behalf, for I will not listen when they call to me in the time of their trouble. ¹⁵What right has my beloved in my house, when she has done vile deeds? Can vows^r and sacrificial flesh avert your doom? Can you then exult? ¹⁶The LORD once called you, "A green olive tree, fair with goodly fruit"; but with the roar of a great tempest he will set fire to it, and its branches will be consumed. ¹⁷The LORD of hosts, who lations necessary for maintaining the covenantal relationship (heed the words of this covenant, v. 3); curses for violating the covenant (vv. 3, 8–13); blessings for keeping trust; and witnesses (Jeremiah serves as witness: "So be it, LORD," v. 5). 11.3 See Deut 27.26. 11.4 See Deut 4.20. 11.5 That I may perform the oath . . . ancestors. Deut 2.30; 4.20, 38; 6.24; 8.18; 10.15; 29.28. 11.14 Jeremiah is not allowed to intercede for Judah to avert divine judgment (see 7.16; 14.11; Ex 32.30–32). 11.15 Sacrificial flesh. 11.18–20.18 The laments of Jeremiah, the Lord, and the people. These chapters consist of various types of materials in both poetry and prose: laments, judgment oracles, biographical narratives, and oracles of salvation. However, dominating chs. 11–20 are the laments by Jeremiah, the Lord, and the people of Judah and Jerusalem. Jeremiah utters seven laments: 11.18–23; 12.1–6; 15.10–21; 17.14–18; 18.18–23; 20.7–13; 20.14–18. The usual structure consists of two parts: the prophet's complaint and the Lord's response. A fragment of a lament describes the conversion of pagan nations in 16.19–21. Parts of two thanksgiving psalms, often found as a response to laments, are inserted in 17.12–13; 20.13. Two laments are attributed to the Lord (12.7–13; 14.17–18) and two others to the people of Jerusalem (14.1–10; 14.19–22). In two prose additions, Jeremiah is told to cease intercession, i.e., to stop offering a lament on behalf of the people in the effort to divert punishment for their sin (14.11–12; 16.1–13). Another prose addition indicates that even if Moses and Samuel, two of Israel's greatest prophets, were to intercede, punishment would not be avoided (15.1–4). Common in the Psalter (e.g., Pss 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 9–10) and the book of Job, laments contain all or at least some of the following elements: invocation (call to God and initial pleas), complaint (description of suffering, reproachful questions), plea for help, condemnation of or imprecation against enemies, affirmation of confidence, confession of sins, acknowledgment of divine response, and hymnic elements (praise of God, blessings). Laments are often followed by thanksgiving psalms in which the worshiper praises and gives thanks to God for salvation (e.g., Pss 18; 21; 32; 34). The laments attributed to Jeremiah provide a unique look at the prophet's inner struggle with faith, persecution, and human suffering. If they are Jeremiah's own words, the laments could be placed in any period of his life. These laments interact with various judgment oracles, in both poetry and prose, which figure prominently in these chapters: 13.1–11, 12–14; 13.15–17, 18–19, 20–27; 14.13–16; 15.1–4; 15.5–9; 16.16–18, 21; 17.1–4. The setting presupposed by the judgment oracles is the siege of Jerusalem and the imminent exile, either in 597 or in 587 B.C.E. Biographical narratives also appear for the first time, to illustrate graphically the reasons for the laments and the reality of judgment and salvation: the potter and the clay (18.1–12), the broken earthenware jug (19.1–15), and persecution of Jeremiah by Pashhur the priest (20.1–6). Also present in the form of prose speeches (12.14–17; 16.14–15) is the promise of salvation, similar to the ones found in the Book of Consolation in chs. 30–31. Finally, a conditional, "either-or" prose sermon offers judgment or salvation depending on whether the sabbath is honored (17.19–27).

11.18–23 The plot against Jeremiah's life. The first lament of Jeremiah consists of a poetic complaint (11.18–20) and a prose response (11.21–23). In the complaint, Jeremiah indicates he is the innocent, unwitting target (gentle lamb, v. 19) of a plot against his life. As is common to laments in general and Jeremiah's own complaints, the prophet seeks God's protection and asks for divine retribution against the would-be evildoers. 11.19 To have one's (good) name . . . remembered was greatly desired. Survival by means of memory was greatly coveted, for this, along with children, were the two major means of life beyond death in ancient Israel (see Gen 12.2; Eccl 2.16; 7.1). A belief in resurrection did not clearly develop in Judaism until the second century B.C.E. (see Dan 12.2). 11.20 The request for punishment of enemies is common in laments (e.g., Pss 3.7; 7.6). 11.21–23 The enemies of Jeremiah are identified in a prose addition as the people of cerning the people of Anathoth, who seek your life, and say, "You shall not prophesy in the name of the LORD, or you will die by our hand" — ²²therefore thus says the LORD of hosts: I am going to punish them; the young men shall die by the sword; their sons and their daughters shall die by famine; ²³and not even a remnant shall be left of them. For I will bring disaster upon the people of Anathoth, the year of their punishment.

Jeremiah Complains to God

- 12 You will be in the right,
O LORD,
when I lay charges against you;
but let me put my case to you.
Why does the way of the guilty prosper?
Why do all who are treacherous thrive?
- 2 You plant them, and they take root;
they grow and bring forth fruit;
you are near in their mouths
yet far from their hearts.
- 3 But you, O LORD, know me;
You see me and test me — my heart is with you.
Pull them out like sheep for the
slaughter,
and set them apart for the day
of slaughter.
- 4 How long will the land mourn, and the grass of every field
wither?
For the wickedness of those who live in it
the animals and the birds are swept away,
and because people said, "He is blind to our ways."^s foot-runners and they have wearied you,

how will you compete with horses?
And if in a safe land you fall
down,
how will you fare in the thickets of the Jordan?
- 6 For even your kinsfolk and your even they have dealt treacherously with you;

they are in full cry after you;
do not believe them,
though they speak friendly words to you.

Anathoth, i.e., his own family and neighbors. The reason for their persecution of Jeremiah is unclear.

12.1–6 Jeremiah's second lament (see note on 11.18–23), the question of divine justice. In his complaint (vv. 1–4), Jeremiah accuses God of injustice: it is God who supports the wicked. 12.1–2 Put my case reflects the law court in which Jeremiah brings charges against God, who serves as judge. The theory of retribution, in which the righteous are rewarded and the wicked are punished, is questioned by the prophet. 12.5–6 God's response is a warning that the present persecution of the prophet is only going to intensify.

12.7–13 The lament pictures God weeping over the destruction of Judah by invading enemies. The Lord, having abandoned his people, is the one who gives victory to the invaders. 12.7 My house may refer either to the nation of Judah (Hos 9.15) or the temple (Jer 7.10).

Judgment Against Judah's Neighbors

14 Thus says the LORD concerning all my evil neighbors who touch the heritage that I have given my people Israel to inherit: I am about to pluck them up from their land, and I will pluck up the house of Judah from among them. ¹⁵And after I have plucked them up, I will again have compassion on them, and I will bring them again to their heritage and to their land, everyone of them. ¹⁶And then, if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, "As the LORD lives," as they taught my people to swear by Baal, then they shall be built up in the midst of my people. ¹⁷But if any nation will not listen, then I will completely uproot it and destroy it, says the LORD.

The Linen Loincloth

13 Thus said the LORD to me, "Go and buy yourself a linen loin-cloth, and put it on your loins, but do not dip it in water." ²So I bought a loin-cloth according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins. ³And the word of the LORD came to me a second time, saying, ⁴"Take the loin-cloth that you bought and are wearing, and go now to the Euphrates,^w and hide it there in a cleft of the rock." ⁵So I went, and hid it by the Euphrates,^x as the LORD commanded me. ⁶And after many days the LORD said to me, "Go now to the Euphrates,^w and take from there the loin-cloth that I commanded you to hide there." ⁷Then I went to the Euphrates,^w and dug, and I took the loin-cloth from the place where I had hidden it. But now the loin-cloth was ruined; it was good for nothing.

⁸ Then the word of the LORD came to me: ⁹Thus says the LORD: Just so I will ruin the pride of Judah and the great pride of Jerusalem. ¹⁰This evil people, who refuse to hear my words, who stubbornly follow their own will and have gone after other gods to serve them and worship them, shall be like this loin-cloth, which is good for nothing. ¹¹For as the loin-cloth clings to one's loins, so I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah cling to me, says the LORD, in order that they might be for me

12.14–17 Judgment against Judah's neighbors, a prose oracle of salvation added during the exile. Judah's neighbors may escape God's future judgment at the conclusion of the exile only if they are converted to the worship of Yahweh. Common to oracles of salvation is the promise of the punishment of enemies (see 30.10–11).

13.1–11 The linen loin-cloth. This prose narrative recounts a symbolic action by Jeremiah. A symbolic action graphically illustrates the message of a prophet (see chs. 19; 32). The structure involves three parts: the prophet is commanded by God to perform a symbolic act, the narrative reports the act was carried out, and an explanation of the act is given. A loin-cloth was an undergarment covering the middle of the body. Linen was used for various types of clothing, sheets, curtains, and burial shrouds. All garments worn by priests were made of linen (Lev 16.4). 13.4 The Euphrates and the Tigris were the two major rivers that coursed through Babylonia. That Jeremiah actually twice made such a long journey of some four hundred miles is doubtful. Some scholars suggest the alternative of Parah, modern Khirbet Farah, about five miles northeast of Jerusalem. A more likely possibility is that the journey, like the larger narrative, is a symbolic action, not to be taken literally. 13.7 That the loin-cloth was ruined points to Israel's and Judah's corruption by their stubborn sinfulness.

Symbol of the Wine-Jars

12 You shall speak to them this word:
Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel:
Every wine-jar should be filled with wine.
And they will say to you, "Do you think we do not know that every wine-jar should be filled with wine?" 13 Then you shall say to them: Thus says the LORD: I am about to fill all the inhabitants of this land—the kings who sit on David's throne, the priests, the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem—with drunkenness.
14 And I will dash them one against another, parents and children together, says the LORD. I will not pity or spare or have compassion when I destroy them.

Exile Threatened

haughty,
for the LORD has spoken.
16 Give glory to the LORD your God before he brings darkness, and before your feet stumble on the mountains at twilight;

while you look for light,
he turns it into gloom
and makes it deep darkness.

my soul will weep in secret for your pride;
my eyes will weep bitterly and
run down with tears,
because the LORD's flock has been taken captive.

^y Gk Syr Vg: Meaning of Heb uncertain

13.12–14 The symbol of the wine-jars. A prose speech, this oracle of judgment is issued against the leaders of Judah: kings, priests, and prophets, and against the citizens of Jerusalem. Quoting a popular proverb, every wine-jar should be filled with wine (v. 12), the speech is similar to the preceding narrative. Either the wine-jar filled with wine symbolizes a complacency that is expressed in the belief there will always be plenty or the saying is a truism: wine-jars are made to hold wine. 13.13 The leaders and the inhabitants of Jerusalem will be filled with wine and become drunk, an image that suggests both a condition of stupor that prohibits wise decisions and a "cup of wrath" from which the leaders and people of Jerusalem will be made to drink (see 25.15–29).

13.15–27 These verses make up three poetic oracles shaped into a larger poem that describes the tragedy of exile. Two periods are plausible: the time just prior to the exile in 597 B.C.E. or that prior to the exile of 587 B.C.E. The first oracle calls for repentance (vv. 15–17); the second is a judgment speech addressing the king and queen mother, who have lost their positions (vv. 18–19); and the third is a lawsuit that attributes the ravages of exile to religious apostasy (vv. 20–27). 13.16 Give glory to the Lord refers to a doxology, i.e., a word of praise to God in which a person found guilty of a crime acknowledges the judgment is fair (see Josh 7.16–21; 2 Chr 30.8). Guilty Judah, threatened with exile unless there is full-scale repentance, is exhorted to utter a doxology. Darkness, twilight, gloom, and deep darkness, images of primordial chaos used to describe the devastation of impending doom (see Gen 1.2; Job 3). 13.17 The theme of lament returns as Jeremiah anticipates weeping over the captivity of the nation. 13.18 The queen mother was the mother of the ruling king and had significant political power (see 1 Kings 2.19; 15.13; 2 Kings 8.26; 11.1–3). If the exile in 597 B.C.E. is in mind, the king and queen mother would be Jehoiachin and Nehushta (2 Kings 24.8–17). Jehoiachin only ruled three months, prior to his exile. If the exile in 587 B.C.E. is in view, the king and queen mother would be Zedekiah and Hamutal (2 Kings 24.18–20). 13.19 The Negeb was the southern part of Judah and is a hot, arid region with under eight inches of annual rainfall. During the monarchy, there were in the Negeb many small villages engaged in agriculture and fortresses to protect Judah to the north and the trade routes that traversed the region. 13.20 Those who come from the north. The Great Drought

14 The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning the drought:

- ² Judah mourns
and her gates languish;
they lie in gloom on the ground,
and the cry of Jerusalem goes up.

- 3 Her nobles send their servants
for water;
they come to the cisterns,
they find no water,
they return with their vessels empty.
They are ashamed and dismayed
and cover their heads, 4 because the ground is cracked.
Because there has been no rain on the land
the farmers are dismayed;
they cover their heads.
- 5 Even the doe in the field forsakes her newborn fawn
because there is no grass.
- 6 The wild asses stand on the bare heights,^b
they pant for air like jackals;
their eyes fail
because there is no herbage.
- 7 Although our iniquities testify against us,
act, O LORD, for your name's
sake;
our apostasies indeed are many,
and we have sinned
against you.
- 8 O hope of Israel,
its savior in time of trouble, why should you be like a stranger
in the land,
like a traveler turning aside for
the night?
- 9 Why should you be like someone confused,
like a mighty warrior who cannot give help?
Yet you, O LORD, are in the midst of us,
and we are called by your
name;
do not forsake us!

chs. 4–10. 13.23 Using proverbial language in a rhetorical question, Jeremiah addresses the impossibility of a corrupt people doing good. Ethiopians, the inhabitants of Cush, the region south of Egypt.

14.1–10 The people's lament. Occasioned by a drought, the first section (vv. 1–6) describes the devastating effects of a prolonged drought. The second part (vv. 7–9) contains the lament of the people in which they acknowledge their iniquities and call upon the Lord for deliverance. 14.8–9 The people reproach God for being one who is neither moved nor able to bring redemption. 14.10 The conclusion contains God's rejection.

Truly they have loved to wander, they have not restrained
their feet;
therefore the LORD does not accept them,
now he will remember their iniquity
and punish their sins.

11 The LORD said to me: Do not pray for the welfare of this people. 12 Although they fast, I do not hear their cry, and although they offer burnt offering and grain offering, I do not accept them; but by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence I consume them.

Denunciation of Lying Prophets

13 Then I said: "Ah, Lord God! Here are the prophets saying to them, 'You shall not see the sword, nor shall you have famine, but I will give you true peace in this place.'" 14 And the LORD said to me: The prophets are prophesying lies in my name; I did not send them, nor did I command them or speak to them. They are prophesying to you a lying vision, worthless divination, and the deceit of their own minds. 15 Therefore thus says the LORD concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name though I did not send them, and who say, "Sword and famine shall not come on this land": By sword and famine those prophets shall be consumed. 16 And the people to whom they prophesy shall be thrown out into the streets of Jerusalem, victims of famine and sword. There shall be no one to bury them—their wives, their sons, and their daughters. For I will pour out their wickedness upon them.

- 17 You shall say to them this word:
Let my eyes run down with tears night and day,
and let them not cease,
for the virgin daughter—my people—is struck down
with a crushing blow,
with a very grievous wound.
18 If I go out into the field, look—those killed by the
sword!
And if I enter the city,
look—those sick with^c famine!
For both prophet and priest ply their trade throughout
the land,
and have no knowledge.

tion of the people's petition, because they continue in their wickedness. 14.11–12 Jeremiah is forbidden to intercede on behalf of his people and thus to redeem them from destruction (see 7.16; 11.14; 15.1; 16.5–9). The laments and sacrifices of the people will not avert destruction (6.20; 7.21–29). 14.12 For burnt offerings, see note on 6.20. Grain offerings, sacrifices of grains and vegetables, which could be given raw or cooked (see Lev 2).

14.13–16 Lying prophets. Jeremiah protests (Ah, Lord God; see note on 1.6) the words of prophets whose promises of well-being have deceived the people. 14.13 It may be Jeremiah objects that God is responsible for deceiving the people with lying words (see 1 Kings 22). 14.14–15 God denies the charge, indicating that the prophets speak lies and will be punished (see 23.9–40; 28). 14.16 However, those who are deceived will be killed and will suffer the curse of not being buried (see 7.29–8.3). 14.17–18 God's second lament. Once again God laments over the destruction of his daughter (see 12.7–13).

14.19–22 The people lament once more. God is addressed again by the people with a lament containing reproach, confession of sin, and an implicit appeal for salvation (see 14.1–10). 14.21 Jerusalem is known as the throne of God (see 3.17), as is the temple (see 17.12; Ezek 43.7).

Punishment Is Inevitable

15 Then the LORD said to me: Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my heart would not turn toward this people. Send them out of my sight, and let them go! ²And when they say to you, "Where shall we go?" you shall say to them: Thus says the LORD:

Those destined for pestilence, to pestilence,
and those destined for the sword, to the sword;
those destined for famine, to famine,
and those destined for captivity,
to captivity.

³And I will appoint over them four kinds of destroyers, says the LORD: the sword to kill, the dogs to drag away, and the birds of the air and the wild animals of the earth to devour and destroy. ⁴I will make them a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth because of what King Manasseh son of Hezekiah of Judah did in Jerusalem.

- 5 Who will have pity on you, O Jerusalem,
or who will bemoan you?
Who will turn aside
to ask about your welfare?

- 6 You have rejected me, says
the LORD,
you are going backward;
so I have stretched out my hand against you and destroyed you —
I am weary of relenting.
7 I have winnowed them with a winnowing fork
in the gates of the land;
I have bereaved them, I have destroyed my people;
they did not turn from
their ways.
8 Their widows became more

she has been shamed and disgraced.
And the rest of them I will give

says the LORD.

15.1–4 Intercession cannot divert destruction. A prose speech, originating during the exile.
Even if Moses (Ex 32.11–14, 30–34; Num 14.13–19) and Samuel (1 Sam 12.17–18), two of the greatest prophetic intercessors, were to plead Judah's case, the Lord would not save the nation from destruction (see 7.16; 11.14; 14.11–12; 16.5–9). Jeremiah is understood as the "prophet like Moses" (Deut 18.15–22) and stands in the line of succession from Moses and Samuel.
15.4 Manasseh was king over Judah for forty-five years (687/6–642 B.C.E.). A loyal vassal to Assyria, he was condemned for leading Israel into religious infidelity. The editors of 2 Kings blame him for the eventual destruction of Jerusalem and the exile of Judah (2 Kings 21.1–18). Judah's punishment for the sins of Manasseh represents the theory of retribution common in Deuteronomy,

1 and 2 Samuel, 1 and 2 Kings, and the prose edition of Jeremiah. 15.5–9 A town without pity.
A poetic judgment oracle in which the final destruction of Jerusalem is announced. Even the great losses suffered at the hands of the Egyptians and Babylonians prior to 587 B.C.E. did not result vine blessing (Ruth 4.15; 1 Sam 2.5).

15.10–21 Jeremiah's third lament (see note on 11.18–23). This lament consists of a poetic complaint by the prophet (vv. 15–18) and divine reassurance (vv. 19–21). Added later is an ex-ilic or postexilic prose insertion (vv. 10–14).
15.10 The prose addition begins with a lament prophet (see 1.5; 20.14–18). Strife (Hebrew riv) refers to Jeremiah's being both the object of contention and the mediator of God's lawsuit against the people (see 2.1–37). His wish not to have been born is grounded in both his prophetic call and the subsequent opposition and persecution he has received from the leaders of Judah for proclaiming divine judgment (see the trial in ch. 26, Jehoiakim's efforts to arrest him in 36.20–26, and his imprisonment by Zedekiah in 37.11–38.13). Even his own priestly family plotted against him (11.21–23). The Hebrew word for curse (qahal) refers to verbal abuse (Eccl 7.21–22) and even physical harm (Gen 8.21). 15.11 God assumes responsibility for the contempt and persecution of the prophet, yet intervenes in the prophet's life for good. 15.12 Such persecution hardens the prophet's character, enabling him to endure the disaster from the north (see 1.17–19). 15.13–14 Jeremiah and his opponents will be plundered and forced into exile. As a prophet of the people, Jeremiah is to experience their disastrous fate. 15.16 Your words . . .

I ate them, a metaphor for God's putting in the prophet's mouth the divine words he is to speak (1.9; see Isa 55.1–11; Ezek 2.8–3.3). I am called by your name. Jeremiah's name in Hebrew means "Yahweh exalts." 15.17 Under the weight of your hand, a metaphor for prophetic inspiration (see 1 Kings 18.46; 2 Kings 3.15; Isa 8.11; Ezek 1.3; 3.14). 15.18 Jeremiah likens God to a deceitful brook and waters that fail to counter God's affirmation of being a fountain of living waters (2.13) and denial of being a wilderness to Israel (2.31). This imagery reflects the experience of one who, traveling through the wilderness, seeks to find water in a stream bed, only to find it dry. 15.19 The Lord's reply indicates Jeremiah has abandoned the prophetic office. The threefold repetition of "turn back" (Hebrew shuv) echoes the call to repentance in 3.1–4.4. To stand before the Lord refers to a messenger who stands before the king and awaits the divine word. 15.20 This verse brings to mind the language of the call in 1.18–19. Jeremiah is reminded of his call and is admonished to return to the prophetic office.

Jeremiah's Celibacy and Message

16 The word of the LORD came to me: ²You shall not take a wife, nor shall you have sons or daughters in this place. ³For thus says the LORD concerning the sons and daughters who are born in this place, and concerning the mothers who bear them and the fathers who beget them in this land: ⁴They shall die of deadly diseases. They shall not be lamented, nor shall they be buried; they shall become like dung on the surface of the ground. They shall perish by the sword and by famine, and their dead bodies shall become food for the birds of the air and for the wild animals of the earth.

⁵ For thus says the LORD: Do not enter the house of mourning, or go to lament, or bemoan them; for I have taken away my peace from this people, says the LORD, my steadfast love and mercy. ⁶Both great and small shall die in this land; they shall not be buried, and no one shall lament for them; there shall be no gashing, no shaving of the head for them. ⁷No one shall break bread^f for the mourner, to offer comfort for the dead; nor shall anyone give them the cup of consolation to drink for their fathers or their mothers. ⁸You shall not go into the house of feasting to sit with them, to eat and drink. ⁹For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to banish from this place, in your days and before your eyes, the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride.

¹⁰ And when you tell this people all these words, and they say to you, "Why has the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? What is our iniquity? What is the sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?" ¹¹then you shall say to them: It is because your ancestors have forsaken me, says the LORD, and have gone after other gods and have served and worshiped them, and have forsaken me and have not kept my law; ¹²and because you have behaved worse than your ancestors, for here you are, every one of you, following your stubborn evil will, refusing to listen to me. ¹³Therefore I will hurl you out of this land into a land that neither you nor your ancestors have known, and there you shall serve other gods day and night, for I will show you no favor.

God Will Restore Israel

¹⁴ Therefore, the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when it shall no longer be said, "As the LORD lives who brought the people of Israel up out of the land of Egypt," ¹⁵but "As the LORD lives who brought the people of Israel up out of the land of the north and out of all the lands where he had driven them." For I will bring them back to their own land that I gave to their ancestors.

¹⁶ I am now sending for many fishermen, says the LORD, and they shall catch them; and afterward I will send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from 16.1–13 Celibacy and judgment. A prose sermon, added by later editors, combines an announcement of judgment with a symbolic act: the prophet is commanded by the Lord not to marry and have a family (cf. symbolic acts in 13.1–11, 12–14). The prohibition against marriage and family is to underscore the coming death and destruction that will face parents and children. Even burial will be denied the dead. The theme of lament is repeated in God's refusal to allow Jeremiah to intercede on the people's behalf (7.16; 14.11–12; 15.1). He is also forbidden to rejoice with them, for joy will be taken from the land during the impending destruction and exile. 16.5 The house of mourning refers to the room or hall in a house in which a funeral banquet that included feasting and drinking occurred (see Am 6.7, where "the revelry of the loungers" refers to participants at funeral banquets; also see the bread and the cup in Jer 16.7 and the corresponding expression, house of feasting, in v. 8). 16.6 Gashing and shaving of the head were funerary practices associated with pagan worship and forbidden by Israelite law (Lev 19.28; 21.5; Deut 14.1). 16.10–13 The question and answer form is common in the prose tradition (5.19; 13.12–14; 15.1–4; 22.8–9).

16.14–15 The return from exile. A prose sermon of hope predicts the future return of the exiles from Babylonia. This passage duplicates almost exactly 23.7–8. The return from exile will be remembered and celebrated in religious faith and practice, as once was the exodus from Egypt. 16.16–21 Fishers and hunters of Judah. The prose sermon continues v. 13. 16.16 The fishermen and hunters may represent, respectively, the Egyptians (Isa 19.5–10) and Babylonians

- 19 O LORD, my strength and my stronghold, my refuge in the day of trouble, to you shall the nations come from the ends of the earth
and say:
Our ancestors have inherited worthless things in which there

Judah's Sin and Punishment

17 The sin of Judah is written with an iron pen; with a diamond point it is engraved on the tablet of their hearts, and on the horns of their altars, ²while their children remember their altars and their sacred poles,^{h} beside every green tree, and on the high hills, ³on the mountains in the open country. Your wealth and all your treasures I will give for spoil as the price of your sin^{i} throughout all your territory. ⁴By your own act you shall lose the heritage that I gave you, and I will make you serve your enemies in a land that you do not know, for in my anger a fire is kindled^{j} that shall burn forever.

(Lam 4.18–19). 16.18 Being repaid double may suggest the defeat by the Egyptians (Neco II) and the Babylonian conquest. 16.19–20 A fragment of a lament and possibly a thanksgiving psalm that speaks of Jeremiah's faith in God and the conversion of the nations (see Ps 22; Isa 2.3; Mic 4.2). 16.21 A continuation of v. 18.

17.1–4 Judgment against Judah. This prose sermon, deriving from the exile or the postexilic period, indicts Judah for involvement in fertility religion. Despoliation and exile are the judgment. 17.1 An iron pen was used to incise wood or metal (Job 19.24). A diamond point refers to an engraving instrument. The point was probably not diamond, but rather a very hard stone, perhaps emery. Engraved on the tablet of their hearts calls to mind engraving the Ten Commandments on tablets of stone (Ex 31.18; 32.16). Altars were places for the offering of oblations, foodstuffs, incense, and animals. Some altars had horns, i.e., projections from their four corners (Ex 27.2) on which the blood of sacrificial animals was placed (Lev 4.7). Those who desired asylum would cling to the altar's horns (1 Kings 1.50–51; 2.28–34). Tablets were made of stone, metal, or wood. Engraved writings, especially on stone and metal, were meant to endure permanently, unlike writings on leather and papyrus or notes and records written with ink on broken pottery. Writing and engraving Judah's sins on the tablets of its people's hearts and on the horns of its stone altars suggests a record that will endure for a very long time. This contrasts with the writing of the law on the hearts of the faithful generation in the future (31.33). 17.2 Representing the fertility mother goddess Asherah, sacred poles (Hebrew 'asherim) consisted of carved wood (Judg 6.25) or living trees (Deut 16.21). A Canaanite goddess, Asherah was the consort of El at Ugarit, but of Baal in Israel (see 1 Kings 15.13; 18.19; 2 Kings 21.7; 23.4; Mic 5.13–14).

17.5–11 These verses consist of a wisdom poem (vv. 5–8), a rhetorical question (v. 9), a first-person proverb (v. 10), and a comparative proverb (v. 11). These are forms typically found in wisdom literature (Job, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes). While it is possible Jeremiah used wisdom texts, it is more probable that these materials were inserted by later editors. 17.5–8 A poem of two strophes (vv. 5–6, vv. 7–8) very similar to Ps 1. Ps 1 emphasizes that avoidance of the wicked and study of the Torah are the key to blessing, while the poem in Jeremiah finds the key to well-being in trusting in the Lord. The imagery of the tree planted by water suggests the “tree of life,” a common motif taken from mythology and associated with wisdom (Prov 3.13–18). For the sages who wrote wisdom literature, wisdom is the ability to perceive the order of God in creation, the intelligence to act in accordance with God’s order, and moral behavior that leads to well-being. Wise behavior produces life in all of its fullness. 17.9 Rhetorical questions, common in wisdom texts, are queries that do not expect answers, for the answers are obvious (see “the voice from the whirlwind” in Job 38–41; Am 3.3–8). For the sages, the heart is the mind and seat of volition (will; Prov 14.10; 16.9, 23; 25.3). 17.10 In wisdom literature, God is the one who oversees the just order in nature and society. God is able to distribute to all their just desserts, because of divine knowledge of the human heart (see 20.12; Pss 7.10; 17.3; 139.14). 17.11 Comparative proverbs bring together two different things to discover a common feature. This proverb expresses clearly the theory of retribution (the righteous are rewarded and the wicked punished), so common to proverbial wisdom.

17.12–13 A fragment of a hymn that praises both the Lord and the sacred ark; it probably is a later addition to vv. 5–11. Hymns are common in the Psalter (see, e.g., Pss 8; 19; 33; 47). The throne is the ark, located in the temple, considered the seat of the invisible deity and guarded by cherubim (see note on 3.16).

17.14–18 Jeremiah’s fourth lament (see note on 11.18–23). Unlike the earlier laments, Jeremiah’s complaint is not answered. The prophet cries out for healing and redemption (see Pss 41.4; 147.3). 17.16 Jeremiah denies he has desired the fatal day (see day of disaster in v. 18), i.e., the day of the Lord when destruction from the invading enemy will come (see Am 5.18; 8.9–14; Zeph 1.14–18). Jeremiah has seen his role as intercessor, hoping to move Judah to repentance and to avert the wrath from the northern enemy.

Hallow the Sabbath Day

19 Thus said the LORD to me: Go and stand in the People's Gate, by which the kings of Judah enter and by which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem, ²⁰and say to them: Hear the word of the LORD, you kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who enter by these gates. ²¹Thus says the LORD: For the sake of your lives, take care that you do not bear a burden on the sabbath day or bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem. ²²And do not carry a burden out of your houses on the sabbath or do any work, but keep the sabbath day holy, as I commanded your ancestors. ²³Yet they did not listen or incline their ear; they stiffened their necks and would not hear or receive instruction.

24 But if you listen to me, says the LORD, and bring in no burden by the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but keep the sabbath day holy and do no work on it, ²⁵then there shall enter by the gates of this city kingsⁿ who sit on the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they and their officials, the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall be inhabited forever. ²⁶And people shall come from the towns of Judah and the places around Jerusalem, from the land of Benjamin, from the Shephelah, from the hill country, and from the Negeb, bringing burnt offerings and sacrifices, grain offerings and frankincense, and bringing thank offerings to the house of the LORD. ²⁷But if you do not listen to me, to keep the sabbath day holy, and to carry in no burden through the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day, then I will kindle a fire in its gates; it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem and shall not be quenched.

17.19–27 Honor the sabbath. This probably postexilic prose sermon calls upon Judah, in the form of "either-or," to honor the sabbath day. It is a matter of life and death, punishment and blessing. The word sabbath occurs seven times in this text. The sabbath was the seventh day of the week and was observed as a day of rest and worship (see Ex 16.23; 20.8–11; 23.12; 31.12–17; Lev 23.3; Deut 5.12–15). Its observance was central to the Mosaic covenant. Am 8.5 points to the abstaining from business. Nehemiah in the fifth century B.C.E. locked the gates of Jerusalem to prevent the carrying on of commerce (Neh 13.15–22). The passage in Jeremiah promises the possibility of the restoration of kingship and kingdom, if the people observe the sabbath, and recalls the temple sermon in 7.1–15, where Jeremiah stands at a temple gate, addresses kings and people, and underscores obedience to the Ten Commandments as necessary for salvation. 17.19 The People's Gate is probably one of the gates to the temple. 17.26 The geographical areas are those near Jerusalem, making temple worship accessible. The Shephelah designates the low hills that separate the coastal plain from the central hill country. See 32.44; 33.13. Most biblical references are to the Shephelah of Judah. The Negeb is the southern region of Judah. For burnt offerings, sacrifices, and frankincense, see note on 6.20. For grain offerings, see note on 14.12. Frankincense was associated with grain offerings (Lev 2). A thank offering, consisting of meat and breads that could be eaten by priests and worshipers, is the type of sacrifice offered in thanks for salvation of various types (e.g., recovery from an illness; see Lev 7.11–18; Ps 107).

18.1–12 This prose narrative, originating during the exile or after it, involves another symbolic act coupled with a judgment oracle (see 13.1–11, 12–14). God has devised evil against Judah and Jerusalem, but will alter this fate if they will turn from their evil ways. The conclusion in v. 12 quotes the people as saying they will follow their own evil will. 18.2–4 The craft was working at his wheel. ⁴The vessel he was making of clay was spoiled in the potter's hand, and he reworked it into another vessel, as seemed good to him.

⁵ Then the word of the LORD came to me: ⁶Can I not do with you, O house of Israel, just as this potter has done? says the LORD. Just like the clay in the potter's hand, so are you in my hand, O house of Israel. ⁷At one moment I may declare concerning a nation or a kingdom, that I will pluck up and break down and destroy it, ⁸but if that nation, concerning which I have spoken, turns from its evil, I will change my mind about the disaster that I intended to bring on it. ⁹And at another moment I may declare concerning a nation or a kingdom that I will build and plant it, ¹⁰but if it does evil in my sight, not listening to my voice, then I will change my mind about the good that I had intended to do to it. ¹¹Now, therefore, say to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Thus says the LORD: Look, I am a potter shaping evil against you and devising a plan against you. Turn now, all of you from your evil way, and amend your ways and your doings.

¹² But they say, "It is no use! We will follow our own plans, and each of us will act according to the stubbornness of our evil will."

Israel's Stubborn Idolatry

of the potter was a highly skilled one. Pottery was an important industry and most villages and cities had pottery workshops. Pottery was shaped by hand in several ways: pressing clay to the inside of a basket which was then fired; shaping clay in the palm of one hand with the other hand; piecing clay strips around a base; and connecting lengths of clay with slip (clay mixed with water). However, a potter's wheel was the most common way of producing vessels. The wheel was turned by hand or foot, with the free hand or hands used to shape the clay. While some vessels were sun-dried, most were hardened by firing. Decorations consisted of incision, painting, and especially burnishing (polishing the slip that coated the dried pottery before firing). 18.7–9 Pluck, up . . . break down, . . . build, . . . plant. See note on 1.10. 18.11 The image of God as potter is common in the Bible. Gen 2.7 presents God as the potter fashioning humanity from clay. In other texts God shapes peoples and nations like a potter (see Isa 29.16; 64.8; Rom 9.20–24). 18.12 The people's rejection of God's will is as absurd as a vessel that argues against the potter, its creator (Isa 45.9).

18.13–17 The foolishness of idolatry. Once again Jeremiah brings charges against Israel for idolatry (see 2.1–3.5). God is both plaintiff and judge, the charges of religious apostasy and idolatry are set forth, the nations are called as witnesses to testify against Israel for abandoning God. rhetorical questions are raised with obvious though unspoken answers, and the judgment is rendered. The passage in form and content is strikingly similar to ch. 2. The oracle was probably uttered during the reign of Josiah as he sought to annex the former Northern Kingdom within his expanding territory. 18.14 Snow of Lebanon and crags of Sirion refer to the mountain range just to the north of Israel, which extends northward for a hundred miles. Sirion is another name for Mount Hermon, a mountain with three peaks (Deut 3.9; 4.48). It is some 9,230 feet above sea level and is the highest point in the region. 18.15 My people have forgotten me. See 2.32; 13.24–25. Delusion is a metaphor for idols (Ps 31.6; Jon 2.8). Ancient roads refers to the traditional Mosaic religion (see 6.16), which Israel has abandoned to follow other paths. 18.17 A wind from the east is often a violent and scorching wind

A Plot Against Jeremiah

18 Then they said, "Come, let us make plots against Jeremiah—for instruction shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. Come, let us bring charges against him,^s and let us not heed any of his words."

- 19 Give heed to me, O LORD, and listen to what my adversaries say!
- 20 Is evil a recompense for good?
Yet they have dug a pit for my life.
Remember how I stood
before you
to speak good for them, to turn away your wrath
from them.
- 21 Therefore give their children
over to famine;
hurl them out to the power of
the sword,
let their wives become childless and widowed.
May their men meet death by
pestilence,
their youths be slain by the sword in battle.

- 22 May a cry be heard from their houses,
when you bring the marauder suddenly upon them!
For they have dug a pit to catch me,
and laid snares for my feet.
- 23 Yet you, O LORD, know
all their plotting to kill me.
Do not forgive their iniquity, do not blot out their sin from
your sight.
Let them be tripped up
before you;
deal with them while you are angry.

The Broken Earthenware Jug

19 Thus said the LORD: Go and buy a potter's earthenware jug. Take with you^t some of the elders of the people and some of the senior priests,² and go out to the valley of the son of Hinnom at the entry of the Potsherd Gate, and proclaim there the words that I tell you.³ You shall say: Hear the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem. Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring such disaster upon this place that the ears of everyone who hears of it will tingle. ⁴Because the people have forsaken me, and have profaned this place by making offerings in it to other gods whom nei-that comes from the desert ("sirocco"). See Ex 10.13; 14.21; Ps 48.7; Jon 4.8.

18.18–23 Jeremiah's fifth lament (see note on 11.18–23). The initial verse describes a plot against the life of Jeremiah (see the enemies of Jeremiah in other personal laments: 11.18–23; 12.1–6; 15.10–21; 17.14–18; 20.7–13). The reason for the efforts against Jeremiah is to preserve the priestly instruction (Torah), the counsel of the wise, and the prophetic word (see Ezek 7.26). The Torah, counsel, and word were the three forms of divine revelation and teaching. Jeremiah is seen as standing contrary to the legitimate revelation of God announced by the three offices of religious leadership. Those plotting intend to kill the prophet (see v. 23). The wise were probably counselors to kings (cf. note on 8.8–13). 18.20 Jeremiah had even interceded for his enemies (4.10, 19–22). See 14.11–12; 15.1; also 16.5–9 where Jeremiah was forbidden to intercede.

18.21–23 The call for vengeance against enemies is common in Jeremiah's laments (see 11.18–23; 12.6; 15.15; see also Pss 3.7; 5.4–10; 7.6). Jeremiah desires that his enemies perish during the invasion from the north.

19.1–15 This prose narrative, coming from the exile, combines a symbolic act with a prophetic word of judgment (see 13.1–11, 12–14; 16.1–13; 18.1–12). 19.2 Valley of the son of Hinnom. See note on 7.31. The Potsherd Gate, probably another name for the Dung Gate (Neh 2.13; 3.13–14; 12.31), may have been located in the south wall of Jerusalem. The gate was probably the exit for removing the garbage of the city. Among the garbage would probably be broken pottery. 19.3–9 Idolatrous practices, including child sacrifice, are also condemned in 7.29–8.3. Topheth. See 7.30–34; note on 7.31. Eating children was practiced in times of famine and siege when food supplies ran out (2 Kings 6.24–31; Lam 4.10).

ther they nor their ancestors nor the kings of Judah have known, and because they have filled this place with the blood of the innocent,⁵ and gone on building the high places of Baal to burn their children in the fire as burnt offerings to Baal, which I did not command or decree, nor did it enter my mind;⁶ therefore the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when this place shall no more be called Topheth, or the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of Slaughter.⁷ And in this place I will make void the plans of Judah and Jerusalem, and will make them fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hand of those who seek their life. I will give their dead bodies for food to the birds of the air and to the wild animals of the earth.⁸ And I will make this city a horror, a thing to be hissed at; everyone who passes by it will be horrified and will hiss because of all its disasters.⁹ And I will make them eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and all shall eat the flesh of their neighbors in the siege, and in the distress with which their enemies and those who seek their life afflict them.

10 Then you shall break the jug in the sight of those who go with you,¹¹ and shall say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts: So will I break this people and this city, as one breaks a potter's vessel, so that it can never be mended. In Topheth they shall bury until there is no more room to bury.¹² Thus will I do to this place, says the LORD, and to its inhabitants, making this city like Topheth.¹³ And the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kings of Judah shall be defiled like the place of Topheth—all the houses upon whose roofs offerings have been made to the whole host of heaven, and libations have been poured out to other gods.

14 When Jeremiah came from Topheth, where the LORD had sent him to prophesy, he stood in the court of the LORD's house and said to all the people:¹⁵ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am now bringing upon this city and upon all its towns all the disaster that I have pronounced against it, because they have stiffened their necks, refusing to hear my words.

Jeremiah Persecuted by Pashhur

20 Now the priest Pashhur son of Immer, who was chief officer in the house of the LORD, heard Jeremiah prophesying these things.² Then Pashhur struck the prophet Jeremiah, and put him in the stocks that were in the upper Benjamin Gate of the house of the LORD.³ The next morning when Pashhur released Jeremiah from the stocks, Jeremiah said to him, The LORD has named you not Pashhur but "Terror-all-around."⁴ For thus says the LORD: I am making you a terror to yourself and to all your friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies while you look on. And I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon; he shall carry them captive to Babylon, and shall kill them with the sword.⁵ I will give all the wealth of this city, all its gains, all its prized belongings, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah into the 19.9 Eating the flesh of one's children was a curse for disobedience to the law and covenant (Lev 26.29; Deut 28.53; Isa 9.20; 49.26; Zech 11.9). 19.10–13 The breaking of a vessel of pottery is a common symbol of destruction (see Ps 2.9). The most common example is Egyptian execration texts. The names of the king's enemies were inscribed on pottery vessels, curses were uttered, and the pottery was smashed. This ritual was designed to magically break the power of the king's enemies and to defeat them.

20.1–6 Pashhur's public persecution of Jeremiah. This prose narrative identifies one of Jeremiah's enemies and is an example of the persecution about which the prophet complains in his laments. 20.1 Pashhur was a priest in charge of the temple police, who were to maintain order in the sacred precinct. 20.2 Pashhur took Jeremiah into custody, beat him, and put him in stocks for a day. 20.3–6 Jeremiah's judgment oracle against Judah, Jerusalem, and Pashhur. 20.3 The act of naming and the meaning of names were important. Names at times embodied the character, faith, or fate of a person. For example, Jacob in Hebrew means "supplanter," for he supplanted his older twin brother in obtaining the birthright from Isaac (see Gen 25.24–34). Jacob's name is later changed to Israel when he is blessed by God (see Gen 32.27–29). "Israel" means "he who strives with God" in Hebrew. Jeremiah's changing of Pashhur's name to Terror-all-around (see 6.25; 20.10) points to the coming siege of Jerusalem and exile, a fate that Pashhur and his family will share (see the prophecy against Haniah in ch. 28, and the prophecy of Amos against Amaziah, priest of Bethel, in Am 7.10–17).

hand of their enemies, who shall plunder them, and seize them, and carry them to Babylon. ⁶And you, Pashhur, and all who live in your house, shall go into captivity, and to Babylon you shall go; there you shall die, and there you shall be buried, you and all your friends, to whom you have prophesied falsely.

Jeremiah Denounces His Persecutors

- 7 O LORD, you have enticed me, and I was enticed;
you have overpowered me,
and you have prevailed.
I have become a laughingstock all day long;
everyone mocks me.
- 8 For whenever I speak, I must cry out,
I must shout, "Violence and
destruction!"
For the word of the LORD has become for me
a reproach and derision all
day long.
- 9 If I say, "I will not mention him, or speak any more in his name,"
then within me there is something like a burning
fire
shut up in my bones;
I am weary with holding it in,
and I cannot.
- 10 For I hear many whispering:

"Terror is all around!
Denounce him! Let us denounce him!"
All my close friends
are watching for me to stumble.
"Perhaps he can be enticed, and we can prevail against him,
and take our revenge on him."

- 11 But the LORD is with me like a dread warrior;
therefore my persecutors will stumble,
and they will not prevail.
They will be greatly shamed,
for they will not succeed.
Their eternal dishonor
will never be forgotten.
- 12 O LORD of hosts, you test the righteous,
you see the heart and the mind;
let me see your retribution
upon them,
for to you I have committed my cause.
- 13 Sing to the LORD;
praise the LORD!
For he has delivered the life of the needy
from the hands of evildoers.

Jeremiah Curses the Day of His Birth

- 14 Cursed be the day
on which I was born!

20.7–13 Jeremiah's sixth lament (see note on 11.18–23). The prophet's lament is found in vv. 7–12, while a thanksgiving, presumably sung by the prophet, follows in v. 13. The complaint is the most blasphemous in the Bible. 20.7–8 The term enticed, which occurs twice in the first line of this verse, has two important meanings: "to deceive" and "to seduce." The meaning of "deceive" may reflect God's deception of a prophet (see the case of Micaiah ben Imlah in 1 Kings 22.19–22). "To seduce" is the meaning in the seduction of a virgin in Ex 22.16–17. This same meaning is metaphorically applied to God's "seducing" Israel (Hos 2.14). A wife may "seduce" (i.e., deceive) her husband by her beauty and cunning (Judg 14.15; 16.5). Overpowered may suggest rape (see 2 Sam 13.14). In Deut 22.25–27, the law requires that a man who "overpowers" a betrothed virgin in the open countryside be put to death. The woman is spared, for when she "cries out" (see Jer 20.8), there is no one to rescue her. Thus, Jeremiah uses very harsh language, the language of rape, to describe his treatment by God. God has seduced and then raped him. When he cries out "Violence and destruction," there is no one to hear and to save. Jeremiah's enemies, called his close friends, use the same language of seduction and rape in their plans to take revenge against him (v. 10). 20.13 A fragment of a thanksgiving psalm, which, if delivered by Jeremiah, expresses his joy and thanks for God's merciful acts of delivering the needy from the evildoers. Thanksgiving psalms are uttered either after salvation has come or in sure anticipation of its occurrence. They usually are in response to laments (see note on 11.18–20.18).

20.14–18 Jeremiah's seventh and last lament. Jeremiah curses his own existence, i.e., the day of his birth (see Job 3). For other curses, see Jer 11.1–17; 17.5–8. 20.14–15 Curses were power-filled language designed to bring death and destruction, as opposed to blessings, which were to

Jerusalem Will Fall to Nebuchadrezzar

21 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, when King Zedekiah sent to him Pashhur son of Malchiah and the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah, saying, ²“Please inquire of the LORD on our behalf, for King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon is making war against us; perhaps the LORD will perform a wonderful deed for us, as he has often done, and will make him withdraw from us.”

³ Then Jeremiah said to them: ⁴Thus enhance life and well-being. God is the creator who brings about conception, shapes the fetus in the womb, is the midwife who delivers the baby, and nurtures the newborn throughout life (see note on 1.5). Jeremiah's curse against his birth (15.10) is also a rejection of his call (1.5). A child ... glad. The birth of a son was considered good news and a reason for rejoicing (see Ruth 4.13–17; Prov 4.3; Isa 9.6). 20.16 The two cities are Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 19; see Isa 1.9–10; 3.9; Jer 23.14; Am 4.11; Zeph 2.9). 20.17 The prophet wishes he had been aborted.

21.1–10 Oracle against Zedekiah and Jerusalem. The setting given to the narrative appears to be 588 B.C.E., after Zedekiah had rebelled against Babylonian rule. The narrative consists of two parts: an oracle against Jerusalem and Zedekiah (vv. 1–7) and a conditional offer of salvation only to those who surrender (vv. 8–10). The narrative is similar to another one that tells of two other emissaries sent to the prophet by Zedekiah, perhaps a short time after this occasion (37.3–10). Also cf. 34.1–7, which contains another warning to Zedekiah. 21.1 Zedekiah reigned from 597 to 587 B.C.E. A son of Josiah and a descendant of David, Zedekiah was placed on the throne by Nebuchadrezzar (605/4–562 B.C.E.) after his first conquest of Jerusalem in 597 B.C.E. Against Jeremiah's repeated warnings, Zedekiah rebelled against the Babylonians, leading to the destruction of Jerusalem and the second exile in 587 B.C.E. Zedekiah was blinded by Nebuchadrezzar and taken to Babylon (2 Kings 24.18–25.7). Pashhur was the son of Malchiah, a prince who owned the cistern in which Jeremiah was imprisoned (38.6). Malchiah may have been a son of Zedekiah. Not to be confused with the priest of the same name in 20.1–6, this Pashhur was a royal prince under Zedekiah (see 38.1). One of his descendants served as a priest during the time of

Nehemiah (1 Chr 9.12; Neh 11.12). Zephaniah, a priest, was the overseer of the temple who had been rebuked by Shemaiah, a Jewish prophet in Babylonia, for not opposing Jeremiah's prophecy to the first exiles in 597 B.C.E. that the exile would be a long one. Shemaiah insisted Jeremiah be imprisoned. Refusing to imprison the prophet, Zephaniah simply read the letter to Jeremiah, who in turn issued an oracle of judgment against Shemaiah and his descendants (see ch. 29). Zephaniah was executed by Nebuchadrezzar at Riblah after the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.E. 21.2 Inquire of the LORD means to consult the Lord through a prophet (10.21; 37.2). A wonderful deed refers to God's mighty acts, especially deeds of judgment and redemption, in the realm of history (Ex 3.20; Pss 9.1; 26.7; 86.10). The “mighty deeds” celebrated in Jewish faith were the exodus from Egypt, victory at the Red Sea, guidance in the Sinai wilderness, and the taking of the land of Canaan. Zedekiah is hoping for a similar act of deliverance in the face of the Babylonian invasion and siege. The name Nebuchadrezzar (Akkadian Nabu-kudurri-utzur) means both “May Nabu [a Babylonian deity] protect the boundary” and “May Nabu protect the son.” A variant spelling, “Nebuchadnezzar,” occurs elsewhere in the OT. See, e.g., 27.6, 8, 20; 28.11; 29.3; 2 Kings 24.10–11; 25.1, 8; Dan 1.1, 18; 2.1, 28; 3.1, 4.1; 5.1. 21.3–7 The Lord will not protect the city as was expected in traditional Jewish faith (Pss 46: 48; 76; Isa 31.4–5). Instead, God will fight against Jerusalem and bring victory to the Babylonians (here and elsewhere in the OT also called “Chaldeans”). This is a reversal of “holy war” theology in which God fights on Israel's behalf (see the holy war campaigns in Josh 1–12). Equally devastating is news that the Lord will not defend the king who is a son of David. Royal theology is based on a covenant between God and David (2 Sam 7; Ps 89).

you shall say to Zedekiah: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I am going to turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands and with which you are fighting against the king of Babylon and against the Chaldeans who are besieging you outside the walls; and I will bring them together into the center of this city. ⁵I myself will fight against you with outstretched hand and mighty arm, in anger, in fury, and in great wrath. ⁶And I will strike down the inhabitants of this city, both human beings and animals; they shall die of a great pestilence. ⁷Afterward, says the LORD, I will give King Zedekiah of Judah, and his servants, and the people in this city—those who survive the pestilence, sword, and famine—into the hands of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, into the hands of their enemies, into the hands of those who seek their lives. He shall strike them down with the edge of the sword; he shall not pity them, or spare them, or have compassion.

⁸ And to this people you shall say: Thus says the LORD: See, I am setting before you the way of life and the way of death. ⁹Those who stay in this city shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence; but those who go out and surrender to the Chaldeans who are besieging you shall live and shall have their lives as a prize of war. ¹⁰For I have set my face against this city for evil and not for good, says the LORD: it shall be given into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

Message to the House of David

¹¹ To the house of the king of Judah say: Hear the word of the LORD,

Because of divine promise and steadfast love (Hebrew chesed), God would support forever the royal line, even though there would be descendants of David evil enough to be punished. The king, who ruled on behalf of God, would receive divine aid against his enemies, as long as he was faithful (see the royal psalms: Pss 2; 18; 20; 21; 45; 72; 89; 110). 21.8–10 This speech is to address the people of Jerusalem, not the king. The oracle of conditional salvation follows a covenantal formula found elsewhere only in Deut 30.15, 19: I am setting before you the way of life and the way of death. This “either-or” formula, which asks the audience to choose life or death by obedience to or rejection of the covenant requirements, occurs in the prose narratives and sermons in Jeremiah in 7.1–15; 17.19–27; 22.1–5 (see Deut 28; 30.15–20; Josh 24). Jeremiah believed that the Babylonians were the instrument of God’s will. To resist them was to resist God. Thus, the prophet consistently warned both leaders and people to bow the knee to Nebuchadrezzar or face disastrous consequences (27.6; 38.17–18). As a result of his position on the Babylonian question, Jeremiah was considered a traitor by some leaders (see 37.13–14).

21.11–23.8 Concerning the house of David. This collection consists of poetic oracles and prose sermons that address the related themes of Davidic kingship (“the house of David”) and Jerusalem (the political capital and religious center of the kingdom of Judah). The key expressions are house (dynasty and palace) and (cedars of) Lebanon (representing the city of Jerusalem, palace, and temple). The collection consists of general speeches addressed to the house of David, oracles concerning specific kings, oracles mentioning future rulers and a messiah, and others that speak of Jerusalem. The references to Lebanon recall that cedars of Lebanon were used in the construction of the palace and temple (1 Kings 5–7; 9.10–28). The general oracles addressed to the house of David are 21.11–12 (poetry); 22.1–5 (prose); 22.6–7 (poetry). The poetic oracles concerning individual kings are 22.10 (Jehoahaz, or Shallum); 22.13–19 (Jehoiakim); 22.28–30 (Jehoiachin, or Coniah). The prose sermons about specific kings are 22.11–12 (Jehoahaz); 22.24–27 (Jehoiachin). Curiously, two kings who are not the direct subject of an oracle are Josiah (indirectly mentioned in 22.15–16) and Zedekiah (an allusion to him may occur in wordplays on righteous Branch and The LORD is our righteousness in 23.5–6). 23.1–8 contains prose sermons about the future, including the promise of “shepherds” (i.e., kings, see note on 3.15) who will rule faithfully in contrast to their evil predecessors, and a messianic oracle about a righteous Branch, who will rule according to wisdom and justice. Finally, several speeches deal with Jerusalem (this city, Lebanon): 21.13–14 (poetry); 22.8–9 (prose); 22.20–23 (poetry). The strong criticism of kings and the city of Jerusalem (the location of palace and temple) indicate Jeremiah blamed the Jerusalem establishment (kings, princes [officers], prophets, and priests) for the violation of the Mosaic covenant, including especially religious and political apostasy. While Jeremiah may not have been opposed in principle to the existence of the related institutions of palace and temple, they did not have an important place in his theological understanding of the relationship between God, Israel and Judah, and the pagan nations. While later prose sermons attributed to the prophet point to the ¹²O house of David! Thus says the LORD:

 Execute justice in the morning, and deliver from the hand of the oppressor
 anyone who has been robbed, or else my wrath will go forth like fire,
 and burn, with no one to quench it,
 because of your evil doings.

¹³ See, I am against you,
 O inhabitant of the valley,
 O rock of the plain,
 says the LORD;
 you who say, "Who can come down against us,
 or who can enter our places
 of refuge?"

¹⁴ I will punish you according to the fruit of your doings,
 says the LORD;
 I will kindle a fire in its forest,

and it shall devour all that is around it.

Exhortation to Repent

22 Thus says the LORD: Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word, ²and say: Hear the word of the LORD, O King of Judah sitting on the throne of David—you, and your servants, and your people who enter these gates. ³Thus says the LORD: Act with justice and righteousness, and deliver from the hand of the oppressor anyone who has been robbed. And do no wrong or violence to the alien, the orphan, and the widow, or shed innocent blood in this place. ⁴For if you will indeed obey this word, then through the gates of this house shall enter kings who sit on the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their servants, and their people. ⁵But if you will not heed these reestablishment of kingship and temple in Jerusalem and their importance to the future restoration (23.1–8; 30.9; 33.14–26), it is questionable whether this reflects Jeremiah's own view.

21.11–14 General oracles against the house of David and Jerusalem. Two poetic oracles introduce the collection: a warning for kings to rule justly (vv. 11–12) and a judgment against Jerusalem (vv. 13–14). 21.11–12 The warning to the monarchy in vv. 11–12 takes the form of an admonition in apodictic (unconditional) style (see Isa 1.16–17; 56.1; Ezek 45.9; Am 5.4b, 14–15).
Execute (or "act with") justice recurs in 22.3, 15; 23.5. For Jeremiah, destruction is avoided only by the practice of justice, not by an unconditional promise to preserve the monarchy forever (cf.
 2 Sam 7.11–16; Ps 89). Although ruling descendants of David would be punished for evil acts and injustice, the Lord's covenant with the house of David, outlined in 2 Sam 7; Ps 89, promises an eternal reign for the dynasty. To execute justice involves more than simply a judicial responsibility.
 Rather, justice is the order of both creation and society. To rule justly means the king maintains the cosmic and social order and produces well-being for the nation (see Ps 72). 21.13–14 This introductory oracle includes a threat in v. 13 (see 23.30–32; 50.31; 51.25) and judgment in
 v. 14. Inhabitant of the valley, better translated "one enthroned over the valley," refers to Jerusalem.
 The word inhabitant in Hebrew is a feminine particle, thus agreeing with the Hebrew word for "city" which is also feminine. Rock of the plain is not an appellation for Jerusalem elsewhere in the Bible, but "rock" is a common metaphor for God, occurring some thirty-three times (see Deut 32; Isa 17.10; Pss 31.3; 62.7; 71.3). The reference may be a parody of Zion theology, i.e., the belief that God will defend the city against its enemies (Pss 46; 48; 76; Isa 31.4–5). Forest (of Lebanon) is a term for the palace (see 1 Kings 7.2–12; 10.17, 21; Isa 22.8) and possibly the temple as well (1 Kings 6.9–36), since both were built from the cedars of Lebanon. Thus the fire will burn down the city and its two major buildings, the palace and the temple.

22.1–5 An exhortation to kings. This prose sermon, deriving from the exile or later, is an elaboration of the poetic oracle in 21.11–12. It is also in the conditional "either-or" style: obey the covenant by ruling justly and the monarchy will continue; disobey and suffer the end of the dynasty. The sermon seeks to provide the reason for the destruction of the palace and the ending of monarchical succession. 22.1 Jeremiah is to go down to the house of the king of Judah, i.e., descend from the temple to the palace. 22.3 The alien, the orphan, and the widow. See Deut 16.11, 14; 24.19–21; note on 7.6. 22.5 I swear by myself.
 Oaths in the Hebrew Bible generally invoked the name of God for validation. They were serious expressions of obligation and expected to be kept (Lev 5.1–4; Ps 15.4). Oaths were accompanied by symbolic acts, most often the raising of the hand toward heaven (Dan 12.7; Rev 10.5–6). Even God raises the hand in oath taking (Isa 62.8; Ezek 20.5). Curses, expressed or implied, often accompanied oaths (Ruth 1.17; 1 Sam 3.17; 1 Kings 2.23). In Jer 22.5, the curse is replaced with a stern warning: this house (palace) shall become a des- words, I swear by myself, says the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation. ⁶For thus says the LORD concerning the house of the king of Judah:

You are like Gilead to me,
like the summit of Lebanon;
but I swear that I will make you
a desert,
an uninhabited city.^u

⁷ I will prepare destroyers
against you,
all with their weapons;
they shall cut down your choicest cedars
and cast them into the fire.

⁸ And many nations will pass by this city, and all of them will say one to another, "Why has the LORD dealt in this way with that great city?" ⁹And they will answer, "Because they abandoned the covenant of the LORD their God, and worshipped other gods and served them."

Message to the Sons of Josiah

¹⁰ Do not weep for him who is dead,
nor bemoan him;
weep rather for him who goes away,
for he shall return no more
to see his native land.

¹¹ For thus says the LORD concerning Shallum son of King Josiah of Judah, who succeeded his father Josiah, and who went away from this place: He shall return here no more, ¹²but in the place where they have carried him captive he shall die, and he shall never see this land again.

¹³ Woe to him who builds his house by unrighteousness,

olation. Desolation often refers to the ruins of cities ravaged by disaster (25.18; 27.17; 44.2, 6; Lev 26.31; Isa 44.26). 22.6–7 Judgment against the palace. This poetic oracle of judgment contains language that connects it to 21.13–14 (cedars and fire [22.7]; fire in its forest [21.14]). 22.6 The introduction addresses the oracle to the house of the king of Judah (i.e., the monarchy or the palace). Gilead is a region in the Transjordan located between Bashan and Moab. It was a mountainous and heavily forested area. Summit of Lebanon refers to a mountainous area also noted for its forests. Both references, Gilead and the summit of Lebanon, are mentioned because of their forests. The palace of Solomon was designated as a forest, because it was constructed of cedars from Lebanon (1 Kings 7.1–12; see note on 21.13–14). Uninhabited city, in Hebrew lit. "uninhabited cities," a hyperbole indicating the terrible destruction that is facing the palace. 22.8–9 An explanation of Jerusalem's destruction. Originating in the exile, this prose commentary in the form of a question and answer explains why Jerusalem and the palace were destroyed. The answer is the violation of the Mosaic covenant and the worship of other gods (see 5.19; 9.12–16; 13.12–14; 15.1–4; 16.10–13; Deut 29.22–28; 1 Kings 9.8–9).

22.10–12 Concerning Jehoahaz (Shallum). This section consists of two parts: a fragment of a poetic oracle concerning two unidentified males (one dead and the other in exile) and a prose sermon naming the exiled male as Shallum (Jehoahaz). 22.10 An admonition to the citizens of Judah and Jerusalem not to engage in lamentation over King Josiah, who died at the hands of the Egyptians at Megiddo in 609 B.C.E., thus bringing to an end the nationalistic dream of a Jewish state free from foreign domination. Rather, the people should lament the exile of Jehoahaz (609 B.C.E.) who was chosen by the "people of the land" (male landowners) to succeed his father, Josiah, to the throne, only to rule for three months (2 Kings 23.30–34). Neco replaced him with another son of Josiah, Jehoiaikim. 22.11–12 A prose commentary, deriving from the exile or later, explaining that the person in v. 10 who is exiled is Shallum (see Ezek 19.2–4). "Shallum" is the personal name (see 1 Chr 3.15) of the king whose royal name, given to him upon ascending the throne, is Jehoahaz. Jehoahaz died in Egyptian exile (2 Kings 23.34).

22.13–19 Against King Jehoiaikim. Jehoiaikim (609–598 B.C.E.), a son of Josiah and descendant of David, was put on the throne by Neco II (see Introduction) to replace his younger brother, Jehoahaz. Jehoiaikim was his throne name, Eliakim his birth name (2 Kings 23.34). Thus, Jehoiaikim ruled without a contract with the male landowners ("the people of the land") and with no evidence of prophetic or priestly anointing. After Nebuchadrezzar defeated the Egyptians at Carchemish in 605 B.C.E., Jehoiaikim became a Babylonian vassal. After three years, Jehoiaikim rebelled against the Babylonians, resulting in his death during the siege of Jerusalem. The city surrendered to Nebuchadrezzar in 597 B.C.E. (see 2 Kings 23.34–24.7). The speech against Jehoiaikim is a poetic judgment oracle. The indictment (vv. 13–17) includes using compulsory, uncompensated labor to build a luxurious palace and practicing injustice. The announcement of judgment (vv. 18–19) speaks of the eventual demise of and do justice and

righteousness?
Then it was well with him.
16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy;
then it was well.
Is not this to know me?
says the LORD.
17 But your eyes and heart are only on your dishonest gain,
for shedding innocent blood,
and for practicing oppression and violence.
18 Therefore thus says the LORD concerning King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah:

- They shall not lament for him,
saying,
"Alas, my brother!" or "Alas, sister!"
They shall not lament for him,
saying,
"Alas, lord!" or "Alas, his majesty!"
19 With the burial of a donkey he shall be buried—
dragged off and thrown out beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

Against Jerusalem

- 20 Go up to Lebanon, and cry out,
and lift up your voice in Bashan;
cry out from Abarim,
for all your lovers are crushed.
21 I spoke to you in your prosperity, but you said, "I will not listen." This has been your way from your youth,
for you have not obeyed
my voice.
22 The wind shall shepherd all your shepherds,
and your lovers shall go into
captivity;

Jehoiakim, who will neither be lamented nor buried with royal honors. 22.13–14 Woe refers to a cry that derives from funeral lamentation (see the repetition of the word in v. 18, where it is translated "alas"). It announces the "funeral" of the one or ones addressed and was commonly used by prophets in introducing judgment oracles (see Isa 10.5; 17.12; 28.1; Am 5.18; 6.1; Hab 2.6, 9, 12, 15, 19; Zech 11.17). Unrighteousness and injustice. See 21.12; 22.3–4. The house probably refers to the palace (a renovation and expansion project). Compulsory labor, without remuneration, was used by Solomon in building the temple, palace, and other projects (see 1 Kings 5.13–18; 9.15–22). Paneling it with cedar calls to mind Solomon's palace (1 Kings 7.7). Vermillion is red ocher (hematite). 22.15–17 A contrast of the just reign of Josiah with the oppressive rule of his son Jehoiakim. The language throughout this speech indicates Jehoiakim attempted to rule in the same manner and style of his famous ancestor, Solomon, instead of following the pattern of the good and just king, Josiah. Shedding innocent blood is one of the twelve curses associated with violating the Mosaic covenant (Deut 27.25). 22.18 This verse refers to the public ritual of lamentation in which mourners weep over the deceased. The references to brother, sister, lord (father), and majesty indicate the king symbolically fulfilled various family roles on behalf of his people. 22.19 Burial of a donkey. Jehoiakim's carcass will be dragged out of the city and dumped in the open to rot and provide food for scavengers (see 36.30). The denial of burial was a horrible curse (see 8.1–3; Deut 28.26). 2 Kings 24.6 simply mentions the death of Jehoiakim, while 2 Chr 36.6 indicates he was put in fetters by Nebuchadrezzar to be taken to Babylon. Neither mentions his burial.

22.20–23 This poetic judgment oracle calls upon the city of Jerusalem, personified as an adulterous woman, to lament over her approaching humiliation (see 4.8; 9.17–22; 14.1–10). 22.20 Lebanon, Bashan, and Abarim are mountainous locations (north, northeast, and southeast of Israel) from which Jerusalem is to wail over her fate (see Jephthah's daughter in Judg 11.37–38; Rachel in Jer 31.15). Lovers (30.14) refers either to false deities (Hos 2) or to allies (Ezek 23.5, 9) who promised Jerusalem protection. 22.21 Your youth (see 2.2; Ezek 16.22, 43, 60; Hos 2.17).

- then you will be ashamed and dismayed
because of all your wickedness.
23 O inhabitant of Lebanon, nested among the cedars,
how you will groan^v when pangs come upon you,
pain as of a woman in labor!

Judgment on Coniah (Jehoiachin)

24 As I live, says the LORD, even if King Coniah son of Jehoiakim of Judah were the signet ring on my right hand, even from there I would tear you off²⁵ and give you into the hands of those who seek your life, into the hands of those of whom you are afraid, even into the hands of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon and into the hands of the Chaldeans. 26 I will hurl you and the mother who bore you into another country, where you were not born, and there you shall die. 27 But they shall not return to the land to which they long to return.

- 28 Is this man Coniah a despised broken pot,
a vessel no one wants?
Why are he and his offspring hurled out
and cast away in a land that they do not know?
29 O land, land, land,
hear the word of the LORD!
30 Thus says the LORD:
Record this man as childless,
a man who shall not succeed in his days;
for none of his offspring shall succeed
in sitting on the throne of David,
and ruling again in Judah.

Restoration After Exile

23 Woe to the shepherds who destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! says the LORD. 2 Therefore thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concern-

^v Gk Vg Syr: Heb will be pitied

22.22 Shepherds. See note on 3.15. 22.23 Inhabitant of Lebanon, lit. "one enthroned in Lebanon," here refers to Jerusalem (see note on 21.13–14).

22.24–30 Jehoiachin was the throne name of Coniah, the king who succeeded Jehoiakim to the throne in the final days of the Babylonian siege of Jerusalem. Jehoiachin ruled for only three months before the city fell (597 B.C.E.). Deported to Babylon, along with the people of Jerusalem, including his royal family and important leaders (2 Kings 24.6–17), Jehoiachin died in exile. However, 2 Kings ends with the hopeful report that in the thirty-seventh year of Jehoiachin's exile (560 B.C.E.), he was released from prison by the Babylonian king Evil-merodach, given a place of honor above the other exiled kings, and provided with both food from the king's table and a regular allowance. 22.24–30 consists of two parts: a prose judgment speech that includes a divine oath (vv. 24–27) and a poetic judgment speech (vv. 28–30). The two speeches are directed against the popular hope of the return of Jehoiachin and his children from exile to rule over Judah (28.4). A pro-Jehoiachin political party looked to the exiled king as the legitimate ruler, and not his uncle, Zedekiah, placed on the throne by Nebuchadrezzar. The Babylonian Jewish community calculated their calendar by reference to the exile of Jehoiachin (e.g., Ezek 1.2). Babylonian texts call Jehoiachin "King of Judah" and indicate he received a pension from Nebuchadrezzar. Inscriptions on jar handles from the period indicate royal property belonged to Jehoiachin. Contrary to this popular view, Jeremiah's argument was that Jehoiachin's legal right to kingship expired with his exile. Indeed, Jeremiah predicted the exiled king would never return home. 22.24–27 A prose judgment speech, deriving from the exile, that announces Jehoiachin and his mother, the queen (see note on 13.18), will not return from exile. As I live introduces an oath (see notes on 4.2; 22.5). Signet ring refers to the authority of the king as God's representative, since the bearer of the king's seal has the authority to stamp documents with the royal signature (see Hag 2.20–23, where Zerubbabel, a Davidic descendant, is likened to the Lord's signet ring). 22.28–30 A judgment speech that dispels any hope that Jehoiachin will rule again in Judah. The same is true of his offspring. It is as though Jehoiachin were childless (actually, he had seven sons; 1 Chr 3.17–18).

23.1–8 Three prose sermons about the future: return from exile and faithful rulers (vv. 1–4), the righteous Branch (vv. 5–6), and return from the north country (vv. 7–8). These three sermons may have originated during the exile or shortly thereafter. 23.1–4 Return from exile and faithful rulers. This prose sermon combines a judgment oracle against faithless rulers with a prophecy of salvation that speaks of faithful rulers after the return from captivity. The first ing the shepherds who shepherd my people: It is you who have scattered my flock, and have driven them away, and you have not attended to them. So I will attend to you for your evil doings, says the LORD. ³Then I myself will gather the remnant of my flock out of all the lands where I have driven them, and I will bring them back to their fold, and they shall be fruitful and multiply. ⁴I will raise up shepherds over them who will shepherd them, and they shall not fear any longer, or be dismayed, nor shall any be missing, says the LORD.

The Righteous Branch of David

5 The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will raise up for David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. ⁶In this days Judah will be saved and Israel will live in safety. And this is the name by which he will be called: "The LORD is our righteousness."

7 Therefore, the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when it shall no longer be said, "As the LORD lives who brought the people of Israel up out of the land of Egypt," ⁸but "As the LORD lives who brought out and led the offspring of the house of Israel out of the land of the north and out of all the lands where he" had driven them." Then they shall live in their own land.

False Prophets of Hope Denounced

9 Concerning the prophets:
My heart is crushed within me,

w Gk: Heb 1

two verses are modeled on the form of a "woe oracle" (see note on 22.13–14). Shepherds are kings (see note on 3.15) who are condemned for their evil rule. 23.3 Be fruitful and multiply. See the promises to Abraham and Jacob, the two great ancestors of Israel, in Gen 17.1–8, 20; 28.3; 48.4. 23.5–6 This prose sermon, repeated with modifications in 33.15–16, predicts the coming of a future king who will rule wisely and establish justice (see Isa 11.1–9). Branch is a messianic title in Zech 3.8; 6.12 (Isa 11.1 uses a different Hebrew word for "branch"). One of the leaders of the return from exile was Zerubbabel (whose name in Hebrew means "branch/shoot of Babylon"), a descendant of David. Hag 2.20–23 identifies him as the heir to kingship. The future ruler in Jer 23.5–6 will bear the name The LORD is our righteousness, perhaps a wordplay on the name Zedekiah, which in Hebrew means "Yahweh is righteousness." Nebuchadnezzar gave this name to Mattaniah when he was appointed king (2 Kings 24.17). Zedekiah was the last king of Judah (597–587 B.C.E.). The Hebrew word for "righteousness" (tzedeq) also means "legitimate." While Jeremiah did not oppose Zedekiah, his legitimacy as ruler was questioned by many, even within Judah. The implication may be that the future king will rule in such a way as to demonstrate that "The LORD is our legitimate (ruler)." 23.7–8 Return from the north country. This passage is a prose prediction of salvation that makes use of the oath formula (as the LORD lives; see note on 4.2). The exodus from Egypt was central to Israel's ancient faith (see Deut 26.5–9; Josh 24; Pss 78; 105; 106; 135; 136; Neh 9). In the future, the return from captivity in Babylon will replace the ancient creed's emphasis on the exodus. The "new exodus" is a major theme in Second Isaiah (the anonymous prophet of the exile, whose oracles are collected in Isa 40–55; see Isa 43.15–21; 51.9–11).

23.9–40 This collection of various materials about prophets divides into two parts: a largely poetic section in vv. 9–22 and a prose sermon in vv. 23–40. The poetic section includes: a description of general wickedness that priest and prophet share (vv. 9–12), a judgment oracle against the prophets of Samaria and of Jerusalem (vv. 13–15), a warning in prose not to pay heed to the false prophets (vv. 16–17), rhetorical questions and a vision report about the failure of the false prophets to see the coming judgment of the Lord (vv. 18–20), and a rejection of the false prophets (vv. 21–22). The prose section consists of a sermon stating God's opposition to false prophets (vv. 23–32) and a midrash, an interpretive commentary, on the meaning of the burden of the LORD (vv. 33–40). The problems involved in distinguishing between true and false prophets were considerable (see ch. 28; 1 Kings 13; 22). Deut 18.15–22 provides the most detailed attempt to distinguish true from false prophets. False prophets spoke in the name of false gods, prophesied good fortune instead of judgment, lied in claiming to speak in the name of God, and predicted things that did not come to pass. Jeremiah adds his own tests: false prophets are immoral, speak at times in the name of Baal, see visions and dreams of their own mind, prophesy weal not woe, tell lies, and have not stood in the council of the LORD (v. 18). Even so, Jeremiah had a very difficult time convincing others he was a true prophet and that his prophetic opponents were false prophets. 23.9 This verse is a lamentation

- all my bones shake;
 I have become like a drunkard,
 like one overcome by wine, because of the LORD
 and because of his holy words.
- 10 For the land is full of adulterers;
 because of the curse the land mourns,
 and the pastures of the wilderness are dried up.
 Their course has been evil,
 and their might is not right.
- 11 Both prophet and priest are ungodly;
 even in my house I have found their wickedness,
 says the LORD.
- 12 Therefore their way shall be to them
 like slippery paths in the
 darkness,
 into which they shall be driven
 and fall;
 for I will bring disaster upon
 them
 in the year of their punishment,
 says the LORD.
- 13 In the prophets of Samaria
 I saw a disgusting thing:
 they prophesied by Baal
 and led my people Israel astray.
- 14 But in the prophets of Jerusalem
 I have seen a more shocking thing:
 they commit adultery and walk
 in lies;
 they strengthen the hands of evildoers,
 so that no one turns from
 wickedness;
 all of them have become like Sodom to me,
 and its inhabitants like Gomorrah.

- 15 Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts concerning the
 prophets:
 "I am going to make them eat
 wormwood,
 and give them poisoned water
 to drink;
 for from the prophets of Jerusalem
 ungodliness has spread throughout the land."

16 Thus says the LORD of hosts: Do not listen to the words of the prophets who prophesy to you; they are deluding
 you. They speak visions of their own minds, not from the mouth of the LORD.
 17 They keep saying to those who despise the word of the LORD, "It shall be well with you"; and to all who stubbornly follow their own stubborn hearts, they say,
 "No calamity shall come upon you."

- 18 For who has stood in the council of the LORD
 so as to see and to hear his word?
 Who has given heed to his word so as to proclaim it?
- 19 Look, the storm of the LORD!
 Wrath has gone forth,
 a whirling tempest;
 it will burst upon the head of the wicked.
- 20 The anger of the LORD will not
 turn back
 until he has executed and accomplished
 the intents of his mind.
 In the latter days you will understand it clearly.
- 21 I did not send the prophets,
 yet they ran;
 I did not speak to them,

(see note on 11.18–23) that mentions prophetic ecstasy, i.e., the physical and mental state of one who receives a divine revelation (see 4.19–21; 1 Sam 10.1–13; 19.23–24). 23.10 The land is full. See Gen 6.13; Lev 19.29. 23.12 Slippery paths. See Ps 35.6. 23.13 For a description of Baal prophecy, see 1 Kings 18.25–29. 23.14 Sodom . . . and . . . Gomorrah (Gen 18–19). See Jer 20.16 and note; Isa 1.10. 23.16–17 For an example of a prophet of good fortune, see Hananiah in ch. 28. 23.18 The council of the LORD is an assembly of divine beings over which God presides (1 Kings 22.19–23; Job 1–2; Pss 82; 89.7; Isa 6.1–8). In this assembly, God issues divine edicts for governing the cosmos and history. 23.19–20 These verses are almost duplicated in 30.23–24. The storm of the LORD is an image taken from theophanic judgment scenes in which the Lord as warrior comes to execute judgment against the wicked (25.32; Job 38.1; 40.6; Hab 3). 23.21 Prophets ran in the sense yet they prophesied.

 22 But if they had stood in my council,
 then they would have proclaimed my words to my
 people,
 and they would have turned them
 from their evil way,
 and from the evil of their doings.

23 Am I a God near by, says the LORD, and not a God far off? 24 Who can hide in secret places so that I cannot see them? says the LORD. Do I not fill heaven and earth? says the LORD. 25 I have heard what the prophets have said who prophesy lies in my name, saying, "I have dreamed, I have dreamed!" 26 How long? Will the hearts of the prophets ever turn back—those who prophesy lies, and who prophesy the deceit of their own heart? 27 They plan to make my people forget my name by their dreams that they tell one another, just as their ancestors forgot my name for Baal. 28 Let the prophet who has a dream tell the dream, but let the one who has my word speak my word faithfully. What has straw in common with wheat? says the LORD. 29 Is not my word like fire, says the LORD, and like a hammer that breaks a rock in pieces? 30 See, therefore, I am against the prophets, says the LORD, who steal my words from one another. 31 See, I am against the prophets, says the LORD, who use their own tongues and say, "Says the LORD." 32 See, I am against those who prophesy lying dreams, says the LORD, and who tell them, and who lead my people astray by their lies and their recklessness, when I did not send them or appoint them; so they do not profit this people at all, says the LORD.

33 When this people, or a prophet, or a priest asks you, "What is the burden of the LORD?" you shall say to them, "You are the burden,^x and I will cast you off," says the LORD." 34 And as for the prophet, priest, or the people who say, "The burden of the LORD," I will punish them and their households. 35 Thus shall you say to one another, among yourselves, "What has the LORD answered?" or "What has the LORD spoken?" 36 But "the burden of the LORD" you shall mention no more,
 for the burden is everyone's own word,
 and so you pervert the words of the living God, the LORD of hosts, our God. 37 Thus you shall ask the prophet, "What has the LORD answered you?" or "What has the LORD spoken?" 38 But if you say, "the burden of the LORD," thus says the LORD: Because you have said these words, "the burden of the LORD," when I sent to you, saying, You shall not say, "the burden of the LORD," 39 therefore, I will surely lift you up^y and cast you away from my presence, you and the city that I gave to you and your ancestors. 40 And I will bring upon you everlasting disgrace and perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

The Good and the Bad Figs

24 The LORD showed me two baskets of figs placed before the temple of the LORD. This was after King Nebu-chadrezzar of Babylon had taken into ex-

that they were messengers of God. 23.23–24 God is both immanent and transcendent (see Ps 139.7–12; Am 9.1–4). 23.30–32 Note the threefold occurrence of I am against, a challenge formula issued to opponents (see 21.13).
23.33 This verse, in a question and answer form (5.19; 9.12–16; 13.12–14; 15.1–4; 16.10–13; 22.8–9), identifies the people, priests, and prophets as the burden of the LORD. The word for "burden" (Hebrew massa) also means "oracle" (see Nah 1.1; Hab 1.1; Mal 1.1). Hence the verse involves a wordplay. When Jeremiah is asked for an oracle from God, he is to respond: "You are the 'burden' of the LORD." 23.34–40 A later pointed commentary or midrash that prohibits the use of the term burden for a revelation from God.

24.1–10 This prose narrative contains a prophetic vision report (see 1.11–14, 15–16; Am 7.1–9.10). See note on 1.11–14. The formal structure includes: introduction (The LORD showed me, v. 1), description (v. 2), dialogue (v. 3), and interpretation (vv. 4–10). While written during the exile, the narrative is situated in the period after the first exiles were taken to Babylonia in 597 B.C.E. The purpose of the narrative is to stress that the first exiles (the "good figs") were the chosen remnant whom God would use to build a new future, once the return to the Jewish homeland occurred. Chief among these, of course, was the exiled king, Jehoiachin. By contrast the rotten figs were those who remained behind in Jerusalem, including Zedekiah and his officials, and those who were in Egypt (Jehoahaz and his entourage).

ile from Jerusalem King Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim of Judah, together with the officials of Judah, the artisans, and the smiths, and had brought them to Babylon. ²One basket had very good figs, like first-ripe figs, but the other basket had very bad figs, so bad that they could not be eaten. ³And the LORD said to me, "What do you see, Jeremiah?" I said, "Figs, the good figs very good, and the bad figs very bad, so bad that they cannot be eaten."

⁴ Then the word of the LORD came to me: ⁵Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Like these good figs, so I will regard as good the exiles from Judah, whom I have sent away from this place to the land of the Chaldeans. ⁶I will set my eyes upon them for good, and I will bring them back to this land. I will build them up, and not tear them down; I will plant them, and not pluck them up. ⁷I will give them a heart to know that I am the LORD; and they shall be my people and I will be their God, for they shall return to me with their whole heart.

⁸ But thus says the LORD: Like the bad figs that are so bad they cannot be eaten, so will I treat King Zedekiah of Judah, his officials, the remnant of Jerusalem who remain in this land, and those who live in the land of Egypt. ⁹I will make them a horror, an evil thing, to all the kingdoms of the earth—a disgrace, a byword, a taunt, and a curse in all the places where I shall drive them. ¹⁰And I will send sword, famine, and pestilence upon them, until they are utterly destroyed from the land that I gave to them and their ancestors.

The Babylonian Captivity Foretold

25 The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah, in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah (that was the first year of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon), ²which the prophet Jeremiah spoke to all the people of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: ³For twenty-three years, from the thirteenth year of King Josiah son of Amon of Judah, to this day, the word of the LORD has come to me, and I have spoken persistently to you, but you have not listened. ⁴And though the LORD persistently sent you all his servants the prophets, you have neither listened nor inclined your ears to hear ⁵when they said, "Turn now, everyone of you, from your evil way and wicked doings, and you will remain upon the land that the LORD has given to you and your ancestors from of old and forever; ⁶do not go after other gods to serve and worship them, and do not provoke me to anger with the work of your hands. Then I will do you no harm." ⁷Yet you did not listen to me, says the

In view of the earlier speech about Jehoiachin (22.24–30), it seems unlikely the present narrative reflects the view of Jeremiah. Rather, the story appears to be a piece of religious propaganda designed to enhance the importance of the first exiles in 597 B.C.E., including Jehoiachin and his officials, in rebuilding the future (see 28.3–4; 2 Kings 25.27–30). This view of divine favor for exiles, rather than for the remnant left behind in Judah, became especially pronounced in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah in the fifth-fourth centuries, B.C.E. 24.1 Two baskets of figs. See 29.17; Hos 9.10. Jeconiah is an alternate spelling for Jehoiachin. 24.6 Build . . . tear down, . . . plant . . . pluck up. See note on 1.10. 24.7 I will give them a heart to know. See 31.33–34; 32.39; Deut 29.4. They shall be my people and I will be their God is a covenant formula for the sealing of the relationship between God and Israel (see 7.23; 11.4; 30.22; 31.1, 33; 32.38). Return. See note on 3.1–4.4. This text anticipates the new covenant passage in 31.31–34. 24.9 A disgrace, a byword, a taunt, and a curse. See 19.8; 25.9, 18; 29.18; 42.18; 44.8, 12, 22; Deut 28.37; 1 Kings 9.7; 2 Chr 7.20.

25.1–14 This prose sermon, originating in the exile or later, summarizes the content of Jeremiah's speeches from the beginning of his prophetic activity (627 B.C.E., the thirteenth year of King Josiah, v. 3) to the battle of Carchemish (605 B.C.E., the fourth year of King Jehoiakim, v. 1); see Introduction. The section divides into two parts: a superscription (vv. 1–2) and an appeal for repentance followed by an announcement of judgment (vv. 3–14). In the appeal, Judah is called upon to repent or face destruction. In the announcement, Judah has not repented and subsequently will be destroyed. 25.1 King Jehoiakim (609–598 B.C.E.). See note on 22.13–19. Nebuchadrezzar (605–562 B.C.E.). See Introduction. 25.3 King Josiah (640–609 B.C.E.). The twenty-three years would be 627 to 605 B.C.E. Jeremiah's speeches these twenty-three years primarily announce judgment and may comprise the first scroll (ch. 36; see Introduction). 25.4 His servants the prophets. See note on 7.25. The rejection of Jeremiah's message stands in a long tradition of refusing to listen to the Lord's emissaries. 25.5 Turn now. See the summons to repentance in 3.1–4.4;

LORD, and so you have provoked me to anger with the work of your hands to your own harm.

8 Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts: Because you have not obeyed my words, ⁹I am going to send for all the tribes of the north, says the LORD, even for King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, my servant, and I will bring them against this land and its inhabitants, and against all these nations around; I will utterly destroy them, and make them an object of horror and of hissing, and an everlasting disgrace.^z ¹⁰And I will banish from them the sound of mirth and the sound of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstones and the light of the lamp. ¹¹This whole land shall become a ruin and a waste, and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years. ¹²Then after seventy years are completed, I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation, the land of the Chaldeans, for their iniquity, says the LORD, making the land an everlasting waste. ¹³I will bring upon that land all the words that I have uttered against it, everything written in this book, which Jeremiah prophesied against all the nations. ¹⁴For many nations and great kings shall make slaves of them also; and I will repay them according to their deeds and the work of their hands.

The Cup of God's Wrath

15 For thus the LORD, the God of Israel, said to me: Take from my hand this cup of the wine of wrath, and make all the nations to whom I send you drink it. ¹⁶They shall drink and stagger and go out of their minds because of the sword that I am sending among them.

17 So I took the cup from the LORD's hand, and made all the nations to whom the LORD sent me drink it: ¹⁸Jerusalem and the towns of Judah, its kings and officials, to make them a desolation and a waste, an object of hissing and of cursing, as they are today; ¹⁹Pharaoh king of Egypt, his servants, his officials, and all his people; ²⁰all the mixed people;^a all the kings of the land of Uz; all the kings of the land of the Philistines—Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod; ²¹Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites; ²²all the kings of Tyre, all the kings of Sidon, and the kings of the coastland across the sea; ²³Dedan, Tema, Buz, and all who

18.11. 25.9 This is the first clear indication that the "foe from the north" (tribes of the north) is Babylonia. Nebuchadrezzar . . . my servant (27.6), i.e., the instrument of the divine will (cf. Cyrus in Isa 45.1–7, who is the "anointed" of God). 25.10 See 7.34; 16.9. 25.11 Seventy years is difficult to put into an exact chronology. From 605 to 539 B.C.E. (the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus) is sixty-six years (thus perhaps "seventy" is rounded off). In Zech 1.12 the period of seventy years begins with the destruction of the temple (587 B.C.E.) and concludes with its rebuilding (516/5 B.C.E.). The number also may suggest either the period of a normal life span (Ps 90.10) or the traditional, figurative time for a city to remain in ruins. 25.13 This book may have originally referred to the first or, more likely, the second scroll (see ch. 36; Introduction).

25.15–29 This prose narrative contains a symbolic action in which Jeremiah takes from God's hand the cup of wrath and makes the nations who are listed drink and become drunk (see 13.1–11, 12–14; 18.1–12; 19.1–15). The nations listed are cursed with destruction. This section may have originally introduced the "oracles against the nations" in chs. 46–51. In the Septuagint, the "oracles against the nations" in chs. 46–51 follow 25.13a. 25.15–38 is found in 32.1–24 in the Septuagint. The nations listed in this passage roughly parallel those in chs. 46–51. Judgment oracles against foreign nations are found in Isa 13–23; Ezek 25–32; Am 1.3–2.3. 25.15 Drinking from a cup as punishment is a common image (49.12; 51.7; Pss 11.6; 75.8; Isa 51.17, 22; Lam 4.21; Ezek 23.31–34; Hab 2.15–16; Rev 14.10; 16.19; 17.4; 18.6). Cf. the "cup of blessing" in Pss 16.5; 23.5. 25.18 The judgment that will engulf all the nations begins with Jerusalem. 25.20 Mixed people probably refers to people of various cultural and ethnic identities who are politically connected to a larger cultural and ethnic group. Uz refers to an area in the desert east of Israel, possibly in Edom. Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron, and . . . Ashdod are Philistine cities located on the southern coastal plain. Ashdod was destroyed by Psammetichus I (664–610 B.C.E.) of Egypt after a siege lasting twenty-nine years (Herodotus History 2.157). 25.21 Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites comprise the countries in the Transjordan, east of Israel. 25.22 Coastland across the sea refers to islands and coastal areas in the Mediterranean settled by the Phoenicians. 25.23 Dedan and Tema are tribes in northwest Arabia. The location of Buz is unknown. All who have shaven temples; ²⁴all the kings of Arabia and all the kings of the mixed peoples^b that live in the desert; ²⁵all the kings of Zimri, all the kings of Elam, and all the kings of Media; ²⁶all the kings of the north, far and near, one after another, and all the kingdoms of the world that are on the face of the earth. And after them the king of Sheshach^c shall drink.

²⁷ Then you shall say to them, Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Drink, get drunk and vomit, fall and rise no more, because of the sword that I am sending among you.

²⁸ And if they refuse to accept the cup from your hand to drink, then you shall say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts: You must drink! ²⁹See, I am beginning to bring disaster on the city that is called by my name, and how can you possibly avoid punishment? You shall not go unpunished, for I am summoning a sword against all the inhabitants of the earth, says the LORD of hosts.

³⁰ You, therefore, shall prophesy against them all these words, and say to them:

The LORD will roar from on high,
and from his holy habitation utter his voice;

he will roar mightily against his fold,
and shout, like those who tread
grapes,
against all the inhabitants of
the earth.

³¹ The clamor will resound to the ends of the earth,
for the LORD has an indictment against the nations;
he is entering into judgment with
all flesh,

and the guilty he will put to
the sword,
says the LORD.

³² Thus says the LORD of hosts:
See, disaster is spreading from nation to nation,
and a great tempest is stirring from the farthest parts of
the earth!

³³ Those slain by the LORD on that day shall extend from one end of the earth to the other. They shall not be lamented, or gathered, or buried; they shall become dung on the surface of the ground.

³⁴ Wail, you shepherds, and cry out;
roll in ashes, you lords of
the flock,
for the days of your slaughter have come—and your dispersions,^b
and you shall fall like a choice vessel.

³⁵ Flight shall fail the shepherds, and there shall be no escape for the lords of the flock.

³⁶ Hark! the cry of the shepherds, and the wail of the lords of
the flock!

For the LORD is despoiling their pasture,

³⁷ and the peaceful folds are devastated,
because of the fierce anger of
the LORD.

³⁸ Like a lion he has left his covert;
for their land has become
a waste

25.30–38 Judgment against the nations. This section continues the theme of the preceding section (25.15–29). The section breaks down into two poetic oracles: vv. 30–32 (announcement of judgment) and vv. 34–38 (call to lamentation).

V. 33 is a prose insert that speaks of the widespread destruction brought by the Lord and the lack of burial and funeral rites. 25.30 The LORD will roar like a lion from heaven. Cf. Jeremiah's Temple Sermon and Trial

26 At the beginning of the reign of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, this word came from the LORD: ²Thus says the LORD: Stand in the court of the LORD's house, and speak to all the cities of Judah that come to worship in the house of the LORD; speak to them all the words that I command you; do not hold back a word. ³It may be that they will listen, all of them, and will turn from their evil way, that I may change my mind about the disaster that I intend to bring on them because of their evil doings. ⁴You shall say to them: Thus says the LORD: If you will not listen to me, to walk in my law that I have set before you, ⁵and to heed the words of my servants the prophets whom I send to you urgently—though you have not heeded—⁶then I will make this house like Shiloh, and I will make this city a curse for all the nations of the earth.

⁷ The priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD. ⁸And when Jeremiah had finished speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak to all the people, then the priests and the prophets and all the people laid hold of him, saying, "You shall die! ⁹Why have you prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, 'This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate, without inhabitant?'" And all the people gathered around Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

¹⁰ When the officials of Judah heard these things, they came up from the king's house to the house of the LORD and took their seat in the entry of the New Gate of the house of the LORD. ¹¹Then the priests and the prophets said to the officials and to all the people, "This man deserves the sentence of death because he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your own ears."

¹² Then Jeremiah spoke to all the officials and all the people, saying, "It is the LORD who sent me to prophesy against this house and this city all the words you have heard. ¹³Now therefore amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God, and the LORD will change his mind about the disaster that he has pronounced against you. ¹⁴But as for me, here I am in your hands. Do with me as seems good and right to you. ¹⁵Only know for certain that if you put me to death, you will be bringing innocent blood upon yourselves and upon this city and its inhabitants, for in truth the LORD sent me to you to speak all these words in your ears."

¹⁶ Then the officials and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, "This man does not deserve the sentence of death, for he has spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God." ¹⁷And some of the elders of the land arose and said to all the assembled people, ¹⁸"Micah of Moresheth, who prophesied during the days an inclusio (see note on 4.5–31) for this section.

26.1–29.32 This section consists of three episodes in the life of Jeremiah, each of which illustrates his conflict with the priests and the prophets. The first episode involves the temple sermon and the trial of the prophet (26.1–24; see note on 7.1–15). The second episode involves the yoke incident and confrontation with Hananiah (27.1–28.17). The third episode involves Jeremiah's letters to the Babylonian exiles and the ensuing confrontation with false prophets among them (29.1–32).

26.1–24 The prose sermon is abbreviated in 26.1–6, with the rest of the chapter devoted to narrating Jeremiah's trial for his life. 26.1 The beginning of the reign of King Jehoiakim probably means his accession year, which was 609 B.C.E. It has been suggested that the sermon was delivered at Jehoiakim's coronation during the New Year's festivities in early autumn when large crowds would be in Jerusalem and coming to the temple. 26.6 Shiloh. See note on 7.12–15. 26.7–9 Jeremiah's sermon sounded treasonous to those assembled in the temple court. 26.10 The officials of Judah could hear the commotion from their location in the palace which was nearby (see ch. 36). The location of the New Gate is unknown. 26.16 Deuteronomy stipulated death for prophets who spoke in the name of a false god or falsely claimed to speak a word in the Lord's name. In the latter case, the only test for authenticity was whether the prophecy came to pass (18.15–22). 26.17–19 Micah's prophecy against Jerusalem during Hezekiah's attempt to throw off Assyrian rule (Hezekiah, 715–687 B.C.E.) provided a precedent for Jeremiah's temple sermon (Mic 3.12). The elders of the land were leaders among the citizen landowners in the country-of King Hezekiah of Judah, said to all the people of Judah: 'Thus says the LORD of hosts, Zion shall be plowed as a field;

Jerusalem shall become a heap of ruins,
and the mountain of the house
a wooded height.'

19 Did King Hezekiah of Judah and all Judah actually put him to death? Did he not fear the LORD and entreat the favor of the LORD, and did not the LORD change his mind about the disaster that he had pronounced against them? But we are about to bring great disaster on ourselves!"

20 There was another man prophesying in the name of the LORD, Uriah son of Shemaiah from Kiriath-jearim. He prophesied against this city and against this land in words exactly like those of Jeremiah. 21 And when King Jehoiakim, with all his warriors and all the officials, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death; but when Uriah heard of it, he was afraid and fled and escaped to Egypt. 22 Then King Jehoiakim sent^d Elnathan son of Achbor and men with him to Egypt, 23 and they took Uriah from Egypt and brought him to King Jehoiakim, who struck him down with the sword and threw his dead body into the burial place of the common people.

24 But the hand of Ahikam son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah so that he was not given over into the hands of the people to be put to death.

Submission to the Yoke of Babylon

27 In the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah^e son of Josiah of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD. 2 Thus the LORD said to me: Make yourself a yoke of straps and bars, and put them on your neck. 3 Send word^f to the king of Edom, the king of Moab, the king of the Ammonites, the king of Tyre, and the king of Sidon by the hand of the envoys who have come to Jerusalem to King Zedekiah of Judah. 4 Give them this charge for their masters: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: This is what you shall say to your masters: 5 It is I who by my great power and my side. 26.20–24 The story of Uriah's execution illustrates the ruthlessness that King Jehoiakim was capable of in dealing with prophets who incurred his disfavor. Jehoiakim sought to take Jeremiah captive (36.26). For the execution of a prophet named Zechariah, see 2 Chr 24.20–22. 26.22 Elnathan son of Achbor. See 36.12, 25. 26.24 Ahikam was an officer who served Josiah (2 Kings 22.12, 14). His father, Shaphan, who was Josiah's secretary, was involved in reporting the discovery of the law in the temple to the king. According to the story, this law became the basis for Josiah's reforms. Ahikam also was among the entourage who consulted the prophet Huldah after the discovery of the law (see 2 Kings 22). Ahikam was the father of Gedaliah, the governor of Judah after the fall of Jerusalem who was later assassinated by a Jewish zealot (Jer 40). The association between Jeremiah and the upright family of Shaphan was an important one.

27.1–28.17 Jeremiah opposes the efforts to persuade King Zedekiah (597–587 B.C.E.) to rebel against the Babylonians. The date was probably 594/3 B.C.E. (see 28.1), when emissaries from Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, and Sidon met in Jerusalem to plan revolution. In the Jewish court, pro-Egyptian conspirators probably looked to Egypt for help, especially with the accession of the new king, Psammetichus II (594–589 B.C.E.). Jeremiah opposed rebellion, arguing that Judah's only hope was to remain a vassal to the Babylonians (see note on 26.1–29.32). 27.1–22 The yoke of Babylon. This prose text centers on a symbolic act: the making and wearing of a yoke, which means submission to Babylon (see 13.1–11, 12–14; 16.1–13; 18.1–12; 19.1–15; 24.1–10). The chapter divides into three sermons: one to foreign kings (vv. 1–11), one to King Zedekiah (vv. 12–15), and one to priests and people (vv. 16–22). 27.1 In the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah (597 B.C.E.) does not fit the chronology for the events in chs. 27–28. Most Hebrew manuscripts read, "in the beginning of the reign of King Jehoiakim," but this is undoubtedly a scribal error. The events described in chs. 27–28 occurred in the fourth year of Zedekiah (594/3 B.C.E.; see 28.1). Since the verse is absent in the Septuagint (i.e., the short text; see Introduction), it is likely an editorial or scribal error. 27.2 The yoke is that used by two oxen to pull a heavy load. Normally, yokes consisted of a crossbar with leather or rope nooses or rods of wood that would be placed around the animals' necks. Attached to the crossbar was a wooden shaft for pulling the load (see Deut 21.3; 1 Sam 6.7; 11.5; 1 Kings 19.19). For the yoke as a outstretched arm have made the earth, with the people and animals that are on the earth, and I give it to whomever I please. ⁶Now I have given all these lands into the hand of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, my servant, and I have given him even the wild animals of the field to serve him. ⁷All the nations shall serve him and his son and his grandson, until the time of his own land comes; then many nations and great kings shall make him their slave.

⁸ But if any nation or kingdom will not serve this king, Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, and put its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, then I will punish that nation with the sword, with famine, and with pestilence, says the LORD, until I have completed its destruction by his hand. ⁹You, therefore, must not listen to your prophets, your diviners, your dreamers,^h your soothsayers, or your sorcerers, who are saying to you, "You shall not serve the king of Babylon." ¹⁰For they are prophesying a lie to you, with the result that you will be removed far from your land; I will drive you out, and you will perish. ¹¹But any nation that will bring its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him, I will leave on its own land, says the LORD, to till it and live there.

¹² I spoke to King Zedekiah of Judah in the same way: Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live. ¹³Why should you and your people die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence, as the LORD has spoken concerning any nation that will not serve the king of Babylon? ¹⁴Do not listen to the words of the prophets who are telling you not to serve the king of Babylon, for they are prophesying a lie to you. ¹⁵I have not sent them, says the LORD, but they are prophesying falsely in my name, with the result that I will drive you out and you will perish, you and the prophets who are prophesying to you.

¹⁶ Then I spoke to the priests and to all this people, saying, Thus says the LORD: Do not listen to the words of your prophets who are prophesying to you, saying, "The vessels of the LORD's house will soon be brought back from Babylon," for they are prophesying a lie to you. ¹⁷Do not listen to them; serve the king of Babylon and live. Why should this city become a desolation? ¹⁸If indeed they are prophets, and if the word of the LORD is with them, then let them intercede with the LORD of hosts, that the vessels left in the house of the LORD, in the house of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem may not go to Babylon. ¹⁹For thus says the LORD of hosts concerning the pillars, the sea, the stands, and the rest of the vessels that are left in this city, ²⁰which King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon did not take away when he took into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon King Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim of Judah, and all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem— ²¹thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels left in the house of the LORD, in the house of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem: ²²They shall be carried to Babylon, and there they shall stay, until symbol of servitude, see also 1 Kings 12.1–11. 27.6 Nebuchadnezzar (see note on 21.2) is God's servant, i.e., the one who carries out God's will (see 25.9). 27.7 This verse is absent in the Septuagint. The prediction was not fulfilled, at least literally, since the last king of the Babylonian Empire was Nabonidus (556–539 B.C.E.), the fourth king to succeed Nebuchadnezzar. Also, Nabonidus was not a descendant of Nebuchadnezzar. The reference may be to Nebuchadnezzar, Nabonidus, and Belshazzar (Dan 5.2). Belshazzar was the son of Nabonidus. 27.12–15 Zedekiah receives essentially the same warning delivered to the foreign kings: submit to the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar or face destruction. False prophets. See note on 23.9–40. 27.16 The priests are mentioned, for they desire the return of the sacred objects carried away to Babylon in 597 B.C.E. 27.18–22 The sacred objects that remained after 597 B.C.E. will be taken away to Babylon. There were two cast bronze, freestanding pillars (Jachin and Boaz) at the entrance of the temple (1 Kings 7.15–22). A huge basin or tank standing perhaps some ten feet in height, the sea was also cast bronze, perhaps located at the entrance to the temple and before the altar (1 Kings 7.23–26). Its estimated capacity was approximately 12,000 gallons. 2 Chr 4.6 indicates it was used as a basin in which the priests washed. The pillars and the basin were broken into pieces and carried to Babylon in 587 B.C.E. (2 Kings 25.13, 16). The stands were ornamented bronze wagons upon which were mounted the ten lavers or wash basins (see 1 Kings 7.27–39). These and other vessels would the day when I give attention to them, says the LORD. Then I will bring them up and restore them to this place.

Hananiah Opposes Jeremiah and Dies

28 In that same year, at the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah of Judah, in the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Hananiah son of Azzur, from Gibeon, spoke to me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and all the people, saying, ²“Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. ³Within two years I will bring back to this place all the vessels of the LORD’s house, which King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon took away from this place and carried to Babylon. ⁴I will also bring back to this place King Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim of Judah, and all the exiles from Judah who went to Babylon, says the LORD, for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.”

⁵ Then the prophet Jeremiah spoke to the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests and all the people who were standing in the house of the LORD; ⁶and the prophet Jeremiah said, “Amen! May the LORD do so; may the LORD fulfill the words that you have prophesied, and bring back to this place from Babylon the vessels of the house of the LORD, and all the exiles. ⁷But listen now to this word that I speak in your hearing and in the hearing of all the people. ⁸The prophets who preceded you and me from ancient times prophesied war, famine, and pestilence against many countries and great kingdoms. ⁹As for the prophet who prophesies peace, when the word of that prophet comes true, then it will be known that the LORD has truly sent the prophet.”

¹⁰ Then the prophet Hananiah took the yoke from the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, and broke it. ¹¹And Hananiah spoke in the presence of all the people, saying, “Thus says the LORD: This is how I will break the yoke of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon from the neck of all the nations within two years.” At this, the prophet Jeremiah went his way.

¹² Sometime after the prophet Hananiah had broken the yoke from the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ¹³Go, tell Hananiah, Thus says the LORD: You have broken wooden bars only to forge iron bars in place of them! ¹⁴For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I have put an iron yoke on the neck of all these nations so that they may serve King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, and they shall indeed serve him; I have even given him the wild animals. ¹⁵And the prophet Jeremiah said to the prophet Hananiah, “Listen, Hananiah, the LORD has not sent you, and you made this people trust in a lie. ¹⁶Therefore thus says the LORD: I am going to send you off the face of the earth. Within this year you will be dead, because you have spoken rebellion against the LORD.”

¹⁷ In that same year, in the seventh month, the prophet Hananiah died.

Jeremiah’s Letter to the Exiles in Babylon

29 These are the words of the letter that the prophet Jeremiah sent from Jerusalem to the remaining elders among the exiles, and to the priests, the prophets, and all the people, whom Nebu-be taken to Babylon (see 2 Kings 25.13–17). 28.1–17 This prose narrative is the best illustration of conflict between two prophets who claim to be spokespersons for God (see 23.9–40). Hananiah (whose name in Hebrew means “Yahweh has been gracious”) utters an oracle of salvation: the yoke of Babylon has been broken and within two years God will bring back to Jerusalem King Jehoiachin, the exiles of 597 B.C.E., and the sacred vessels stolen from the temple. Jeremiah, wearing a yoke, which symbolizes submission to Babylon (see ch. 27), opposes Hananiah and his hopeful word. Indeed, he announces an oracle of judgment against Hananiah, a prophecy that comes to pass in his death that same year (v. 17). 28.1 The Septuagint reads only “in the fourth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fifth month,” which must be correct. The Hebrew, which is translated here, is contradictory, for the beginning would be 597 B.C.E., while the fourth year would be 594/3 B.C.E. Gibeon is modern el-Jib, five and a half miles northwest of Jerusalem. It contained a great high place where Solomon prayed for wisdom (1 Kings 3.4–15). 28.8–9 While there were occasional oracles of salvation from true prophets, the prophetic tradition was dominated by announcements of punishment. By contrast, false prophets generally promised good fortune (see Deut 18.20–22).

29.1–32 This prose narrative describes how chadnezzar had taken into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon. ²This was after King Jeconiah, and the queen mother, the court officials, the leaders of Judah and Jerusalem, the artisans, and the smiths had departed from Jerusalem. ³The letter was sent by the hand of Elasah son of Shaphan and Gemariah son of Hilkiah, whom King Zedekiah of Judah sent to Babylon to King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. It said: ⁴Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, to all the exiles whom I have sent into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon: ⁵Build houses and live in them; plant gardens and eat what they produce. ⁶Take wives and have sons and daughters; take wives for your sons, and give your daughters in marriage, that they may bear sons and daughters; multiply there, and do not decrease. ⁷But seek the welfare of the city where I have sent you into exile, and pray to the LORD on its behalf, for in its welfare you will find your welfare. ⁸For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Do not let the prophets and the diviners who are among you deceive you, and do not listen to the dreams that they dream, ⁹for it is a lie that they are prophesying to you in my name; I did not send them, says the LORD.

¹⁰ For thus says the LORD: Only when Babylon's seventy years are completed will I visit you, and I will fulfill to you my promise and bring you back to this place. ¹¹For surely I know the plans I have for you, says the LORD, plans for your welfare and not for harm, to give you a future with hope. ¹²Then when you call upon me and come and pray to me, I will hear you. ¹³When you search for me, you will find me; if you seek me with all your heart, ¹⁴I will let you find me, says the LORD, and I will restore your fortunes and gather you from all the nations and all the places where I have driven you, says the LORD, and I will bring you back to the place from which I sent you into exile.

¹⁵ Because you have said, "The LORD has raised up prophets for us in Babylon," — ¹⁶Thus says the LORD concerning the king who sits on the throne of David, and concerning all the people who live in this city, your kinsfolk who did not go out with you into exile: ¹⁷Thus says the LORD of hosts, I am going to let loose on them sword, famine, and pestilence, and I will make them like rotten figs that are so bad they cannot be eaten. ¹⁸I will pursue them with the sword, with famine, and with pestilence, and will make them a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be an object of cursing, and horror, and hissing, and a derision among all the nations where I have driven them, ¹⁹because they did not heed my words, says the LORD, when I persistently sent to you my servants the prophets, but they would not listen, says the LORD. ²⁰But now, all you exiles whom I sent away from Jerusalem to Babylon, hear the word of the LORD: ²¹Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning Ahab son of Kolaiah and Zedekiah son of Maaseiah, who are prophesying a lie to you in my name: I am going to deliver them into the hand of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, and he shall kill them before your eyes. ²²And on account of them this curse shall be used by all the exiles from Judah in Babylon: "The LORD make you like Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire," ²³because they have perpetrated outrage in Israel and have commit-the exiles in Babylon were incited to consider rebellion by false prophets who predicted an early return from exile. The time frame is apparently the same as that for chs. 27–28 (594/3 B.C.E.). Jeremiah writes letters to oppose these false hopes for an early return. Singled out for condemnation in the first letter were two prophets, Ahab son of Kolaiah and Zedekiah son of Maaseiah. In the second letter, Shemaiah of Nehelam, who had attempted without success to silence Jeremiah, receives the judgment of the prophet (see note on 26.1–29.32). The chapter consists of two parts: a general letter to the exiles (vv. 1–23) and a letter concerning Shemaiah (vv. 24–32). 29.2 Jeconiah is another spelling for the name Jehoiachin (see 22.24–30). 29.3 Elasah was probably the brother of Ahikam son of Shaphan (see note on 26.24). Gemariah may have been the son of Hilkiah the high priest, who was involved in the discovery of the book of the law during the reign of Josiah (see 2 Kings 22–23). If so, Jeremiah was supported by two very powerful families in Judah who had been involved in Josiah's reform. 29.4–7 The exiles are to build their lives in Babylon and not expect immediate restoration. Indeed, they are to seek the welfare of Babylon. 29.10–14 For a discussion of seventy years, see note on 25.11. 29.16–20 See ch. 24. These

The Letter Against Shemaiah

24 To Shemaiah of Nehelam you shall say: 25 Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: In your own name you sent a letter to all the people who are in Jerusalem, and to the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah, and to all the priests, saying, 26 The LORD himself has made you priest instead of the priest Jehoiada, so that there may be officers in the house of the LORD to control any madman who plays the prophet, to put him in the stocks and the collar. 27 So now why have you not rebuked Jeremiah of Anathoth who plays the prophet for you? 28 For he has actually sent to us in Babylon, saying, "It will be a long time; build houses and live in them, and plant gardens and eat what they produce."

29 The priest Zephaniah read this letter in the hearing of the prophet Jeremiah. 30 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: 31 Send to all the exiles, saying, Thus says the LORD concerning Shemaiah of Nehelam: Because Shemaiah has prophesied to you, though I did not send him, and has led you to trust in a lie, 32 therefore thus says the LORD: I am going to punish Shemaiah of Nehelam and his descendants; he shall not have anyone living among this people to see^k the good that I am going to do to my people, says the LORD, for he has spoken rebellion against the LORD.

Restoration Promised for Israel and Judah

30 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 2 Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Write in a book all the words that I have spoken to you. 3 For the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will restore the fortunes of my people, Israel and Judah, says the LORD, and I will bring them back to the land that I gave to their ancestors and they shall take possession of it.

4 These are the words that the LORD spoke concerning Israel and Judah:

5 Thus says the LORD:

We have heard a cry of panic,
of terror, and no peace.

6 Ask now, and see,

can a man bear a child?

Why then do I see every man with his hands on his loins like a woman in labor?

Why has every face turned pale?

7 Alas! that day is so great

there is none like it;

it is a time of distress for Jacob;
yet he shall be rescued from it.

8 On that day, says the LORD of hosts,

30.1–31.40 The Book of Consolation. The poetic and prose oracles in this collection speak of the future restoration of Israel and Judah. There is considerable debate as to which of these oracles may derive from Jeremiah. The best cases may be made for Jeremian authorship of 30.5–7, 12–15; 31.2–6; 31.15–22. Two dates are often assigned to the oracles uttered by Jeremiah: the early part of his ministry and after the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.E. The oracles most likely date from the later period, during the governorship of Gedaliah, who was appointed by the Babylonians to administer the provincial district into which Judah was incorporated (40.7–41.18; 2 Kings 25.22–26). The other oracles derive from the exilic and postexilic periods. The form that predominates in this collection is the "prophecy of salvation." It contains the following parts: the appeal for attention and/or the introductory messenger formula (e.g., "Thus says the LORD"), the description of the present situation, the prediction of salvation, a final characterization either of God or of the message, and the concluding messenger formula ("says the LORD"). 30.1–4 General introduction. These verses are an editorial introduction to the oracles of salvation in chs. 30–31. The oracles pertain to both Israel and Judah. 30.5–7 The day of God's judgment upon Israel. Dominated by rhetorical questions, this poem is a lament over the great and terrible day of God's judgment against Jacob. For the "day of the LORD," see Isa 2.12–21; Am 5.18–20; Zeph 1.14–18. Laments dominate Jer 11.18–20.18. The last line of v. 7 is added to form a transition to vv. 8–9. 30.8–9 This prose oracle of salva-

I will break the yoke from off his¹ neck, and I will burst his¹ bonds, and strangers shall no more make a servant of him.
9 But they shall serve the LORD their God and David their king, whom I will raise up for them.

- 10 But as for you, have no fear, my servant Jacob, says the LORD,
and do not be dismayed,
O Israel;
for I am going to save you from
far away,
and your offspring from the
land of their captivity.
Jacob shall return and have quiet
and ease,
and no one shall make him
afraid.
- 11 For I am with you, says the LORD,
to save you;
I will make an end of all the
nations
among which I scattered you, but of you I will not make
an end.
I will chastise you in just
measure,
and I will by no means leave
you unpunished.
- 12 For thus says the LORD:
Your hurt is incurable,
your wound is grievous.
- 13 There is no one to uphold your cause,
no medicine for your wound,
no healing for you.
- 14 All your lovers have forgotten you;
they care nothing for you;

for I have dealt you the blow of an enemy,
the punishment of a merciless foe,
because your guilt is great,
because your sins are so numerous.

- 15 Why do you cry out over your hurt?
Your pain is incurable.
Because your guilt is great,
because your sins are so
numerous,
I have done these things
to you.
- 16 Therefore all who devour you shall be devoured,
and all your foes, everyone of them, shall go into
captivity;
those who plunder you shall be
plundered,
and all who prey on you I will make a prey.
- 17 For I will restore health to you, and your wounds I will heal,
says the LORD,
because they have called you
an outcast:
"It is Zion; no one cares for her!"
- 18 Thus says the LORD:
I am going to restore the fortunes of the tents of Jacob,
and have compassion on his dwellings;
the city shall be rebuilt upon its mound,

tion by a later hand promises the removal of the yoke (see chs. 27–28) and the restoration of the Davidic monarchy (23.5–6; 33.14–26; Ezek 34.24; Hos 3.5). Jeremiah himself placed little importance on the restoration of the monarchy (see 21.11–23.8). 30.10–11 The salvation of Jacob, i.e., Israel, the Lord's servant. 46.27–28 almost duplicates this oracle of salvation. The language and content resonates with Second Isaiah (an anonymous poet of the exile, whose oracles are collected in Isa 40–55; see Isa 41.8–14; 43.1–5). Israel as the servant of the Lord is a common expression in Second Isaiah (see Isa 44.1, 2, 21). 30.12–17 Though Jerusalem is incurably

For a similar description of Zion's distress and lamentation, see 4.31: 8.18–21; 9.17–19. 30.14 Zion's lovers (probably allies) have abandoned her. Jeremiah may be speaking of the Egyptians who withdrew before the Babylonian advance (37.5). Other states that joined in the rebellion beginning in 589 B.C.E. included at least Tyre and Ammon. 30.18–22 This oracle of salvation speaks of the restoration of Jacob (Israel), the Israelites' thanksgiving over their return, their increase in population, and their own prince who shall approach the praised in hymnic celebration (see Second Isaiah, i.e., Isa 40–55). 31.9 God as father is a common metaphor in the Hebrew Bible (see esp. Jer 3.19; 31.20; Hos 11.1). Israel is designated as the Lord's firstborn, a designation of election (Ex 4.22). In Israel the firstborn was privileged with a double share of the father's estate, received the paternal blessing, and succeeded him in authority. 31.10–14 Exiles rejoice as they return. Another oracle of salvation in which Israel returns from exile and in Jerusalem praises God for many blessings. The lamentation during periods of peril will turn into thanksgiving. 31.15–22 Rachel's weeping and the return of her children.

31.15 In biblical tradition, Rachel, the more favored wife of Jacob (Israel, Gen 35.10), was the mother of Joseph and Benjamin. Joseph had two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh. Along with her sister Leah and their handmaidens, Rachel is one of the matriarchs of the nation (see Gen 25–35). Ramah (modern er-Ram), located five miles north of Jerusalem, appears to have been the place where the exiles were gathered for deportation to Babylon (40.1, 4). According to one tradition (1 Sam 10.2), Rachel's grave was located in the territory of Benjamin, thus to the north of Jerusalem. For an alternate location, see Gen 35.16–20; 48.7; Mt 2.18. The dead Rachel is heard weeping over her covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put my law within them, and I will write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. ³⁴No longer shall they teach one another, or say to each other, "Know the LORD," for they shall all know me, from the least of them to the greatest, says the LORD; for I will forgive their iniquity, and remember their sin no more.

God's Abiding Commitment to Israel

- 35 Thus says the LORD,
 who gives the sun for light by day and the fixed order of the moon and the stars for light by night,
 who stirs up the sea so that its
 waves roar —
 the LORD of hosts is his name:
 36 If this fixed order were ever to cease
 from my presence, says the LORD,
 then also the offspring of Israel would cease
 to be a nation before me
 forever.
- 37 Thus says the LORD:
 If the heavens above can be measured,
 and the foundations of the earth below can be explored,
 then I will reject all the offspring
 of Israel
 because of all they have done,
 says the LORD.

Jerusalem to Be Enlarged

38 The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when the city shall be rebuilt for the LORD from the tower of Hananel to the Corner Gate. ³⁹And the measuring line shall go out farther, straight to the hill Gareb, and shall then turn to Goah. ⁴⁰The whole valley of the dead bodies and the ashes, and all the fields as far as the Wadi Kidron, to the corner of the Horse Gate toward the east, shall be sacred to the LORD. It shall never again be uprooted or overthrown.

Jeremiah Buys a Field During the Siege

32 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the tenth year of King Zedekiah of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar. ²At that time the army of the king of Babylon was besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremiah was confined in the court of the guard that was in the palace of the king of Judah, ³where King Zedekiah of Judah had confined him. Zedekiah had said, "Why do you prophesy and say: Thus says the LORD: I am going to give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it; ⁴King Zedekiah of Judah shall not escape out of the hands of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be given into the hands of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him face to face and see him eye to eye; ⁵and he shall take Zedekiah to Babylon, and there he shall remain until I attend to him, says the LORD; though you fight against the Chaldeans, you shall not succeed?"

⁶ Jeremiah said, The word of the

(see 34.18; Gen 15.7–21). 31.35–37 The continuation of Israel. This oracle of salvation makes use of hymnic language praising the God of creation. The power of God revealed in the endless cycle of days and seasons and the unfathomable character of the heavens and the earth guarantees Israel's continuation (see Isa 40.12, 26; 42.5; 44.24; 45.7, 18; 54.10). 31.38–40 Jerusalem will be rebuilt and enlarged and the areas desecrated by death will be purified (see Zech 14.10–11). The boundaries of Jerusalem are mentioned: the tower of Hananel in the northeast (Neh 3.1), the Corner Gate in the northwest (2 Kings 14.13), the southern boundary of Hinnom (7.31–32), the eastern boundary of Kidron (2 Kings 23.4, 6), and the Horse Gate in the southeast corner (Neh 3.28).

Gareb and Goah are unknown. The valley of the dead bodies and the ashes must be the valley of Hinnom, where child sacrifice was practiced (see 7.31–32; 19.2, 6; 32.35; 2 Kings 23.10).

32.1–44 Jeremiah's purchase of a field in Anathoth, another symbolic act, illustrates Jeremiah's preaching (see note on 13.1–11). 32.1 This prose narrative is set in 588 B.C.E., during the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. 32.2 Jeremiah was imprisoned for attempting to leave the city to go to Anathoth when the siege was temporarily lifted. He was accused of deserting to the enemy (see 37.11–21). 32.3–5 Zedekiah accused Jeremiah of treason and insurrection (see Am 7.10–17). 32.6–8 The right of redemption was a means to prevent the threatened LORD came to me: ⁷Hanamel son of your uncle Shallum is going to come to you and say, "Buy my field that is at Anathoth, for the right of redemption by purchase is yours." ⁸Then my cousin Hanamel came to me in the court of the guard, in accordance with the word of the LORD, and said to me, "Buy my field that is at Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, for the right of possession and redemption is yours; buy it for yourself." Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

⁹ And I bought the field at Anathoth from my cousin Hanamel, and weighed out the money to him, seventeen shekels of silver. ¹⁰I signed the deed, sealed it, got witnesses, and weighed the money on scales. ¹¹Then I took the sealed deed of purchase, containing the terms and conditions, and the open copy; ¹²and I gave the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah son of Mahseiah, in the presence of my cousin Hanamel, in the presence of the witnesses who signed the deed of purchase, and in the presence of all the Judeans who were sitting in the court of the guard. ¹³In their presence I charged Baruch, saying, ¹⁴Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these deeds, both this sealed deed of purchase and this open deed, and put them in an earthenware jar, in order that they may last for a long time. ¹⁵For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Houses and fields and vineyards shall again be bought in this land.

Jeremiah Prays for Understanding

¹⁶ After I had given the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah, I prayed to the LORD, saying: ¹⁷Ah Lord God! It is you who made the heavens and the earth by your great power and by your outstretched arm! Nothing is too hard for you. ¹⁸You show steadfast love to the thousandth generation,^u but repay the guilt of parents into the laps of their children after them, O great and mighty God whose name is the LORD of hosts, ¹⁹great in counsel and mighty in deed; whose eyes are open to all the ways of mortals, rewarding all according to their ways and according to the fruit of their doings. ²⁰You showed signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, and to this day in Israel and among all humankind, and have made yourself a name that continues to this very day. ²¹You brought your people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs and wonders, with a strong hand and outstretched arm, and with great terror; ²²and you gave them this land, which you swore to their ancestors to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey; ²³and they entered and took possession of it. But they did not obey your voice or follow your law; of all you commanded them to do, they did nothing. Therefore you have made all these disasters come upon them. ²⁴See, the siege ramps have been cast up against the city to take it, and the city, faced with sword, famine, and pestilence, has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans who are fighting against it. What you spoke has happened, as you yourself can see. ²⁵Yet you, O Lord God, have said to me, "Buy the field for money and get witnesses"—though the city has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans.

God's Assurance of the People's Return

²⁶ The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ²⁷See, I am the LORD, the God of all flesh; is anything too hard for me? ²⁸Therefore, thus says the LORD: I am going to give this city into the hands of the Chaldeans and into the hand of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, and he shall take it. ²⁹The Chaldeans who are fighting loss of family property (see Lev 25.25–28). 32.9–15 Seventeen shekels of silver (about seven ounces) refers to weight, not coins. Coins were probably not used until the Persian period (beginning in 539 B.C.E.). The official copy of the scroll was rolled up and sealed, while the open copy was unsealed for easy reference. Baruch was Jeremiah's secretary (amanuensis) and companion (see chs. 36; 45). The purchase of a field at the time of conquest and threatened exile underscores the prophet's faith in a future restoration.

32.16–25 A prayer of Jeremiah. See Neh 9.6–38. This prose prayer is similar to hymns praising God for great acts of salvation (Pss 78; 105; 106; 135; 136). 32.26–44 This response of God to Jeremiah's prayer outlines the sins of the people as the basis for the fall of Jerusalem. It is a history of disobedience (see Ezek 20.1–32). Yet God also promises a restoration in which the covenant will be renewed (cf. vv. 39–40 with 31.31–34). Even as Jeremiah purchased his field, so once again fields will be bought in the land.

against this city shall come, set it on fire, and burn it, with the houses on whose roofs offerings have been made to Baal and libations have been poured out to other gods, to provoke me to anger. ³⁰For the people of Israel and the people of Judah have done nothing but evil in my sight from their youth; the people of Israel have done nothing but provoke me to anger by the work of their hands, says the LORD. ³¹This city has aroused my anger and wrath, from the day it was built until this day, so that I will remove it from my sight ³²because of all the evil of the people of Israel and the people of Judah that they did to provoke me to anger—they, their kings and their officials, their priests and their prophets, the citizens of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ³³They have turned their backs to me, not their faces; though I have taught them persistently, they would not listen and accept correction. ³⁴They set up their abominations in the house that bears my name, and defiled it. ³⁵They built the high places of Baal in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to offer up their sons and daughters to Molech, though I did not command them, nor did it enter my mind that they should do this abomination, causing Judah to sin.

³⁶ Now therefore thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city of which you say, "It is being given into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence": ³⁷See, I am going to gather them from all the lands to which I drove them in my anger and my wrath and in great indignation; I will bring them back to this place, and I will settle them in safety. ³⁸They shall be my people, and I will be their God. ³⁹I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me for all time, for their own good and the good of their children after them. ⁴⁰I will make an everlasting covenant with them, never to draw back from doing good to them; and I will put the fear of me in their hearts, so that they may not turn from me. ⁴¹I will rejoice in doing good to them, and I will plant them in this land in faithfulness, with all my heart and all my soul.

⁴² For thus says the LORD: Just as I have brought all this great disaster upon this people, so I will bring upon them all the good fortune that I now promise them. ⁴³Fields shall be bought in this land of which you are saying, It is a desolation, without human beings or animals; it has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans. ⁴⁴Fields shall be bought for money, and deeds shall be signed and sealed and witnessed, in the land of Benjamin, in the places around Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, of the hill country, of the Shephelah, and of the Negeb; for I will restore their fortunes, says the LORD.

Healing After Punishment

33 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah a second time, while he was still confined in the court of the guard: ²Thus says the LORD who made the earth,^v the LORD who formed it to establish it—the LORD is his name: ³Call to me and I will answer you, and will tell you great and hidden things that you have not known. ⁴For thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city and the houses of the kings of Judah that were torn down to make a defense against the siege ramps and before the sword:^w ⁵The Chaldeans are coming in to fight^x and to fill them with the dead bodies of those whom I shall strike down in my anger and my wrath, for I have hidden my face from this city because of all their wickedness. ⁶I am going to bring it recovery and healing; I will heal them and reveal to them abundance^y of prosperity and security. ⁷I will restore the fortunes of Judah and the fortunes of Israel, and rebuild them as they were at first. ⁸I will cleanse them from all the guilt of their sin against me, and I will forgive all the guilt of their sin and rebellion against me. ⁹And this city^y shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and a glory before all the na-

33.1-26 Promises of future restoration. Continuing the theme of salvation in chs. 30-32, this chapter consists of various sections that speak of future restoration. 33.1-9 Destroyed Jerusalem will be rebuilt. 33.1 See ch. 32. 33.2-3

The prose sermon begins with a hymnic acclamation of the Lord as Creator (see 31.35-37). 33.4-5 The imminent destruction of Jerusalem is reaffirmed. 33.6-9 Nevertheless, Israel and Judah will be forgiven and restored and Jerusalem

tions of the earth who shall hear of all the good that I do for them; they shall fear and tremble because of all the good and all the prosperity I provide for it.

10 Thus says the LORD: In this place of which you say, "It is a waste without human beings or animals," in the towns of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem that are desolate, without inhabitants, human or animal, there shall once more be heard the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the voices of those who sing, as they bring thank offerings to the house of the LORD:

"Give thanks to the LORD of
hosts,
for the LORD is good,
for his steadfast love endures
forever!"

For I will restore the fortunes of the land as at first, says the LORD.

12 Thus says the LORD of hosts: In this place that is waste, without human beings or animals, and in all its towns there shall again be pasture for shepherds resting their flocks. ¹³In the towns of the hill country, of the Shephelah, and of the Negeb, in the land of Benjamin, the places around Jerusalem, and in the towns of Judah, flocks shall again pass under the hands of the one who counts them, says the LORD.

The Righteous Branch and the Covenant with David

14 The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will fulfill the promise I made to the house of Israel and the house of Judah. ¹⁵In those days and at that time I will cause a righteous Branch to spring up for David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. ¹⁶In those days Judah will be saved and Jerusalem will live in safety. And this is the name by which it will be called: "The LORD is our righteousness."

17 For thus says the LORD: David shall never lack a man to sit on the throne of the house of Israel, ¹⁸and the levitical priests shall never lack a man in my presence to offer burnt offerings, to make grain offerings, and to make sacrifices for all time.

19 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ²⁰Thus says the LORD: If any of you could break my covenant with the day and my covenant with the night, so that day and night would not come at their appointed time, ²¹only then could my covenant with my servant David be broken, so that he would not have a son to reign on his throne, and my covenant with my ministers the Levites. ²²Just as the host of heaven cannot be numbered and the sands of the sea cannot be measured, so I will increase the offspring of my servant David, and the Levites who minister to me, ²³ The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ²⁴Have you not observed how these people say, "The two families that the LORD chose have been rejected by him," and how they hold my people in such contempt that they no longer regard them as a nation? ²⁵Thus says the LORD: Only if I had not established my covenant with day and night and the ordinances of heaven and earth, ²⁶would I reject the offspring of Jacob and of my servant David and not choose any of his descendants as rulers over the offspring of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. For I will restore their fortunes, and will have mercy upon them.

Judgment Against Zedekiah

34 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, when King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and all his army and all the kingdoms of the earth and all rebuilt. 33.10–11 This oracle of salvation announces the return of gladness to a desolate land. For thank offerings and thanksgiving psalms, see Lev 7.11–18; Ps 107. The poetic quotation (v. 11b) comes from Ps 136.1, a thanksgiving psalm that praises God for mighty acts of salvation. 33.12–13 A prose oracle of salvation that promises pastures and flocks in the restoration period. 33.14–26 Future leaders. This prose oracle of salvation is an expansion of 23.5–6.

Coming from the exile, it promises the restoration of the Davidic monarchy and the Levitical priesthood. These verses are not in the Septuagint. God's promises to David and the Levites will be honored (Deut 18.1–8; 2 Sam 7). See Hag 1.1; 2.23; Zech 4.11–14; 6.9–13. 33.15–16 Jerusalem, not the future king, will be called The LORD is our righteousness (see 23.5–6).

34.1–7 A prose oracle of judgment against Zedekiah (cf. the oracle against Hananiah in the peoples under his dominion were fighting against Jerusalem and all its cities: ²Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Go and speak to King Zedekiah of Judah and say to him: Thus says the LORD: I am going to give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire. ³And you yourself shall not escape from his hand, but shall surely be captured and handed over to him; you shall see the king of Babylon eye to eye and speak with him face to face; and you shall go to Babylon. ⁴Yet hear the word of the LORD, O King Zedekiah of Judah! Thus says the LORD concerning you: You shall not die by the sword; ⁵you shall die in peace. And as spices were burned^z for your ancestors, the earlier kings who preceded you, so they shall burn spices^a for you and lament for you, saying, "Alas, lord!" For I have spoken the word, says the LORD.

⁶ Then the prophet Jeremiah spoke all these words to Zedekiah king of Judah, in Jerusalem, ⁷when the army of the king of Babylon was fighting against Jerusalem and against all the cities of Judah that were left, Lachish and Azekah; for these were the only fortified cities of Judah that remained.

Treacherous Treatment of Slaves

⁸ The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, after King Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people in Jerusalem to make a proclamation of liberty to them— ⁹that all should set free their Hebrew slaves, male and female, so that no one should hold another Judean in slavery. ¹⁰And they obeyed, all the officials and all the people who had entered into the covenant that all would set free their slaves, male or female, so that they would not be enslaved again; they obeyed and set them free. ¹¹But afterward they turned around and took back the male and female slaves they had set free, and brought them again into subjection as slaves. ¹²The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ¹³Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I myself made a covenant with your ancestors when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery, saying, ¹⁴"Every seventh year each of you must set free any Hebrews who have been sold to you and have served you six years; you must set them free from your service." But your ancestors did not listen to me or incline their ears to me. ¹⁵You yourselves recently repented and did what was right in my sight by proclaiming liberty to one another, and you made a covenant before me in the house that is called by my name; ¹⁶but then you turned around and profaned my name when each of you took back your male and female slaves, whom you had set free according to their desire, and you brought them again into subjection to be your slaves. ¹⁷Therefore, thus says the LORD: You have not obeyed me by granting a release to your neighbors and friends; I am going to grant a release to you, says the LORD—a release to the sword, to pestilence, and to famine. I will make you a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth. ¹⁸And those who transgressed ch. 28). The sermon is set at the onset of the siege of Jerusalem. Jeremiah was not yet imprisoned. 34.3–5 Zedekiah was blinded and exiled to Babylon, where he died in prison (39.7; 52.8–11; 2 Kings 25.5–7). In contrast to Jehoiakim (see 22.13–19), Zedekiah will have a funeral and be lamented. To burn spices was part of a royal funeral (2 Chr 16.14; 21.19). 34.7 Lachish is modern Tell ed-Duweir, located about thirty miles southwest of Jerusalem. It was a major walled fortress city located between Jerusalem and Gaza. Azekah (modern Tell ez-Zahariyeh), lying to the northeast of Lachish, was also a fortified city. In the fourth letter of the Lachish ostraca, recovered from a tower in the outer city gate and dated to the period just before the fall of Jerusalem, Hoshai, an official in an outpost to the north of Lachish, writes to Yaosh, its military commander: "We are looking for the signals of Lachish, according to all the indications my Lord has given, because we do not see Azekah."

34.8–22 Slaves and the broken covenant. This prose narrative is set during the siege of Jerusalem (588 B.C.E.). King Zedekiah and the population entered into covenant to release their Hebrew slaves in the hopes of gaining God's help. However, when Nebuchadnezzar temporarily lifted the siege to oppose an advancing Egyptian army (cf. 37.6–11), the people broke their covenantal oath by re-enslaving the slaves they had set free. This act of bad faith leads to an oracle of judgment against Jerusalem. 34.14 The law quoted is Deut 15.1, 12 (see Ex 21.2). 34.18–19 These verses describe the ritual of covmy covenant and did not keep the terms of the covenant that they made before me, I will make like^b the calf when they cut it in two and passed between its parts: ¹⁹the officials of Judah, the officials of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, the priests, and all the people of the land who passed between the parts of the calf ²⁰shall be handed over to their enemies and to those who seek their lives. Their corpses shall become food for the birds of the air and the wild animals of the earth. ²¹And as for King Zedekiah of Judah and his officials, I will hand them over to their enemies and to those who seek their lives, to the army of the king of Babylon, which has withdrawn from you. ²²I am going to command, says the LORD, and will bring them back to this city; and they will fight against it, and take it, and burn it with fire. The towns of Judah I will make a desolation without inhabitant.

The Rechabites Commended

35 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah: ²Go to the house of the Rechabites, and speak with them, and bring them to the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers; then offer them wine to drink. ³So I took Jaazaniah son of Jeremiah son of Habazziniah, and his brothers, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites. ⁴I brought them to the house of the LORD into the chamber of the sons of Hanan son of Igdaliah, the man of God, which was near the chamber of the officials, above the chamber of Maaseiah son of Shallum, keeper of the threshold. ⁵Then I set before the Rechabites pitchers full of wine, and cups; and I said to them, "Have some wine." ⁶But they answered, "We will drink no wine, for our ancestor Jonadab son of Rechab commanded us, 'You shall never drink wine, neither you nor your children; ⁷nor shall you ever build a house, or sow seed; nor shall you plant a vineyard, or even own one; but you shall live in tents all your days, that you may live many days in the land where you reside.' ⁸We have obeyed the charge of our ancestor Jonadab son of Rechab in all that he commanded us, to drink no wine all our days, ourselves, our wives, our sons, or our daughters, ⁹and not to build houses to live in. We have no vineyard or field or seed; ¹⁰but we have lived in tents, and have obeyed and done all that our ancestor Jonadab commanded us. ¹¹But when King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon came up against the land, we said, 'Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans and the army of the Arameans.' That is why we are living in Jerusalem."

¹² Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ¹³Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Go and say to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Can you not learn a lesson and obey my words? says the LORD. ¹⁴The command has been carried out that Jonadab son of Rechab gave to his descendants to drink no wine; and they drink none to this day, for they have obeyed their ancestor's command. But I myself have spoken to you persistently, and you have not obeyed me. ¹⁵I have sent to you all my servants the prophets, sending them persistently, saying, "Turn now everyone of you from your evil way, and amend your doings, and do not go after other gods to serve them, and then you shall live in the land that I gave to you and your ancestors." But you did not incline your ear or obey me. ¹⁶The descendants of Jonadab son of Rechab have carried out the command that their ancestor gave them, but this people has not obeyed me. ¹⁷Therefore, thus says the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring on Judah and on all the inhabitants of Jerusalem every disaster that I have pronounced against them; because I have spoken to them and they have not enant making, "to cut a covenant" (see note on 31.33; Gen 15.7–21).

35.1–19 Set in the reign of Jehoiakim (609–598 B.C.E.), this prose narrative describes the faithfulness of the Rechabites, a religious sect named in honor of their founder, Jonadab the son of Rechab, during the reign of Jehu (842–815

B.C.E.). Presumably the editor who positioned chs. 34 and 35 next to each other wished to contrast the covenant loyalty of the Rechabites with the faithlessness of the citizens of Jerusalem exhibited in taking back their slaves. The Rechabites abstained from wine, lived as nomads in tents, and did not practice agriculture, all in accordance listened, I have called to them and they have not answered.

18 But to the house of the Rechabites Jeremiah said: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Because you have obeyed the command of your ancestor Jonadab, and kept all his precepts, and done all that he commanded you, ¹⁹therefore thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Jonadab son of Rechab shall not lack a descendant to stand before me for all time.

The Scroll Read in the Temple

36 In the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ²Take a scroll and write on it all the words that I have spoken to you against Israel and Judah and all the nations, from the day I spoke to you, from the days of Josiah until today. ³It may be that when the house of Judah hears of all the disasters that I intend to do to them, all of them may turn from their evil ways, so that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah called Baruch son of Neriah, and Baruch wrote on a scroll at Jeremiah's dictation all the words of the LORD that he had spoken to him. ⁵And Jeremiah ordered Baruch, saying, "I am prevented from entering the house of the LORD; ⁶so you go yourself, and on a fast day in the hearing of the people in the LORD's house you shall read the words of the LORD from the scroll that you have written at my dictation. You shall read them also in the hearing of all the people of Judah who come up from their towns. ⁷It may be that their plea will come before the LORD, and that all of them will turn from their evil ways, for great is the anger and wrath that the LORD has pronounced against this people." ⁸And Baruch son of Neriah did all that the prophet Jeremiah ordered him about reading from the scroll the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

9 In the fifth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, in the ninth month, all the people in Jerusalem and all the people who came from the towns of Judah to Jerusalem proclaimed a fast before the LORD. ¹⁰Then, in the hearing of all the people, Baruch read the words of Jeremiah from the scroll, in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah son of Shaphan the secretary, which was in the upper court, at the entry of the New Gate of the LORD's house.

The Scroll Read in the Palace

11 When Micaiah son of Gemariah son of Shaphan heard all the words of the LORD from the scroll, ¹²he went down to

with the principles of Jonadab. 35.19 To stand before me (before God) is a priestly prerogative. The Rechabites were not priests, but their devotion was a form of divine service.

36.1–32 The two scrolls of Baruch. Clues to the composition of the book of Jeremiah are contained in this chapter. The story begins with the fourth year of King Jehoiakim (605 B.C.E., v. 1), the same year of the battle of Carchemish (see Introduction), and describes the formation of two scrolls of Baruch. The first scroll contained the prophecies of Jeremiah from 627 to 605 B.C.E., described primarily as oracles of judgment. The purpose of the scroll was to present the "house of Judah" an opportunity to repent, be forgiven, and avoid destruction (see 25. 1–14). Baruch, Jeremiah's companion and secretary, belonged to an important family in Jerusalem and was a royal scribe (36.32; see chs. 32; 45). His brother, Seraiah, was minister to Zedekiah (51.59). Seals of the two brothers have been excavated. Baruch's reads: "to/from Baruch / son of Neriah / the scribe." Numerous efforts to reconstruct the two scrolls have been undertaken (see Introduction).

If ch. 36 is historical, we may have indications of the first two editions of the book of Jeremiah. 36.5 Jeremiah was barred from the temple precinct, possibly because of the temple sermon (see chs. 7; 26). 36.6 Public fasts were held periodically, especially during times of distress (see 2 Chr 20.3; Ezra 8.21–23; Neh 1.4–11). Since these were periods of penance in which lamenting, wearing sackcloth, offering sacrifices, and fasting made up the ritual, a fast day was appropriate for reading to the people assembled in the temple Jeremiah's oracles of judgment. 36.9 The fifth year of King Jehoiakim (604 B.C.E.) would coincide with Nebuchadrezzar's advance into the Philistine plain where he conquered Ashkelon. Shortly thereafter, Jehoiakim declared his allegiance to Nebuchadrezzar. 36.11–13 Elnathan was the father of Nehushta, the mother of Jehoiachin (2 Kings 24.8), and the leader of the party that captured Uriah and brought him to Jehoiakim for execution (26.22–23). Gemariah was the son of Shaphan, the royal secretary to whom Hilkiah, the high priest, revealed the discovery of the "book of the law" in the temple (2 Kings 22). Micaiah was the king's house, into the secretary's chamber; and all the officials were sitting there: Elishama the secretary, Delaiah son of Shemaiah, Elnathan son of Achbor, Gemariah son of Shaphan, Zedekiah son of Hananiah, and all the officials. ¹³ And Micaiah told them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the scroll in the hearing of the people. ¹⁴ Then all the officials sent Jehudi son of Nethaniah son of Shelemiah son of Cushi to say to Baruch, "Bring the scroll that you read in the hearing of the people, and come." So Baruch son of Neriah took the scroll in his hand and came to them. ¹⁵ And they said to him, "Sit down and read it to us." So Baruch read it to them. ¹⁶ When they heard all the words, they turned to one another in alarm, and said to Baruch, "We certainly must report all these words to the king." ¹⁷ Then they questioned Baruch, "Tell us now, how did you write all these words? Was it at his dictation?" ¹⁸ Baruch answered them, "He dictated all these words to me, and I wrote them with ink on the scroll." ¹⁹ Then the officials said to Baruch, "Go and hide, you and Jeremiah, and let no one know where you are."

Jehoiakim Burns the Scroll

²⁰ Leaving the scroll in the chamber of Elishama the secretary, they went to the court of the king; and they reported all the words to the king. ²¹ Then the king sent Jehudi to get the scroll, and he took it from the chamber of Elishama the secretary; and Jehudi read it to the king and all the officials who stood beside the king. ²² Now the king was sitting in his winter apartment (it was the ninth month), and there was a fire burning in the brazier before him. ²³ As Jehudi read three or four columns, the king^c would cut them off with a penknife and throw them into the fire in the brazier, until the entire scroll was consumed in the fire that was in the brazier. ²⁴ Yet neither the king, nor any of his servants who heard all these words, was alarmed, nor did they tear their garments. ²⁵ Even when Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah urged the king not to burn the scroll, he would not listen to them. ²⁶ And the king commanded Jerahmeel the king's son and Seraiah son of Azriel and Shelemiah son of Abdeel to arrest the secretary Baruch and the prophet Jeremiah. But the LORD hid them.

Jeremiah Dictates Another

²⁷ Now, after the king had burned the scroll with the words that Baruch wrote at Jeremiah's dictation, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ²⁸ Take another scroll and write on it all the former words that were in the first scroll, which King Jehoiakim of Judah has burned. ²⁹ And concerning King Jehoiakim of Judah you shall say: Thus says the LORD, You have dared to burn this scroll, saying, Why have you written in it that the king of Babylon will certainly come and destroy this land, and will cut off from it human beings and animals? ³⁰ Therefore thus says the LORD concerning King Jehoiakim of Judah: He shall have no one to sit upon the throne of David, and his dead body shall be cast out to the heat by day and the frost by night. ³¹ And I will punish him and his offspring and his servants for their iniquity; I will bring on them, and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and on the people of Judah, all the disasters with which I have threatened them—but they would not listen.

³² Then Jeremiah took another scroll and gave it to the secretary Baruch son of Neriah, who wrote on it at Jeremiah's dictation all the words of the scroll that King Jehoiakim of Judah had burned in the fire; and many similar words were added to them.

Zedekiah's Vain Hope

37 Zedekiah son of Josiah, whom King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon made king in the land of Judah, succeeded Coniah son of Jehoiakim. ² But neither he nor his servants nor the people his son. Interestingly, Shaphan read the newly discovered law to King Josiah but received a positive response. 36.30 See note on 22.13–19. Jehoiakim was succeeded by his son Jehoiachin, who ruled for three months (see note on 22.24–30).

37.1–38.28 Jeremiah and Zedekiah. The prose narratives in these two chapters are sequential accounts of Jeremiah's dealings with Zedekiah during the Babylonian siege of Jerusalem. 37.1–10 News of an advancing Egyptian army of the land listened to the words of the LORD that he spoke through the prophet Jeremiah.

3 King Zedekiah sent Jehucal son of Shelemiah and the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah to the prophet Jeremiah saying, "Please pray for us to the LORD our God." 4 Now Jeremiah was still going in and out among the people, for he had not yet been put in prison. 5 Meanwhile, the army of Pharaoh had come out of Egypt; and when the Chaldeans who were besieging Jerusalem heard news of them, they withdrew from Jerusalem.

6 Then the word of the LORD came to the prophet Jeremiah: 7 Thus says the LORD, God of Israel: This is what the two of you shall say to the king of Judah, who sent you to me to inquire of me: Pharaoh's army, which set out to help you, is going to return to its own land, to Egypt. 8 And the Chaldeans shall return and fight against this city; they shall take it and burn it with fire. 9 Thus says the LORD: Do not deceive yourselves, saying, "The Chaldeans will surely go away from us," for they will not go away. 10 Even if you defeated the whole army of Chaldeans who are fighting against you, and there remained of them only wounded men in their tents, they would rise up and burn this city with fire.

Jeremiah Is Imprisoned

11 Now when the Chaldean army had withdrawn from Jerusalem at the approach of Pharaoh's army, 12 Jeremiah set out from Jerusalem to go to the land of Benjamin to receive his share of property^d among the people there. 13 When he reached the Benjamin Gate, a sentinel there named Irijah son of Shelemiah son of Hananiah arrested the prophet Jeremiah saying, "You are deserting to the Chaldeans." 14 And Jeremiah said, "That is a lie; I am not deserting to the Chaldeans." But Irijah would not listen to him, and arrested Jeremiah and brought him to the officials. 15 The officials were enraged at Jeremiah, and they beat him and imprisoned him in the house of the secretary Jonathan, for it had been made a prison. 16 Thus Jeremiah was put in the cistern house, in the cells, and remained there many days.

17 Then King Zedekiah sent for him, and received him. The king questioned him secretly in his house, and said, "Is there any word from the LORD?" Jeremiah said, "There is!" Then he said, "You shall be handed over to the king of Babylon." 18 Jeremiah also said to King Zedekiah, "What wrong have I done to you or your servants or this people, that you have put me in prison? 19 Where are your prophets who prophesied to you, saying, 'The king of Babylon will not come against you and against this land'? 20 Now please hear me, my lord king: be good enough to listen to my plea, and do not send me back to the house of the secretary Jonathan to die there." 21 So King Zedekiah gave orders, and they committed Jeremiah to the court of the guard; and a loaf of bread was given him daily from the bakers' street, until all the bread of the city was gone. So Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

Jeremiah in the Cistern

38 Now Shephatiah son of Mattan, Gedaliah son of Pashhur, Jucal son of Shelemiah, and Pashhur son of Malchiah heard the words that Jeremiah was saying to all the people, 2 Thus says the LORD, Those who stay in this city shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pesti-

led to Nebuchadnezzar's withdrawal from Jerusalem to meet the threat (see 34.21). When Zedekiah sends emissaries to ask Jeremiah to intercede on the behalf of Jerusalem (see 21.1–10), the prophet responds with an oracle that the Babylonians will return to destroy the city. 37.5 The Pharaoh was Hophra (589–570 B.C.E.). See 44.30. Zedekiah's rebellion, which began in 589 B.C.E., was no doubt stimulated in part by an alliance with Egypt. 37.11–15 At the time of the lifting of the siege, Jeremiah is accused of deserting to the Babylonians when he attempts to travel to the territory of Benjamin to receive his share of the family property. This is probably not connected with the redeeming of the field in Anathoth (ch. 32), which occurred when he was in prison. 37.16–21 Zedekiah's renewed efforts to find a hopeful prophetic word fail. Jeremiah does succeed in being transferred to more comfortable quarters. 38.1–13 Jeremiah's enemies, officials who were pro-Egyptian and supportive of the rebellion, succeed in having the prophet imprisoned lence; but those who go out to the Chaldeans shall live; they shall have their lives as a prize of war, and live. ³Thus says the LORD, This city shall surely be handed over to the army of the king of Babylon and be taken. ⁴Then the officials said to the king, "This man ought to be put to death, because he is discouraging the soldiers who are left in this city, and all the people, by speaking such words to them. For this man is not seeking the welfare of this people, but their harm." ⁵King Zedekiah said, "Here he is; he is in your hands; for the king is powerless against you." ⁶So they took Jeremiah and threw him into the cistern of Malchiah, the king's son, which was in the court of the guard, letting Jeremiah down by ropes. Now there was no water in the cistern, but only mud, and Jeremiah sank in the mud.

Jeremiah Is Rescued by Ebed-melech

7 Ebed-melech the Ethiopian,^e a eunuch in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah into the cistern. The king happened to be sitting at the Benjamin Gate, ⁸So Ebed-melech left the king's house and spoke to the king, ⁹"My lord king, these men have acted wickedly in all they did to the prophet Jeremiah by throwing him into the cistern to die there of hunger, for there is no bread left in the city." ¹⁰Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian,^e "Take three men with you from here, and pull the prophet Jeremiah up from the cistern before he dies." ¹¹So Ebed-melech took the men with him and went to the house of the king, to a wardrobe off the storehouse, and took from there old rags and worn-out clothes, which he let down to Jeremiah in the cistern by ropes. ¹²Then Ebed-melech the Ethiopian^e said to Jeremiah, "Just put the rags and clothes between your armpits and the ropes." Jeremiah did so. ¹³Then they drew Jeremiah up by the ropes and pulled him out of the cistern. And Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

Zedekiah Consults Jeremiah Again

14 King Zedekiah sent for the prophet Jeremiah and received him at the third entrance of the temple of the LORD. The king said to Jeremiah, "I have something to ask you; do not hide anything from me." ¹⁵Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, "If I tell you, you will put me to death, will you not? And if I give you advice, you will not listen to me." ¹⁶So King Zedekiah swore an oath in secret to Jeremiah, "As the LORD lives, who gave us our lives, I will not put you to death or hand you over to these men who seek your life."

17 Then Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, "Thus says the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, If you will only surrender to the officials of the king of Babylon, then your life shall be spared, and this city shall not be burned with fire, and you and your house shall live. ¹⁸But if you do not surrender to the officials of the king of Babylon, then this city shall be handed over to the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and you yourself shall not escape from their hand." ¹⁹King Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, "I am afraid of the Judeans who have deserted to the Chaldeans, for I might be handed over to them and they would abuse me." ²⁰Jeremiah said, "That will not happen. Just obey the voice of the LORD in what I say to you, and it shall go well with you, and your life shall be spared. ²¹But if you are determined not to surrender, this is what the LORD has shown me — ²²a vision of all the women remaining in the house of the king of Judah being led out to the officials of the king of Babylon and saying,

What did the king say to you?’ ²⁶then you shall say to them, ‘I was presenting my plea to the king not to send me back to the house of Jonathan to die there.’” ²⁷All the officials did come to Jeremiah and questioned him; and he answered them in the very words the king had commanded. So they stopped questioning him, for the conversation had not been overheard. ²⁸And Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard until the day that Jerusalem was taken.

The Fall of Jerusalem

39 In the ninth year of King Zedekiah of Judah, in the tenth month, King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and all his army came against Jerusalem and besieged it; ²in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, on the ninth day of the month, a breach was made in the city. ³When Jerusalem was taken,^g all the officials of the king of Babylon came and sat in the middle gate: Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim the Rabsaris, Nergal-sharezer the Rabmag, with all the rest of the officials of the king of Babylon. ⁴When King Zedekiah of Judah and all the soldiers saw them, they fled, going out of the city at night by way of the king’s garden through the gate between the two walls; and they went toward the Arabah. ⁵But the army of the Chaldeans pursued them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and when they had taken him, they brought him up to King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, at Riblah, in the land of Hamath; and he passed sentence on him. ⁶The king of Babylon slaughtered the sons of Zedekiah at Riblah before his eyes; also the king of Babylon slaughtered all the nobles of Judah. ⁷He put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him in fetters to take him to Babylon. ⁸The Chaldeans burned the king’s house and the houses of the people, and broke down the walls of Jerusalem. ⁹Then Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard exiled to Babylon the rest of the people who were left in the city, those who had deserted to him, and the people who remained. ¹⁰Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard left in the land of Judah some of the poor people who owned nothing, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time.

¹¹ King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon gave command concerning Jeremiah through Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, saying, ¹²“Take him, look after him well and do him no harm, but deal with him as he may ask you.” ¹³So Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard, Nebushazban the Rabsaris, Nergal-sharezer the Rabmag, and all the chief officers of the king of Babylon sent ¹⁴and took Jeremiah from the court of the guard. They entrusted him to Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan to be brought home. So he stayed with his own people.

¹⁵ The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah while he was confined in the court of the guard: ¹⁶Go and say to Ebedmelech the Ethiopian:^h Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to fulfill my words against this city for evil and not for good, and they shall be accomplished in your presence on that day. ¹⁷But I will save you on that day, says the LORD, and you shall not be handed over to those whom you dread. ¹⁸For I will surely save you, and you shall not fall by the sword; but you shall have your life as a prize of war, because you have trusted in me, says the LORD.

40 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD after Nebuzardan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he took him bound in fetters along with all the captives of Jerusalem and Judah who were being exiled to Babylon. ²The captain of the guard took Jeremiah and said to him, "The LORD your God threatened this place with this disaster; ³and now the LORD has brought it about, and has done as he said, because all of you sinned against the LORD and did not obey his voice. Therefore this thing has come upon you. ⁴Now look, I have just released you today from the fetters on your hands. If you wish to come with me to Babylon, come, and I will take good care of you; but if you do not wish to come with me to Babylon, you need not come. See, the whole land is before you; go wherever you think it good and right to go. ⁵If you remain,ⁱ then return to Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon appointed governor of the towns of Judah, and stay with him among the people; or go wherever you think it right to go." So the captain of the guard gave him an allowance of food and a present, and let him go. ⁶Then Jeremiah went to Gedaliah son of Ahikam at Mizpah, and stayed with him among the people who were left in the land.

Gedaliah's Rule at Mizpah

7 When all the leaders of the forces in the open country and their troops heard that the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed to him men, women, and children, those of the poorest of the land who had not been taken into exile to Babylon, ⁸they went to Gedaliah at Mizpah—Ishmael son of Nethaniah, Johanan son of Kareah, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth, the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, Jezaniah son of the Maacathite, they and their troops. ⁹Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan swore to them and their troops, saying, "Do not be afraid to serve the Chaldeans. Stay in the land and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall go well with you. ¹⁰As for me, I am staying at Mizpah to represent you before the Chaldeans who come to us; but as for you, gather wine and summer fruits and oil, and store them in your vessels, and live in the towns that you have taken over." ¹¹Likewise, when all the Judeans who were in Moab and among the Ammonites and in Edom and in other lands heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah and had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan as governor over them, ¹²then all the Judeans returned from all the places to which they had been scattered and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah at Mizpah; and they gathered wine and summer fruits in great abundance.

¹³ Now Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces in the open country came to Gedaliah at Mizpah ¹⁴and said to him, "Are you at all aware that Baalis king of the Ammonites has sent Ishmael son of Nethaniah to take your life?" But Gedaliah son of Ahikam would not believe them. ¹⁵Then Johanan son of Kareah spoke secretly to Gedaliah at Mizpah, "Please let me go and kill Ishmael son of Nethaniah, and no one else will know. Insurrection Against Gedaliah

41 In the seventh month, Ishmael son of Nethaniah son of Elishama, of the royal family, one of the chief officers of the king, came with ten men to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, at Mizpah. As they ate bread together there at Mizpah, ²Ishmael son of Nethaniah and the ten men with him got up and struck down Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan with the sword and killed him, because the king of Babylon had appointed him governor in the land. ³Ishmael also killed all the Judeans who were with Gedaliah at Mizpah, and the Chaldean soldiers who happened to be there.

⁹ Now the cistern into which Ishmael had thrown all the bodies of the men whom he had struck down was the large cistern ^kthat King Asa had made for defense against King Baasha of Israel; Ishmael son of Nethaniah filled that cistern with those whom he had killed. ¹⁰Then Ishmael took captive all the rest of the people who were in Mizpah, the king's daughters and all the people who were left at Mizpah, whom Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, had committed to Gedaliah son of Ahikam. Ishmael son of Nethaniah took them captive and set out to cross over to the Ammonites.

¹¹ But when Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces with him heard of all the crimes that Ishmael son of Nethaniah had done, ¹²they took all their men and went to fight against Ishmael son of Nethaniah. They came upon him at the great pool that is in Gibeon. ¹³And when all the people who were with Ishmael saw Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces with him, they were glad. ¹⁴So all the people whom Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah turned around and came back, and went to Johanan son of Kareah. ¹⁵But Ishmael son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites. ¹⁶Then Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces with him took all the rest of the people whom Ishmael son of Nethaniah had carried away captive ^lfrom Mizpah after he had slain Gedaliah son of Ahikam—soldiers, women, children, and eunuchs, whom Johanan brought back from Gibeon. ¹⁷And they set out, and stopped at Ge-

Fearful of Babylonian reprisals for the slaughter at Mizpah, Johanan and his forces began to seek refuge in Egypt. This fear was not unfounded, as a third exile was carried out in 582 B.C.E. (52.30). 41.12 The great pool that is in Gibeon. See 2 Sam 2.13. 41.17 Geruth Chimham is unidentified. Geruth may mean "inn," thus Chimham's Inn.

Jeremiah Advises Survivors Not to Migrate

42 Then all the commanders of the forces, and Johanan son of Kareah and Azariahⁿ son of Hoshaiiah, and all the people from the least to the greatest, approached ²the prophet Jeremiah and said, “Be good enough to listen to our plea, and pray to the LORD your God for us—for all this remnant. For there are only a few of us left out of many, as your eyes can see. ³Let the LORD your God show us where we should go and what we should do.” ⁴The prophet Jeremiah said to them, “Very well: I am going to pray to the LORD your God as you request, and whatever the LORD answers you I will tell you; I will keep nothing back from you.” ⁵They in their turn said to Jeremiah, “May the LORD be a true and faithful witness against us if we do not act according to everything that the LORD your God sends us through you. ⁶Whether it is good or bad, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God to whom we are sending you, in order that it may go well with us when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.”

⁷At the end of ten days the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah. ⁸Then he summoned Johanan son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces who were with him, and all the people from the least to the greatest, ⁹and said to them, “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to present your plea before him: ¹⁰If you will only remain in this land, then I will build you up and not pull you down; I will plant you, and not pluck you up; for I am sorry for the disaster that I have brought upon you. ¹¹Do not be afraid of the king of Babylon, as you have been; do not be afraid of him, says the LORD, for I am with you, to save you and to rescue you from his hand. ¹²I will grant you mercy, and he will have mercy on you and restore you to your native soil. ¹³But if you continue to say, ‘We will not stay in this land,’ thus disobeying the voice of the LORD your God ¹⁴and saying, ‘No, we will go to the land of Egypt, where we shall not see war, or hear the sound of the trumpet, or be hungry for bread, and there we will stay,’ ¹⁵then hear the word of the LORD, O remnant of Judah. Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: If you are determined to enter Egypt and go to settle there, ¹⁶then the sword that you fear shall overtake you there, in the land of Egypt; and the famine that you dread shall follow close after you into Egypt; and there you shall die. ¹⁷All the people who have determined to go to Egypt to settle there shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence; they shall have no remnant or survivor from the disaster that I am bringing upon them.

¹⁸“For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Just as my anger and my wrath were poured out on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so my wrath will be poured out on you when you go to Egypt. You shall become an object of execration and horror, of cursing and ridicule. You shall see this place no more. ¹⁹The LORD has said to you, O remnant of Judah, Do not go to Egypt. Be well aware that I have warned you today ²⁰that you have made a fatal mistake. For you yourselves sent me to the LORD your God, saying, ‘Pray for us to the LORD our God, and whatever the LORD our God says, tell us and we will do it.’ ²¹So I have told you today, but you have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God in anything that he sent me to tell you. ²²Be well aware, then, that you shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence in the place where you desire to go and settle.”

Jeremiah's Advice Is Ignored

43 When Jeremiah finished speaking to all the people all these words of the LORD their God, with which the LORD their God had sent him to them, ²Azariah son of Hoshaiiah and Johanan son of Kareah and all the other insolent men said to Jeremiah, "You are telling a lie. The LORD our God did not send you to say, 'Do not go to Egypt to settle there'; ³but Baruch son of Neriah is inciting you against us, to hand us over to the Chaldeans, in order that they may kill us or take us into exile in Babylon." ⁴So Johanan son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces and all the people did not obey the voice of the LORD, to stay in the land of Judah. ⁵But Johanan son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces took all the remnant of Judah who had returned to settle in the land of Judah from all the nations to which they had been driven — ⁶the men, the women, the children, the princesses, and everyone whom Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan; also the prophet Jeremiah and Baruch son of Neriah. ⁷And they came into the land of Egypt, for they did not obey the voice of the LORD. And they arrived at Tahpanhes.

43.8–44.30 This narrative tells of Jeremiah's condemnation of the Jewish refugees who fled to Egypt. The story is set in the years following the assassination of Gedaliah, i.e., around 582 to 570 B.C.E. 43.8–13 The narrative begins with a symbolic act designed to demonstrate that Nebuchadrezzar will conquer Egypt (see 13.1–11, 12–14; 16.1–13; 18.1–12; 19.1–15; 27.1–22; 32.1–44). 43.9 Pharaoh's palace is probably a royal building, since the capital was in Sais in the western Delta. 43.11 See 15.2. 43.13 Heliopolis,

According to the oracle, the Jewish refugees will not escape their dreaded foe. Nebuchadrezzar did invade Egypt in 568–567 B.C.E. and fought Pharaoh Amasis, though the outcome of the battle is not known. However, Babylonia did not conquer Egypt. 44.1–14 The narrative continues with Jeremiah's rather lengthy sermon condemning all Jewish refugees in Egypt for abandoning their homeland and engaging in idolatry. 44.1 Migdol was a city in northern Egypt, possibly identified with modern Tell el-Heir (see 46.14). Tahpanhes. disaster that I have brought on Jerusalem and on all the towns of Judah. Look at them; today they are a desolation, without an inhabitant in them, ³because of the wickedness that they committed, provoking me to anger, in that they went to make offerings and serve other gods that they had not known, neither they, nor you, nor your ancestors. ⁴Yet I persistently sent to you all my servants the prophets, saying, "I beg you not to do this abominable thing that I hate!" ⁵But they did not listen or incline their ear, to turn from their wickedness and make no offerings to other gods. ⁶So my wrath and my anger were poured out and kindled in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they became a waste and a desolation, as they still are today. ⁷And now thus says the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel: Why are you doing such great harm to yourselves, to cut off man and woman, child and infant, from the midst of Judah, leaving yourselves without a remnant? ⁸Why do you provoke me to anger with the works of your hands, making offerings to other gods in the land of Egypt where you have come to settle? Will you be cut off and become an object of cursing and ridicule among all the nations of the earth? ⁹Have you forgotten the crimes of your ancestors, of the kings of Judah, of their wives, your own crimes and those of your wives, which they committed in the land of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? ¹⁰They have shown no contrition or fear to this day, nor have they walked in my law and my statutes that I set before you and before your ancestors.

¹¹Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am determined to bring disaster on you, to bring all Judah to an end. ¹²I will take the remnant of Judah who are determined to come to the land of Egypt to settle, and they shall perish, everyone; in the land of Egypt they shall fall; by the sword and by famine they shall perish; from the least to the greatest, they shall die by the sword and by famine; and they shall become an object of execration and horror, of cursing and ridicule. ¹³I will punish those who live in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, with the sword, with famine, and with pestilence, ¹⁴so that none of the remnant of Judah who have come to settle in the land of Egypt shall escape or survive or return to the land of Judah. Although they long to go back to live there, they shall not go back, except some fugitives.

¹⁵Then all the men who were aware that their wives had been making offerings to other gods, and all the women who stood by, a great assembly, all the people who lived in Pathros in the land of Egypt, answered Jeremiah: ¹⁶"As for the word that you have spoken to us in the name of the LORD, we are not going to listen to you. ¹⁷Instead, we will do everything that we have vowed, make offerings to the queen of heaven and pour out libations to her, just as we and our ancestors, our kings and our officials, used to do in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem. We used to have plenty of food, and prospered, and saw no misfortune. ¹⁸But from the time we stopped making offerings to the queen of heaven and pouring out libations to her, we have lacked everything and have perished by the sword and by famine." ¹⁹And the women said, ^s"Indeed we will go on making offerings to the queen of heaven and pouring out libations to her; do you think that we made cakes for her, marked with her image, and poured out libations to her without our husbands' being involved?"

²⁰Then Jeremiah said to all the people, men and women, all the people who were giving him this answer: ²¹"As for the offerings that you made in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, you and your ancestors, your kings and your officials, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them? Did it not come into his mind? ²²The LORD could no longer bear the sight of your evil doings, the abominations that you committed; therefore your land became a desolation and a waste and a curse, without inhabitant, as it is to this day. ²³It is because you burned offerings, and because you sinned

²⁴ Jeremiah said to all the people and all the women, “Hear the word of the LORD, all you Judeans who are in the land of Egypt, ²⁵Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: You and your wives have accomplished in deeds what you declared in words, saying, ‘We are determined to perform the vows that we have made, to make offerings to the queen of heaven and to pour out libations to her.’ By all means, keep your vows and make your libations! ²⁶Therefore hear the word of the LORD, all you Judeans who live in the land of Egypt: Lo, I swear by my great name, says the LORD, that my name shall no longer be pronounced on the lips of any of the people of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, ‘As the Lord God lives.’ ²⁷I am going to watch over them for harm and not for good; all the people of Judah who are in the land of Egypt shall perish by the sword and by famine, until not one is left. ²⁸And those who escape the sword shall return from the land of Egypt to the land of Judah, few in number; and all the remnant of Judah, who have come to the land of Egypt to settle, shall know whose words will stand, mine or theirs! ²⁹This shall be the sign to you, says the LORD, that I am going to punish you in this place, in order that you may know that my words against you will surely be carried out: ³⁰Thus says the LORD, I am going to give Pharaoh Hophra, king of Egypt, into the hands of his enemies, those who seek his life, just as I gave King Zedekiah of Judah into the hand of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, his enemy who sought his life.”

A Word of Comfort to Baruch jahiah, when he wrote these words in a scroll at the dictation of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah: ²Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to you, O Baruch: ³You said, “Woe is me! The LORD has added sorrow to my pain; I am weary with my groaning, and I find no rest.” ⁴Thus you shall say to him, “Thus says the LORD: I am going to break down what I have built, and pluck up what I have planted—that is, the whole land. ⁵And you, do you seek great things for yourself? Do not seek them; for I am going to bring disaster upon all flesh, says the LORD; but I will give you your life as a prize of war in every place to which you may go.”

Judgment on Egypt

46 The word of the LORD that came to the prophet Jeremiah concerning the nations.

² Concerning Egypt, about the army of Pharaoh Neco, king of Egypt, which will escape to return to Judah. 44.30 Hophra (Aphries) was king of Egypt from 589 to 570 B.C.E. (see 37.5). He was assassinated by Amasis (570–526 B.C.E.), a former court official who ruled as coregent for three years before killing Hophra.

45.1–5 Message to Baruch. This oracle of salvation is addressed to Baruch, Jeremiah's secretary and companion (see note on 36.1–32). Set in 605 B.C.E. when Baruch wrote down the judgment oracles of Jeremiah (see ch. 36), Jeremiah's words promise the scribe that his own life will be spared when the disasters against Judah and Jerusalem take place. 45.3 The oracle refers to Baruch's lament. Cf. Jeremiah's laments in 11.18–20.18 (see note on 11.18–23). 45.4 See 1.10; 18.7–9; 24.6. 45.5 What Baruch sought for himself is not clear. However, he does seem to have held an important position in government (see note on 36.1–32). For one's life as a prize of war, cf. 21.9; 38.2; 39.18.

46.1–51.58 Oracles against the nations. This collection of oracles, with its own superscription (46.1), had its own history of transmission before being included in the growing corpus that became the book of Jeremiah. The location of this collection in the Septuagint (after 25.13a) is probably original (see the similar positioning of oracles concerning foreign nations in Isa 13–23 and Ezek 25–32 where they follow oracles of judgment against Judah and precede oracles of salvation and hope). The question of the authorship of these oracles is greatly debated by scholars. Some of the oracles may have been original to Jeremiah (e.g., the oracle against Egypt in 46.3–12), with others by later prophets and editors.

46.2–26 Two oracles of judgment are against Egypt: the defeat at Carchemish, vv. 2–12, and was by the river Euphrates at Carchemish and which King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon defeated in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah:

- 3 Prepare buckler and shield,
and advance for battle!
- 4 Harness the horses;
mount the steeds!
Take your stations with your helmets,
whet your lances,
put on your coats of mail!
- 5 Why do I see them terrified?
They have fallen back;
their warriors are beaten down,
and have fled in haste.
They do not look back—
terror is all around!
- says the LORD.
- 6 The swift cannot flee away,
nor can the warrior escape;
in the north by the river Euphrates
they have stumbled and fallen.
- 7 Who is this, rising like the Nile,
like rivers whose waters surge?
- 8 Egypt rises like the Nile,
like rivers whose waters surge.
It said, Let me rise, let me cover
the earth,
let me destroy cities and their
inhabitants.
- 9 Advance, O horses,
and dash madly, O chariots!
Let the warriors go forth:
Ethiopia^t and Put who carry the shield,
the Ludim, who draw^u
the bow.
- 10 That day is the day of the Lord God of hosts,
a day of retribution,
to gain vindication from his foes.
The sword shall devour and
be sated,

and drink its fill of their blood.
For the Lord God of hosts holds a sacrifice
in the land of the north by the river Euphrates.

- 11 Go up to Gilead, and take balm,
O virgin daughter Egypt!
In vain you have used many medicines;
there is no healing for you.
- 12 The nations have heard of your shame,
and the earth is full of
your cry;
for warrior has stumbled against warrior;
both have fallen together.

Babylonia Will Strike Egypt

13 The word that the LORD spoke to the prophet Jeremiah about the coming of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon to attack the land of Egypt:

- 14 Declare in Egypt, and proclaim in Migdol;
proclaim in Memphis and Tahpanhes; Say, "Take your stations and
be ready,
for the sword shall devour those around you."
- 15 Why has Apis fled?^v
Why did your bull not stand?
—because the LORD thrust him down.
- 16 Your multitude stumbled^w and fell,
and one said to another,^x
"Come, let us go back to our own people
and to the land of our birth, because of the destroying
sword."

and fell one to another and they said the approach of Nebuchadrezzar, vv. 13–26. 46.2 The defeat of Neco II by Nebuchadrezzar, first at Carchemish, and then near Hamath, opened the way to Syro-Palestine for the expanding Babylonian Empire. By 604 or 603 B.C.E., Judah became a vassal to the Babylonians. The oracle either predicts or celebrates the Egyptian defeat. 46.9 Ethiopia, Put (probably a region in Libya), and Ludim (a group of people in North Africa) are three nations fighting with the Egyptians. 46.11 Gilead. See note on 8.22. 46.13–26 This oracle supposes Jeremiah predicted an invasion of Egypt by Nebuchadrezzar. While Nebuchadrezzar invaded Egypt, he did not conquer the country (see Ezek 29.19–21; notes on Jer 43.8–13; 48.13). 46.14 Migdol. See note on 44.1. Memphis, Tahpanhes. See note on 2.16. 46.15 Apis, an Egyptian god of fertility,

- 17 Give Pharaoh, king of Egypt,
the name
"Braggart who missed his chance."
- 18 As I live, says the King, whose name is the LORD of
hosts,
one is coming
like Tabor among the
mountains,
and like Carmel by the sea.
- 19 Pack your bags for exile,
sheltered daughter Egypt!
For Memphis shall become a waste,
a ruin, without inhabitant.
- 20 A beautiful heifer is Egypt — a gadfly from the north lights upon her.
- 21 Even her mercenaries in her midst
are like fatted calves;
they too have turned and fled
together,
they did not stand;
for the day of their calamity has come upon them,
the time of their punishment.
- 22 She makes a sound like a snake gliding away;
for her enemies march in force,
and come against her with axes,
like those who fell trees.
- 23 They shall cut down her forest,
says the LORD,
though it is impenetrable,
because they are more numerous than locusts;
they are without number.
- 24 Daughter Egypt shall be put to shame;
she shall be handed over to a people from the north.
- 25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, said: See, I am bringing punishment upon Amon of Thebes, and Pharaoh, and Egypt and her gods and her kings, upon Pharaoh and those who trust in him. ²⁶I will hand them over to those who seek their life, to King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon and his officers. Afterward Egypt shall be inhabited as in the days of old, says the LORD.

God Will Save Israel

- 27 But as for you, have no fear, my servant Jacob,
and do not be dismayed,
O Israel;
for I am going to save you from
far away,
and your offspring from the
land of their captivity.
Jacob shall return and have quiet
and ease,
and no one shall make him
afraid.
- 28 As for you, have no fear, my servant Jacob,
says the LORD,
for I am with you.
I will make an end of all the
nations
among which I have banished you,
but I will not make an end of you!
I will chastise you in just
measure,
and I will by no means leave
you unpunished.

Judgment on the Philistines

47 The word of the LORD that came to the prophet Jeremiah concerning the Philistines, before Pharaoh attacked Gaza:

- ² Thus says the LORD:
See, waters are rising out of the north

was worshiped in Memphis as a sacred bull. 46.25–26 These prose verses are a later commentary on the two oracles. Amon was an Egyptian sun god whose cult center was the temple of Karnak in Thebes. 46.27–28 An oracle of salvation for Israel found also in (see note on) 30.10–11.

47.1–7 The prose introduction points to an imminent attack on Gaza, one of the major Philis-tine cities, by an unidentified pharaoh as the occasion for this judgment oracle. Herodotus (History 2.159) indicates that, after the battle of Megiddo (609 B.C.E.), Neco II conquered Kadytis (Gaza). However, the waters . . . rising out of the north and the reference to Ashkelon would best suggest Nebuchadrezzar's invasion of Philistia in 604 B.C.E. after he defeated the Egyptians at Carche-and shall become an overflowing torrent;

they shall overflow the land and all that fills it,
the city and those who live
in it.

People shall cry out,
and all the inhabitants of the land shall wail.

- 3 At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his stallions, at the clatter of his chariots, at the rumbling of their wheels,
parents do not turn back for children,
so feeble are their hands, 4 because of the day that is coming
to destroy all the Philistines, to cut off from Tyre and Sidon every helper that remains.
For the LORD is destroying the Philistines,
the remnant of the coastland of Caphtor.
- 5 Baldness has come upon Gaza, Ashkelon is silenced.
O remnant of their power!^y
How long will you gash yourselves?
- 6 Ah, sword of the LORD!
How long until you are quiet?
Put yourself into your scabbard, rest and be still!
- 7 How can it^z be quiet,
when the LORD has given it an order?

Against Ashkelon and against the seashore —
there he has appointed it.

Judgment on Moab

48 Concerning Moab.

Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel:

Alas for Nebo, it is laid waste!

Kiriathaim is put to shame, it is taken;

the fortress is put to shame and
broken down;

- 2 the renown of Moab is no
more.

In Heshbon they planned evil against her:

"Come, let us cut her off from being a nation!"

You also, O Madmen, shall be brought to silence;^a
the sword shall pursue you.

- 3 Hark! a cry from Horonaim, "Desolation and great destruction!"

- 4 "Moab is destroyed!"
her little ones cry out.

- 5 For at the ascent of Luhith
they go^b up weeping bitterly;
for at the descent of Horonaim they have heard the distressing cry of anguish.

mish. 47.4 Tyre and Sidon were Phoenician cities presumably allied with the Philistines. Caphtor is the island of Crete (see Am 9.7), one of the places from which the Philistines came. 47.5 Gaza, taken by Neco II after 609 B.C.E., came within the Babylonian orbit along with the other cities of Philistia after the battle of Carchemish. Ashkelon was destroyed by Nebuchadrezzar in late 604 B.C.E.

48.1–47 A series of oracles of judgment against Moab: the advance of Nebuchadrezzar (vv. 1–10), destruction is at hand (vv. 11–17), a taunt of destroyed Moab (vv. 18–28), a lament over fallen Moab (vv. 29–39), judgment against Moab (vv. 40–42), and a woe oracle ending with the promise of salvation (vv. 43–47). The oracles and prose additions (vv. 10, 12, 21–27, 34–39) feature extensive borrowings from Isa 15–16. Located east of Israel in the Transjordan, Moab was a historic enemy of Israel, often receiving prophetic condemnation (Isa 15–16; Zeph 2.8–11). When Jehoikim rebelled against Nebuchadrezzar, Moabites joined in raids on Judah (2 Kings 24.2). According to Jer 27.1–11, Moab joined in the conspiracy against the Babylonians (595 B.C.E.). It is possible Moab joined in the later revolt. 48.1 Nebo was a Moabite city (probably modern Khirbet Mekhayyet) approximately five miles southwest of Heshbon (see Isa 15.2). Kiriathaim was a city in Moab, probably located near modern el-Qereiyat, five and a half miles north-northwest of Dibon (see Ezek 25.9). 48.2 Heshbon, modern Tell Hesban located near the Jordanian village of Hesban, was an important city in northern Moab (see Isa 15.4; 16.8–9). 48.3 Horonaim, a town in Moab (see Isa. 15.5). 48.5 Luhith, a city of Moab, probably near the

- 6 Flee! Save yourselves!
Be like a wild ass^c in the desert!
- 7 Surely, because you trusted in your strongholds^d and your treasures,
you also shall be taken;
Chemosh shall go out into exile,
with his priests and his attendants.
- 8 The destroyer shall come upon every town,
and no town shall escape;
the valley shall perish,
and the plain shall be destroyed,
as the LORD has spoken.
- 9 Set aside salt for Moab,
for she will surely fall;
her towns shall become a desolation,
with no inhabitant in them.
- 10 Accursed is the one who is slack in doing the work of the LORD; and accursed is the one who keeps back the sword from bloodshed.
- 11 Moab has been at ease from his youth,
settled like wine^e on its dregs;
he has not been emptied from vessel to vessel,
nor has he gone into exile;
therefore his flavor has remained and his aroma is unspoiled.
- 12 Therefore, the time is surely coming, says the LORD, when I shall send to him decanters to decant him, and empty his vessels, and break his^f jars in pieces.
13 Then Moab shall be ashamed of Che-mosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Bethel, their confidence.
- 14 How can you say, "We are heroes and mighty warriors"?
- 15 The destroyer of Moab and his towns has come up,
and the choicest of his young men have gone down to slaughter,
says the King, whose name is
the LORD of hosts.
- 16 The calamity of Moab is near at hand
and his doom approaches
swiftly.
- 17 Mourn over him, all you his neighbors,
and all who know his name;
say, "How the mighty scepter is broken,
the glorious staff!"
- 18 Come down from glory,
and sit on the parched ground, enthroned daughter Dibon!
For the destroyer of Moab has come up against you;
he has destroyed your strongholds.
- 19 Stand by the road and watch,
you inhabitant of Aroer!
Ask the man fleeing and the woman escaping;
say, "What has happened?"
- 20 Moab is put to shame, for it is broken down;
wail and cry!
Tell it by the Arnon,
that Moab is laid waste.
- 21 Judgment has come upon the tableland, upon Holon, and Jahzah, and Mephaath, 22 and Dibon, and Nebo, and Beth-diblathaim, 23 and Kiriathaim, and Beth-gamul, and Beth-meon, 24 and Kerioth, and Bozrah, and all the towns of the land of Moab, far and near. 25 The horn of Moab is cut off, and his arm is broken,
says the LORD.
- 26 Make him drunk, because he magnified himself against the LORD; let Moab wallow in his vomit; he too shall become a laughingstock. 27 Israel was a laughingstock for you, though he was not caught south end of the Dead Sea (see Isa 15.5). 48.7 Chemosh was the national deity of Moab (see 1 Kings 11.7). 48.13 Bethel. See 1 Kings 12.25–33; Am 7.10–17. 48.18 Dibon, modern Dhiban, was an important city located on the King's Highway, thirteen miles east of the Dead Sea (see Isa 15.2, 9). 48.19 Aroer was a fortress on the Arnon River, identified with modern Khirbet Ara'ir. 48.20 The Arnon River flows through Moab from the east into the Dead Sea. 48.21–24 Various towns and cities in Moab.

among thieves; but whenever you spoke of him you shook your head!

- 28 Leave the towns, and live on the rock,
O inhabitants of Moab!
Be like the dove that nests on the sides of the mouth of a gorge.
- 29 We have heard of the pride of Moab—
he is very proud—
of his loftiness, his pride, and his arrogance, and the haughtiness of his heart.
- 30 I myself know his insolence, says the LORD;
his boasts are false,
his deeds are false.
- 31 Therefore I wail for Moab;
I cry out for all Moab;
for the people of Kir-heres I mourn.
- 32 More than for Jazer I weep for you,
O vine of Sibmah!
Your branches crossed over the sea, reached as far as Jazer;^g upon your summer fruits and your vintage the destroyer has fallen.
- 33 Gladness and joy have been taken away from the fruitful land of Moab;
I have stopped the wine from the wine presses;
no one treads them with shouts of joy;
the shouting is not the shout of joy.

34 Heshbon and Elealeh cry out;^h as far as Jahaz they utter their voice, from Zoar to Horonaim and Eglath-shelishiyah. For even the waters of Nimrim have become desolate. ³⁵And I will bring to an end in Moab, says the LORD, those who offer sacrifice at a high place and make offerings to their gods. ³⁶Therefore my heart moans for Moab like a flute, and my heart moans like a flute for the people of Kir-heres; for the riches they gained have perished.

37 For every head is shaved and every beard cut off; on all the hands there are gashes, and on the loins sackcloth. ³⁸On all the housetops of Moab and in the squares there is nothing but lamentation; for I have broken Moab like a vessel that no one wants, says the LORD. ³⁹How it is broken! How they wail! How Moab has turned his back in shame! So Moab has become a derision and a horror to all his neighbors.

- 40 For thus says the LORD:
Look, he shall swoop down like an eagle,
and spread his wings against Moab;
- 41 the townsⁱ shall be taken and the strongholds seized.
The hearts of the warriors of Moab, on that day,
shall be like the heart of a woman in labor.
- 42 Moab shall be destroyed as a people, because he magnified himself against the LORD.
- 43 Terror, pit, and trap are before you, O inhabitants of Moab!
- says the LORD.
- 44 Everyone who flees from the terror
shall fall into the pit,
and everyone who climbs out of the pit shall be caught in the trap.
For I will bring these things^j upon Moab in the year of their punishment,
says the LORD.

Judgment on the Ammonites

49 Concerning the Ammonites.

- Thus says the LORD:
Has Israel no sons?
Has he no heir?
Why then has Milcom
dispossessed Gad,
and his people settled in its towns?
- 2 Therefore, the time is surely
coming,
says the LORD,

when I will sound the battle alarm against Rabbah of the Ammonites;
it shall become a desolate mound,
and its villages shall be burned
with fire;
then Israel shall dispossess those who dispossessed him,
says the LORD.

- 3 Wail, O Heshbon, for Ai is laid
waste!
Cry out, O daughters^l of Rabbah!
Put on sackcloth,
lament, and slash yourselves with whips!^m
For Milcom shall go into exile,
with his priests and his
attendants.
- 4 Why do you boast in your
strength?
Your strength is ebbing,
O faithless daughter.
You trusted in your treasures,
saying,
“Who will attack me?”
- 5 I am going to bring terror
upon you,
says the Lord GOD of hosts,
from all your neighbors,
and you will be scattered, each headlong,
with no one to gather the fugitives.

48.45–47 These verses are missing in the Septuagint, an indication that they were added later. 48.45 Sihon was an Amorite king whose capital was Heshbon. He was defeated by the Israelites during their migration prior to the settlement in Canaan (see Num 21.21–30; Deut 2.24–37; Judg 11.18–22).

49.1–6 Ammon was a country in the Transjordan, east of Israel, and a perennial enemy. After the fall of Assyria, Ammon soon came under the control of the Babylonians and joined with them in the attack on Judah when Jehoiakim revolted (see 2 Kings 24.2). Later, they joined in a conspiracy against Babylonia (Jer 27.3) and eventually revolted (see Ezek 21.18–23). After the fall of Judah in 587 B.C.E., Ammon continued the rebellion, even supporting a Jewish partisan, Ishmael, who assassinated Gedaliah (see ch. 41).

Sometime later, Nebuchadrezzar sent punitive expeditions that led to the end of the Ammonite state. The oracle of judgment indicates destruction will come upon Ammon. 49.1 Milcom was the national deity of Ammon and, like Baal, was a god of war and fertility (see 1 Kings 11.5, 33). Gad, an Israelite tribe that occupied land east of the Jordan between the Jabbok and Arnon rivers. Ammon took over territory formerly claimed by Israel (see Judg 10.6–12.6; 2 Sam 12.26–31). 49.2 Rabbah, the capital of Ammon, is modern Amman (see Ezek 25.5; Am 1.14). 49.3 Heshbon (see note on 48.2) may have fallen into Ammonite hands. Ai may refer to an Israelite settlement just south of the ancient city of Ai (located two miles southeast of Bethel). Or since the word Ai means “ruin” in Hebrew, the reference may be to Rabbah. Cf. the calls for Judah and Jerusalem to la-

Judgment on Edom

7 Concerning Edom.

Thus says the LORD of hosts:

Is there no longer wisdom in Teman?

Has counsel perished from the prudent?

Has their wisdom vanished?

8 Flee, turn back, get down low, inhabitants of Dedan!

For I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him, the time when I punish him.

9 If grape-gatherers came to you, would they not leave gleanings? If thieves came by night, even they would pillage only what they wanted.

10 But as for me, I have stripped Esau bare, I have uncovered his hiding places, and he is not able to conceal himself.

His offspring are destroyed, his kinsfolk and his neighbors; and he is no more.

11 Leave your orphans, I will keep them alive; and let your widows trust in me.

12 For thus says the LORD: If those who do not deserve to drink the cup still have to drink it, shall you be the one to go unpunished? You shall not go unpunished; you must drink it. ¹³For by myself I have sworn, says the LORD, that Bozrah shall become an object of horror and ridicule, a waste, and an object of cursing; and all her towns shall be perpetual wastes.

14 I have heard tidings from the LORD, and a messenger has been sent among the nations:

"Gather yourselves together and come against her, and rise up for battle!"

15 For I will make you least among the nations, despised by humankind.

16 The terror you inspire and the pride of your heart have deceived you, you who live in the clefts of the rock,ⁿ who hold the height of the hill.

Although you make your nest as high as the eagle's, from there I will bring you down,

says the LORD.

17 Edom shall become an object of horror; everyone who passes by it will be horrified and will hiss because of all its disasters. ¹⁸As when Sodom and Gomorrah and their neighbors were overthrown, says the LORD, no one shall live there, nor shall anyone settle in it. ¹⁹Like a lion coming up from the thickets of the Jordan against a perennial pasture, I will suddenly chase Edom^o away from it; and I will appoint over it whomever I choose.^p For who is like me? Who can summon ment (6.26; 9.10; 9.17–22). 49.6 This verse, a promise of salvation, is absent in the Septuagint, an indication it was added later (see 48.45–47).

49.7–22 Against Edom, a bitter rival of Israel. Tradition traced Edom's origins back to Esau, the twin brother of Jacob (Israel; see Gen 25.19–28). Its territory was to the east and south of Israel. The Edomites were often the object of prophetic invective (see Ps 137; Isa 11.14; 34.5–17; Ezek 35; Am 1.6, 9, 11; 2.1; Obadiah; Mal 1.2–5). A vassal of Nebuchadrezzar's expanding empire as early as 604 B.C.E., Edom joined in his conquest of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.E. and exulted over the devastation of the city (Ps 137.7; Lam 4.21–22; Ob 10–16). After the exile in 587 B.C.E., some Edomites moved into southern Judah, making Hebron their capital. The present oracle is closely related to Obadiah (vv. 14–16 are close to Ob 1–4, while vv. 9–10a are similar to Ob 5–6). 49.7 Teman was a significant military and commercial city in central Edom. Edom was famous for its wisdom. 49.8 Dedan was a country in northwest Arabia known for its commerce (see Ezek 25.13). 49.13 Bozrah was the chief city of northern Edom (see Isa 34.6; Am 1.12). 49.18 Sodom and Gomorrah. See note on 20.16.

me? Who is the shepherd who can stand before me? ²⁰Therefore hear the plan that the LORD has made against Edom and the purposes that he has formed against the inhabitants of Teman: Surely the little ones of the flock shall be dragged away; surely their fold shall be appalled at their fate. ²¹At the sound of their fall the earth shall tremble; the sound of their cry shall be heard at the Red Sea.^q ²²Look, he shall mount up and swoop down like an eagle, and spread his wings against Bozrah, and the heart of the warriors of Edom in that day shall be like the heart of a woman in labor.

Judgment on Kedar and Hazor

28 Concerning Kedar and the kingdoms of Hazor that King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon defeated.

Thus says the LORD:

Rise up, advance against Kedar!
Destroy the people of the east!

29 Take their tents and their flocks, their curtains and all their goods;
carry off their camels for
yourselves,
and a cry shall go up: "Terror is all around!"

30 Flee, wander far away, hide in deep places,

O inhabitants of Hazor!

says the LORD.

For King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon
has made a plan against you and formed a purpose
against you.

31 Rise up, advance against a nation
at ease,
that lives secure,

says the LORD,

that has no gates or bars,
that lives alone.

32 Their camels shall become booty, their herds of cattle a spoil.
I will scatter to every wind those who have shaven temples, and I will bring calamity against them from every side,

says the LORD.

33 Hazor shall become a lair of jackals,

49.23–27 Damascus was the capital of Syria (see 1 Kings 11.24; 15.18; 19.15; 20.34; 2 Kings 8.7, 9; 16.10–12; Isa 7.8). It was conquered by the Assyrians in 733/2 B.C.E. and became the center of a province ruled by successive empires. Little is known of its history for the next several centuries. It is not in the list of nations doomed to drink the cup of the Lord's wrath in 25.18–26 and thus was probably a later addition to the collection. 49.23 Hamath (modern Hama) was both a Syrian city on the Orontes River between Damascus and Aleppo and a kingdom in its own right. Arpad (Tell Erfad), located some twenty-five miles north of Aleppo, was a city in northern Syria. Hamath and Arpad were destroyed by the Assyrians (see 2 Kings 18.34; 19.13; Isa 10.9; 36.19; 37.13). 49.27 This verse is taken from Am 1.4. Ben-hadad was the name of several kings of Damascus (1 Kings 15.18, 20; 2 Kings 13.24).

49.28–33 An oracle of judgment against Arabian tribes (see 25.23–24). Kedar. See note on 2.10–11. Kedar was apparently conquered by Nebuchadrezzar. Hazor is an unknown site in the Arabian desert, possibly conquered by Nebuchadrezzar. 49.32 Shaven temples. See note on 9.26.

Judgment on Elam

34 The word of the LORD that came to the prophet Jeremiah concerning Elam, at the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah of Judah.

35 Thus says the LORD of hosts: I am going to break the bow of Elam, the mainstay of their might; ³⁶and I will bring upon Elam the four winds from the four quarters of heaven; and I will scatter them to all these winds, and there shall be no nation to which the exiles from Elam shall not come. ³⁷I will terrify Elam before their enemies, and before those who seek their life; I will bring disaster upon them, my fierce anger, says the LORD. I will send the sword after them, until I have consumed them; ³⁸and I will set my throne in Elam, and destroy their king and officials, says the LORD.

39 But in the latter days I will restore the fortunes of Elam, says the LORD.

Judgment on Babylon

50 The word that the LORD spoke concerning Babylon, concerning the land of the Chaldeans, by the prophet Jeremiah:

² Declare among the nations and proclaim,
set up a banner and proclaim,
do not conceal it, say:
Babylon is taken,

Bel is put to shame,
Merodach is dismayed.
Her images are put to shame,
her idols are dismayed.

3 For out of the north a nation has come up against her; it shall make her land a desolation, and no one shall live in it; both human beings and animals shall flee away.

4 In those days and in that time, says the LORD, the people of Israel shall come, they and the people of Judah together; they shall come weeping as they seek the LORD their God. ⁵They shall ask the way to Zion, with faces turned toward it, and they shall come and join^u themselves to the LORD by an everlasting covenant that will never be forgotten.

6 My people have been lost sheep; their shepherds have led them astray, turning them away on the mountains; from mountain to hill they have gone, they have forgotten their fold. ⁷All who found them have devoured them, and their enemies have said, "We are not guilty, because they have sinned against the LORD, the true pasture, the LORD, the hope of their ancestors."

8 Flee from Babylon, and go out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be like male goats leading the flock. ⁹For I am going to stir up and bring against Babylon a company of great nations from the land of the north; and they shall array them-

49.34–39 Elam was a country located east of the Tigris River. Its capital was Susa. Conquered by the Assyrians, Elam helped in the Assyrian war against Israel (see Isa 11.11; 21.2; 22.6). Eventually, Elam came under Babylonian and then Persian control. The oracle is dated at the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah (597 B.C.E.). 49.39 This verse is probably a later addition (see 46.25–26; 48.47; 49.6).

50.1–51.58 A collection of poetic and prose judgment oracles that speak of the destruction of Babylon and the return of the Jews from captivity (see chs. 24, 25, 29). Whether or not these two chapters contain a nucleus of material from Jeremiah is debated. Prior to the fall of Jerusalem, the prophet speaks favorably of Babylon: Nebuchadnezzar is the servant of God, the Babylonians are the instrument of God's will, the exiles are to pray for Babylon, and Judah should submit to Babylonian rule. After the fall of Jerusalem, the prophet could have changed his views. Now the devastator of nations will be destroyed because of its arrogance. It is more likely, however, that most of the collection derives from prophets of the exile and the early postexilic period who announce and celebrate the collapse of the empire and the return home. The Babylonian Empire fell in 539 B.C.E. to the Persians and shortly thereafter, Cyrus, the Persian king, allowed the Jews to return home (Ezra 1.1–4).

50.1 Superscription (see Hag 1.1; Mal 1.1). 50.2 Bel is one of the names of Marduk, the leading god of Babylonia. Merodach is the biblical name for Marduk. 50.3 The imagery of the selves against her; from there she shall be taken. Their arrows are like the arrows of a skilled warrior who does not return empty-handed. ¹⁰Chaldea shall be plundered; all who plunder her shall be sated, says the LORD:

- 11 Though you rejoice, though you exult,
O plunderers of my heritage, though you frisk about like a heifer on the grass,
and neigh like stallions, 12 your mother shall be utterly shamed,
and she who bore you shall
be disgraced.
Lo, she shall be the last of the
nations,
a wilderness, dry land, and
a desert.
13 Because of the wrath of the LORD
she shall not be inhabited, but shall be an utter desolation;
everyone who passes by Babylon shall be appalled and hiss because of all her wounds.
14 Take up your positions around Babylon,
all you that bend the bow;
shoot at her, spare no arrows, for she has sinned against
the LORD.
15 Raise a shout against her from all sides,
“She has surrendered;
her bulwarks have fallen,
her walls are thrown down.”
For this is the vengeance of
the LORD:
take vengeance on her,
do to her as she has done.
16 Cut off from Babylon the sower, and the wielder of the sickle in time of harvest;
because of the destroying sword all of them shall return to their
own people,
and all of them shall flee to their own land.

17 Israel is a hunted sheep driven away by lions. First the king of Assyria devoured it, and now at the end King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon has gnawed its bones. ¹⁸Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I punished the king of Assyria. ¹⁹I will restore Israel to its pasture, and it shall feed on Carmel and in Bashan, and on the hills of Ephraim and in Gilead its hunger shall be satisfied. ²⁰In those days and at that time, says the LORD, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and none shall be found; for I will pardon the remnant that I have spared.

commanded you.

earth
is cut down and broken!
How Babylon has become a horror among the nations!
24 You set a snare for yourself and you were caught,
O Babylon,
but you did not know it;
you were discovered and seized,
because you challenged the
LORD.
25 The LORD has opened his armory,
and brought out the weapons
of his wrath,
for the Lord God of hosts has a task to do

^v Or of Double Rebellion ^w Or of Punishment
^x Tg: Heb destroy after them

“foe from the north” (see chs. 4–10) is transferred to the enemies of Babylonia (the Medes and the Persians). 50.11–16 Babylon surrendered to the armies of Persia, led by Gobryas.

It was not taken by force and destroyed. 50.21 This verse contains two wordplays. Merathaim means “double rebellion,” and is a wordplay on a region in southern Babylonia, nar marratu.

- 26 Come against her from every quarter;
open her granaries;
pile her up like heaps of grain,
and destroy her utterly;
let nothing be left of her.
27 Kill all her bulls, let them go down to the
slaughter.
Alas for them, their day has come,
the time of their punishment!

28 Listen! Fugitives and refugees from the land of Babylon are coming to declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, vengeance for his temple.

29 Summon archers against Babylon, all who bend the bow. Encamp all around her; let no one escape. Repay her according to her deeds; just as she has done, do to her—for she has arrogantly defied the LORD, the Holy One of Israel. ³⁰Therefore her young men shall fall in her squares, and all her soldiers shall be destroyed on that day, says the LORD.

- 31 I am against you, O arrogant one,
says the Lord God of hosts;
for your day has come,
the time when I will punish you.
32 The arrogant one shall stumble
and fall,
with no one to raise him up,
and I will kindle a fire in his
cities,
and it will devour everything around him.

33 Thus says the LORD of hosts: The people of Israel are oppressed, and so too are the people of Judah; all their captors have held them fast and refuse to let them go. ³⁴Their Redeemer is strong; the LORD of hosts is his name. He will surely plead their cause, that he may give rest to the earth, but unrest to the inhabitants of Babylon.

- 35 A sword against the Chaldeans,
says the LORD,

- and against the inhabitants of Babylon,
and against her officials and
her sages!
36 A sword against the diviners,
so that they may become fools!
A sword against her warriors,
so that they may be destroyed!
37 A sword against her^y horses and against her^y chariots, and against all the foreign troops in her midst, so that they may become
women!
A sword against all her treasures,
that they may be plundered!
38 A drought^z against her waters, that they may be dried up!
For it is a land of images, and they go mad over idols.

39 Therefore wild animals shall live with hyenas in Babylon,^a and ostriches shall inhabit her; she shall never again be peopled, or inhabited for all generations.
⁴⁰As when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and their neighbors, says the LORD, so no one shall live there, nor shall anyone settle in her.

- 41 Look, a people is coming from
the north;
a mighty nation and many kings are stirring from the farthest parts of the earth.
42 They wield bow and spear, they are cruel and have no mercy.
The sound of them is like the roaring sea;
they ride upon horses,
set in array as a warrior for battle, against you, O daughter
Babylon!
43 The king of Babylon heard news
of them,
and his hands fell helpless;
anguish seized him,

Who is the shepherd who can stand before me? ⁴⁵ Therefore hear the plan that the LORD has made against Babylon, and the purposes that he has formed against the land of the Chaldeans: Surely the little ones of the flock shall be dragged away; surely their fold shall be appalled at their fate. ⁴⁶ At the sound of the capture of Babylon the earth shall tremble, and her cry shall be heard among the nations.

Babylon,
and they shall winnow her.
They shall empty her land when they come against her on the day of trouble.

3 Let not the archer bend his bow, and let him not array himself in his coat of mail.
Do not spare her young men;
utterly destroy her entire army.
4 They shall fall down slain in the land of the Chaldeans,
and wounded in her streets.
5 Israel and Judah have not been forsaken
by their God, the LORD of
hosts,
though their land is full of guilt
before the Holy One of Israel.
6 Flee from the midst of Babylon, save your lives, each of you!

Do not perish because of her guilt,
for this is the time of the LORD's vengeance;
he is repaying her what is due.
7 Babylon was a golden cup in the LORD's hand,
making all the earth drunken;
the nations drank of her wine,
and so the nations went mad.
8 Suddenly Babylon has fallen and is shattered;
wail for her!
Bring balm for her wound;
perhaps she may be healed.
9 We tried to heal Babylon, but she could not be healed.
Forsake her, and let each of us go
to our own country;
for her judgment has reached up to heaven
and has been lifted up even to the skies.
10 The LORD has brought forth our
vindication;
come, let us declare in Zion
the work of the LORD our God.
11 Sharpen the arrows!
Fill the quivers!
The LORD has stirred up the spirit of the kings of the Medes, because his purpose concerning Babylon is to destroy it, for that is the vengeance of the LORD, vengeance for his temple.
12 Raise a standard against the walls of Babylon;
make the watch strong;
post sentinels;
prepare the ambushes;
for the LORD has both planned and done
what he spoke concerning the inhabitants of Babylon.

A Symbolic Action Against Babylon

^h Gk Syr Compare Hab 2.13: Heb and the nations for fire, and they are weary

51.41 Sheshach. See note on 25.26.

51.59–64 This narrative purports to tell how the oracles against Babylonia were written in a book and carried to Babylon by Seraiah when he accompanied King Zedekiah on his trip to Babylon in the fourth year of his reign (593 B.C.E.). Seraiah was a brother of Baruch (see 32.12). It may be that Zedekiah made such a trip in order to explain his participation in the conspiracy mentioned in ch. 27. The oracles against Babylon do not agree with Jeremiah's pro-Babylonian stance prior to the fall of Jerusalem. It is likely that the editor of the collection of oracles against Babylon Zedekiah of Judah to Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign. Seraiah was the quartermaster. ⁶⁰Jeremiah wrote in a scroll all the disasters that would come on Babylon, all these words that are written concerning Babylon. ⁶¹And Jeremiah said to Seraiah: "When you come to Babylon, see that you read all these words, ⁶²and say, 'O LORD, you yourself threatened to destroy this place so that neither human beings nor animals shall live in it, and it shall be desolate forever.' ⁶³When you finish reading this scroll, tie a stone to it, and throw it into the middle of the Euphrates, ⁶⁴and say, 'Thus shall Babylon sink, to rise no more, because of the disasters that I am bringing on her.'"^j

Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

The Destruction of Jerusalem Reviewed

52 Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he began to reign; he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. ²He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, just as Jehoiakim had done. ³Indeed, Jerusalem and Judah so angered the LORD that he expelled them from his presence.

Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. ⁴And in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon came with all his army against Jerusalem, and they laid siege to it; they built siegeworks against it all around. ⁵So the city was besieged until the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. ⁶On the ninth day of the fourth month the famine became so severe in the city that there was no food for the people of the land. ⁷Then a breach was made in the city wall;^k and all the soldiers fled and went out from the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, by the king's garden, though the Chaldeans were all around the city. They went in the direction of the Arabah. ⁸But the army of the Chaldeans pursued the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered, deserting him. ⁹Then they captured the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon at Riblah in the land of Hamath, and he passed sentence on him. ¹⁰The king of Babylon killed the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and also killed all the officers of Judah at Riblah. ¹¹He put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him in fetters, and the king of Babylon took him to Babylon, and put him in prison until the day of his death.

¹⁷ The pillars of bronze that were in the house of the LORD, and the stands and the bronze sea that were in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans broke in pieces, and carried all the bronze to Babylon. ¹⁸They took away the pots, the shovels, the snuffers, the basins, the ladles, and all the vessels of bronze used in the temple service. ¹⁹The captain of the guard took away the small bowls also, the firepans, the basins, the pots, the lampstands, the

52.1–34 A historical appendix. This chapter is principally taken from 2 Kings 24.18–25.30 in order to provide additional information about the rebellion of Zedekiah, the fall of Jerusalem, and the exile (see chs. 39–43). 52.1–3 A brief

ladles, and the bowls for libation, both those of gold and those of silver. ²⁰As for the two pillars, the one sea, the twelve bronze bulls that were under the sea, and the stands,¹ which King Solomon had made for the house of the LORD, the bronze of all these vessels was beyond weighing. ²¹As for the pillars, the height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, its circumference was twelve cubits; it was hollow and its thickness was four fingers. ²²Upon it was a capital of bronze; the height of the capital was five cubits; latticework and pomegranates, all of bronze, encircled the top of the capital. And the second pillar had the same, with pomegranates. ²³There were ninety-six pomegranates on the sides; all the pomegranates encircling the latticework numbered one hundred.

²⁴ The captain of the guard took the chief priest Seraiah, the second priest Zephaniah, and the three guardians of the threshold; ²⁵and from the city he took an officer who had been in command of the soldiers, and seven men of the king's council who were found in the city; the secretary of the commander of the army who mustered the people of the land; and sixty men of the people of the land who were found inside the city. ²⁶Then Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon at Riblah. ²⁷And the king of Babylon struck them down, and put them to death at Riblah in the land of Hamath. So Judah went into exile out of its land.

²⁸ This is the number of the people whom Nebuchadnezzar took into exile: in the seventh year, three thousand twenty-three Judeans; ²⁹in the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar he took into exile from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty-two persons; ³⁰in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard took into exile of the Judeans seven hundred forty-five persons; all the persons were four thousand six hundred.

Jehoiachin Favored in Captivity

³¹ In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of King Jehoiachin of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fifth day of the month, King Evil-merodach of Babylon, in the year he began to reign, showed favor to King Jehoiachin of Judah and brought him out of prison; ³²he spoke kindly to him, and gave him a seat above the seats of the other kings who were with him in Babylon. ³³So Jehoiachin put aside his prison clothes, and every day of his life he dined regularly at the king's table. ³⁴For his allowance, a regular daily allowance was given him by the king of Babylon, as long as he lived, up to the day of his death.

LAMENTATIONS

THE BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS consists of a series of five mournful poems. Together they constitute a moving expression of grief over the destruction of Jerusalem and exile of its people by King Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians in 586 B.C.E. A concise summary of this historical background can be found in 2 Kings 25.8–21.

Name and Canonical Context

The name of the book in the Hebrew Bible is 'ekah ("How!"), after the initial word in 1.1, repeated in 2.1; 4.1. The English title Lamentations is a translation of the Latin threni (Greek threnoi), which in turn goes back to another Hebrew title, qinot attested in the Babylonian Talmud (Bava Batra 14b). In most English Bibles, which follow the order of the Latin and Greek versions, Lamentations comes after Jeremiah. But in the threefold division of the Hebrew Bible, Lamentations is placed among the Writings (Hebrew ketuvim) as one of the five short books or festal scrolls (Hebrew megillot), along with Song of Songs, Ruth, Ecclesiastes, and Esther. In the Jewish liturgical calendar, Lamentations is associated with "the Ninth of Av," which commemorates the destruction of the temple by the Roman emperor Titus in 70 C.E. In the Christian liturgical tradition, portions of Lamentations are read during Holy Week. The text of Lamentations has frequently been set to music.

Authorship and Date of Composition

Ancient tradition, already attested by the Greek version of the OT, ascribed Lamentations to Jeremiah, thus reinforcing the popular but misleading characterization of him as the "weeping prophet." This tradition finds some support in that Jeremiah was the prophet who persistently predicted and lived through the fall of Jerusalem; that he is said to have wept and mourned over the destruction of his nation (see Jer 7.29; 8.18–9.1; 9.17–22); and that later biblical tradition ascribed to him the composition of a lament (Hebrew qinah) over King Josiah (2 Chr 35.25).

The evidence against Jeremian authorship, however, appears to be more weighty. The oldest Hebrew manuscripts of Lamentations make no reference to Jeremiah. Furthermore, some of the contents of and sentiments expressed in the book do not jibe very well with Jeremiah's known views. For instance, the attitude toward the political and religious establishment in Jerusalem is much more positive and deferential in Lamentations than it is in the prophet's utterances. Cf., e.g., 1.10 with Jer 7.14; 4.17 with Jer 2.18; 37.5–10; and 4.20 with Jer 37.17. It is also difficult to imagine a statement like the following on the lips of Jeremiah: "Guidance (Hebrew torah) is no more, and her prophets obtain no vision from the LORD" (2.9). For these and other reasons, it is best to seek to understand Lamentations not as an utterance of Jeremiah, but rather as the composition of an anonymous exilic author (or authors) who gave eloquent poetic expression to the sense of bewilderment, anguish, and loss felt by many of the people. The vividness and local color found in this book, as well as the freshness and intensity of feeling expressed in it, suggest that the author was a Judean survivor remaining behind in the land and writing in close proximity to the catastrophic demise of the nation in 586 B.C.E.

Literary Form and Character

The entire book is written in poetry. Chs. 1–4 are composed as alphabetical acrostics; the strophes or verses begin with successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet, of which there are twenty-two. In chs. 1, 2, and 4 each verse begins with a different letter, whereas in ch. 3 three successive verses begin with the same letter; thus vv. 1–3 begin with the letter aleph, vv. 4–6 with the letter beth, and so on. Ch. 5 is not an acrostic, but alphabetical constraints can be seen in that it also has only twenty-two verses. Alphabetical acrostics are fairly common in the Hebrew Bible. Others include Pss 9–10; 25; 34; 111; 112; 119 (the most elaborate, with each letter beginning eight successive verses); 145; Prov 31.10–31. Though the origins and meaning of this literary device are uncertain, its use suggests notions of perfection, completeness, and aesthetic restraint. In the case of Lamentations, it provides the poet with a viable means of coming to terms with pain and grief. Instead of being allowed to spill over without limit, the pathos is channeled into a literary structure that brings a measure of order to social and emotional chaos. The alphabetic acrostic device channels and sets limits to feelings at the same time as it allows for complete expression, "from A to Z" as it were, of what needs to be said.

While the meter varies, there is a preponderance of the so-called Qinah meter, in which a longer three-beat line is followed by a shorter two-beat line. An example of this meter is Lam 5.14:

The old men have left the city gate,	(3)
the young men their music.	(2)

Formally, the poetry of Lamentations exhibits affinities to such other biblical genres as the elegy or funeral lament and the individual and communal psalm of lamentation. Laments over the destruction of cities and temples are known also from extrabiblical sources going back to the second millennium B.C.E.; see, e.g., the Lamentation over the Destruction of Sumer and Ur. Yet in keeping with the specificity of the historical occasion, Lamentations, while incorporating and adapting several traditional elements, is a unique literary composition addressed to the survivors of the destruction of Jerusalem and designed to help them come to terms with the historical reality and the religious implications of that catastrophic experience. It has been suggested, with some degree of plausibility, that these poems were used in public rites of mourning, such as those known to have been carried on at the site of the ruins of the Jerusalem temple (see Jer 41.5; Zech 7.1–7; 8.19).

Message

Lamentations is first and foremost an eloquent expression of grief that helped survivors come to terms with the historical calamity they had gone through. Furthermore, the author accepted the message of the great preexilic prophets and proclaimed that the destruction of the holy city was the just judgment of God for Israel's sin. Appeals for repentance, however, are frequently interspersed with appeals for God's mercy and compassion on the penitent survivors. A cautious note of hope is sounded in the center of the book (see 3.21–33). Here the poet gives expression to the belief that whereas God's wrath is limited (3.31), God's mercy and compassion are without limit (3.22–24). This message has continued to reverberate through subsequent ages and calamities to the present day.

The Desolation of Zion

- 1 How lonely sits the city that once was full of people!
How like a widow she has become,
she that was great among the
nations!
She that was a princess among the provinces
has become a vassal.
- 2 She weeps bitterly in the night,
with tears on her cheeks;
among all her lovers
she has no one to comfort her;
all her friends have dealt treacherously with her,
they have become her enemies.
- 3 Judah has gone into exile with suffering
and hard servitude;
she lives now among the nations,
and finds no resting place;
her pursuers have all overtaken her
in the midst of her distress.
- 4 The roads to Zion mourn, for no one comes to the festivals;
all her gates are desolate,
her priests groan;
her young girls grieve,^a
and her lot is bitter.
- 5 Her foes have become the masters,
her enemies prosper,

because the LORD has made her suffer
for the multitude of her
transgressions;
her children have gone away,
captives before the foe.

- 6 From daughter Zion has departed
all her majesty.
Her princes have become like stags
that find no pasture;
they fled without strength before the pursuer.
- 7 Jerusalem remembers, in the days of her affliction and wandering,
all the precious things
that were hers in days of old.
When her people fell into the hand of the foe,
and there was no one to help her,
the foe looked on mocking
over her downfall.
- 8 Jerusalem sinned grievously,
so she has become a mockery;
all who honored her despise her,
for they have seen her
nakedness;
she herself groans,
and turns her face away.
- 9 Her uncleanness was in her skirts;

^a Meaning of Heb uncertain

1.1–22 A moving description of the plight of the holy city following its destruction. Two voices mark the main sections of the poem. 1.1–11 The poet contrasts the present miserable condition of the city with its former glory. 1.1 How (Hebrew 'ekah) signals a sharp contrast between "now" and "then" and is found characteristically, though not exclusively, in elegies (see 2 Sam 1.19, 25, 27; Isa 1.21; 14.4; Jer 48.17; Ezek 26.17). 1.2 Lovers, friends, nations with whom Judah had entered into political alliances, which were denounced by the prophets (see Isa 31.1–3; Jer 4.30; 27.1–7; 30.14; Ezek 16.33). Some of these former allies made common cause with the Babylonians when they attacked Jerusalem (see 2 Kings 24.2; Ezek 25.12–17). 1.4 The roads ... mourn, or "roads are dried up," for lack of religious pilgrims. City gates were normally bustling with activity (see 5.14). 1.5 Foes ... the masters (the masters, lit. "the heads") alludes to the covenant blessing/curse in Deut 28.13, 44. A covenant context is also suggested by transgressions, a political term referring to willful acts of rebellion. God punished Jerusalem for breach of covenant, a theme more fully developed in ch. 2. 1.6 Daughter Zion or the like (see 1.15; 2.1, 4, 8, 10, 13, 15; 4.21, 22; cf. 3.48; 4.3, 6, 10, where the Hebrew reads lit. "daughter of my people") is a poetic expression of tender endearment personifying a city, land, or people. 1.8 Nakedness was considered shameful and humiliating (see Gen 9.22–23; Ex 20.26; Isa 47.3; Ezek 16.37–39). Ancient reliefs show prisoners being marched into captivity stark naked. 1.9 Uncleanness, a metaphor drawn

See note on 1.6. 1.17 Filthy thing belongs to the same semantic realm as uncleanness in v. 9 (cf. Lev. 12.2; 15.19–32; 2 Chr 29.5; Ezra 9.11; Zech 13.1). 1.18 Zion concedes that God's punishment is just because she had rebelled against his word (lit. The horrors of cannibalism during severe famine are mentioned in traditional treaty curses and prophetic threats (see Lev 26.29; Deut 28.53–57; Jer 19.9; Ezek 5.10) and reported on at least some occasions (Lam 4.10; 2 Kings 6.28–29). 2.21 Cf. Jer 9.21–22.

3.1–66 A didactic poem that seeks to console Zion by sounding a cautious but unmistakable note of hope. 3.1–39 The speaker is an individual who through personal experience of God's wrath feels credentialed to impart valuable teachings to the community. 3.1 I am one who. The Hebrew gever, translated one here and in v. 27, human in v. 35, and (with Heb. 'adam) any in v. 39, means "man," showing that the speaker here is not Zion, but an individual male. 3.2–18 The description of the speaker's suffering is so traditional that attempts to identify him are misplaced. He is a typical sufferer, like the "I" in the individual psalms of lamentation. 3.3 The hand of God often produces sickness or calamity (see v. 4; cf. 1 Sam 5.6–12; Job 19.21; Ps 32.4; 38.2). Hebraic monotheism precludes dualistic explanations of evil; thus all the actions described in vv. 2–18 have God as their ultimate subject. 3.4 Flesh, bones. See Ps 38.3; 51.8; cf. Ps 34.20. 3.6–7 Darkness is traditionally associated with prison (Ps 107.10–14) and the netherworld (Job 10.21; Ps cannot escape;

he has put heavy chains on me;

he shuts out my prayer;

he has made my paths crooked.
- 10 He is a bear lying in wait for me,
a lion in hiding;
11 he led me off my way and tore me to pieces;
he has made me desolate; 12 he bent his bow and set me as a mark for his arrow.
- 13 He shot into my vitals
the arrows of his quiver; 14 I have become the laughingstock of all my people,
the object of their taunt-songs
all day long.
- 15 He has filled me with bitterness, he has sated me with
wormwood.
- 16 He has made my teeth grind and made me cower in ashes; 17 my soul is bereft of peace;

I have forgotten what happiness is;
18 so I say, "Gone is my glory, great is your faithfulness.

- 24 "The LORD is my portion," says
my soul,
"therefore I will hope in him."
- 25 The LORD is good to those who wait for him,
to the soul that seeks him.
- 26 It is good that one should wait quietly
for the salvation of the LORD.
- 27 It is good for one to bear the yoke in youth, 28 to sit alone in silence
when the Lord has imposed it, 29 to put one's mouth to the dust
(there may yet be hope), 30 to give one's cheek to the smiter,
and be filled with insults.

88.6, 12, 18). Prison here is viewed as a form of death. 3.6 Cf. Ps 143.3. 3.10–11 The enemies of the sufferer are often pictured as wild animals (see Ps 7.2; 17.12; 22.12–13, 16), but here the enemy is the Lord, as in Job 10.16; Hos 13.7–8; Am 5.18–19. 3.12 Bow, arrow, refer to the divine archer who produces disaster and death (see Deut 32.23–24; Job 16.12–13; Ps 7.12–13; 38.2). 3.13 Vitals, or "kidneys," internal organs essential for life. 3.14 On the pain of mockery, see also v. 63; Job 30.9; Ps 22.6–7; 44.13–16. 3.15 Wormwood, a bitter-tasting plant and a symbol of extreme calamity or sorrow (see v. 19; Jer 9.15; 23.15). 3.20–21 These verses mark an important transition from despair to hope

(vv. 22–33) that is not uncommon in psalms of lamentation (see Pss 42.5, 6, 11; 73.15–17). Here hope is restored through remembrance. 3.22–23 These verses express a basic article of biblical faith (see Ex 34.6; Ps 103.8; Jon 4.2). 3.24–26 Portion, tribal inheritance of land (see Josh 18.2–10), but here, symbolically, of the Lord, as in Pss 16.5; 73.26; 142.5. Hope entails patient waiting and intense longing for God (cf. Ps 40.1; 130.5–7). 3.27–30 Speaking like a sage, the sufferer counsels humble submission to suffering as divine chastisement (cf. Ps 37.7; Prov 23.13–14; Isa 50.6). 3.31–33 Affirmation of the triumph of God's love over God's wrath, as in vv. 22–23; Ps 103.8–14. 3.34–36 God is not in-

from the depths of the pit;

different to wrongs. 3.37–39 Since nothing happens apart from God's will, divine chastisement should be accepted willingly. 3.40–41 In the light of the foregoing verses (1–39), a communal appeal is now issued for penitential self-examination, which must go beyond external ritual (hands) to interior renewal (hearts); cf. 1 Sam 16.7; Jer 4.4; 12.2.

3.42–47 A communal lament acknowledging guilt but complaining over the continuing experience of divine wrath. 3.43–44 On the hiddenness or absence of God, see Isa 45.15. 3.44 The cloud, normally a symbol of God's protective presence (see Ex 14.19–25; Num 9.15–23), is here a symbol of God's inaccessibility. 3.45 This verse describes a stark reversal of fortune from Deut 7.6. 3.46 See Ps 22.13. 3.48–51 This section describes the poet's grief over the ruin of his people (cf. 1.16; 2.11; 2.18–19). 3.50 Until . . . looks down, i.e., in answer to the people's prayers (see Ps 102.19–20). 3.52–66 The speaker in this section is probably not the same as the one in vv. 1–39, but a corporate "I" speaking for the city and people. 3.52 Without cause, or treacherously. See note on 1.2. Hunted . . . bird. See Pss 11.1; 124.7; Prov 6.5. 3.54 Water closed over my head, a metaphor for Sheol or death (see Pss 69.1–2, 14–15; 88.16–17; Jon 2.2–3). 3.55–66 The verbs in this section alternate between past tenses and imperatives, thus making the speaker appear to look back and forward at the same time. Given the ambiguities of the Hebrew verbal system, it is possible, and in the light of the historical situation of Lamentations perhaps preferable, to translate most of the verbs as imperatives, thus making the entire section a more consistent series of petitions invoking divine help. 3.55 I called, or "I call." Pit, a metaphor for Sheol (see Pss 28.1; 30.3; 88.4, 6; 143.7). 3.56 You heard, or "hear!" (cf. Ps 130.2). 3.57 You came near when I called on you; you said, or "Come near when I call on you and say!" Do not

Pss 74.2, 18, 22; 137.7) is spelled out in greater detail in vv. 2–18. 5.2 Our inheritance, the land God gave Israel (see Deut 4.38; 25.19; 26.1). Israel in turn was called God’s inheritance (see Deut 4.20; 9.26, 29; 32.9). 5.3 Orphans . . . widows, marginalized groups vulnerable to abuse and in need of special protection (see Ex 22.21–24; Deut 24.17–18, 21–22; 27.19). Here the terms are used metaphorically. 5.5 Yoke. See note on 1.14. 5.7 Like Jer 31.29; Ezek 18.2, this verse could be read as a complaint about unmerited suffering. However, in view of v. 16 (see also 1.14,

See 4.8. 5.12 Their hands, the enemy’s hands. 5.14 Old men . . . city gate. The elders customarily carried out judicial functions in the city gate (see Deut 22.15; 25.7; Ruth 4.1–2.11). 5.15 The cessation of joy was predicted by Israel’s prophets (Jer 16.9; Ezek 24.25; Hos 2.11). 5.16 The crown . . . from our head figuratively refers to Israel’s humiliation (cf. Job 19.9; Isa 62.3). 5.17 Because of this . . . these things looks back to vv. 2–16, as well as forward to v. 18. 5.18 An alternate translation of this verse is possible: “On Mount Zion, which is desolate, jackals roam about.” The roaming of jackals (or “foxes”) over ruins is a traditional picture of desolation found in treaty or covenant curses (see Isa 13.22; intervention to effect true penitence, much as in Ps 80.3, 7, 19; Jer 31.18; 23.22; cf. Deut 30.6. 5.22 Unless you have utterly rejected us. The possibility of such rejection is briefly considered but dismissed as unthinkable in the light of 3.22–33; 4.22. However, it adds urgency to the petition of v. 21.

EZEKIEL

EZEKIEL AND THE BOOK ASSOCIATED WITH HIM have puzzled readers for centuries. Ezekiel is both priest and prophet, two roles that are often viewed as incontrovertibly opposed. He speaks, falls down, acts out God's word, travels between Mesopotamia and Syro-Palestine in a visionary state, sees strange visions, and proclaims dangerous messages (e.g., ch. 18). Perhaps it is not surprising that according to some Jewish traditions the book was only to be read by those over thirty years of age. Despite these ambiguities, discerning readers of Ezekiel have the opportunity to encounter one of ancient Israel's most vigorous religious thinkers, a thinker concerned with both classical priestly concerns—purity and holiness—and prophetic issues—righteousness and religious propriety.

Context

The numerous chronological formulas that occur throughout the book (e.g., 1.1–3; 20.1; 24.1; 32.1; 40.1) attest to the pivotal times during which Ezekiel lived. Such formulas indicate that Ezekiel prophesied from 593 to 571 B.C.E. These years span the decisive moment—587 B.C.E.—when Jerusalem fell to Nebuchadnezzar (whom Ezekiel deemed an instrument of God [29.19–20]). Before Ezekiel was commissioned as prophet, he had been taken into exile, along with other prominent Judahites, in 597 B.C.E. After that year, there were prominent communities in both Babylon and Judah. In fact, there were two kings—the exiled Jehoiachin and the puppet Zedekiah—in these two areas, respectively.

Person

Ezekiel had been born into a priestly family (1.3), probably Zadokite, and had followed the ritual requirements that allow one to work as a priest. He was married, though his wife predeceased him (24.15–27); the book mentions no offspring. Before 597 he lived in Jerusalem; afterward not far from Nippur, on the banks of an irrigation canal. In exile, other Judahites consulted him on a regular basis (8.1; 14.1; 20.1), which suggests that he had significant stature in that expatriate community. Although the book includes vision reports with vivid imagery, such literature, which is stylized, does not allow readers readily to make judgments about the personality of the prophet.

The book is made up of four primary sections: chs. 1–24, oracles concerning Judah and Jerusalem; chs. 25–32, oracles concerning foreign nations; chs. 33–39, restoration discourses; and chs. 40–48, a vision of the new temple and polity. Unlike Isaiah and more like Jeremiah, much of the book is written in prose—though the NRSV discerns more poetry than did the RSV (e.g., ch. 7). Divine utterance, rather than prophetic utterance, is the predominant rhetorical style.

Ezekiel used diverse literary forms in his prophetic proclamation including vision reports (chs. 1–3; 8.1–11.25; 37.1–14; 40.1–48.35) and at least twelve symbolic actions (e.g., 4.1–3). In both vision and action reports, the prophet is described as physically involved—he is transported and tours in visions, he acts out oracles. Other important forms include allegorical features (e.g., chs. 15–17), quotations, and various formulaic expressions, especially “you will know that I am the LORD,” which appears more than fifty times. Moreover, priestly legal argumentation (e.g., ch. 18) as well as priestly vocabulary and imagery (e.g., of the enthroned “glory of the LORD”) characterize the book.

Scholars have explained the composition of the book in diverse ways. Some have discerned a long process of editorial reinterpretation, which may have begun with Ezekiel himself. Others maintain that most of the book may be attributed directly to the prophet. Moreover, while some hold that the prophet originally delivered his discourses orally, others maintain that much in the book was, from the outset, written.

Ezekiel responded directly to the conditions that the Israelites, particularly those in exile, confronted—before 587 B.C.E. words of judgment predominated; after 587 words of consolation and restoration were more prominent. None were immune from judgment, even those already in exile. However, those still in Judah were singled out for the brunt of God’s attack (9.3–11).

The book presents several distinctive theological formulations. Concern for the religious status of the individual works itself out in several ways. The prophet’s task is defined as that of a sentinel who may individually succeed or fail (3.16–21; 33.7–16). And more generally, God will respond to individual Israelites according to their deeds (“a child shall not suffer for the iniquity of a parent, nor a parent suffer for the iniquity of a child,” 18.20).

Consistent with his priestly status, Ezekiel construed the problems of and promise for Israel in priestly theological terms. Idolatrous behavior at the temple required punishment (ch. 8). As a result, “the glory of the LORD” had to depart from Jerusalem. Then the defiled temple and those who worshiped there could be destroyed. Once the defilement was removed, a new temple with new regulations would provide the focus for a restored Israel.

Ezekiel thought in radical terms. In his theological reviews of Israel's history, he deemed Israel fundamentally foreign and recalcitrant from its beginnings (ch. 16). Moreover, Israel's ensuing experiences with God justified radical punishment—obliteration without regard for a remnant. Such finality made it difficult to imagine a viable future. Hence, the well-known vision of dry bones (37.1–14) is truly remarkable—that which is dead might live again. The comprehensive vision of new life (chs. 40–48) may properly be termed utopian, one based on “the Torah of the temple,” which is newly revealed in the concluding vision. Ezekiel's theology is one in which God is other and acts to preserve the sanctity of his name. When God acts, foreign nations (28.23) as well as Israel will know that the Lord—and no other—is God. David L. Petersen

The Vision of the Chariot

1 In the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, on the fifth day of the month, as I was among the exiles by the river Chebar, the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God. ²On the fifth day of the month (it was the fifth year of the exile of King Jehoiachin), ³the word of the LORD came to the priest Ezekiel son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the hand of the LORD was on him there.

4 As I looked, a stormy wind came out of the north: a great cloud with brightness around it and fire flashing forth continually, and in the middle of the fire, something like gleaming amber. ⁵In the middle of it was something like four living creatures. This was their appearance: they were of human form. ⁶Each had four faces, and each of them had four wings. ⁷Their legs were straight, and the soles of their feet were like the sole of a calf's foot; and they sparkled like burnished bronze. ⁸Under their wings on their four sides they had human hands. And the four had their faces and their wings thus: ⁹their wings touched one another; each of them moved straight ahead, without turning as they moved.

1.1–3.15 Ezekiel's inaugural vision, which may be compared with shorter, though similar, accounts in Isa 6; Jer 1. God calls Ezekiel to act as a prophet and provides him with instructions about fulfilling this task. 1.1–3 The book's introduction places the prophet in Babylonia and dates his activity by reference to a Judahite king, Jehoiachin, who is now in exile. 1.1 The river Chebar, a canal, not a natural river, near Nippur. 1.2 Jehoiachin, Ezekiel, and others were exiled to Babylon in 597 B.C.E. The fifth year of the exile would have been 593. 1.3 The priest could refer either to Ezekiel or to Buzi. This phrase defines Ezekiel as a priest because of his lineage, whereas he becomes a prophet because of this visionary experience. The land of the Chaldeans, or the plains of southern Mesopotamia, which were associated with an Aramean-speaking people who had entered this area earlier in the first millennium. The hand of the LORD, a phrase indicative of spirit possession; cf. 3.22.

1.4–28 Ezekiel encounters God. The combination of cloud, fire, creatures, the spirit and wheels makes it impossible to reduce this vision to some readily understandable phenomenon. 1.4–14 Ezekiel perceives strange creatures. 1.4 Fire and cloud are often associated with an appearance of the deity, e.g., Ps 18. 1.5 The author uses like (see also vv. 22, 26, 27) to emphasize that the vision is proximate. The prophet does not actually see the deity and his accoutrements. The living creatures are part animal, part human, with the latter dominant, i.e., they have two legs and stand upright. Such winged creatures with animal features are related to the seraphim in Isa 6, another prophetic call narrative. Ancient Near Eastern mythology knows such creatures, often minor deities, some of which support the divine or royal

10 As for the appearance of their faces: the four had the face of a human being, the face of a lion on the right side, the face of an ox on the left side, and the face of an eagle; 11 such were their faces. Their wings were spread out above; each creature had two wings, each of which touched the wing of another, while two covered their bodies. 12 Each moved straight ahead; wherever the spirit would go, they went, without turning as they went. 13 In the middle of^a the living creatures there was something that looked like burning coals of fire, like torches moving to and fro among the living creatures; the fire was bright, and lightning issued from the fire. 14 The living creatures darted to and fro, like a flash of lightning.

15 As I looked at the living creatures, I saw a wheel on the earth beside the living creatures, one for each of the four of them.^b 16 As for the appearance of the wheels and their construction: their appearance was like the gleaming of beryl; and the four had the same form, their construction being something like a wheel within a wheel. 17 When they moved, they moved in any of the four directions without veering as they moved. 18 Their rims were tall and awesome, for the rims of all four were full of eyes all around. 19 When the living creatures moved, the wheels moved beside them; and when the living creatures rose from the earth, the wheels rose. 20 Wherever the spirit would go, they went, and the wheels rose along with them; for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels. 21 When they moved, the others moved; when they stopped, the others stopped; and when they rose from the earth, the wheels rose along with them; for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels.

22 Over the heads of the living creatures there was something like a dome, shining like crystal,^c spread out above their heads. 23 Under the dome their wings were stretched out straight, one toward another; and each of the creatures had two wings covering its body. 24 When they moved, I heard the sound of their wings like the sound of mighty waters, like the thunder of the Almighty,^d a sound of tumult like the sound of an army; when they stopped, they let down their wings. 25 And there came a voice from above the dome over their heads; when they stopped, they let down their wings.

throne. 1.10 Four faces (human, lion, ox, eagle) on one head is otherwise unattested. The imagery may emphasize alertness: as the wheels turn, the creature will be able to look in any direction. 1.12 The spirit, not the deity, but the spirit of the living creatures in v. 21 (see also 1.20; 3.12). 1.13-14 The creatures are associated with fire or lightning; cf. Gen 3.24 for an analogous creature who brandishes a flaming sword and Gen 15.17, where torches symbolize the presence of the deity. 1.15-21 Crystalline wheels associated with the creatures. Although the writer mentions a wheel, there are apparently four wheels, one for each creature. Either a chariot with four wheels on one axle (two wheels on each side of the carriage) or a ceremonial cart with two axles (and two wheels per axle) may be presumed in this description. 1.22-25 Below the dome. 1.22 Dome. Cf. the RSV translation, "firmament," which is the heavenly vault (see Gen 1.7-8). 1.24 Auditory imagery (e.g., like the thunder) rather than visual imagery, fire and light, prevails. Both sound and visual imagery attend the appearance of the deity (e.g., Ex 19.16-19). The sound of mighty waters. Cf. 43.2. In Rev 14.2, the sound is further defined in association with thunder. 1.25 A voice or "a sound" from above the dome indicates that even the deafening roar created by the creatures' wings under the dome is penultimate. 1.26-28 Above the dome. The throne above the heavenly vault signifies the throne or council room of the deity. The word like is used ten times in three verses to emphasize that Ezekiel does not actually see the deity. Sapphire is used in Ex 24.10, a visual description of the deity. Like a human form begins the description of the deity, above the loins (waist) like amber, below the loins like fire. 1.28 Rather than proceed with a more detailed and hence ance of the splendor all around. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD.

When I saw it, I fell on my face, and I heard the voice of someone speaking.

The Commission

2 He said to me: O mortal,^f stand up on your feet, and I will speak with you. 2 And when he spoke to me, a spirit entered into me and set me on my feet; and I heard him speaking to me. 3 He said to me, Mortal, I am sending you to the people of Israel, to a nation^g of rebels who have rebelled against me; they and their ancestors have transgressed against me to this very day. 4 The descendants are impudent and stubborn. I am sending you to them, and you shall say to them, “Thus says the Lord God.” 5 Whether they hear or refuse to hear (for they are a rebellious house), they shall know that there has been a prophet among them. 6 And you, O mortal, do not be afraid of them, and do not be afraid of their words, though briers and thorns surround you and you live among scorpions; do not be afraid of their words, and do not be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house. 7 You shall speak my words to them, whether they hear or refuse to hear; for they are a rebellious house.

8 But you, mortal, hear what I say to you; do not be rebellious like that rebellious house; open your mouth and eat what I give you. 9 I looked, and a hand was stretched out to me, and a written scroll was in it. 10 He spread it before me; it had writing on the front and on the back, and written on it were words of lamentation and mourning and woe.

3 He said to me, O mortal, eat what is offered to you; eat this scroll, and go, speak to the house of Israel. 2 So I opened my mouth, and he gave me the scroll to eat. 3 He said to me, Mortal, eat this scroll that I give you and fill your stomach with it. Then I ate it; and in my mouth it was as sweet as honey.

4 He said to me: Mortal, go to the house of Israel and speak my very words to them. 5 For you are not sent to a people of obscure speech and difficult language, dangerous description, the author moves to the general—the rainbow and the concluding sentence, This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD, which again emphasizes that the prophet did not see God directly. 1.28b The author is careful not to impute the voice to God, though the deity is almost certainly speaking.

2.1–3.3 Ezekiel made to stand up and provided with a commission. 2.1 Mortal, lit. “son of man” (see text note f). The Hebrew phrase “son of x” means a member of a certain class, e.g., “son of Israel” is properly translated “Israelite.” Mortal occurs over ninety times in Ezekiel. It is appropriate here since the other characters, whether spirits or living creatures, belong to the divine realm. Stand up signifies that this is a waking as opposed to a sleeping (incubation) vision. Cf. Dan 8.17–18; 10.9–11; Zech 4.1. 2.2 A spirit. See also, e.g., 3.12, 14, 24, which in Hebrew do not have the definite article. Is this a minor deity, the deity’s spirit (cf. 11.5, 24; 37.1), or simply human energy? This spirit, and not the prophet’s own power, enables him to stand up. 2.3 Israel’s rebellion against God has been going on for generations, a standard theme for Ezekiel; see ch. 16. 2.4 Thus says the Lord God, a standard phrase with which a prophetic utterance may be introduced. Without an ensuing oracle, however, the phrase alone is ironic; cf. 3.11, 27. 2.6 Do not be afraid.

Cf. the call of Jeremiah (Jer 1.8). The descendants (v. 4) are here characterized as plants (briers and thorns) and animals (scorpions). The commission recognizes that Israel may not hear (vv. 5, 7) but emphasizes the importance of having someone speak (v. 7) who is recognizably a prophet. 2.8–10 Open your mouth. Oral imagery is prominent in prophetic call narratives. Isaiah’s mouth was purified (Isa 6.6–7). The Lord touched Jeremiah’s mouth (Jer 1.9) and in so doing introduced his words into the prophet’s mouth. 2.9–10 The scroll has been fully inscribed and bears bad news; cf. Zech 5.1–4. 2.10 Lamentation and mourning and woe all may reflect funeral rites in ancient Israel. 3.1–3 There is no precedent for eating scrolls, which were made of either papyrus or leather. Cf. Jer 15.16, “your words were found, and I ate them.” If Ezekiel’s consumption of the scroll is surprising, his palate is shocking, namely, that funeral words could be as sweet as honey. Cf. Jer 15.16, “your words became to me as a joy.”

3.4–11 Words to Israel. 3.4 This verse reiterates 2.7, though now presuming the content of the scroll. 3.5 Obscure speech and difficult language, no doubt a reference to Akkadian, the Northeast Semitic cuneiform language of ancient Mesopotamia, which, as a more fully inflected language than Hebrew, would have been viewed as but to the house of Israel— ⁶not to many peoples of obscure speech and difficult language, whose words you cannot understand. Surely, if I sent you to them, they would listen to you. ⁷But the house of Israel will not listen to you, for they are not willing to listen to me; because all the house of Israel have a hard forehead and a stubborn heart. ⁸See, I have made your face hard against their faces, and your forehead hard against their foreheads. ⁹Like the hardest stone, harder than flint, I have made your forehead; do not fear them or be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house. ¹⁰He said to me: Mortal, all my words that I shall speak to you receive in your heart and hear with your ears; ¹¹then go to the exiles, to your people, and speak to them. Say to them, “Thus says the Lord God”; whether they hear or refuse to hear.

Ezekiel at the River Chebar

12 Then the spirit lifted me up, and as the glory of the LORD rose^h from its place, I heard behind me the sound of loud rumbling; ¹³it was the sound of the wings of the living creatures brushing against one another, and the sound of the wheels beside them, that sounded like a loud rumbling. ¹⁴The spirit lifted me up and bore me away; I went in bitterness in the heat of my spirit, the hand of the LORD being strong upon me. ¹⁵I came to the exiles at Tel-abib, who lived by the river Chebar.ⁱ And I sat there among them, stunned, for seven days.

16 At the end of seven days, the word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁷Mortal, I have made you a sentinel for the house of Israel; whenever you hear a word from my mouth, you shall give them warning from me. ¹⁸If I say to the wicked, “You shall surely die,” and you give them no warning, or speak to warn the wicked from their wicked way, in order to save their life, those wicked persons shall die for their iniquity; but their blood I will require at your hand. ¹⁹But if you warn the wicked, and they do not turn from their wickedness, or from their wicked way, they shall die for their iniquity; but you will have saved your life. ²⁰Again, if the righteous turn from their righteousness and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before them, they shall die; because you have not warned them, they shall die for their sin, and their righteous deeds that they have done shall not be remembered; but their blood I will require at your hand. ²¹If, however, you warn the righteous not to sin, and they do not sin, they shall surely live, because they took warning; and you will have saved your life.

Ezekiel Isolated and Silenced

22 Then the hand of the LORD was upon me there; and he said to me, Rise up, go out into the valley, and there I will speak with you. ²³So I rose up and went difficult; cf. Isa 33.19, “the people of an obscure speech.”

3.12–15 Vision conclusion. 3.12 The spirit, lit. “a spirit,” here probably a wind. Cf. other instances of wind impelling the prophet in a vision (8.3; 11.1, 24; 43.5). The glory of the LORD also moves, though of its own accord. 3.12–13 The sound of loud rumbling (RSV, “a great earthquake”) suggests, (so 1.22–25) and then v. 13 makes explicit, that the creatures’ wings, along with the wheels, assist in this movement. 3.14 The spirit (cf. RSV, “The Spirit,” an interpretive rendering), again lit. “a spirit,” best understood as the wind. The Septuagint omits in bitterness. In the heat of my spirit, probably “angry.” 3.15 Tel-abib reflects the Akkadian til-abibi, “mound of the flood.” In Hebrew ’abib means “ears of grain.”

3.16–21 Ezekiel as sentinel (RSV, “watchman”). This conception of the prophet’s role is used elsewhere in the OT (Jer 6.17; Hos 9.8; cf. Isa 21.6) and is more fully developed in Ezek 33.1–9. The logic is informed by that used in chs. 18 and 33, chapters that insist each individual is responsible for his or her fate. In this instance, the prophet as sentinel is accountable to the Lord. That accountability is expressed in the sentinel’s providing a warning. There are four cases, one per verse, in vv. 18, 19, 20, 21; concerns of the latter two are not part of the discourse in Ezek 33, but 33.8 parallels the case in 3.18 and 33.9 parallels the one in 3.19. 3.16 The word of the LORD came to me, a phrase characteristic of Ezekiel (occurring almost fifty times). This formula emphasizes the “private” character of these revelations. 3.17 I have made you, a translation that suggests 3.16–21 presents a way of understanding the earlier commissioning, not a new call.

3.22–5.17 Ezekiel communicates God’s mes-out into the valley; and the glory of the LORD stood there, like the glory that I had seen by the river Chebar; and I fell on my face. ²⁴The spirit entered into me, and set me on my feet; and he spoke with me and said to me: Go, shut yourself inside your house. ²⁵As for you, mortal, cords shall be placed on you, and you shall be bound with them, so that you cannot go out among the people; ²⁶and I will make your tongue cling to the roof of your mouth, so that you shall be speechless and unable to reprove them; for they are a rebellious house. ²⁷But when I speak with you, I will open your mouth, and you shall say to them, "Thus says the Lord God"; let those who will hear, hear; and let those who refuse to hear, refuse; for they are a rebellious house.

The Siege of Jerusalem Portrayed

4 And you, O mortal, take a brick and set it before you. On it portray a city, Jerusalem; ²and put siegeworks against it, and build a siege wall against it, and cast up a ramp against it; set camps also against it, and plant battering rams against it all around. ³Then take an iron plate and place it as an iron wall between you and the city; set your face toward it, and let it be in a state of siege, and press the siege against it. This is a sign for the house of Israel.

⁴ Then lie on your left side, and place the punishment of the house of Israel upon it; you shall bear their punishment for the number of the days that you lie there. ⁵For I assign to you a number of days, three hundred ninety days, equal to the number of the years of their punishment; and so you shall bear the punishment of the house of Israel. ⁶When you have completed these, you shall lie down a second time, but on your right side, and bear the punishment of the house of Judah; forty days I assign you, one day for each year. ⁷You shall set your face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and with your arm bared you shall prophesy against it. ⁸See, I am putting cords on you so that you cannot turn from one side to the other until you have completed the days of your siege.

⁹ And you, take wheat and barley, sage through bodily action. The Lord requires Ezekiel to act out his prophetic message in a series of discrete performances. Numerous prophets prior to Ezekiel had used nonverbal behavior to convey a message from the deity, e.g., Elisha (2 Kings 13.14–19); Hosea (Hos 1); Jeremiah (Jer 16.1–9; 19). However, reports of symbolic actions occur more frequently in Ezekiel (twelve times) than in any other prophetic book. 3.22–27 The prophet experiences again the glory of the LORD (v. 23), which results in directions to perform certain actions. 3.22 There and the valley, which is probably better translated "the plain" (RSV) and refers to a broad alluvial river basin typical of Mesopotamia, emphasize that Ezekiel is in Babylon when he perceives the Lord and when the spirit speaks with him. 3.24a Cf. 2.2. 3.26 I will make . . . so that you shall be speechless. Here the absence of prophetic speech is attributed to the Lord's prohibition, not malfeasance by the prophet. 3.26–27 Cf. 24.27; 34.22, a text that links news about the destruction of Jerusalem to the removal of Ezekiel's speechlessness. Only when the Lord permits, will Ezekiel be able to perform his prophetic task, namely, by saying Thus says the Lord God (cf. 2.4; 3.11).

4.1–3 Siege and separation. This symbolic act uses imagery attested in an earlier prophetic text, Jer 1.18. 4.1 Brick, i.e., brick made out of mud and dried in the sun. Ezekiel is probably being commanded to etch the city and siegeworks into a still damp brick, though the verbs seem to call for sculpting, which would have been possible with damp clay. Such bricks could vary widely in size and general configuration (square or rectangular), though one 40 by 20 by 12 centimeters would not be unusual. 4.3 Iron plate, probably an iron cooking griddle. This vignette is to be an uninterpreted sign for Israel.

4.4–8 Ezekiel is commanded to lie first on his left and then on his right side to communicate the length of punishment for Israel and Judah, respectively. The numbers of days—three hundred ninety and forty—do not conform to the chronology of either nation's exile. The Septuagint offers different figures, one hundred fifty and forty years, respectively. 4.4 Bear their punishment. The Hebrew word here translated "punishment" can also mean "sin" or "guilt." The prophet may serve as a "scapegoat" (Lev 16.20–22), evoking a priestly role in ancient Israel (Lev 16.17); Ezekiel was both priest and prophet.

4.9–17 Ezekiel is commanded to bake bread and eat it and then to drink water according to a specific rationing. 4.9 Wheat and barley, beans and lentils, millet and spelt. This mixture of six food-stuffs probably symbolizes that no one grain or legume is found in sufficient quantity to allow the preparation of something to eat. These foods were known both in Israel and in Babylon.

beans and lentils, millet and spelt; put them into one vessel, and make bread for yourself. During the number of days that you lie on your side, three hundred ninety days, you shall eat it. ¹⁰The food that you eat shall be twenty shekels a day by weight; at fixed times you shall eat it. ¹¹And you shall drink water by measure, one-sixth of a hin; at fixed times you shall drink. ¹²You shall eat it as a barley-cake, baking it in their sight on human dung. ¹³The LORD said, "Thus shall the people of Israel eat their bread, unclean, among the nations to which I will drive them." ¹⁴Then I said, "Ah Lord God! I have never defiled myself; from my youth up until now I have never eaten what died of itself or was torn by animals, nor has carrion flesh come into my mouth." ¹⁵Then he said to me, "See, I will let you have cow's dung instead of human dung, on which you may prepare your bread."

¹⁶ Then he said to me, Mortal, I am going to break the staff of bread in Jerusalem; they shall eat bread by weight and with fearfulness; and they shall drink water by measure and in dismay. ¹⁷Lacking bread and water, they will look at one another in dismay, and waste away under their punishment.

A Sword Against Jerusalem

5 And you, O mortal, take a sharp sword; use it as a barber's razor and run it over your head and your beard; then take balances for weighing, and divide the hair. ²One third of the hair you shall burn in the fire inside the city, when the days of the siege are completed; one third you shall take and strike with the sword all around the city; and one third you shall scatter to the wind, and I will unsheathe the sword after them. ³Then you shall take from these a small number, and bind them in the skirts of your robe. ⁴From these, again, you shall take some, throw them into the fire and burn them up; from there a fire will come out against all the house of Israel.

⁵ Thus says the Lord God: This is Jerusalem; I have set her in the center of the nations, with countries all around her. ⁶But she has rebelled against my ordinances and my statutes, becoming more wicked than the nations and the countries all around her, rejecting my ordinances and not following my statutes. ⁷Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you are more turbulent than the nations that

j Heb it

4.10 Twenty shekels. One shekel weighed almost half an ounce; hence twenty shekels would weigh almost half a pound. 4.11 One-sixth of a hin. One hin (the word belongs to an Egyptian system) equals slightly less than a gallon; hence one-sixth of one would constitute approximately two-thirds of a quart. 4.12–13 The Hebrew syntax and phrase barley-cake make it unclear whether the barley bread is the one Ezekiel baked (v. 9). V. 12 may begin a new symbolic action that emphasizes impurity rather than scarcity, which appears to be the point in vv. 9–11. Human dung as fuel is otherwise unattested in ancient Israel. Deut 23.12–14 demonstrates that human fecal material violates holiness. 4.14 For Ezekiel to have cooked over a fire fueled with human offal would have introduced impurity, would have defiled him, which would have been especially pernicious since Ezekiel was a priest. The cases that Ezekiel attests, eating something that was not properly slaughtered (Lev 22.8) and meat that has not been eaten within a specific time limit (carrion flesh, Lev 7.18), are forbidden in Israel's ritual legislation. 4.16–17 The prophet returns to the imagery of vv. 9–11, that of scarcity; cf. Lev 26.26 for similar language.

5.1–4 Ezekiel and the blade of a barber. In the final symbolic action of this series, Ezekiel is to take a sharp instrument (sword, or "sharp blade") and use it to cut his hair and beard (cf. Isa 7.20 for the imagery of a foreign enemy as a razor). The manipulation of the hair in three parts and then a small number (vv. 2–4) suggests that no part of Israel will be immune from destruction. What Ezekiel does to the hair—weighing, dividing, burning, striking, scattering, binding—may symbolize God's punishment. Fire is a destructive element at both beginning and end.

5.5–17 God vows that he will destroy Jerusalem using various weapons. This long speech is replete with prophetic speech formulas, thus says the Lord God in vv. 5, 7, 8, 11 and I, the Lord, have spoken in vv. 13, 15, 17. 5.5 This is Jerusalem signifies that the divine oracle interprets the purport of the foregoing symbolic actions, especially the last one, as referring to Jerusalem. In the center of the nations resonates with traditions of a holy site or city being located at the earth's central point (cf. 38.12). However, here that tradition involves no divine protection for the city and, instead, allows for judgment in the next verse. 5.6 My ordinances and my statutes, i.e., specific requirements created by God's covenant with Israel. Jerusalem's becoming more wicked than the nations is a theme are all around you, and have not followed my statutes or kept my ordinances, but have acted according to the ordinances of the nations that are all around you; ⁸therefore thus says the Lord God: I, I myself, am coming against you; I will execute judgments among you in the sight of the nations. ⁹And because of all your abominations, I will do to you what I have never yet done, and the like of which I will never do again. ¹⁰Surely, parents shall eat their children in your midst, and children shall eat their parents; I will execute judgments on you, and any of you who survive I will scatter to every wind. ¹¹Therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, surely, because you have defiled my sanctuary with all your detestable things and with all your abominations—therefore I will cut you down;^k my eye will not spare, and I will have no pity. ¹²One third of you shall die of pestilence or be consumed by famine among you; one third shall fall by the sword around you; and one third I will scatter to every wind and will unsheathe the sword after them.

¹³ My anger shall spend itself, and I will vent my fury on them and satisfy myself; and they shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken in my jealousy, when I spend my fury on them. ¹⁴Moreover I will make you a desolation and an object of mocking among the nations around you, in the sight of all that pass by. ¹⁵You shall be^l a mockery and a taunt, a warning and a horror, to the nations around you, when I execute judgments on you in anger and fury, and with furious punishments—I, the LORD, have spoken—¹⁶when I loose against you^m my deadly arrows of famine, arrows for destruction, which I will let loose to destroy you, and when I bring more and more famine upon you, and break your staff of bread. ¹⁷I will send famine and wild animals against you, and they will rob you of your children; pestilence and bloodshed shall pass through you; and I will bring the sword upon you. I, the LORD, have spoken.

Judgment on Idolatrous Israel

6 The word of the LORD came to me: ²O mortal, set your face toward the mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them, ³and say, You mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God! Thus says the Lord God to the mountains and the hills, to the ravines and the valleys: I, I myself will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places. ⁴Your altars shall become desolate, and your incense stands shall be broken; and I will throw down your slain in front of your idols. ⁵I will lay the corpses of the people of Israel in front of their idols; and I will scatter your bones around your altars. ⁶Wherever you live, your towns shall be waste and your high places ruined, so that your altars will be waste and ruined,ⁿ your idols broken and destroyed, your incense also present in ch. 16. 5.8 I, I myself, am coming against you. Cf. Nah 2.13; 3.5. 5.10 Ezekiel takes the case of parents consuming children (cf. Lev 26.29; 2 Kings 6.29; Jer 19.9) and adds the converse, and otherwise unattested, children consuming parents. Here and in v. 12 Ezekiel uses imagery drawn from covenant curses. 5.11 Defiled my sanctuary. See Ezek 8; 11 for specific ways in which the temple had been desecrated. 5.12 This verse builds on the fractional symbolism of 5.1–2. 5.16–17 On God's arsenal. Cf. Deut 32.23–24, which suggests Ezekiel is using standard notions of ways in which God can inflict punishment.

6.1–14 Destruction with survivors. 6.1–7 Ezekiel addresses first the mountains of Israel and then all Israel. Cf. Ezek 36 for similar imagery, employed after the destruction foretold in ch. 6; 3.22, where Ezekiel is speaking in a valley. Geographic imagery is prominent throughout the book. 6.2–4 The mountains themselves are personified and addressed, as are valleys. Mountains are important because Israel had built improper religious sites on them. The term high place could refer to anything from a small ritual platform to a temple complex. High places are frequently related to Canaanite religious practices. For or polemic against high places, see, e.g., 2 Kings 23.8; Jer 19.5 (high places could also be located in valleys; so Jer 7.31). Even Yahwistic high places were to have been destroyed after the reforms of Josiah. Altars, incense stands, and idols indicate that Ezekiel understands these shrines to have been major installations. Idols (Hebrew gillulim), used thirty-nine times in Ezekiel, is characteristic of this book. 6.5–6 Instead of the sacrifices normally expected at the high places. God will provide corpses (cf. Jer 7.31–33, with corpses at the high place Topheth). 6.6 Your works, a reference to religious implements made stands cut down, and your works wiped out. ⁷The slain shall fall in your midst; then you shall know that I am the LORD.

⁸ But I will spare some. Some of you shall escape the sword among the nations and be scattered through the countries. ⁹Those of you who escape shall remember me among the nations where they are carried captive, how I was crushed by their wanton heart that turned away from me, and their wanton eyes that turned after their idols. Then they will be loathsome in their own sight for the evils that they have committed, for all their abominations. ¹⁰And they shall know that I am the LORD; I did not threaten in vain to bring this disaster upon them.

¹¹ Thus says the Lord God: Clap your hands and stamp your foot, and say, Alas for all the vile abominations of the house of Israel! For they shall fall by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence. ¹²Those far off shall die of pestilence; those nearby shall fall by the sword; and any who are left and are spared shall die of famine. Thus I will spend my fury upon them. ¹³And you shall know that I am the LORD, when their slain lie among their idols around their altars, on every high hill, on all the mountain tops, under every green tree, and under every leafy oak, wherever they offered pleasing odor to all their idols. ¹⁴I will stretch out my hand against them, and make the land desolate and waste, throughout all their settlements, from the wilderness to Riblah.^o Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Impending Disaster

7 The word of the LORD came to me: ²You, O mortal, thus says the Lord God to the land of Israel:

An end! The end has come upon the four corners of the land.

³ Now the end is upon you, I will let loose my anger upon you; I will judge you according to your ways,

I will punish you for all your abominations.

⁴ My eye will not spare you, I will have no pity.

I will punish you for your ways, while your abominations are among you.

Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

⁵ Thus says the Lord God: Disaster after disaster! See, it comes.

⁶ An end has come, the end has come.

It has awakened against you; see, it comes!

^o Another reading is Diblah

by human hands (see Isa 17.7–8). 6.7 You shall know that I am the Lord, a sentence common to Ezekiel (over sixty times) that regularly marks the boundary of a speech, e.g., 7.27. Here remembering and self-loathing lead to knowledge. 6.8–10 Those who survive will be exiled. 6.9 I was crushed. God has been affected personally and does not simply enforce covenant curses. 6.11–14 An oracle that begins with a new device, ritual use of hands, foot, and voice. On alas, cf. the related Hebrew word translated aha in 25.3; 26.2; 36.2. 6.12 The possibility for survivors seems remote. Far off, nearby may refer to proximity to Jerusalem. 6.13 An allusion to the imagery of 6.1–7. 6.14 From the wilderness to Riblah, a general description of Israel's boundaries at their greatest extent. Wilderness refers to southern Judah (Ex 23.31); Riblah (Diblah in Hebrew; the letters r and d may be easily confused) lies in Syria (2 Kings 23.33).

7.1–27 Sayings concerning the end for Israel. Thus says the Lord God introduces two of the three oracles that make up this chapter, vv. 1–4, 5–9,

10–27. The formula Then you shall know that I am the Lord occurs at the end of each oracle. These oracles share much imagery and phraseology with other OT texts, e.g., Isa 13–14. 7.1–4 The word end occurs three times and provides the basic theme of the first oracle. Am 8.2 also understands God's judgment to be "the end." Four corners of the land. One could translate "four corners of the earth" and emphasize the destruction's cosmic scope. However, Hebrew 'adamah, "land," is regularly used by Ezekiel to refer to Israelite territory, e.g., 11.17. Cf. Isa 11.12 on the four corners. 7.3 Let loose my anger. See Ex 15.7; Ps 78.49. 7.4 Eye. Cf. Pss 33.18; 34.15, where God's eye looks hospitably at the righteous. 7.5–9 The end is defined as the day, which is imminent. The "day of the LORD" as a time for destruction and disorder is a prominent motif in other prophetic texts, e.g., Joel 1.15; Zeph 1.14; Zech 14.1; Mal 4.1. The general terms—doom, end, disaster, tumult—are presented as God's personal wrath, which will be meted out in proportion to your

Abominations in the Temple

8 In the sixth year, in the sixth month, on the fifth day of the month, as I sat in my house, with the elders of Judah sitting before me, the hand of the Lord God fell upon me there. ²I looked, and there was a figure that looked like a human being;^t below what appeared to be its loins it was fire, and above the loins it was like the appearance of brightness, like gleaming amber. ³It stretched out the form of a hand, and took me by a lock of my head; and the spirit lifted me up between earth and heaven, and brought me in visions of God to Jerusalem, to the entrance of the gateway of the inner court that faces north, to the seat of the image of jealousy, which provokes to jealousy. ⁴And the glory of the God of Israel was there, like the vision that I had seen in the valley.

⁵ Then God^u said to me, "O mortal, lift up your eyes now in the direction of the north." So I lifted up my eyes toward the north, and there, north of the altar gate, in the entrance, was this image of jealousy. ⁶He said to me, "Mortal, do you see what they are doing, the great abominations that the house of Israel are committing here, to drive me far from my sanctuary? Yet you will see still greater abominations."

⁷ And he brought me to the entrance of the court; I looked, and there was a

7.23 Make a chain may refer to the chains of slavery leading to exile (Nah 3.10). 7.24-27 Though the people of the land (v. 27) will suffer, special attention is devoted to prominent functionaries (priest, prophet, elders, king, prince), who are characterized by the arrogance of the strong (v. 24). Cf. Isa 3.2-3; Jer 4.9 for similar lists of prominent officials in a city.

8.1-11.25 Visions at the temple and God's response. This is the second vision report in the book (the first occurred in 1.1-3.15). 8.1-18 Acts of religious impropriety in and around the temple. 8.1-4 Vision introduction. 8.1 The sixth year is 592 B.C.E.; see note on 1.2. Leaders of the community consult with Ezekiel (cf. also 14.1; 20.1; 33.31), an important glimpse into exilic life. The hand of the Lord God recalls 1.3. 8.2 The figure is described in ways similar to the figure in the first vision, 1.26-27. 8.3 Visions of God means visions enabled by God and by means of which Ezekiel is about to see and experience Jerusalem via visionary transport. 8.4 In the valley alludes to 3.22-23, where Ezekiel also perceived the glory. 8.5-6 The first scene of religious impropriety. God tells Ezekiel to look north. From where he was located, the gate of the inner temple courtyard (v. 3; 10.5 refers to an outer court), his gaze is directed toward the image of jealousy, probably an image of a god or goddess that made the Lord "jealous." This object was doubly inappropriate since it violated the command against making images; cf. Deut 4.15-18. The scene concludes with formulaic question and response, which are repeated with slight variations in vv. 13, 15, 17. 8.6 Drive me far from my sanctuary. The prophet alludes to the ultimate effect of these indictments—God will leave the temple (action described in ch. 10). Abominations is a favorite term of Ezekiel for describing ritual sin. 8.7-13 A second scene of religious impropriety.

hole in the wall. ⁸Then he said to me, "Mortal, dig through the wall"; and when I dug through the wall, there was an entrance. ⁹He said to me, "Go in, and see the vile abominations that they are committing here." ¹⁰So I went in and looked; there, portrayed on the wall all around, were all kinds of creeping things, and loathsome animals, and all the idols of the house of Israel. ¹¹Before them stood seventy of the elders of the house of Israel, with Jaazaniah son of Shaphan standing among them. Each had his censer in his hand, and the fragrant cloud of incense was ascending. ¹²Then he said to me, "Mortal, have you seen what the elders of the house of Israel are doing in the dark, each in his room of images? For they say, 'The LORD does not see us, the LORD has forsaken the land.'" ¹³He said also to me, "You will see still greater abominations that they are committing."

¹⁴ Then he brought me to the entrance of the north gate of the house of the LORD; women were sitting there weeping for Tammuz. ¹⁵Then he said to me,

"Have you seen this, O mortal? You will see still greater abominations than these."

¹⁶ And he brought me into the inner court of the house of the LORD; there, at the entrance of the temple of the LORD, between the porch and the altar, were about twenty-five men, with their backs to the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east, prostrating themselves to the sun toward the east. ¹⁷Then he said to me, "Have you seen this, O mortal? Is it not bad enough that the house of Judah commits the abominations done here? Must they fill the land with violence, and provoke my anger still further? See, they are putting the branch to their nose! ¹⁸Therefore I will act in wrath; my eye will not spare, nor will I have pity; and though they cry in my hearing with a loud voice, I will not listen to them."

The Slaughter of the Idolaters

9 Then he cried in my hearing with a loud voice, saying, "Draw near, you executioners of the city, each with his destroying weapon in his hand." ²And six

God commands the prophet to dig and discover a secret area. The prophet sees wall art (engravings or paintings) of various animals and more idols termed as of the house of Israel. Moreover, representatives of the Judahite community, including Jaazaniah (who belonged to a prominent family; Shaphan, his father, is mentioned in 2 Kings 22), perform an incense ritual. This second scene is "worse" than the first since it depicts people actively disregarding Israelite traditions. Here the people attempt to justify their behavior by asserting that the LORD has forsaken the land (v. 12). 8.14–15 Ezekiel is now apparently closer to the temple itself. This third and briefest scene is even worse than the second since the name of another deity appears, Tammuz. Tammuz (also known as Dumuzi) was worshiped in Mesopotamia as early as the third millennium B.C.E. Since he was thought to die and be held captive in the underworld, lamentation rites belong to Tammuz religion. Ritual weeping by women (cf. 32.16) would be natural, especially as a part of the annual cycle of vegetation. Plant growth and fertility were associated with the life power of Tammuz, harvest and drought with his death. Veneration of Tammuz was probably incorporated in the worship of Canaanite gods, especially Baal, who was also associated with vegetation and time in the underworld. 8.16–17 The fourth and most heinous scene, probably because it occurs at the temple's doorway. Judahites were bowing down to worship the sun. Veneration of the sun god Shamash (a god associated with wisdom and law) was prominent in Mesopotamia. However, worship of Yahweh had also been associated with the sun, e.g., Ps 84.11; 2 Kings 23.11. 8.17 The focus shifts from abominations at the temple complex, to violence throughout the land. Putting the branch to their nose is obscure, since there is no obvious connection between this image and the veneration of the sun. 8.18 If vv. 5–17 provide indictment, v. 18 constitutes the sentence. God promises radical justice with no possibility for intercession by the prophet or for mercy by God.

9.1–11 Execution in Jerusalem. 9.1–2 God summons executioners of the city, i.e., individuals who have been given the task of executing those in the city. Although the text defines these persons as men, Israelite tradition normally attributed this punitive role to minor deities or angels, e.g., Ex 12.23 ("the destroyer"); 2 Sam 24.16; 2 Kings 19.35. Ezekiel presents the first instance in which multiple individuals carry out this task: cf. Rev 15.6. Among them, lit. "in their midst." The man clothed in linen is probably a priest since priests normally wore linen garments (Ex 28.39). (However, Dan 10.5 describes a man who is clearly an angel wearing a linen garment.) Ezekiel's man in linen possesses the implements of a scribe, a writing case. Egyptian writing cases included, minimally, brushes and various inks. All seven men positioned themselves near the bronze altar, which men came from the direction of the upper gate, which faces north, each with his weapon for slaughter in his hand; among them was a man clothed in linen, with a writing case at his side. They went in and stood beside the bronze altar.

3 Now the glory of the God of Israel had gone up from the cherub on which it rested to the threshold of the house. The LORD called to the man clothed in linen, who had the writing case at his side; 4 and said to him, "Go through the city, through Jerusalem, and put a mark on the foreheads of those who sigh and groan over all the abominations that are committed in it." 5 To the others he said in my hearing, "Pass through the city after him, and kill; your eye shall not spare, and you shall show no pity. 6 Cut down old men, young men and young women, little children and women, but touch no one who has the mark. And begin at my sanctuary." So they began with the elders who were in front of the house. 7 Then he said to them, "Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain. Go!" So they went out and killed in the city. 8 While they were killing, and I was left alone, I fell prostrate on my face and cried out, "Ah Lord God! will you destroy all who remain of Israel as you pour out your wrath upon Jerusalem?" 9 He said to me, "The guilt of the house of Israel and Judah is exceedingly great; the land is full of bloodshed and the city full of perversity; for they say, 'The LORD has forsaken the land, and the LORD does not see.' 10 As for me, my eye will not spare, nor will I have pity, but I will bring down their deeds upon their heads."

11 Then the man clothed in linen, with the writing case at his side, brought back word, saying, "I have done as you commanded me."

God's Glory Leaves Jerusalem

belonged to the Solomonic temple, but which had been repositioned by Ahaz (2 Kings 16.14), i.e., they were in the northern area of the temple courtyard. 9.3 As alluded to in 8.6, the glory of the God of Israel begins to leave the temple. God was understood to be enthroned above the cherubim. At this point, the glory moves to the temple doorway; cf. 10.4. 9.3b–6 God's charge to the seven men. 9.3b–4 God speaks first to the scribe, whom he commands to place a mark on the foreheads of those who sigh and groan over all the abominations. The Hebrew word translated mark is a vocalization of the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, taw, which would have been written as an X. One might think that the individuals so designated were to be spared (cf. the protective marking of Passover, Ex 12.23). However, the remainder of the vision does not explicitly report that any individuals were marked and spared (although cf. v. 11). 9.5–6 Then the six are authorized to kill everyone whom they encounter, regardless of gender or age. They are to begin at my sanctuary, i.e., where they are now located. They begin at the temple so that it could not offer sanctuary to those under attack and because abominations at the temple itself had just been identified. The first to be slain, the elders, are probably those men indicted in 8.11, 16. 9.7 Defile the house refers to corpse defilement (Num 19) in the temple complex (cf. Ezek 6.4–5). Since God is leaving the temple, it is possible for that structure to become impure. 9.8 Ezekiel attempts to intercede on behalf of Israel. Cf. 11.11; Isa 6.11; Am 7.1–6. 9.9–10 To Ezekiel's question, God responds in the negative, affirming again (see 8.18; 9.5) that the destruction will occur without pity. However, unlike earlier language in this vision, God speaks of more than just the city: the house of Israel and Judah, the land. The vast geographic scope of wrongdoing appears to justify radical punishment. The quotation of the people in v. 9 revises a similar statement in 8.12. There is a play on the motif of God seeing. The people think the LORD does not see, whereas God responds As for me, my eye will not spare. 9.11 Just as the biblical writer attests that the executioners performed their task (v. 7), now the text reports that the scribe also accomplished his work.

10.1–22 God's glory leaves the temple. 10.1 Ezekiel perceives the divine throne (cf. 1.26), but this time there is nothing seated above the throne. In ch. 10, cherubim have replaced the living creatures of ch. 1. (There are important and complex similarities and differences between the imagery found in ch. 10 and that in ch. 1.) 10.2–8 The man clothed in linen receives a new task. 10.2 This verse continues the narrative of 9.11. Go within the wheelwork and 1.16 suggest that the wheels comprise a structure large enough to enter. The location of the wheelwork is unclear. Presumably it is outside the temple (v. 3). The man is charged with gathering some burning coals; clothed in linen, "Go within the wheelwork underneath the cherubim; fill your hands with burning coals from among the cherubim, and scatter them over the city." He went in as I looked on. ³Now the cherubim were standing on the south side of the house when the man went in; and a cloud filled the inner court. ⁴Then the glory of the LORD rose up from the cherub to the threshold of the house; the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the glory of the LORD. ⁵The sound of the wings of the cherubim was heard as far as the outer court, like the voice of God Almighty^w when he speaks.

⁶When he commanded the man clothed in linen, "Take fire from within the wheelwork, from among the cherubim," he went in and stood beside a wheel. ⁷And a cherub stretched out his hand from among the cherubim to the fire that was among the cherubim, took some of it and put it into the hands of the man clothed in linen, who took it and went out. ⁸The cherubim appeared to have the form of a human hand under their wings.

⁹I looked, and there were four wheels beside the cherubim, one beside each cherub; and the appearance of the wheels was like gleaming beryl. ¹⁰And as for their appearance, the four looked alike, something like a wheel within a wheel. ¹¹When they moved, they moved in any of the four directions without veer-

ing as they moved; but in whatever direction the front wheel faced, the others followed without veering as they moved. ¹²Their entire body, their rims, their spokes, their wings, and the wheels—the wheels of the four of them—were full of eyes all around. ¹³As for the wheels, they were called in my hearing "the wheelwork." ¹⁴Each one had four faces: the first face was that of the cherub, the second face was that of a human being, the third that of a lion, and the fourth that of an eagle.

¹⁵The cherubim rose up. These were the living creatures that I saw by the river Chebar. ¹⁶When the cherubim moved, the wheels moved beside them; and when the cherubim lifted up their wings to rise up from the earth, the wheels at their side did not veer. ¹⁷When they stopped, the others stopped, and when they rose up, the others rose up with them; for the spirit of the living creatures was in them.

¹⁸Then the glory of the LORD went out from the threshold of the house and stopped above the cherubim. ¹⁹The cherubim lifted up their wings and rose up from the earth in my sight as they went out with the wheels beside them. They stopped at the entrance of the east gate of the house of the LORD; and the glory of the God of Israel was above them.

²⁰These were the living creatures that I saw underneath the God of Israel

^w Traditional rendering of Heb El Shaddai

cf. 1.13, which refers to something that looked like burning coals. What was a simile now becomes literal. Since priests normally manipulated the coals of the altar fire, one has additional reason for thinking that this man was a priest. Such coals could function in different ways. According to Isa 6.6, coals purify the prophet. In Ezek 10.2, however, they are to be scattered over the city, presumably to start a fire that would destroy the city. By implication, Jerusalem is as sinful as Sodom and Gomorrah (cf. Gen 19). 10.4–5 The glory of the LORD begins to move, as do certain of the cherubim. The biblical writer is careful to note that the glory moves from the cherub, since this sole cherub was affixed to the ark. Other cherubim were part of the divine retinue and depart from the temple. The cloud could represent God's presence (Ex 19.9; 1 Kings 8.10–11). 10.6–7 The man is given burning coals by one of the cherubim because, for some unknown reason, he does not himself approach the coals. 10.8–14 The author provides a detailed description of the cherubim vis-à-vis the wheelwork, which is similar to that in 1.4–21. 10.15–17 As if to underline the similarity between chs. 1 and 10, the author notes that these were the living creatures that I saw by the river Chebar (see 1.3). Mobility is the hallmark of the cherubim wheelwork. The structure rises up with cherubim wings beating and with wheels turning. 10.18–19 The glory of the LORD moves from the threshold of the house (cf. v. 4) and is located above the cherubim, which are themselves moving. The glory is at its accustomed position, namely, enthroned above cherubim, but now they are movable. The east gate is the main ceremonial entrance into the temple complex, known elsewhere as "the gate of the LORD," (Ps 118.20). 10.20–22 Ezekiel reaffirms the identity of the living creatures as cherubim. Three times in short compass (vv. 15, 20, 22) he states that he perceived them while by the river Chebar. This repetition verifies Ezekiel's ability to experience God while he is in exile.

by the river Chebar; and I knew that they were cherubim. ²¹Each had four faces, each four wings, and underneath their wings something like human hands. ²²As for what their faces were like, they were the same faces whose appearance I had seen by the river Chebar. Each one moved straight ahead.

Judgment on Wicked Counselors

11 The spirit lifted me up and brought me to the east gate of the house of the LORD, which faces east. There, at the entrance of the gateway, were twenty-five men; among them I saw Jaazaniah son of Azzur, and Pelatiah son of Benaiah, officials of the people. ²He said to me, "Mortal, these are the men who devise iniquity and who give wicked counsel in this city; ³they say, 'The time is not near to build houses; this city is the pot, and we are the meat.' ⁴Therefore prophesy against them; prophesy, O mortal."

⁵ Then the spirit of the LORD fell upon me, and he said to me, "Say, Thus says the LORD: This is what you think, O house of Israel; I know the things that come into your mind. ⁶You have killed many in this city, and have filled its streets with the slain. ⁷Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: The slain whom you have placed within it are the meat, and this city is the pot; but you shall be taken out of it. ⁸You have feared the sword; and I will bring the sword upon you, says the Lord GOD. ⁹I will take you out of it and give you over to the hands of foreigners, and execute judgments upon you. ¹⁰You shall fall by the sword; I will judge you at the border of Israel. And you shall know that I am the LORD. ¹¹This city shall not be your pot, and you shall not be the meat inside it; I will judge you at the border of Israel. ¹²Then you shall know that I am the LORD, whose statutes you have not followed, and whose ordinances you have not kept, but you have acted according to the ordinances of the nations that are around you."

¹³ Now, while I was prophesying, Pelatiah son of Benaiah died. Then I fell down on my face, cried with a loud voice, and said, "Ah Lord GOD! will you make a full end of the remnant of Israel?"

God Will Restore Israel

¹⁴ Then the word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁵Mortal, your kinsfolk, your own

11.1-13 Ezekiel performs as prophet during his visionary transport. 11.1-4 Just as the cherubim and the glory of the Lord have paused at the east gate as they leave the temple complex (10.19), now Ezekiel is taken to this site. The twenty-five men may be the same group identified in 8.16. Jaazaniah son of Azzur and Pelatiah son of Benaiah do not appear elsewhere in Ezekiel. They, unlike the other twenty-three, were officials of the people a phrase that elsewhere occurs only in post-exilic texts (Neh 11.1; 1 Chr 21.2; 2 Chr 24.23; Esth 3.12). Normally the phrase distinguishes lay from priestly leaders or public officials. 11.2 God proffers an indictment that focuses on ethical rather than religious malfeasance as it did in ch. 8. Ezek 7.26 demonstrates that counsel was the provenance of "elders," who could be characterized as officials. 11.3 The time is not near to build houses, perhaps because it is a time for investing in defense or perhaps because those taken into exile in 597 B.C.E. had left houses available for use by others (see v. 15); cf. Jer 32.15. This city is the pot, and we are the meat. The image of the pot appears in greater detail in 24.1-14. The sense here is apparently one of the pot protecting the meat, i.e., the twenty-five men. In v. 7, God identifies the meat with those whom the men have killed, not the men themselves. 11.5-13 Ezekiel, empowered by the prophetic spirit, prophesies as God has commanded. 11.5-6 Ezekiel's indictment continues the motif begun in v. 2, devising or plotting evil. The effect of such plots has been slaughter in Jerusalem (cf. 19.3; 22.6), though whether in war or not is unclear. 11.7-10 A sentence of doom in which the image of the pot in v. 4 is recast. The men will be removed from the protection of the pot and be subjected to attack by foreign swords. At the border of Israel, at Riblah, a city in Syria, many Judahites were executed in 588-87 B.C.E. (Jer 52.10, 24-27). 11.12 Destruction by foreigners is appropriate because Judahites have behaved according to the ordinances of the nations, the foreign religious practices described in ch. 8 (cf. 5.7). 11.13 Pelatiah dies before his execution, an event that enhances the power of Ezekiel's sentence (cf. Jer 28). Then Ezekiel again (cf. 9.8) attempts to intercede on behalf of the remnant of Israel.

11.14-21 The problem of land ownership. This section may be read as an answer to the question with which v. 13 concludes. 11.15 A dispute is placed within the context of kinship (Hebrew, "people of your kin")—the relations between those in exile and those in Judah. The lat-kin, your fellow exiles,^x the whole house of Israel, all of them, are those of whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, "They have gone far from the LORD; to us this land is given for a possession."¹⁶ Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: Though I removed them far away among the nations, and though I scattered them among the countries, yet I have been a sanctuary to them for a little while^y in the countries where they have gone. ¹⁷Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: I will gather you from the peoples, and assemble you out of the countries where you have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. ¹⁸When they come there, they will remove from it all its detestable things and all its abominations. ¹⁹I will give them one^z heart, and put a new spirit within them; I will remove the heart of stone from their flesh and give them a heart of flesh, ²⁰so that they may follow my statutes and keep my ordinances and obey them. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God. ²¹But as for those whose heart goes after their detestable things and their abominations,^a I will bring their deeds upon their own heads, says the Lord God.

²² Then the cherubim lifted up their wings, with the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was above them. ²³And the glory of the LORD ascended from the middle of the city, and stopped on the mountain east of the city. ²⁴The spirit lifted me up and brought me in a vision by the spirit of God into Chaldea, to the exiles. Then the vision that I had seen left me. ²⁵And I told the exiles all the things that the LORD had shown me.

Judah's Captivity Portrayed

12 The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, you are living in the midst of a rebellious house, who have eyes to see but do not see, who have ears to hear but do not hear; ³for they are a rebellious house. Therefore, mortal, prepare for yourself an exile's baggage, and go into exile by day in their sight; you shall go like an exile from your place to another place in their sight. Perhaps they will understand, though they are a rebellious house. ⁴You shall bring out your baggage by day in their sight, as baggage for exile; and you shall go out yourself at evening in their sight, as those do who go into exile. ⁵Dig through the wall in their sight, and carry the baggage through it. ⁶In their sight you shall lift the baggage on your shoulder, and carry it out in the dark; you shall cover your face, so that

ter claim possession of the land vacated by those taken into exile and do so on theological grounds, they have gone far from the LORD. 11.16 The first of two divine oracles introduced by thus says the Lord God. In support of those who have been dispossessed by exile, God has been a sanctuary to them for a little while, a phrase that may also be translated, "a minor sanctuary." This provision would counter the claim of those in the land that the exiles had gone far from the LORD (v. 15). 11.17–19 The second divine oracle includes a sequence of promises: return to the land of Israel, removal of abominations, and a different heart and spirit. 11.19 One heart. Some manuscripts read "new heart"; cf. Jer 32.39; Ezek 18.31; 36.26. 11.20 Cf. Jer 31.33–34; Ezek 16.59–63.

11.22–25 Ezekiel's vision concludes with a return to the primary images: cherubim, wheels, and the glory. The glory of the LORD leaves the city and is located on a massif to the east, namely, the Mount of Olives. In visionary transport, Ezekiel returns to Babylonia and reports to those in exile what he has seen.

12.1–16 Symbolic action and its interpretation concerning exile. 12.1–7 The symbolic act commanded and performed. 12.1–2 The condition of Judah as a rebellious house is characterized as having eyes to see but not seeing. Hence something visible, vv. 3–4, becomes an appropriate mode of prophetic communication. 12.3–6 God commands Ezekiel to perform a series of acts that symbolize someone going into exile. 12.3 An exile's baggage, apparently all of one's carryable belongings. In their sight, which occurs repeatedly in vv. 3–7, emphasizes the visual character of Ezekiel's prophetic task. At first Ezekiel is commanded to act out the exile role in daylight so that they will understand, lit. "they will see." 12.4–5 Then the prophet is to act as an exile at night, which approximates the actual behavior of those escaping from a city. Digging through the wall suggests that the wall as defensive fortification has already been partially destroyed. 12.6 On cover your face, see v. 12. I have made you a sign. See also v. 11; 24.24; Isa 8.18. The prophet's action, not just words, can become part you may not see the land; for I have made you a sign for the house of Israel.

7 I did just as I was commanded. I brought out my baggage by day, as baggage for exile, and in the evening I dug through the wall with my own hands; I brought it out in the dark, carrying it on my shoulder in their sight.

8 In the morning the word of the LORD came to me: 9Mortal, has not the house of Israel, the rebellious house, said to you, "What are you doing?" 10Say to them, "Thus says the Lord God: This oracle concerns the prince in Jerusalem and all the house of Israel in it." 11Say, "I am a sign for you: as I have done, so shall it be done to them; they shall go into exile, into captivity." 12And the prince who is among them shall lift his baggage on his shoulder in the dark, and shall go out; he^b shall dig through the wall and carry it through; he shall cover his face, so that he may not see the land with his eyes. 13I will spread my net over him, and he shall be caught in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon, the land of the Chaldeans, yet he shall not see it; and he shall die there. 14I will scatter to every wind all who are around him, his helpers and all his troops; and I will unsheathe the sword behind them. 15And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I disperse them among the nations and scatter them through the countries. 16But I will let a few of them escape from the sword, from famine and pestilence, so that they may tell of all their abominations among the nations where they go; then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Judgment Not Postponed

17 The word of the LORD came to me: 18Mortal, eat your bread with quaking, and drink your water with trembling and with fearfulness; 19and say to the people of the land, Thus says the Lord God concerning the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the land of Israel: They shall eat their bread with fearfulness, and drink their water in dismay, because their land shall be stripped of all it contains, on account of the violence of all those who live in it. 20The inhabited cities shall be laid waste, and the land shall become a desolation; and you shall know that I am the LORD.

21 The word of the LORD came to me: 22Mortal, what is this proverb of yours about the land of Israel, which says, "The days are prolonged, and every vision comes to nothing"? 23Tell them therefore, "Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to this proverb, and they shall use it no more as a proverb in Israel." But say to them, The days are near, and the fulfillment of every vision. 24For there shall no longer be any false vision or flattering divination within the house of Israel. 25But I the LORD will speak the word that I speak, and it will be fulfilled. It will no longer be delayed; but in your days, O rebellious house, I will speak the word and fulfill it, says the Lord God.

of God's communication. 12.7 Ezekiel's self-report that the symbolic action has been carried out. 12.8–16 An interpretation of the symbolic action. 12.8 In the morning suggests that the act concluded during the previous evening. 12.10–16 The oracle answers the people's question to Ezekiel, What are you doing? (v. 9). 12.10 The prince in Jerusalem probably refers to Zedekiah, whose fate is described in Jer 39.1–7; 52.6–11; 2 Kings 25.3–7. He fled at night "through the gate between the two walls" (Jer 39.4), was captured by Babylonian forces, taken into Riblah, and blinded before being taken into exile. A symbolic act that initially addresses the house of Israel (v. 6) focuses now on the fate of the prince as well as the people (v. 11). 12.12–14 These verses address the plight of the prince in ways that foreshadow the flight and exile of Zedekiah. However, v. 14 continues the theme of other people driven into exile. Sword (vv. 14, 16) recalls Ezek 5. 12.15–16 A remnant in exile will attest to abominations performed in the land.

12.17–20 God commands Ezekiel to consume bread and water so as to act out the way in which Jerusalemites will eat and drink after the destruction throughout the land begins.

12.21–28 The people's perceptions of prophetic visions. Two sayings of the people (in vv. 22, 27) require a divine response. 12.22 Proverb, a brief saying that expresses popular consensus. The days are prolonged probably means "time passes." The saying has as its point that even though time passes, visions that prefigure the future do not come to pass. 12.23 God provides a contrary saying the purport of which is: the time approaches when prophetic visions will be verified. 12.24–25 God will enact 26 The word of the LORD came to me: 27Mortal, the house of Israel is saying, "The vision that he sees is for many years ahead; he prophesies for distant times." 28Therefore say to them, Thus says the Lord God: None of my words will be delayed any longer, but the word that I speak will be fulfilled, says the Lord God.

False Prophets Condemned

13 The word of the LORD came to me: 2Mortal, prophesy against the prophets of Israel who are prophesying; say to those who prophesy out of their own imagination: "Hear the word of the LORD!" 3Thus says the Lord God, Alas for the senseless prophets who follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing! 4Your prophets have been like jackals among ruins, O Israel. 5You have not gone up into the breaches, or repaired a wall for the house of Israel, so that it might stand in battle on the day of the LORD. 6They have envisioned falsehood and lying divination; they say, "Says the LORD," when the LORD has not sent them, and yet they wait for the fulfillment of their word! 7Have you not seen a false vision or uttered a lying divination, when you have said, "Says the LORD," even though I did not speak?

8 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have uttered falsehood and envisioned lies, I am against you, says the Lord God. 9My hand will be against the prophets who see false visions and utter lying divinations; they shall not be in the council of my people, nor be enrolled in the register of the house of Israel, nor shall they enter the land of Israel; and you shall know that I am the Lord God. 10Because, in truth, because they have misled my people, saying, "Peace," when there is no peace; and because, when the people build a wall, these prophets^c smear whitewash on it. 11Say to those who smear whitewash on it that it shall fall. There will be a deluge of rain,^d great hailstones will fall, and a stormy wind will break out. 12When the wall falls, will it not be said to you, "Where is the whitewash you smeared on it?" 13Therefore thus says the Lord God: In my wrath I will make a stormy wind break out, and in my anger there shall be a deluge of rain, and hailstones in wrath to destroy it. 14I will break down the wall that you have smeared with whitewash, and bring it to the ground, so that its foundation will be laid bare; when it falls, you shall perish within it; and you shall know that I am the LORD. 15Thus I will spend my wrath upon the wall, and upon those who have smeared it with whitewash; and I will say to you, The wall is no more, nor those who smeared it — 16the prophets of Israel who prophesied concerning Jerusalem and quickly the word, so that no ineffectual visions can hold sway. 12.27 In the second saying, people argue that Ezekiel's visions do not affect their own times.

13.1–23 Judgment on false prophets. 13.1–7 Indictment of prophets, whom Ezekiel characterizes as those who prophesy out of their own imagination (v. 2) and as those who follow their own spirit (v. 3), in contrast to Ezekiel who speaks the word of the LORD (v. 2). For similar language about conflict between prophets, see Jer 23.9–32; 1 Kings 22. 13.4 Like jackals among ruins, a simile that probably refers to wild animals rooting in a destroyed city (see Lam 5.18). 13.5 You is plural in the Hebrew, which means that the prophets are being condemned. 13.6–7 These prophets perceive falsehood, which Jeremiah also uses to describe other prophets (Jer 14.14; 23.21), lying divination, and false vision despite the fact that they use standard prophetic language: says the LORD. Divination is a human means of securing information from the deity often involving physically observable data, e.g., examining the organs of a sacrificed animal for signs (as in 21.21) or in standard Israelite practice the Urim and Thummim (Ex 28.30). 13.8–16 Punishment of false prophets. 13.9 Council of my people. Cf. Gen 49.6. The term council does not necessarily mean a political assembly. The register. Cf. Ezra 2.62. To be excluded from such a written document was tantamount to losing membership among the people of Israel. The register was especially important after the exile, hence its prominence in Ezra and Nehemiah. Nor shall they enter the land presumes that one form of punishment will be exile. 13.10 Peace. Cf. Jer 23; 27–29 for similar conflict over whether or not a message of peace was appropriate before 587 B.C.E. 13.10–16 The imagery involves a wall of friable construction, the strength of which might be minimally enhanced with a light coating of plaster (whitewash). The people build the wall, the prophets apply the whitewash. God intends to destroy the wall using a storm. And since it is inherently weak, the wall will fall. Both the people and their prophets will be punished.

saw visions of peace for it, when there was no peace, says the Lord God.

17 As for you, mortal, set your face against the daughters of your people, who prophesy out of their own imagination; prophesy against them¹⁸ and say, Thus says the Lord God: Woe to the women who sew bands on all wrists, and make veils for the heads of persons of every height, in the hunt for human lives! Will you hunt down lives among my people, and maintain your own lives?¹⁹ You have profaned me among my people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, putting to death persons who should not die and keeping alive persons who should not live, by your lies to my people, who listen to lies.

20 Therefore thus says the Lord God: I am against your bands with which you hunt lives;^e I will tear them from your arms, and let the lives go free, the lives that you hunt down like birds.²¹ I will tear off your veils, and save my people from your hands; they shall no longer be prey in your hands; and you shall know that I am the LORD.²² Because you have disheartened the righteous falsely, although I have not disheartened them, and you have encouraged the wicked not to turn from their wicked way and save their lives;²³ therefore you shall no longer see false visions or practice divination;

I will save my people from your hand. Then you will know that I am the LORD.

God's Judgments Justified

14 Certain elders of Israel came to me and sat down before me.² And the word of the LORD came to me:³ Mortal, these men have taken their idols into their hearts, and placed their iniquity as a stumbling block before them; shall I let myself be consulted by them?⁴ Therefore speak to them, and say to them, Thus says the Lord God: Any of those of the house of Israel who take their idols into their hearts and place their iniquity as a stumbling block before them, and yet come to the prophet—I the LORD will answer those who come with the multitude of their idols,⁵ in order that I may take hold of the hearts of the house of Israel, all of whom are estranged from me through their idols.

6 Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: Repent and turn away from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations.⁷ For any of those of the house of Israel, or of the aliens who reside in Israel, who separate themselves from me, taking their idols into their hearts and placing their 13.17–23 Judgment upon prophetesses. 13.17 The daughters of your people. Both in Israel (the prophetess Huldah, 2 Kings 22.14) and elsewhere (e.g., the ancient city-state of Mari) women functioned as prophets. 13.18 However, the bands and veils have more to do with magic than intermediation. Unfortunately, practices having to do with these textiles remain obscure. Hunting lives involves the very life and death of a person; see v. 19. 13.19 For handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, probably payment for services rendered; see 1 Sam 9.7. 13.20–23 Punishment of the prophetesses. 13.20–21 With which you hunt lives may be translated “with which you hunt persons like birds.” God punishes the prophetesses by removing the bands and veils and in so doing liberates those who had been trapped. 13.22 The indictment is further clarified: those trapped were the righteous, an action that encouraged the wicked. 13.23 I will save my people. When compared to texts such as 9.9–10, this verse is strikingly positive.

14.1–11 Prophet and people. 14.1 The scene is similar to 8.1; Ezekiel is consulted by representatives of the exilic community. 14.3 God provides an assessment of the people before they are able to ask a question. The precise meaning of taken their idols into their hearts is not clear. Ezekiel used the term idols in diverse ways. Typically it refers to representations of non-Yahwistic religious entities. If such objects were destroyed or left in the land, those in exile may not actually possess idols but may still be venerating what the idols represented. On the prophet as consultant, see 20.3. 14.6 Instead of a sentence, the prophet offers an admonition, repent and turn away. 14.7 Aliens who reside in Israel appears unusual when referring to the exilic context. Cf. Isa 56.3, “the foreigner joined to the LORD.” Originally, an alien was a non-Israelite who lived in Israelite territory and who had defined rights (e.g., Deut 1.16; 14.29). Ezek 47.22–23 allows for land inheritance by aliens. 14.7–8 Those who do not repent will be accursed. The actual punishment would constitute a sign, whereas those who observed the situation would summarize and express it using a saying (a byword). Cut them off from the midst of my people expresses a sentiment similar iniquity as a stumbling block before them, and yet come to a prophet to inquire of me by him, I the LORD will answer them myself. ⁸I will set my face against them; I will make them a sign and a byword and cut them off from the midst of my people; and you shall know that I am the LORD.

⁹ If a prophet is deceived and speaks a word, I, the LORD, have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand against him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel. ¹⁰And they shall bear their punishment—the punishment of the inquirer and the punishment of the prophet shall be the same— ¹¹so that the house of Israel may no longer go astray from me, nor defile themselves any more with all their transgressions. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God, says the Lord God.

¹² The word of the LORD came to me: ¹³Mortal, when a land sins against me by acting faithlessly, and I stretch out my hand against it, and break its staff of bread and send famine upon it, and cut off from it human beings and animals, ¹⁴even if Noah, Daniel,^f and Job, these three, were in it, they would save only their own lives by their righteousness, says the Lord God. ¹⁵If I send wild animals through the land to ravage it, so that it is made desolate, and no one may pass through because of the animals; ¹⁶even if these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, they would save neither sons nor daughters; they alone would be saved, but the land would be desolate. ¹⁷Or if I bring a sword upon that land and say, “Let a sword pass through the land,” and I cut off human beings and animals from it; ¹⁸though these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, they would save neither sons nor daughters, but they alone would be saved. ¹⁹Or if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my wrath upon it with blood, to cut off humans and animals from it; ²⁰even if Noah, Daniel,^f and Job were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, they would save neither son nor daughter; they would save only their own lives by their righteousness.

²¹ For thus says the Lord God: How much more when I send upon Jerusalem my four deadly acts of judgment, sword, famine, wild animals, and pestilence, to cut off humans and animals from it! ²²Yet, survivors shall be left in it, sons and daughters who will be brought out; they will come out to you. When you see their ways and their deeds, you will be consoled for the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, for all that I have brought upon it. ²³They shall console you, when you see their ways and their deeds; and you shall know that it was not without cause that I did all that I have done in it, says the Lord God.

The Useless Vine

15 The word of the LORD came to me:

² O mortal, how does the wood of ^f Or, as otherwise read, Danel to that in 13.9. 14.9–11 In case a prophet would provide a word to idolaters, contrary to v. 3, that prophet will be destroyed. 14.9 God claims responsibility for the deceit of such a prophet; cf. 1 Kings 13 for an instance in which a prophet is misled through divine instrumentality.

14.12–23 Sin, destruction, and survival. 14.12–20 A formulaic discourse (signaled by the repetition of if, even if, they would save neither sons nor daughters, they would save only their own lives) concerning the severity of God's punishment, which is a direct response to radical sin. These verses build on four different modes of punishment: famine (v. 13), wild animals (v. 15), sword (v. 17), and pestilence (v. 19). Ezekiel identifies three individuals and reports that, although they would escape destruction, they would not be able to save others. Noah, Daniel, and Job were figures known widely in the ancient Near East as especially righteous. Their righteousness worked itself out on behalf of others, namely, their children. Noah enabled his family to survive the deluge; Job's children exist at the end of the book. And Danel, the righteous king described in the Ugaitic Aqhat epic who is a traditional figure related to the biblical Daniel, is apparently able to engender life for his son. 14.21–23 The four modes of punishment are repeated (cf. 5.16) and focused on Jerusalem. However, there will be survivors, sons and daughters, an implicit literary link with the three aforementioned heroes. 14.22–23 These survivors will provide consolation for the earlier generation.

15.1–8 The useless vine. 15.1 To me, a “private” oracle. 15.2 The first in a series of rhetorical questions. Despite the prominence of vine imagery in OT literature (e.g., Judg 9.8–15; Isa 5.1–5; Hos 10.1), questions about the quality of

- the vine surpass all other wood — the vine branch that is among the trees of the forest?
- 3 Is wood taken from it to make anything?
 Does one take a peg from it on which to hang any object?
- 4 It is put in the fire for fuel; when the fire has consumed both ends of it and the middle of it is charred, is it useful for anything?
- 5 When it was whole it was used for nothing; how much less—when the fire has consumed it, and it is charred—can it ever be used for anything!
- 6 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Like the wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so I will give up the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ⁷I will set my face against them; although they escape from the fire, the fire shall still consume them; and you shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them. ⁸And I will make the land desolate, because they have acted faithlessly, says the Lord God.

God's Faithless Bride

16 The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, make known to Jerusalem her abominations, ³and say, Thus says the Lord God to Jerusalem: Your origin and your birth were in the land of the Canaanites; your father was an Amorite, and your mother a Hittite. ⁴As for your birth, on the day you were born your navel cord was not cut, nor were you washed with water to cleanse you, nor rubbed with salt, nor wrapped in cloths. ⁵No eye pitied you, to do any of these things for you out of compassion for you; but you were thrown out in the open field, for you were abhorred on the day you were born.

⁶ I passed by you, and saw you flailing about in your blood. As you lay in your blood, I said to you, "Live! ⁷and grow up like a plant of the field." You grew up and became tall and arrived at full womanhood;^h your breasts were formed, and your hair had grown; yet you were naked and bare.

⁸ I passed by you again and looked on you; you were at the age for love. I spread the edge of my cloak over you, and covered your nakedness: I pledged myself to you and entered into a covenant with you, says the Lord God, and you became mine.

the wood from a vine are innovative. The initial question elicits an understood response—wood from a vine does not surpass any wood of the forest. 15.3 The second and third questions concerning the utility of vine wood that has been worked imply brief, negative answers. 15.4 The poet adduces an obvious case, a fragment of partially burned vine. The ensuing question implies another negative answer. 15.5 An indicative judgment, summarizing the cases presented in vv. 3–4. 15.6–8 The foregoing poem is viewed as a simile, the wood of the vine being likened to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. They are destined for destruction, whether by fire or not.

16.1–63 An extended discourse in which Jerusalem is understood as God's adulterous wife. 16.1–7 Jerusalem the orphan. 16.2 Make known . . . her abominations has legal connotations. 16.3 Land of the Canaanites, ancient Syro-Palestine, which is roughly equivalent to Lebanon and Israel today. Jerusalem was under Jebusite (or Canaanite) control before David conquered it. Amorite culture is generally associated with Syria and the Transjordan; Hittite with ancient Anatolia (but some Hittites lived in Syro-Palestine, e.g., Uriah the Hittite [2 Sam 11.3]). In biblical traditions, Amorites and Hittites can refer generally to the pre-Israelite population. These three ethnolinguistic categories—Canaanite, Amorite, and Hittite—define Jerusalem's origins as different from that of Israel, which traced its lineage through Abraham to Nahor. Jerusalem is a "foreigner." 16.4–5 Standard birth rituals were not performed, possibly because the parents intended to commit infanticide by exposure in a field. 16.6–7 God discovers the foundling and admonishes her to remain alive. And grow up, in Hebrew "I made you a myriad," or "I made you flourish." In this translation, God assists the child at the very first instance. 16.8–14 On the image of covering with a garment in order to symbolize an intent to marry, cf. Ruth 3.9. I pledged myself to you . . . and you became mine echoes standard covenant language (e.g., Ex 6.7). God performs various ministrations on behalf of his new wife. They involve cleansing, providing clothing and jewelry, 9Then I bathed you with water and washed off the blood from you, and anointed you with oil. 10I clothed you with embroidered cloth and with sandals of fine leather; I bound you in fine linen and covered you with rich fabric.ⁱ 11I adorned you with ornaments: I put bracelets on your arms, a chain on your neck, 12a ring on your nose, earrings in your ears, and a beautiful crown upon your head. 13You were adorned with gold and silver, while your clothing was of fine linen, rich fabric,ⁱ and embroidered cloth. You had choice flour and honey and oil for food. You grew exceedingly beautiful, fit to be a queen. 14Your fame spread among the nations on account of your beauty, for it was perfect because of my splendor that I had bestowed on you, says the Lord God.

15 But you trusted in your beauty, and played the whore because of your fame, and lavished your whorings on any passer-by.^j 16You took some of your garments, and made for yourself colorful shrines, and on them played the whore; nothing like this has ever been or ever shall be.ⁱ 17You also took your beautiful jewels of my gold and my silver that I had given you, and made for yourself male images, and with them played the whore; 18and you took your embroidered garments to cover them, and set my oil and my incense before them. 19Also my bread that I gave you—I fed you with choice flour and oil and honey—you set it before them as a pleasing odor; and so it was, says the Lord God. 20You took your sons and your daughters, whom you had borne to me, and these you sacrificed to them to be devoured. As if your whorings were not enough! 21You slaughtered my children and delivered them up as an offering to them. 22And in all your abominations and your whorings you did not remember the days of your youth, when you were naked and bare, flailing about in your blood.

23 After all your wickedness (woe, woe to you! says the Lord God), 24you built yourself a platform and made yourself a lofty place in every square; 25at the head of every street you built your lofty place and prostituted your beauty, offering yourself to every passer-by, and multiplying your whoring. 26You played the whore with the Egyptians, your lustful neighbors, multiplying your whoring, to provoke me to anger. 27Therefore I stretched out my hand against you, reduced your rations, and gave you up to the will of your enemies, the daughters of the Philistines, who were ashamed of your lewd behavior. 28You played the whore with the Assyrians, because you were insatiable; you played the whore with them, and still you were not satisfied. 29You multiplied your whoring with Chaldea, the land of merchants; and even with this you were not satisfied.

30 How sick is your heart, says the Lord God, that you did all these things, the deeds of a brazen whore; 31building your platform at the head of every street, and making your lofty place in every square! Yet you were not like a whore, because you scorned payment. 32Adulterous wife, who receives strangers instead of her husband! 33Gifts are given to all whores; but you gave your gifts to all your lovers, bribing them to come to you from all around for your whorings. 34So you were different from other women in your whorings: no one solicited you to play the whore; and you gave payment, while no and special food. 16.15–34 Jerusalem, understood now as an adulterous wife, commits various sinful acts. Hos 2 and Jer 2–3 also liken Israel to an unfaithful wife. 16.16 Using textiles, she makes colorful shrines, whether for veneration of other deities or for illicit sexual practice (or both, as in sacral prostitution) is unclear. 16.17–19 Using precious metals and garments she makes and clothes male images and sets food before them. 16.20–21 Children born to the woman are sacrificed; cf. Jer 19.4–6; 32.35, which attribute child sacrifice to veneration of Baal. 16.23–26 The wife is indicted for having built a structure (platform), whether ritual or not is uncertain, where she engaged in prostitution (cf. ch. 23). Reference to the Egyptians alludes to a treaty made with Egypt. 16.27–29 God's sentence includes punishment by the daughters of the Philistines, but mention of whoring with Assyria and Babylon (Chaldea) continues the tone of indictment. The order of foreign nations parallels a sketch of Israelite history: slavery in Egypt, conflict with Philistia, and confrontation with the Neo-Assyrian and Neo-Babylonian empires. 16.30–34 Jerusalem gave presents to rather than received income from those with whom she had payment was given to you; you were different.

35 Therefore, O whore, hear the word of the LORD: 36 Thus says the Lord God, Because your lust was poured out and your nakedness uncovered in your whoring with your lovers, and because of all your abominable idols, and because of the blood of your children that you gave to them, 37 therefore, I will gather all your lovers, with whom you took pleasure, all those you loved and all those you hated; I will gather them against you from all around, and will uncover your nakedness to them, so that they may see all your nakedness. 38 I will judge you as women who commit adultery and shed blood are judged, and bring blood upon you in wrath and jealousy. 39 I will deliver you into their hands, and they shall throw down your platform and break down your lofty places; they shall strip you of your clothes and take your beautiful objects and leave you naked and bare. 40 They shall bring up a mob against you, and they shall stone you and cut you to pieces with their swords. 41 They shall burn your houses and execute judgments on you in the sight of many women; I will stop you from playing the whore, and you shall also make no more payments. 42 So I will satisfy my fury on you, and my jealousy shall turn away from you; I will be calm, and will be angry no longer. 43 Because you have not remembered the days of your youth, but have enraged me with all these things; therefore, I have returned your deeds upon your head, says the Lord God.

Have you not committed lewdness beyond all your abominations? 44 See, everyone who uses proverbs will use this proverb about you, "Like mother, like daughter." 45 You are the daughter of your mother, who loathed her husband and her children; and you are the sister of your sisters, who loathed their husbands and their children. Your mother was a Hittite and your father an Amorite. 46 Your elder sister is Samaria, who lived with her daughters to the north of you; and your younger sister, who lived to the south of you, is Sodom with her daughters. 47 You not only followed their ways, and acted according to their abominations; within a very little time you were more corrupt than they in all your ways. 48 As I live, says the Lord God, your sister Sodom and her daughters have not done as you and your daughters have done. 49 This was the guilt of your sister Sodom: she and her daughters had pride, excess of food, and prosperous ease, but did not aid the poor and needy. 50 They were haughty, and did abominable things before me; therefore I removed them when I saw it. 51 Samaria has not committed half your sins; you have committed more abominations than they, and have made your sisters appear righteous by all the abominations that you have committed. 52 Bear your disgrace, you also, for you have brought about for your sisters a more favorable judgment; because of your sins in which you acted more abominably than they, they are more in the right than you. So be ashamed, you also, and bear your disgrace, for you have made your sisters appear righteous.

53 I will restore their fortunes, the fortunes of Sodom and her daughters and the fortunes of Samaria and her daughters, and I will restore your own fortunes along with theirs, 54 in order that you may bear your disgrace and be ashamed of all that you have done, becoming a consolation to them. 55 As for your sisters, Sodom and her daughters shall return to their former state, Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former state, and you and your daughters shall return to your former state. 56 Was not your sister Sodom a byword in your mouth in the day intercourse. 16.35–43 God will punish Jerusalem by using the foreign nations with whom she has committed adultery. 16.40 See Deut 22.22–24 for laws concerning adultery, which involve death by stoning. 16.41 On destruction by fire (burn your houses), see 23.47. 16.44–52 Though mother-daughter imagery continues, siblings now appear: Samaria the elder and Sodom the younger. Sodom's sins focused on injustice (v. 49); Samaria's sins remain unnamed. Both cities had already been destroyed, Sodom in the distant past (Gen 19), Samaria in 721 B.C.E. Jerusalem has, however, committed more abominations (v. 51) than either sister. 16.53–58 Restoration for Sodom, Samaria, and Jerusalem. (Cf. Jer 12.14–17 on the concept of restoration of many Syro-Palestinian cities and states.) However, the goal of the restoration is their suffering of your pride, ⁵⁷before your wickedness was uncovered? Now you are a mockery to the daughters of Aram^k and all her neighbors, and to the daughters of the Philistines, those all around who despise you. ⁵⁸You must bear the penalty of your lewdness and your abominations, says the LORD.

An Everlasting Covenant

⁵⁹ Yes, thus says the Lord God: I will deal with you as you have done, you who have despised the oath, breaking the covenant; ⁶⁰yet I will remember my covenant with you in the days of your youth, and I will establish with you an everlasting covenant. ⁶¹Then you will remember your ways, and be ashamed when I^l take your sisters, both your elder and your younger, and give them to you as daughters, but not on account of my^m covenant with you. ⁶²I will establish my covenant with you, and you shall know that I am the LORD, ⁶³in order that you may remember and be confounded, and never open your mouth again because of your shame, when I forgive you all that you have done, says the Lord God.

The Two Eagles and the Vine

17 The word of the LORD came to me: ²O mortal, propound a riddle, and speak an allegory to the house of Israel. ³Say: Thus says the Lord God:

A great eagle, with great wings and long pinions,

- rich in plumage of many colors,
came to the Lebanon.
He took the top of the cedar,
⁴ broke off its topmost shoot;
he carried it to a land of trade, set it in a city of merchants.
⁵ Then he took a seed from the
land,
placed it in fertile soil;
a plantⁿ by abundant waters,
he set it like a willow twig.
⁶ It sprouted and became a vine spreading out, but low;
its branches turned toward him,
its roots remained where it stood.
So it became a vine;
it brought forth branches,
put forth foliage.
⁷ There was another great eagle, with great wings and much plumage.
And see! This vine stretched out its roots toward him;
it shot out its branches
toward him,
so that he might water it.
From the bed where it was planted
⁸ it was transplanted to good soil by abundant waters, so that it might produce branches
and bear fruit

disgrace and being ashamed (v. 54). 16.57 Aram, in Hebrew; a variant manuscript tradition reads "Edom"; cf. 25.12. 16.59–63 An everlasting covenant. 16.59 The oath . . . the covenant. These two terms may be understood as complementary; in taking an oath one makes a covenant (cf. Deut 29.12). The prominence of similar vocabulary and rhetoric in Deuteronomy makes clear that the prophet alludes to the Sinai covenant. 16.60 References to an earlier covenant and an everlasting covenant suggest that the latter refers to a new covenant. Cf. 37.26 (a covenant of peace . . . an everlasting covenant); Jer 31.31–34. 16.61 God will introduce new kinship relationships. Samaria and Sodom, which had earlier been "sisters," will now become daughters of Jerusalem. 16.62 God will, ultimately, absolve Jerusalem of her sin.

17.1–24 The two eagles, the vine, and the cedar. 17.2 Riddle and allegory normally refer to different kinds of sayings. On riddle in the OT, cf. Judg 14.12–19. The word translated here as "allegory" also appears in Ezek 12.23; 16.44, 18.2, where it is translated "proverb." Hence, though there may be allegorical elements in ch. 17, the Hebrew word itself does not define these verses as an allegory. 17.3–10 Most of the important symbols allude to kings and international politics from 598 to 588 B.C.E. 17.3–5 The cedar, traditionally associated with Lebanon, is a majestic tree; cf. ch. 31; Ps 92.12. A great eagle is Nebuchadnezzar, who took a city of merchants into exile, the topmost shoot, Jehoiachin. The seed, which becomes a vine, is Zedekiah, who was placed on the throne by and was initially loyal to Nebuchadnezzar. 17.7–8 Another great eagle is the pharaoh Psammetichus II, to whom Zedekiah expressed allegiance, abandoning his oath of loyalty to the Neo-Babylonians. This transfer of loyalty is expressed by the imagery of transplanting.

 9 Say: Thus says the Lord God:
 Will it prosper?
 Will he not pull up its roots, cause its fruit to rot^o and
 wither,
 its fresh sprouting leaves to fade?
 No strong arm or mighty army will be needed
 to pull it from its roots.
 10 When it is transplanted, will it thrive?
 When the east wind strikes it,
 will it not utterly wither, wither on the bed where
 it grew?
 11 Then the word of the LORD came to me: 12 Say now to the rebellious house:
 Do you not know what these things mean?
 Tell them: The king of Babylon came to Jerusalem, took its king and its officials, and brought them back with him to Babylon. 13 He took one of the royal offspring and made a covenant with him, putting him under oath (he had taken away the chief men of the land), 14 so that the kingdom might be humble and not lift itself up, and that by keeping his covenant it might stand. 15 But he rebelled against him by sending ambassadors to Egypt, in order that they might give him horses and a large army. Will he succeed? Can one escape who does such things? Can he break the covenant and yet escape? 16 As I live, says the Lord God, surely in the place where the king resides who made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant with him he broke—in Babylon he shall die. 17 Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company will not help him in war, when ramps are cast up and siege walls built to cut off many lives.

 18 Because he despised the oath and broke the covenant, because he gave his hand and yet did all these things, he shall not escape. 19 Therefore thus says the Lord God: As I live, I will surely return upon his head my oath that he despised, and my covenant that he broke. 20 I will spread my net over him, and he shall be caught in my snare; I will bring him to Babylon and enter into judgment with him there for the treason he has committed against me.
 21 All the pick^p of his troops shall fall by the sword, and the survivors shall be scattered to every wind; and you shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken.

 I myself will take a sprig from the lofty top of a cedar;
 I will set it out.
 I will break off a tender one from the topmost of its young twigs;
 I myself will plant it
 on a high and lofty mountain.
 23 On the mountain height of Israel
 I will plant it,
 in order that it may produce boughs and bear fruit,
 and become a noble cedar.

 will live;
 in the shade of its branches will nest
 winged creatures of every kind.

17.9–10 Various symbols (will he not pull up its roots, the east wind) refer to Nebuchadnezzar's attack and siege (January 588–August 587 B.C.E.) of Zedekiah in Jerusalem. Rhetorical questions underline the impossibility of survival. 17.11–15 In prose the prophet recounts the individuals and events to which earlier poetry alludes. As with the poem, the prose version concludes with a series of questions. 17.16–21 Two divine oaths. The first (vv. 16–18) foresees Zedekiah's death in Babylonian exile due to inadequate Egyptian military assistance. Zedekiah is condemned for having violated his treaty obligation to Nebuchadnezzar. The second (vv. 19–21) focuses on the military defeat, capture, and exile of Zedekiah as acts of God. 17.21 The pick, or "fugitives" as attested in some Greek manuscript traditions. 17.22 God, instead of a great eagle (v. 3), will plant a cedar shoot in Israel. 17.23 The mountain height may refer to Zion (Ps 48.1–2), which would be consistent with a replanting or restoration of the Davidic house (cf. Isa 11.1; Jer 23.5–6; 33.15). Every kind of bird (cf. Gen 7.14), along with the reference to a high mountain and singular tree, provides cosmic scale to the deity's action. 17.24 Typical for Ezekiel, God's action redounds to his glory and demonstrates the deity's ability to enact a word. Bring low . . . make high, a rhetorical figure that defines God's power; cf. 1 Sam 2.7; Pss 75.7; 147.6.

Individual Retribution

18 The word of the LORD came to me: ²What do you mean by repeating this proverb concerning the land of Israel, "The parents have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge"? ³As I live, says the Lord God, this proverb shall no more be used by you in Israel. ⁴Know that all lives are mine; the life of the parent as well as the life of the child is mine: it is only the person who sins that shall die.

cutes true justice between contending parties, ⁹follows my statutes, and is careful to observe my ordinances, acting faithfully—such a one is righteous; he shall surely live, says the Lord God.

¹⁰ If he has a son who is violent, a shedder of blood, ¹¹who does any of these things (though his father^q does none of them), who eats upon the mountains, defiles his neighbor's wife, ¹²oppresses the poor and needy, commits robbery, does not restore the pledge, lifts up his eyes to the idols, commits abomination, ¹³takes advance or accrued interest; shall he then live? He shall not. He has done all these abominable things; he shall surely die; his blood shall be upon himself.

¹⁴ But if this man has a son who sees all the sins that his father has done, considers, and does not do likewise, ¹⁵who does not eat upon the mountains or lift up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, does not defile his neighbor's wife, ¹⁶does not wrong anyone, exacts no pledge, commits no robbery, but gives his bread to the hungry and covers the naked with a garment, ¹⁷withholds his hand from iniquity,^r takes no advance or accrued interest, observes my ordinances, and follows my statutes; he shall not die for his father's iniquity; he shall surely live. ¹⁸As

18.1–32 Justice for the individual. 18.1–4 A popular saying prompts reflection and rejection by both Ezekiel and Jeremiah (Jer 31.29–30). Quoting such terse Israelite sayings is typical of Ezekiel, e.g., 12.21; 16.44. The saying grows logically out of provisions for the unlimited liability of covenant punishment, which regularly extended well beyond the individual violating a stipulation, e.g., "to the third and fourth generation" (Ex 20.5). By contrast, Ezekiel provides a postulate that focuses on God's concern for all lives. Individuals will live or die according to their own deeds. 18.5–9 The first generation, in which an individual is righteous and lives. 18.6–9 A catalogue of virtues—many are described in negative fashion—that is consistent with the Decalogue. Both sacral and secular topics are included. 18.6 Eat upon the mountains, i.e., consume food from sacrifices to gods other than Yahweh; cf. 6.13; Hos 4.13. Idols of the house of Israel. Cf. 8.10; 18.6, 15. The phrase does not necessarily involve veneration of deities other than Yahweh. 18.7 Does not oppress. Cf. Lev 25.17. Restores to the debtor his pledge. See Ex 22.26. 18.8 On debt interest, see Ex 22.25; Deut 23.20.

Executes true justice, i.e., comports himself properly in the law court convened in the city gate (Lev 19.15). 18.9 Such a one is righteous, the sort of judgment that might normally have occurred at the temple. However, Ezekiel lived in Babylonia, which made a judgment of this sort almost revolutionary; and it leads to life. 18.10–13 The second generation, in which an individual is sinful and dies. The righteousness of the father does not affect the fate of the son. In both the first and last verses, the individual is characterized as a shedder of blood, a phrase characteristic of Ezekiel and influenced by priestly rhetoric (Lev 17.4). 18.11–12 The evildoer behaves conversely from the person in the first generation. 18.14–18 The third generation, in which an individual is righteous and lives. 18.14 This individual reviews the life of his father and acts in an accordingly different manner. The behavior of the sinful father does not prejudice the fate of his son. 18.15–17 A repetition of the case of the individual in the first generation, vv. 6–9. 18.18 Instead of concluding with the grandson, this case refers to that of the sinful son.

19 Yet you say, "Why should not the son suffer for the iniquity of the father?" When the son has done what is lawful and right, and has been careful to observe all my statutes, he shall surely live. 20 The person who sins shall die. A child shall not suffer for the iniquity of a parent, nor a parent suffer for the iniquity of a child; the righteousness of the righteous shall be his own, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be his own.

21 But if the wicked turn away from all their sins that they have committed and keep all my statutes and do what is lawful and right, they shall surely live; they shall not die. 22 None of the transgressions that they have committed shall be remembered against them; for the righteousness that they have done they shall live. 23 Have I any pleasure in the death of the wicked, says the Lord God, and not rather that they should turn from their ways and live? 24 But when the righteous turn away from their righteousness and commit iniquity and do the same abominable things that the wicked do, shall they live? None of the righteous deeds that they have done shall be remembered; for the treachery of which they are guilty and the sin they have committed, they shall die.

25 Yet you say, "The way of the Lord is unfair." Hear now, O house of Israel: Is my way unfair? Is it not your ways that are unfair? 26 When the righteous turn away from their righteousness and commit iniquity, they shall die for it; for the iniquity that they have committed they shall die. 27 Again, when the wicked turn away from the wickedness they have committed and do what is lawful and right, they shall save their life. 28 Because they considered and turned away from all the transgressions that they had committed, they shall surely live; they shall not die. 29 Yet the house of Israel says, "The way of the Lord is unfair." O house of Israel, are my ways unfair? Is it not your ways that are unfair?

30 Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, all of you according to your ways, says the Lord God. Repent and turn from all your transgressions; otherwise iniquity will be your ruin.^s 31 Cast away from you all the transgressions that you have committed against me, and get yourselves a new heart and a new spirit! Why will you die, O house of Israel? 32 For I have no pleasure in the death of anyone, says the Lord God. Turn, then, and live.

Israel Degraded

19 As for you, raise up a lamentation for the princes of Israel, and say:

What a lioness was your mother among lions!

She lay down among young lions, rearing her cubs.

3 She raised up one of her cubs;
he became a young lion,

^s Or so that they shall not be a stumbling block of iniquity to you

18.19-20 Ezekiel quotes yet another saying, which sounds more like a response to the foregoing analysis than an epigram; see 2 Kings 14.6; cf. Deut 24.16. Such insistence upon the separate fate of discrete generations reflects the concerns of those in exile. Were they to be punished for the sins of their fathers, who had already been subject to attack? 18.21-24 If the wicked turn away from all their sins. Now the case of the wicked is couched in the plural and has meaning for the life of one individual, for one may speak here of repentance that engenders life. 18.24 Conversely, one who had led a righteous life but then commits iniquity will die. 18.25-29 The way of the Lord is unfair (repeated in v. 29; 33.17). It is not clear to which of the numerous foregoing cases this saying might refer. Job, Jeremiah, Habakkuk, and Ecclesiastes offer similar sentiments. The prophet responds by citing the cases developed in vv. 21-24. If an individual is treated according to what she or he does, then, Ezekiel claims, God is fair. 18.30-32 What has been implicit becomes explicit, repent . . . a new heart and a new spirit!, that which enables a new form of life, vocabulary associated with a new covenant.

19.1-14 Two laments, one using lion imagery and the other vine symbolism, describe the fate of the mother of the princes. 19.1 Lamentation, a dirge or funeral song. The princes of Israel. The Greek manuscript tradition reads "a prince." 19.2-9 The lion may serve as a metaphor for Judah, the territory ruled by the house of David (Gen 49.9-10). Some scholars have argued that Hamutal, a queen mother and wife of Josiah, is symbolized by the lioness. 19.3-4 One of her cubs, probably Jehoahaz, son of Josiah and Hamutal, who was captured by the pharaoh Neco and taken to Egypt, where he died (2 Kings 23.31–34). 19.5–9 It is uncertain to which king another of her cubs refers. Jehoiakim, also a son of Hamutal, was not taken into exile in Babylon, whereas both Jehoiachin and Zedekiah were exiled to Babylon. Cf. Jer 22 for laments on Jehoahaz and Jehoiachin. The poem may be read as a general lament over the Davidic lineage without identifying either the lioness or the cubs as specific persons. The poem stresses certain features common to both cubs: he was caught in their pit (vv. 4, 8), the nations responded to both animals (vv. 4, 8), both devoured humans (vv. 3, 6), and both were taken with hooks (vv. 4, 9). Nonetheless, the fate of the second cub receives greater attention than that of the first. 19.7 He ravaged their strongholds, in Hebrew “he knew his widows,” possibly with sexual connotations; cf. the Greek manuscript tradition, “he ravaged his widows.” 19.8 Set upon him from the provinces. Cf. the RSV translation, “set against him snares.” The net was used throughout the ancient Near East as a military implement. 19.10–14 A second lament, which uses vine imagery. Cf. Ezek 15; 17. 19.10 Your in Hebrew is singular. In this lament, Ezekiel uses a simile, like a vine, instead of a metaphor. Just as the lioness was grand, so too this vine flourished in an ideal location. In a vineyard is conjectural; cf. the Hebrew, “in your blood.” 19.11 Its strongest stem became a ruler's scepter. Cf. the Hebrew, “its strongest stems became rulers' scepters,” which accords with the imagery of more than one king in vv. 2–9. Scepter, a ceremonial staff used by the king (Isa 14.5); it could symbolize Judah and the Davidic house (Ps 60.7). 19.12 The vine is destroyed by various means: it is pulled out, dried up by an east wind (cf. 17.10), and consumed by fire. As a result, the stem (and scepter) are also destroyed. 19.13 Transplanted, surely an allusion to the Babylonian exile. 19.14 And fire . . . for ruling. The emphasis on the entire plant and not just the strongest stem focuses on the demise of the entire Davidic house as a royal line and not just the defeat of one or another king. This is a lamentation underlines the ritual use to which dirges were put as well as the individuals who chanted them; cf. 32.16.

Israel's Continuing Rebellion

20 In the seventh year, in the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month, certain elders of Israel came to consult the LORD, and sat down before me. ²And the word of the LORD came to me: ³Mortal, speak to the elders of Israel, and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: Why are you coming? To consult me? As I live, says the Lord God, I will not be consulted by you. ⁴Will you judge them, mortal, will you judge them? Then let them know the abominations of their ancestors, ⁵and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: On the day when I chose Israel, I swore to the offspring of the house of Jacob—making myself known to them in the land of Egypt—I swore to them, saying, I am the LORD your God. ⁶On that day I swore to them that I would bring them out of the land of Egypt into a land that I had searched out for them, a land flowing with milk and honey, the most glorious of all lands. ⁷And I said to them, Cast away the detestable things your eyes feast on, every one of you, and do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt; I am the LORD your God. ⁸But they rebelled against me and would not listen to me; not one of them cast away the detestable things their eyes feasted on, nor did they forsake the idols of Egypt.

Then I thought I would pour out my wrath upon them and spend my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt. ⁹But I acted for the sake of my name, that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations among whom they lived, in whose sight I made myself known to them in bringing them out of the land of Egypt. ¹⁰So I led them out of the land of Egypt and brought them into the wilderness. ¹¹I gave them my statutes and showed them my ordinances, by whose observance everyone shall live. ¹²Moreover I gave them my sabbaths, as a sign between me and them, so that they might know that I the LORD sanctify them. ¹³But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness; they did not observe my statutes but rejected my ordinances, by whose observance everyone shall live; and my sabbaths they greatly profaned.

Then I thought I would pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness, to make an end of them. ¹⁴But I acted for the sake of my name, so that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations, in whose sight I had brought them out. ¹⁵Moreover I swore to them in the wilderness that I would not bring them into the land that I had given them, a land flowing with milk and honey, the most glorious of all lands, ¹⁶because they rejected my ordinances and did not observe my statutes, and profaned my sabbaths; for their heart went after their idols. ¹⁷Nevertheless my eye spared them, and I did not destroy them or make an end of them in the wilderness.

20.1–32 Israel's rebellious past. 20.1–4 Again, Ezekiel meets with the elders (8.1; 14.1), who seek God's word. 20.1 Seventh year . . . month, August 14, 591 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2), five years before the temple was destroyed. Ezekiel had been acting as a prophet for two years and had been in exile since 597. Note the prominence of the first-person pronoun me in the mouth of the deity; the deity is the preeminent actor. 20.2–4 Instead of acting as an intermediary for the people, Ezekiel is commanded by God to judge them; see also 22.2; 23.36. 20.5–31 Various periods when Israel rebelled against God. For another version of Israel's history with God, see Ps 106. 20.5 Chose Israel, virtually royal language since God also "chose" David as king. 20.7–8 In Egypt, Israel had been venerating detestable things, idols of Egypt. Israel's rebellion involved continuing to worship such objects. 20.9–26 The wilderness experiences. 20.9 For the sake of my name. Ezekiel emphasizes here (and elsewhere, vv. 14, 22; 36.22) that such action is not undertaken because Israel deserves such bounty. 20.10 The exodus and the time in the wilderness are concisely conjoined. Throughout this historical reprise, Ezekiel distills longer accounts. 20.11 The Sinai event is linked immediately to these other epochal episodes. Everyone shall live. Cf. Lev 18.5. 20.12 Sabbaths, remarkably important in this chapter; see vv. 13, 16, 20, 21, 24. Observance of the sabbath is associated with the covenant at Sinai; see Ex 31.13 on the sabbath as a sign. For a contemporaneous prophetic perspective on the sabbath observances, see Jer 17.19–27. The sabbath is to make the people holy, to sanctify them. 20.13–17 After the Sinai event, the people again rebelled, whereupon God was tempted to annihilate them. However, concern for the viability of the deity's name among the nations prevented this punitive response. 20.18–21 Introduction of the motif of the next generation, their children; cf. ch. 18. These individuals are derness, Do not follow the statutes of your parents, nor observe their ordinances, nor defile yourselves with their idols. ¹⁹I the LORD am your God; follow my statutes, and be careful to observe my ordinances, ²⁰and hallow my sabbaths that they may be a sign between me and you, so that you may know that I the LORD am your God. ²¹But the children rebelled against me; they did not follow my statutes, and were not careful to observe my ordinances, by whose observance everyone shall live; they profaned my sabbaths.

Then I thought I would pour out my wrath upon them and spend my anger against them in the wilderness. ²²But I withheld my hand, and acted for the sake of my name, so that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations, in whose sight I had brought them out. ²³Moreover I swore to them in the wilderness that I would scatter them among the nations and disperse them through the countries, ²⁴because they had not executed my ordinances, but had rejected my statutes and profaned my sabbaths, and their eyes were set on their ancestors' idols. ²⁵Moreover I gave them statutes that were not good and ordinances by which they could not live. ²⁶I defiled them through their very gifts, in their offering up all their firstborn, in order that I might horrify them, so that they might know that I am the LORD.

²⁷ Therefore, mortal, speak to the house of Israel and say to them, Thus says the Lord God: In this again your ancestors blasphemed me, by dealing treacherously with me. ²⁸For when I had brought them into the land that I swore to give them, then wherever they saw any high hill or any leafy tree, there they offered their sacrifices and presented the provocation of their offering; there they sent up their pleasing odors, and there they poured out their drink offerings. ²⁹(I said to them, What is the high place to which you go? So it is called Bamah* to this day.) ³⁰Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: Will you defile yourselves after the manner of your ancestors and go astray after their detestable things? ³¹When you offer your gifts and make your children pass through the fire, you defile yourselves with all your idols to this day. And shall I be consulted by you, O house of Israel? As I live, says the Lord God, I will not be consulted by you.

³² What is in your mind shall never happen—the thought, “Let us be like the nations, like the tribes of the countries, and worship wood and stone.”

God Will Restore Israel

³³ As I live, says the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out, I will be king over you. ³⁴I will bring you out from the peoples and gather you out of the challenged to obey in a way that their fathers did not obey. And yet they also rebelled, unlike the case of ch. 18. 20.22–26 The generation of children, in the wilderness, is threatened with exile; see also Ps 106.26–27. 20.25 Moreover, God gives them statutes that were not good and ordinances by which they could not live. Ezekiel's charge is radical, but it is not outside the pale of other OT assessments, e.g., Isa 63.17. 20.26 This verse defines the sort of laws to which Ezekiel refers, namely, offering the firstborn. Certain obligations involving the firstborn are ambiguous, e.g., Ex 22.29. Nonetheless, child sacrifice is attested in ancient Israel (Deut 12.31; Jer 7.31; 19.4–6; 32.35). 20.27–29 Another geographic setting, now in the land that I swore to give them. The promised land provided occasions for ritual malfeasance: sacrifices, offering, pleasing odors (incense), drink offerings, and the high place. 20.30–31 Ezekiel addresses his generation (the house of Israel), which can now be compared to those who have gone before. V. 31 suggests that those in exile are guilty of misdeeds like those performed by their forebears. To wit, with the effect of an inclusio (a repetition signaling the beginning and end of a unit; see vv. 3–4), God asks: Shall I be consulted by you? To this question the deity answers in the negative, which is a much milder response than it was to earlier audiences. 20.32 Again Ezekiel quotes those whom he addresses: Let us be like the nations, a clause that could also be translated, “we will be like the nations.” Worship wood and stone: the most overt reference to veneration of objects representing gods other than Yahweh in this chapter; cf. Jer 2.27. 20.33–44 These verses offer hope. 20.33–35 With wrath poured out indicates that this new exodus will be accompanied by harsh trials en route. Wilderness of the peoples, through which Israel will have to pass on its way from Babylon to Syro-Palestine. Face to face, imagery of direct encounter, similar to the prior encounter in the wilderness at Mount Sinai (Deut countries where you are scattered, with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out; ³⁵and I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples, and there I will enter into judgment with you face to face. ³⁶As I entered into judgment with your ancestors in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so I will enter into judgment with you, says the Lord God. ³⁷I will make you pass under the staff, and will bring you within the bond of the covenant. ³⁸I will purge out the rebels among you, and those who transgress against me; I will bring them out of the land where they reside as aliens, but they shall not enter the land of Israel. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

³⁹ As for you, O house of Israel, thus says the Lord God: Go serve your idols, everyone of you now and hereafter, if you will not listen to me; but my holy name you shall no more profane with your gifts and your idols.

⁴⁰ For on my holy mountain, the mountain height of Israel, says the Lord God, there all the house of Israel, all of them, shall serve me in the land; there I will accept them, and there I will require your contributions and the choicest of your gifts, with all your sacred things. ⁴¹As a pleasing odor I will accept you, when I bring you out from the peoples, and gather you out of the countries where you have been scattered; and I will manifest my holiness among you in the sight of the nations. ⁴²You shall know that I am the LORD, when I bring you into the land of Israel, the country that I swore to give to your ancestors. ⁴³There you shall remember your ways and all the deeds by which you have polluted yourselves; and you shall loathe yourselves for all the evils that you have committed. ⁴⁴And you shall know that I am the LORD, when I deal with you for my name's sake, not according to your evil ways, or corrupt deeds, O house of Israel, says the Lord God.

A Prophecy Against the Negeb

^{45x} The word of the LORD came to me: ⁴⁶Mortal, set your face toward the south, preach against the south, and prophesy against the forest land in the Negeb; ⁴⁷say to the forest of the Negeb, Hear the word of the LORD: Thus says the Lord God, I will kindle a fire in you, and it shall devour every green tree in you and every dry tree; the blazing flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from south to north shall be scorched by it. ⁴⁸All flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it; it shall not be quenched. ⁴⁹Then I said, "Ah Lord God! they are saying of me, 'Is he not a maker of allegories?'"

The Drawn Sword of God

21 ^y The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, set your face toward Jerusalem and preach against the sanctuaries; prophesy against the land of Israel ³and say to the land of Israel, Thus says the LORD: I am coming against you, and

5.4). 20.37 I . . . will bring you within the bond of the covenant. Cf. the Greek manuscript tradition and RSV translation, "I will let you go by number." 20.38 Certain Israelites, rebels, will be removed from the community before it enters the land (cf. 13.9 for the motif of being removed from among the people). 20.39 The first part of the verse is an ironic admonition to worship religious objects. The final clause demonstrates the purpose of such language, to prevent God's holy name from being profaned. 20.40–44 The scene shifts to Jerusalem and Zion, my holy mountain, the site of the temple. Ezekiel describes a hopeful future in which the people resume proper religious practices. Contributions, choicest of . . . gifts, sacred things all refer to ritual offerings at the temple. 20.41 Israel itself will be like a pleasing odor, the incense and smoke from various sacrifices. 20.43 Memory will lead to contrition.

20.45–48 A prophecy against the South. 20.46 Three different Hebrew terms, which are translated by the south, the south, and the Negeb, respectively, should probably all be understood as referring to the Southern Kingdom or tribal territory of Judah. According to this imagery, Ezekiel is in the north; cf. on the enemy from the north, see ch. 38; Jer 5.14–17. 20.47–48 Fire imagery is prominent in Ezekiel (e.g., 5.4; 10.2; 15.4–7; 16.41; 19.12, 14; 21.32; 23.25). For such a great fire, cf. Am 7.4–5. 20.49 Ezekiel laments (so the formulaic Ah) that the people perceive him as speaking unclearly.

21.1–32 Sayings that have in common sword imagery, which appears elsewhere in Ezekiel (e.g., 14.21). 21.1–7 The audience is diverse: Jerusalem, the sanctuaries, the land of Israel. Moreover, God will attack all flesh, which includes both righteous and wicked. The oracle therefore stresses the will draw my sword out of its sheath, and will cut off from you both righteous and wicked. ⁴Because I will cut off from you both righteous and wicked, therefore my sword shall go out of its sheath against all flesh from south to north; ⁵and all flesh shall know that I the LORD have drawn my sword out of its sheath; it shall not be sheathed again. ⁶Moan therefore, mortal; moan with breaking heart and bitter grief before their eyes. ⁷And when they say to you, "Why do you moan?" you shall say, "Because of the news that has come. Every heart will melt and all hands will be feeble, every spirit will faint and all knees will turn to water. See, it comes and it will be fulfilled," says the Lord God.

⁸ And the word of the LORD came to me: ⁹Mortal, prophesy and say: Thus says the Lord; Say:

A sword, a sword is sharpened,
it is also polished;

¹⁰ it is sharpened for slaughter, honed to flash like lightning!

How can we make merry?

You have despised the rod,

to be grasped in the hand;
it is sharpened, the sword is ¹² Cry and wail, O mortal, for it is against my people;

it is against all Israel's princes;
they are thrown to the sword,
together with my people.
Ah! Strike the thigh!

¹³For consider: What! If you despise the rod, will it not happen?^z says the Lord God.

¹⁴ And you, mortal, prophesy;
strike hand to hand.

Let the sword fall twice, thrice;
it is a sword for killing.

A sword for great slaughter—
it surrounds them;

it is polished^b for slaughter.

Engage to the left!

¹⁷ I too will strike hand to hand,
I will satisfy my fury;
I the LORD have spoken.

¹⁸ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁹Mortal, mark out two roads for the sword of the king of Babylon to come;
both of them shall issue from the same land. And make a signpost, make it for a totality of the coming destruction; cf. Ezek 9; 18. 21.6–7 The prophet laments symbolically, which elicits a question from the people, thereby allowing for a new utterance about the universal scope of God's punitive action: every heart, all hands, every spirit, all knees. 21.8–17 The number of text-critical notes indicates the difficulty of this poem. Descriptions of the sword are interposed with comments from the prophet and God respectively (vv. 10, 12). 21.12 Again Ezekiel is commanded to lament (v. 6). That the sword is against Israel's princes (cf. 19.1; 22.60) does not, however, limit the scope of the punishment; see my people twice in this verse. Strike the thigh, an expression of sorrow; see Jer 31.19. 21.13–17 These verses are built on the foregoing poem; the rod in v. 13 alludes to the rod in v. 10. Now imperative language predominates as God addresses the sword and its function, e.g., v. 16. 21.18–24 The sword of Babylon. Ezekiel is admonished to direct Nebuchadnezzar's sword, which is at a crossroads. 21.20 Rabbah was the capital of Ammon. 21.21 Nebuchadnezzar employs various divinatory techniques to determine which road to take. On teraphim as sources of information, see Hos 3.4; Zech 10.2. Hepatoscopy, liver divination, was prominent in Mesopotamia. In the ancient Near East kings regularly consulted various omens before entering battle. Ezekiel as an intermediary could affect his decision. 21.22 The lot, which symbolizes a divinatory decision, designates Jerusalem. The repertoire of gates, to cast up ramps, to build siege towers. ²³ But to them it will seem like a false divination; they have sworn solemn oaths; but he brings their guilt to remembrance, bringing about their capture.

²⁴ Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have brought your guilt to remembrance, in that your transgressions are uncovered, so that in all your deeds your sins appear—because you have come to remembrance, you shall be taken in hand.^e

²⁵ As for you, vile, wicked prince of Israel, you whose day has come,
the time of final punishment,

²⁶ thus says the Lord God:

the crown;
things shall not remain as they are.

Exalt that which is low,
abase that which is high.

²⁷ A ruin, a ruin, a ruin—
I will make it!
(Such has never occurred.) Until he comes whose right it is;
to him I will give it.

²⁸ As for you, mortal, prophesy, and say, Thus says the Lord God concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; say:

A sword, a sword! Drawn for
slaughter,
polished to consume,^f to flash
like lightning.

²⁹ Offering false visions for you, divining lies for you,
they place you over the necks of the vile, wicked ones—
those whose day has come,
the time of final punishment.

³⁰ Return it to its sheath!
In the place where you were created,

in the land of your origin,
I will judge you.

³¹ I will pour out my indignation
upon you,
with the fire of my wrath
I will blow upon you.

I will deliver you into brutish
hands,
those skillful to destroy.

³² You shall be fuel for the
fire,
your blood shall enter the
earth;
you shall be remembered no
more,
for I the LORD have spoken.

The Bloody City

22 The word of the LORD came to me: ² You, mortal, will you judge, will you judge the bloody city? Then declare to it all its abominable deeds. ³ You shall say, Thus says the Lord God: A city! Shedding blood within itself; its time has come; making its idols, defiling itself. ⁴ You have become guilty by the blood that you have shed, and defiled by the idols that you have made; you have brought your day near, the appointed time of your years has come. Therefore I have made you a disgrace before the nations, and a mockery to all the countries. ⁵ Those who are near and those who are far from you will mock you, you infamous one, full of tumult.

⁶ The princes of Israel in you, everyone according to his power, have been bent on shedding blood. ⁷ Father and mother are treated with contempt in you; the alien residing within you suffers extortion; the orphan and the widow are siege and destruction ensue. 21.25–27 God addresses a wicked prince of Israel, almost certainly Zedekiah. Exalt . . . low, abase . . . high, a reversal of social order, which exemplifies dysfunction (cf. Isa 3.4–5). 21.27 Until he comes, probably Nebuchadnezzar, the one whom God has designated to administer judgment; cf. Gen 49.10. 21.28–32 Concerning the Ammonites, whose capital had been Nebuchadnezzar's alternate site for attack (v. 20). The sense of v. 29 remains unclear. Ammon appears first in the collection of oracles against the nations, 25.1–7. 21.30 Presumably Nebuchadnezzar is addressed. God's judgment will also fall on Babylon; cf. Isa 13–14; Jer 50–51. The sword is under God's control.

22.1–31 Oracles of judgment on Jerusalem and Judah. 22.2–5 Bloodshed (cf. Nahum's indictment of Nineveh as a "city of bloodshed" [3.1]) and veneration of idols are the hallmark indictments. 22.5 On Jerusalem as scorned, cf. 16.57. 22.6–12 Shedding blood (vv. 6, 9, 12) attributed to the princes of Israel (v. 6). 22.7 Cases that violate Israelite legal formulations: father and mother, Ex 21.17; the alien, Ex 22.21; the orphan and wronged in you. ⁸You have despised my holy things, and profaned my sabbaths. ⁹In you are those who slander to shed blood, those in you who eat upon the mountains, who commit lewdness in your midst. ¹⁰In you they uncover their fathers' nakedness; in you they violate women in their menstrual periods. ¹¹One commits abomination with his neighbor's wife; another lewdly defiles his daughter-in-law; another in you defiles his sister, his father's daughter. ¹²In you, they take bribes to shed blood; you take both advance interest and accrued interest, and make gain of your neighbors by extortion; and you have forgotten me, says the Lord God.

¹³ See, I strike my hands together at the dishonest gain you have made, and at the blood that has been shed within you. ¹⁴Can your courage endure, or can your hands remain strong in the days when I shall deal with you? I the LORD have spoken, and I will do it. ¹⁵I will scatter you among the nations and disperse you through the countries, and I will purge your filthiness out of you. ¹⁶And I shall be profaned through you in the sight of the nations; and you shall know that I am the LORD.

¹⁷ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁸Mortal, the house of Israel has become dross to me; all of them, silver,^h bronze, tin, iron, and lead. In the smelter they have become dross. ¹⁹Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have all become dross, I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem. ²⁰As one gathers silver, bronze, iron, lead, and tin into a smelter, to blow the fire upon them in order to melt them; so I will gather you in my anger and in my wrath, and I will put you in and melt you. ²¹I will gather you and blow upon you with the fire of my wrath, and you shall be melted within it. ²²As silver is melted in a smelter, so you shall be melted in it; and you shall know that I the LORD have poured out my wrath upon you.

²³ The word of the LORD came to me: ²⁴Mortal, say to it: You are a land that is not cleansed, not rained upon in the day of indignation. ²⁵Its princesⁱ within it are like a roaring lion tearing the prey; they have devoured human lives; they have taken treasure and precious things; they have made many widows within it. ²⁶Its priests have done violence to my teaching and have profaned my holy things; they have made no distinction between the holy and the common, neither have they taught the difference between the unclean and the clean, and they have disregarded my sabbaths, so that I am profaned among them. ²⁷Its officials within it are like wolves tearing the prey, shedding blood, destroying lives to get dishonest gain. ²⁸Its prophets have smeared whitewash on their behalf, seeing false visions and divining lies for them, saying, "Thus says the Lord God," when the LORD has not spoken. ²⁹The people of the land have practiced extortion and committed robbery; they have oppressed the poor and needy, and have extorted from the alien without redress. ³⁰And I sought for anyone among them who would repair the wall and stand in the breach before me on behalf of the Punishment will occur in the form of exile. 22.13 Strike my hands together. Cf. 21.14. 22.17–22 Judgment on the house of Israel based on smelting imagery. Cf. Isa 1.22, 25; Jer 9.7; Zech 13.9; Mal 3.2–3. As with ore in which the desired metal is still present, so Israel will be gathered to one furnace, Jerusalem, for a decisive smelting. Ezekiel emphasizes the diverse elements—silver, bronze, tin, iron, and lead—that are being collected. However, at the outset God views Israel as dross, not the essential metal sought in the smelting process. 22.22 This verse focuses on the most precious of these metals, silver, as opposed to the earlier dross. Nonetheless, wrath remains the hallmark. 22.23–31 Those in certain social roles—prince, priest, official, and prophet—have acted improperly; cf. Jer 8.8–10; esp. Zeph 3.3–4. The malfeasance may be identified: princes who are to foster peace kill (v. 25). priests do not distinguish between the sacred and the common (v. 26). officials do not administer impartial justice (v. 27). and prophets do not speak on behalf of God (v. 28). The people of the land (v. 29; cf. 7.27) moves the discourse beyond discrete classes to all Israel. 22.30 For the search for anyone, cf. Jer 5.1. There as here, no such person was found. The absence of such an individual results in judgment, which is described land, so that I would not destroy it; but I found no one. ³¹Therefore I have poured out my indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath; I have returned their conduct upon their heads, says the Lord God.

Oholah and Oholibah

23 The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, there were two women, the daughters of one mother; ³they played the whore in Egypt; they played the whore in their youth; their breasts were caressed there, and their virgin bosoms were fondled. ⁴Oholah was the name of the elder and Oholibah the name of her sister. They became mine, and they bore sons and daughters. As for their names, Oholah is Samaria, and Oholibah is Jerusalem.

⁵ Oholah played the whore while she was mine; she lusted after her lovers the Assyrians, warriors; ⁶clothed in blue, governors and commanders, all of them handsome young men, mounted horsemen. ⁷She bestowed her favors upon them, the choicest men of Assyria all of them; and she defiled herself with all the idols of everyone for whom she lusted. ⁸She did not give up her whorings that she had practiced since Egypt; for in her youth men had lain with her and fondled her virgin bosom and poured out their lust upon her. ⁹Therefore I delivered her into the hands of her lovers, into the hands of the Assyrians, for whom she lusted. ¹⁰These uncovered her nakedness; they seized her sons and her daughters; and they killed her with the sword. Judgment was executed upon her, and she became a byword among women.

¹¹ Her sister Oholibah saw this, yet she was more corrupt than she in her lusting and in her whorings, which were worse than those of her sister. ¹²She lusted after the Assyrians, governors and commanders, warriors; clothed in full armor, mounted horsemen, all of them handsome young men. ¹³And I saw that she was defiled; they both took the same way. ¹⁴But she carried her whorings further; she saw male figures carved on the wall, images of the Chaldeans portrayed in vermillion, ¹⁵with belts around their waists, with flowing turbans on their heads, all of them looking like officers—a picture of Babylonians whose native land was Chaldea. ¹⁶When she saw them she lusted after them, and sent messengers to them in Chaldea. ¹⁷And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their lust; and after she defiled herself with them, she turned from them in disgust. ¹⁸When she carried on her whorings so openly and flaunted her nakedness, I turned in disgust from her, as I had turned from her sister. ¹⁹Yet she increased her whorings, remembering the days of her youth, when she played the whore in the land of Egypt ²⁰and lusted after her paramours there, whose members were like those of donkeys, and in v. 31. 22.31 Fire (see vv. 17–22) will destroy those just indicted.

23.1–49 Oholah and Oholibah, symbols for Samaria and Jerusalem. Cf. ch. 16 for a similar indictment of Jerusalem. 23.2 Daughters of one mother. Who is the mother? Perhaps all of Israel in Egypt, where Israel's whoredom begins; see 20.8. 23.4 Oholah, lit. "her tent." Oholibah, lit. "my tent is in her." If tent refers to tent shrine (cf. the tent of meeting, Ex 33.7–11), then the names allude to the royal shrines at the national capitals: Samaria and Jerusalem. God identifies the latter as having "my tent," which makes Oholibah's whoring worse than that of her sister. 23.5–9 Indictment and sentence of Oholah. Governors, commanders, and horsemen presume the presence of Neo-Assyrian provincial political and military officials in Syro-Palestine. Her licentious behavior with Assyrians may symbolize treaties with the Neo-Assyrian Empire. Such alliances required oaths of fealty and payment of tribute as early as the late ninth century B.C.E. 23.9–10 The death of Oholah and her children reflects the destruction of Samaria by the Neo-Assyrians in 721 B.C.E. Delivered into the hands of her lovers. Cf. 16.37–39. 23.11–27 Indictment and sentence of Oholibah. 23.11–21 The indictment. Like her sister, Oholibah lusts after Neo-Assyrian officials. However, she was more corrupt, which Ezekiel argues in vv. 14–15. She saw male figures carved on the wall . . . (v. 14), probably a reference to Neo-Assyrian wall reliefs, which were sometimes tinted red. Ezekiel may have known a tradition according to which Judahites sent emissaries to Neo-Assyrian (or Neo-Babylonian, Chaldean) cities. The greater sin would result from the Judahites' sexual misbehavior in Mesopotamia. After God rejects Oholibah, she continues her whose emission was like that of stallions. ²¹Thus you longed for the lewdness of your youth, when the Egyptians^k fondled your bosom and caressed^l your young breasts.

²² Therefore, O Oholibah, thus says the Lord God: I will rouse against you your lovers from whom you turned in disgust, and I will bring them against you from every side: ²³the Babylonians and all the Chaldeans, Pekod and Shoa and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them, handsome young men, governors and commanders all of them, officers and warriors,^m all of them riding on horses. ²⁴They shall come against you from the northⁿ with chariots and wagons and a host of peoples; they shall set themselves against you on every side with buckler, shield, and helmet, and I will commit the judgment to them, and they shall judge you according to their ordinances. ²⁵I will direct my indignation against you, in order that they may deal with you in fury. They shall cut off your nose and your ears, and your survivors shall fall by the sword. They shall seize your sons and your daughters, and your survivors shall be devoured by fire. ²⁶They shall also strip you of your clothes and take away your fine jewels. ²⁷So I will put an end to your lewdness and your whoring brought from the land of Egypt; you shall not long for them, or remember Egypt any more. ²⁸For thus says the Lord God: I will deliver you into the hands of those whom you hate, into the hands of those from whom you turned in disgust; ²⁹and they shall deal with you in hatred, and take away all the fruit of your labor, and leave you naked and bare, and the nakedness of your whorings shall be exposed. Your lewdness and your whorings ³⁰have brought this upon you, because you played the whore with the nations, and polluted yourself with their idols. ³¹You have gone the way of your sister; therefore I will give her cup into your hand.

³² Thus says the Lord God:

You shall drink your sister's cup,
deep and wide;
you shall be scorned and derided,
it holds so much.

³³ You shall be filled with drunkenness and sorrow.
A cup of horror and desolation is the cup of your sister Samaria;

³⁴ you shall drink it and drain
it out,
and gnaw its sherds,
and tear out your breasts;

for I have spoken, says the Lord God.

³⁵ Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have forgotten me and cast me behind your back, therefore bear the consequences of your lewdness and whorings.

³⁶ The LORD said to me: Mortal, will you judge Oholah and Oholibah? Then declare to them their abominable deeds. ³⁷For they have committed adultery, and blood is on their hands; with their idols they have committed adultery; and they have even offered up to them for food the children whom they had borne to me. ³⁸Moreover this they have done to me: they have defiled my sanctuary on the same day and profaned my sabbaths. ³⁹For when they had slaughtered their children for their idols, on the same day they came into my sanctuary to profane it. This is what they did in my house.

⁴⁰ They even sent for men to come whorings, as she had done earlier with her sexually vigorous partners (vv. 19–20). 23.22–27 The sentence. As with Oholah, the woman will be turned over to her lovers, who now include both Assyrians and Babylonians. Note the prominence of the o vowel in the tribal names (v. 23), which creates assonance with the names Oholah and Oholibah. 23.23–24 Horsemen, chariots and wagons, and buckler, shield, and helmet attest to the power of the Neo-Babylonian army. 23.25–27 As prisoners of war, Oholibah and her children are subject to physical mutilation and death. Egypt. Ezekiel continues to emphasize that the whoring dates far back in Israel's existence.

23.28–49 Diverse judgments and reflections based on the Oholah and Oholibah discourse. 23.28–30 A general oracle of judgment, probably directed to Oholibah (Jerusalem); you (v. 28) is feminine singular. 23.30 Use of idols becomes part of the indictment. 23.31–35 These verses address Oholibah and describe her punishment using the imagery of your sister's cup; cf. Isa 51.17, 22; Jer 25.15–28; 51.7; Hab 2.16. 23.36–49 Final reflections, which point in a new direction. 23.36–39 More indictments, which recall chs. 16, 20, 38–39. My sanctuary focuses on ritual infractions. 23.40–44 One woman, probably Oholibah, undertakes self-adornment, but with some from far away, to whom a messenger was sent, and they came. For them you bathed yourself, painted your eyes, and decked yourself with ornaments; 41 you sat on a stately couch, with a table spread before it on which you had placed my incense and my oil. 42 The sound of a raucous multitude was around her, with many of the rabble brought in drunken from the wilderness; and they put bracelets on the arms^o of the women, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

43 Then I said, Ah, she is worn out with adulteries, but they carry on their sexual acts with her. 44 For they have gone in to her, as one goes in to a whore. Thus they went in to Oholah and to Oholibah, wanton women. 45 But righteous judges shall declare them guilty of adultery and of bloodshed; because they are adulteresses and blood is on their hands.

46 For thus says the Lord God: Bring up an assembly against them, and make them an object of terror and of plunder. 47 The assembly shall stone them and with their swords they shall cut them down; they shall kill their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses. 48 Thus will I put an end to lewdness in the land, so that all women may take warning and not commit lewdness as you have done. 49 They shall repay you for your lewdness, and you shall bear the penalty for your sinful idolatry; and you shall know that I am the Lord God.

The Boiling Pot

24 In the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: 2 Mortal, write down the name of this day, this very day. The king of Babylon has laid siege to Jerusalem this very day. 3 And utter an allegory to the rebellious house and say to them, Thus says the Lord God:

Set on the pot, set it on,
pour in water also;
4 put in it the pieces,
all the good pieces, the thigh
and the shoulder;
fill it with choice bones.
5 Take the choicest one of the flock,
pile the logs^p under it;
boil its pieces,^q
seethe^r also its bones in it.

6 Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Woe to the bloody city,
the pot whose rust is in it, whose rust has not gone out
of it!

Empty it piece by piece, making no choice at all.^s

7 For the blood she shed is inside it;
she placed it on a bare rock;
she did not pour it out on the
ground,
to cover it with earth.

8 To rouse my wrath, to take vengeance,
I have placed the blood she shed
on a bare rock,
so that it may not be covered.

9 Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Woe to the bloody city!
I will even make the pile great.

materials belonging to religious ritual (my incense, v. 41). 23.40–42 Men and rabble are imported for Oholibah; cf. 23.17. 23.45–49 The scene shifts to human judgment (righteous judges) and Israelite laws regarding adultery (Lev 20.10). 23.48 That all women may take warning. The conclusion has a wisdomlike admonitory tone rather than one of annihilation.

24.1–14 The boiling pot. 24.1–2 Ninth year ... month, January 15, 588 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2), a date that the prophet is to inscribe since Nebuchadnezzar began his siege of Jerusalem on that day. 24.3 Another allegory. Cf. 17.2. 24.3–5 One individual is directed to cook an animal in boiling water. Cf. Mic 3.3 for the motif of flesh and bones (though there human) in one pot. Also cf. Ezek 11.3. 24.6–8 The imagery becomes complicated, with attention now devoted to corrosion in the pot. 24.7–8 Then blood contaminates what is inside the pot. On Jerusalem and blood, see ch. 22. On blood manipulation, see 33.25; Gen 9.4; Lev 7.10–14; Deut 12.16. God will not allow the blood that Jerusalem has shed to be covered; cf. Gen 4.10–11; Job 16.18. 24.9–14 Though this woe oracle commences with reference to blood, the imagery of the pot returns. The fire will be hotter, the rust will contaminate the pot, the pot will be emptied (so also v. 6b), and nothing will be clean. This flurry of prophetic rhetoric—which is consonant with my

Ezekiel's Bereavement

15 The word of the LORD came to me:
16 Mortal, with one blow I am about to take away from you the delight of your eyes; yet you shall not mourn or weep, nor shall your tears run down. 17 Sigh, but not aloud; make no mourning for the dead. Bind on your turban, and put your sandals on your feet; do not cover your upper lip or eat the bread of mourners.^v 18 So I spoke to the people in the morning, and at evening my wife died. And on the next morning I did as I was commanded.

19 Then the people said to me, "Will you not tell us what these things mean for us, that you are acting this way?" 20 Then I said to them: The word of the LORD came to me: 21 Say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: I will profane my sanctuary, the pride of your power, the delight of your eyes, and your heart's desire; and your sons and your daughters whom you left behind shall fall by the sword. 22 And you shall do as I have done;

you shall not cover your upper lip or eat the bread of mourners.^v 23 Your turbans shall be on your heads and your sandals on your feet; you shall not mourn or weep, but you shall pine away in your in-iquities and groan to one another. 24 Thus Ezekiel shall be a sign to you; you shall do just as he has done. When this comes, then you shall know that I am the Lord God.

25 And you, mortal, on the day when I take from them their stronghold, their joy and glory, the delight of their eyes and their heart's affection, and also^w their sons and their daughters, 26 on that day, one who has escaped will come to you to report to you the news. 27 On that day your mouth shall be opened to the one who has escaped, and you shall speak and no longer be silent. So you shall be a sign to them; and they shall know that I am
the LORD.

Proclamation Against Ammon

25 The word of the LORD came to me: 2 Mortal, set your face toward the Ammonites and prophesy against them. 3 Say to the Ammonites, Hear the word of the Lord God: Thus says the fury—provides images rather than a definitive

24.15–27 Ezekiel's bereavement. 24.15–18
God commands the prophet to undertake another symbolic act (cf. 4.1–5.17; 12.1–16), which involves the absence of standard mourning rituals for his wife, who is about to die. Cf.
Jer 16.5 for another prohibition of mourning.
24.17 Certain of these lamentation practices, i.e., not wearing the normal headdress, not wearing sandals, covering part of the face (upper lip), would create a different appearance for the mourner and in so doing protect the individual from the netherworld. Bread of mourners (Hebrew, "bread of humans") may refer to feasting that was part of the funeral rites. 24.19–24 The act explained. God interprets the destruction of the temple to be like the death of Ezekiel's wife. Both shall occur without the expected and appropriate lamentation. Just as Ezekiel's wife was the delight of his eyes (v. 16), so the temple was the delight of the people's eyes (v. 21). 24.24 Ezekiel, the person, and not simply what he says, becomes a sign.

24.25–27 On the day or on that day, a formula prominent in late prophetic texts; cf. Zech 14.
Ezek 33.21–22 reports the sequel to these verses: Ezekiel will be able to speak again as a prophet and be, again, a sign to the people.

25.1–32.32 Oracles against foreign nations.
As in other books (Isa 13–23; Jer 46–51; Am

Lord God, Because you said, "Aha!" over my sanctuary when it was profaned, and over the land of Israel when it was made desolate, and over the house of Judah when it went into exile; ⁴therefore I am handing you over to the people of the east for a possession. They shall set their encampments among you and pitch their tents in your midst; they shall eat your fruit, and they shall drink your milk. ⁵I will make Rabbah a pasture for camels and Ammon a fold for flocks. Then you shall know that I am the LORD. ⁶For thus says the Lord God: Because you have clapped your hands and stamped your feet and rejoiced with all the malice within you against the land of Israel, ⁷therefore I have stretched out my hand against you, and will hand you over as plunder to the nations. I will cut you off from the peoples and will make you perish out of the countries; I will destroy you. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

Proclamation Against Moab

8 Thus says the Lord God: Because Moab^x said, The house of Judah is like all the other nations, ⁹therefore I will lay open the flank of Moab from the towns^y on its frontier, the glory of the country, Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim. ¹⁰I will give it along with Ammon to the people of the east as a possession. Thus Ammon shall be remembered no more among the nations, ¹¹and I will execute judgments upon Moab. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Proclamation Against Edom

12 Thus says the Lord God: Because Edom acted revengefully against the house of Judah and has grievously offended in taking vengeance upon them, ¹³therefore thus says the Lord God, I will stretch out my hand against Edom, and cut off from it humans and animals, and I will make it desolate; from Teman even to Dedan they shall fall by the sword. ¹⁴I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel; and they shall act in Edom according to my anger and

1.3–2.3; Nahum), prophets often directed oracles against nations and rulers other than Israel and Judah. Ezekiel addresses one empire, Egypt, and a number of smaller Syro-Palestinian states, Ammon, Moab, Edom, Philistia, Tyre, which form a geographic arc around Judah. Tyre (chs. 26–28) and Egypt (chs. 29–32)—and their respective kings—receive primary attention. 25.1–17 Four oracles against nations on the eastern and western flanks of Israel: Ammon, Moab, Edom, and Philistia. 25.1–7 Proclamation against Ammon, a nation east of the Jordan River, north of Moab. Its southern border began approximately half way up the Dead Sea and continued for almost half the Jordan Valley between the Dead Sea and the Sea of Galilee. In 21.28, Ezekiel had already focused attention on this nation. Ammon had, in league with the Moabites and Arameans, cooperated with the Neo-Babylonians in their first major attack against Jerusalem (2 Kings 24.1–2). Later however, Ammon and Judah together attempted to withstand the Neo-Babylonians (Jer 27). 25.3 Not the aforementioned history, but Ammonite delight in the destruction of the temple and Judah serve as Ezekiel's indictment. 25.4 People of the east. References in this verse to encampments and tents suggest that other, though unnamed, foreign peoples—desert nomads—will destroy Ammon. 25.5 Rabbah, the Ammonite capital, modern Amman, Jordan. 25.8–11 Proclamation against Moab, a nation that lay south of Ammon. Since the method of punishment for Moab is the same as that of Ammon (destruction by the people of the east), since Ammon is mentioned explicitly in both oracles, and since Israel understood itself to stand in a kinship relation with both Ammon and Moab (Gen 19; 37–38), these first two oracles are closely related. 25.8 Like all the other nations. Cf. 20.32; 1 Sam 8.5. In all three texts the phrase bears a negative connotation. 25.9 The towns. Cf. Jer 47, which also emphasizes destruction of cities and villages and not just the capital. Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim, cities near Moab's border with Israel. 25.12–14 Proclamation against Edom, which lies next to Moab just south of the Dead Sea. As with the other nations, there was a kinship relationship to Israel, in this case through Esau (see Gen 25.23–26). 25.12 Other biblical texts allude to Edomite action against Israel (Ps 137.7; Isa 34.5–17; Jer 49.7–22; Lam 4.21–22; Ob 1–14; Mal 1.2–5), which results in a particularly spiteful relationship between Judah and Edom; cf. Am 1.9. 25.13 My hand, God will act directly with Edom, not through an intermediary as was the case with Ammon and Moab. From Teman . . . to Dedan. The locations of both cities are uncertain, though Teman was probably not located on a border. 25.14 By the hand of my people, which seems to stand in contrast with v. 13. On according to my wrath; and they shall know my vengeance, says the Lord God.

Proclamation Against Philistia

15 Thus says the Lord God: Because with unending hostilities the Philistines acted in vengeance, and with malice of heart took revenge in destruction; 16therefore thus says the Lord God, I will stretch out my hand against the Philistines, cut off the Cherethites, and destroy the rest of the seacoast. 17I will execute great vengeance on them with wrathful punishments. Then they shall know that I am the LORD, when I lay my vengeance on them.

Proclamation Against Tyre

26 In the eleventh year, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: 2Mortal, because Tyre said concerning Jerusalem, "Aha, broken is the gateway of the peoples; it has swung open to me; I shall be replenished, now that it is wasted," 3therefore, thus says the Lord God: See, I am against you, O Tyre! I will hurl many nations against you, as the sea hurls its waves. 4 They shall destroy the walls of Tyre and break down its towers. I will scrape its soil from it and make it a bare rock. 5 It shall become, in the midst of the sea, a place for spreading nets. I have spoken, says the Lord God. It shall become plunder for the nations, 6 and its daughter-towns in the country shall be killed by the sword. Then they shall know that I am the LORD. 7 For thus says the Lord God: I will bring against Tyre from the north King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, king of kings, together with horses, chariots, cavalry, and a great and powerful army. 8 Your daughter-towns in the country he shall put to the sword. He shall set up a siege wall against you, cast up a ramp against you, and raise a roof of shields against you. 9 He shall direct the shock of his battering rams against your walls and break down your towers with his axes. 10 His horses shall be so many that their dust shall cover you. At the noise of cavalry, wheels, and chariots the demise of Edom, cf. 32.29. 25.15–17 Proclamation against Philistia. Cf. Jer 47, though there is less evidence for a Philistine nation as such in the early sixth century B.C.E. than there is for the other three territories.

26.1–28.19 Pronouncements against Tyre and its rulers. Tyre was one city-state, in contrast to the larger geographic units addressed in ch. 25. Its maritime trade and geographic remove just off the Phoenician coast made it a particularly prominent city. After defeating Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar laid siege to Tyre for thirteen years, though without obtaining a decisive victory (cf. 29.18). Ezekiel probably devotes so much attention to Tyre (and Egypt) because they, unlike Judah, were able to resist the instrument of God's punishment, Nebuchadnezzar and the Neo-Babylonians. 26.1–21 Four distinct oracles, vv. 2–6, 7–14, 15–18, 19–21, the last three of which are introduced by the same formula. 26.1 The eleventh year, probably of King Jehoiachin (see note on 1.2), which was 587 B.C.E., the year in which Jerusalem fell (cf. 33.21). 26.2–6 Indictment and sentence. 26.2 Ezekiel quotes Tyre's apparent delight at the destruction of Jerusalem as an indictment. Gateway reads "gateways" in the Hebrew. Whether singular or plural, the Tyrians refer to Judah as a commercial competitor, the absence of whom will enrich Tyre. 26.3 Many nations. Cf. the singular focus on Nebuchadnezzar in vv. 7–10. 26.5 Cf. 47.10 for imagery of spreading nets. 26.6 Daughter-towns, those cities, especially coastal, in Syro-Palestine over which Tyre exerted political and economic influence. 26.7–14 Destruction by Nebuchadnezzar. 26.7 Nebuchadrezzar, a more correct spelling of the Akkadian name which may be translated "May Nabu preserve my offspring": in the Bible more often "Nebuchadnezzar." King of kings, a royal title used throughout the ancient Near East as early as the second millennium B.C.E. 26.8 Unlike Nebuchadnezzar, Alexander the Great was able to build a ramp and siege wall to in the land of the living. 21 I will bring you to a dreadful end, and you shall be no more; though sought for, you will never be found again, says the Lord God.

Lamentation over Tyre

27 The word of the LORD came to me: 2 Now you, mortal, raise a lamentation over Tyre, 3 and say to Tyre, which sits at the entrance to the sea, merchant of the peoples on many coastlands,
Thus says the Lord God:

O Tyre, you have said,
"I am perfect in beauty."

conquer Tyre. 26.13 Cf. Am 5.23. 26.14a A repetition of imagery in the first oracle (vv. 4-5). 26.15-18 Lament described and intoned. 26.15 Cf. 27.26-36; 31.16. 26.16 Princes of the sea, either a mythological allusion or a reference to rulers of other coastal city-states who begin traditional lament practices. 26.17-18 Composed in the Hebrew qinah or lament rhythm, this short poem emphasizes the prior and present position of Tyre vis-à-vis the seas. 26.19-21 God proclaims to Tyre its final fate. The destruction of Tyre is viewed as a direct act of God, who manipulates the great waters, i.e., the primeval deep, against Tyre (cf. 31.4). 26.20 The Pit, the netherworld, abode of the dead; cf. 32.17-32; Pss 63.9; 139.15; Isa 44.23. Tyrians will live in the netherworld, thus allowing for a city not inhabited. The world below. Cf. Deut 32.22; Pss 86.13; 88.6; Lam 3.55. Land of the living. Cf. 32.23-27, 32.

27.1-36 Lamentation over Tyre, which uses the limping qinah rhythm in vv. 3-9, 25-36. A prose description of economic transactions interrupts the poem, which uses the primary metaphor of a large sailing ship. Ezekiel uses metaphors in other laments; see 19.1; 28.12; 32.3. 27.3 Entrance to the sea, i.e., a description from the perspective of those who live on land, which is consistent with a description of Tyre as a merchant of the peoples. Tyre's self-description of perfection causes a negative connotation that stands in contrast with vv. 4-9. 27.4-9 The ship described. 27.4 Your borders refers to the shape of the hull below the surface of the sea. Beauty. Cf. 28.12, 17. 27.5–6 Ezekiel stresses the variety of woods used for this masted galley. Such variety comes from diverse locales: Senir—the Anti-Lebanon, Lebanon, Bashan—east of the sea of Galilee in southern Syria, and Cyprus. Inlaid with ivory. The Hebrew is problematical. 27.7 Textiles on board—sails, ensigns, awnings—also stem from abroad. Elishah, another name for Cyprus. The trade attested to in vv. 5–9 underlines Tyre as merchant of the peoples (v. 3). 27.8 The crew came from Zemer (Hebrew Tyre), Arvad, and Sidon, Phoenician coastal cities north of Tyre (moving south to north). 27.8–9 Portions of these verses are problematical. 27.10–11 These verses turn to describe land-based military mercenaries and their armaments. Paras, Persia. Lud, Lydia. Put Libya. Arvad, Phoenicia. Helech, in Hebrew lit. “your army,” and Gamad are difficult. 27.12–25a This prose section provides a virtual catalogue of ancient Near Eastern international commerce, which begins and ends with Tarshish (vv. 12, 25a), a port (Tartessos) located in southern Spain and important for metal ore. Apart from this literary envelope, the toponyms move generally from the western Mediterranean to the eastern Mesopotamian environs, e.g., from western places like Javan (v. 13, Ionia), Tubal and Meshach (v. 13, Asia Minor), Beth-togarmah (v. 14, in Armenia), and Rhodes (v. 14, in the Aegean Sea) to eastern ones like Sheba (v. 23, the southern Arabian Peninsula), Asshur (v. 23, northern Mesopotamia), and Chilmad (v. 23, a reference to Media). You and your emphasize the central role of Tyre as an intermediary in these trade routes. 27.17 Judah and Israel provided agricultural goods. Minnith, if a place-name, lies outside Israelite territory (Judg 11.33). Wheat, oil, and honey are part of the standard inventory for the promised land; see, e.g., Deut 8.8. Hebrew pannag, translated millet, is uncertain; it may refer to a fig. Balm, resin from a tree; see Gen 37.25; 43.11; Jer 8.22; 46.11; 51.8.

cassia, and sweet cane were bartered for your merchandise. ²⁰Dedan traded with you in saddlecloths for riding. ²¹Arabia and all the princes of Kedar were your favored dealers in lambs, rams, and goats; in these they did business with you. ²²The merchants of Sheba and Raamah traded with you; they exchanged for your wares the best of all kinds of spices, and all precious stones, and gold. ²³Haran, Canneh, Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Asshur, and Chilmad traded with you. ²⁴These traded with you in choice garments, in clothes of blue and embroidered work, and in carpets of colored material, bound with cords and made secure; in these they traded with you.¹ ²⁵The ships of Tarshish traveled for you in your trade.

in the depths of the waters;
your merchandise and all your crew
have sunk with you.
- ³⁵ All the inhabitants of the
coastlands
are appalled at you;

afraid,
their faces are convulsed.
- ³⁶ The merchants among the peoples hiss at you;
you have come to a

Proclamation Against the King of Tyre

me: ²Mortal, say to the prince of Tyre, Thus says the Lord God:
Because your heart is proud

¹ Cn: Heb in your market ^m Tg Vg: Heb like

27.25b–36 The poem resumes, in virtual narrative form. 27.25b–27 The ship founders; the entire cargo and crew are lost. 27.26 The east wind, a destructive agent attested elsewhere (Ps 48.7, "as when an east wind shatters the ships of Tarshish"). Cf. Ezek 19.12; Jer 18.17. 27.28–36 The lament. Cf. 26.17–18. Poignantly, other mariners mourn the fate of those drowned. 27.32b The Hebrew is difficult. An alternate reading is, "Who like Tyre like such silence" or, preferably, "Who may be compared to Tyre?" 27.33–35 The prominence of royalty (kings) in such international trade as well as the role of the seas in the destruction of the ship is emphasized.

28.1–10 Proclamation of indictment (vv. 2–6) and sentence (vv. 7–10) against the king of Tyre. The fate of the city is personified through the figure of its prince or ruler. 28.2 Your heart is proud is elsewhere explicitly an affront to God

- and you have said, "I am a god;
I sit in the seat of the gods,
in the heart of the seas," yet you are but a mortal, and
no god,
though you compare your mind
with the mind of a god.
3 You are indeed wiser than Daniel;ⁿ
no secret is hidden from you; 4 by your wisdom and your understanding
you have amassed wealth
for yourself,
and have gathered gold and silver into your treasuries.
5 By your great wisdom in trade you have increased your wealth, and your heart has become proud in your wealth.
6 Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Because you compare your mind
with the mind of a god,
7 therefore, I will bring strangers
against you,
the most terrible of the nations;
they shall draw their swords against the beauty of your wisdom
and defile your splendor.
8 They shall thrust you down to
the Pit,
and you shall die a violent
death
in the heart of the seas.
9 Will you still say, "I am a god," in the presence of those who kill you,

- though you are but a mortal, and
no god,
in the hands of those who wound you?
10 You shall die the death of the uncircumcised
by the hand of foreigners;
for I have spoken, says the Lord God.

Lamentation over the King of Tyre

- 11 Moreover the word of the LORD came to me: 12 Mortal, raise a lamentation over the king of Tyre, and say to him,
Thus says the Lord God:
You were the signet of perfection,^o
full of wisdom and perfect in beauty.
13 You were in Eden, the garden
of God;
every precious stone was your
covering,
carnelian, chrysolite, and moonstone,
beryl, onyx, and jasper, sapphire,^p turquoise, and

and worked in gold were your they were prepared.

14 With an anointed cherub as guardian I placed you;^o

ⁿ Or, as otherwise read, Danel ^o Meaning of (Prov 16.5). The seat of the gods is related to Tyre's island setting. In Canaanite tradition, El, head of the Canaanite pantheon, is described in Canaanite epic texts as dwelling "at the springs of two rivers, amid the channels of the double watery deep." On such self-deification, cf. Isa 14.13–14. The deity's response echoes language in Isa 31.3 and introduces the motif of wisdom. 28.3 On Daniel, see note on 14.12–20. The legendary king Danel was not only righteous but also wise, a typical attribute of kings (see 1 Kings 3; Isa 11.2). However, Ezekiel admits that the prince was even wiser than Danel. 28.4–5 The working out of such wisdom results in vast wealth (cf. 1 Kings 10.14–22), which itself has engendered pride. 28.6 A recapitulation of the theme of self-deification (introduced in v. 2) and the conclusion of the indictment. 28.7 Cf. 26.7–12, which suggests that the strangers are the Neo-Babylonians. 28.8 The Pit. Cf. note on 26.20; 32.17–32. 28.10 The death of the uncircumcised, i.e., the fate of non-Israelites, particularly Mesopotamians, who did not practice the rite of circumcision, on which see 32.17–32. 28.11–19 Lamentation over the king of Tyre. The text is obscure at numerous points, though it seems clear Ezekiel attests a variant form of the Eden story that focuses on the expulsion of the king from the primal garden. 28.12 Signet, as in a royal signet ring. The initial perfection involves wisdom, beauty, and adornment. 28.13 Eden, here as in Gen 2.8, 10, is a place; cf. Gen 2.15. On the precious stones and metals, cf. Gen 2.11–12 and the description of the ephod, Ex 28.17–20. 28.14 The cherub functions here as a guardian of.

- you were on the holy mountain
of God;
you walked among the stones
of fire.
- 15 You were blameless in your ways from the day that you were
created,
until iniquity was found in you.
- 16 In the abundance of your trade you were filled with violence, and you sinned;
so I cast you as a profane thing
from the mountain of God, and the guardian cherub drove you out
from among the stones of fire.
- 17 Your heart was proud because of your beauty;
you corrupted your wisdom for the sake of your splendor.
I cast you to the ground;
I exposed you before kings,
to feast their eyes on you.
- 18 By the multitude of your
iniquities,
in the unrighteousness of your trade,
you profaned your sanctuaries.
So I brought out fire from within you;
it consumed you,
and I turned you to ashes on
the earth
in the sight of all who saw you.
- 19 All who know you among the
peoples
are appalled at you;
you have come to a dreadful end
and shall be no more forever.

Proclamation Against Sidon

20 The word of the LORD came to me: 21 Mortal, set your face toward Sidon, and prophecy against it, 22 and say, Thus says
the Lord God:

I am against you, O Sidon, and I will gain glory in your midst.

They shall know that I am
the LORD
when I execute judgments in it, and manifest my holiness in it;

23 for I will send pestilence into it, and bloodshed into its streets;
and the dead shall fall in its
midst,
by the sword that is against it on every side.

And they shall know that I am
the LORD.

24 The house of Israel shall no longer find a pricking brier or a piercing thorn among all their neighbors who have treated them with contempt. And they shall know that I am the Lord God.

Future Blessing for Israel

25 Thus says the Lord God: When I gather the house of Israel from the peoples among whom they are scattered, and manifest my holiness in them in the sight of the nations, then they shall settle on their own soil that I gave to my servant Jacob. 26 They shall live in safety in it, and shall build houses and plant vineyards.
They shall live in safety, when I execute judgments upon all their neighbors who have treated them with contempt.

not against, the human; cf. 10.2; especially Gen 3.24. The holy mountain of God, the divine dwelling place, upon which in this tradition the divine garden was located; cf. Isa 14.13; Ps 48.13. Stones of fire, possibly the aforementioned gems. 28.15–19 The imagery of expulsion focuses on removal from the mountain. 28.18 Instead of iniquity (v. 15), the poet now offers specific indictments: improper trade practices, defilement of sanctuaries. Punishment is multiple: being cast down, exposure, fire.

28.20–23 Pronouncement against Sidon, another Phoenician port, twenty-five miles north of Tyre. The two cities often occur as a formulaic pair, e.g., in Joel 3.4; Zech 9.2. The language is typical of other Ezekiel texts: I am against you (5.8), gain glory (39.13), execute judgments (5.10), pestilence (5.12). No specific reason is offered for the punishment of Sidon.

28.24–26 Conclusion to chs. 25–28. 28.24 The aforementioned Syro-Palestinian states are likened to briers and thorns, imagery used elsewhere to describe the pre-Israelite population of the land (Num 33.55; Josh 23.13) and as instruments of torture (Judg 8.7). 28.25–26 Oracle of return and renewal. God promises to bring back those who lived in exile, a theme elsewhere important to Ezekiel (11.17; 20.41; 34.13; 39.27). On living in safety, see chs. 34, 36. The imagery of restoration is primarily rural and agricultural; cf. Isa 65.21 on the motif of building houses and planting vineyards.

And they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

Proclamation Against Egypt

29 In the tenth year, in the tenth month, on the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, set your face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him and against all Egypt; ³speak, and say, Thus says the Lord God:

I am against you,
Pharaoh king of Egypt,
the great dragon sprawling
in the midst of its channels, saying, "My Nile is my own;
I made it for myself."

⁴ I will put hooks in your jaws, and make the fish of your channels stick to your scales.

I will draw you up from your channels,
with all the fish of your channels
sticking to your scales.

⁵ I will fling you into the wilderness,
you and all the fish of your
channels;
you shall fall in the open field,
and not be gathered and buried.

To the animals of the earth and to the birds of the air
I have given you as food.

⁶ Then all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know
that I am the LORD
because you^q were a staff of reed
to the house of Israel;

⁷ when they grasped you with the hand, you broke,
and tore all their shoulders;
and when they leaned on you,
you broke,
and made all their legs unsteady.^r

⁸ Therefore, thus says the Lord God:
I will bring a sword upon you, and will cut off from you human being and animal; ⁹and the land of Egypt shall be a desolation and a waste. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Because you^s said, "The Nile is mine, and I made it," ¹⁰therefore, I am against you, and against your channels, and I will make the land of Egypt an utter waste and desolation, from Migdol to Syene, as far as the border of Ethiopia.^t ¹¹No human foot shall pass through it, and no animal foot shall pass through it; it shall be uninhabited forty years. ¹²I will make the land of Egypt a desolation among desolated countries; and her cities shall be a desolation forty years among cities that are laid waste. I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries.

¹³ Further, thus says the Lord God:
At the end of forty years I will gather the Egyptians from the peoples among whom

29.1–32.32 Seven pronouncements against Egypt and its rulers. As with his contemporary Jeremiah, Ezekiel addresses Egypt more than any other foreign state. Like Tyre, Egypt had remained outside the sway of God's punitive force, the Neo-Babylonians; hence they, along with Israel, deserved judgment. All the pronouncements except 30.1–19 are prefaced by a date formula, which refers to Jehoiachin's regnal years. 29.1–16 On January 7, 587 B.C.E. (tenth year . . . month, v. 1; see note on 1.2), Hophra was pharaoh in Egypt. 29.3–7 A poem in which Pharaoh is likened to a great dragon, probably an allusion to a Nile crocodile. Because of boasting, Pharaoh will be captured and along with others—the fish of your channels (the various channels of the Nile)—will be destroyed. 29.5 Not . . . buried, a violation of standard pharaonic funerary practice. 29.6 A staff of reed, a new image, that of the bulrush (cf. Isa 36.6), to depict the pharaoh. 29.7 When they grasped you, a reference to Judah's unsuccessful alliance with Egypt against the Babylonians (cf. Jer 37). 29.8–9a Language of judgment typical of Ezekiel (cf. 14.13; 25.13). 29.9b–16 Pharaoh's boast (v. 3) is repeated, thereby allowing another statement of judgment that highlights the extent of destruction. Migdol, though the site is unknown, is probably in the Nile Delta region; Syene is just north of the first cataract on the Nile; from Migdol to Syene is therefore a merism signifying the entire land (cf. Hebrew, "from Dan to Beer-sheba"). Ethiopia (Hebrew, "Cush"), another reference to the southern border. 29.11 Forty years, a traditional number of years for national exile; cf. 4.6; Num 14.33. 29.13–16 Just as with Israel (11.17; 20.34;

they were scattered; ¹⁴and I will restore the fortunes of Egypt, and bring them back to the land of Pathros, the land of their origin; and there they shall be a lowly kingdom. ¹⁵It shall be the most lowly of the kingdoms, and never again exalt itself above the nations; and I will make them so small that they will never again rule over the nations. ¹⁶The Egyptians^u shall never again be the reliance of the house of Israel; they will recall their iniquity, when they turned to them for aid. Then they shall know that I am the Lord God.

Babylonia Will Plunder Egypt

¹⁷ In the twenty-seventh year, in the first month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁸Mortal, King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon made his army labor hard against Tyre; every head was made bald and every shoulder was rubbed bare; yet neither he nor his army got anything from Tyre to pay for the labor that he had expended against it. ¹⁹Therefore thus says the Lord God: I will give the land of Egypt to King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon; and he shall carry off its wealth and despoil it and plunder it; and it shall be the wages for his army. ²⁰I have given him the land of Egypt as his payment for which he labored, because they worked for me, says the Lord God.

²¹ On that day I will cause a horn to sprout up for the house of Israel, and I will open your lips among them. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Lamentation for Egypt

30 The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, prophesy, and say, Thus says the Lord God:

28.25), God will return Egypt to its land. 29.14 Pathros, a reference to Upper or southern Egypt, i.e., Egypt will be limited, as a lowly kingdom, to a smaller territory than it possessed under Hophra. Though a nation, Egypt will no longer be an empire; cf. Jer 46.26.

29.17–21 The second pronouncement is prefaced by the latest date in the book, later than the pronouncements that follow it, April 26, 571 B.C.E. (v. 1; see note on 1.2). 29.18 Ezekiel refers to Nebuchadnezzar's thirteen-year siege against Tyre, which ended ca. 573 B.C.E. This verse makes it clear that Nebuchadnezzar did not despoil Tyre (cf. 26.7–14). 29.19–20 Since Nebuchadnezzar had worked for God and without sufficient reward, he will be permitted to attack Egypt instead. Such an attack was launched in 568 B.C.E., again without conclusive results. 29.21 A horn. Cf. Ps 132.17, which suggests that the promise involves restoration of Davidic kingship. Open your lips, a reference to exercise of the prophetic role; cf. 16.63.

30.1–19 The third, and undated, pronouncement, which is itself made up of several distinct utterances (vv. 2–9, 10–12, 13–19). 30.2–9 By commencing with Wail, a plural imperative, the prophet admonishes his audience to begin lamenting the destruction of Egypt. 30.3 The day of the LORD. Cf. other prophetic texts in which God's day is one of doom and destruction (Am 5.18; Zeph 1.14–18). A day of clouds, one in which the darkness of God's day is envisioned (Joel 2.2; Zeph 1.15). 30.4 Here Ethiopia is understood to be part of Egypt, as in Isa 20.3, 5. 30.5 With the exception of all Arabia and the people of the allied land, the other four names rhyme in Hebrew. On Put, Lud, see note on 27.10–11. Them, i.e., the Egyptians. - 12 I will dry up the channels, and will sell the land into the hand of evildoers;
I will bring desolation upon the land and everything in it
by the hand of foreigners;
I the Lord have spoken.
- 13 Thus says the Lord God:
I will destroy the idols and put an end to the images in Memphis;
there shall no longer be a prince in the land of Egypt;
so I will put fear in the land
of Egypt.
- 14 I will make Pathros a desolation,
and will set fire to Zoan, and will execute acts of judgment on Thebes.
- 15 I will pour my wrath upon Pelusium,
the stronghold of Egypt,
and cut off the hordes of Thebes.
- 16 I will set fire to Egypt; Pelusium shall be in great agony;
Thebes shall be breached, and Memphis face adversaries by day.
- 17 The young men of On and of Pi-beseth shall fall by
the sword;
and the cities themselves^b shall go into captivity.
- 18 At Tehaphnehes the day shall be dark,
when I break there the dominion of Egypt,
and its proud might shall come to
an end;
the city^c shall be covered by
a cloud,
and its daughter-towns shall go into captivity.

who will fall, perhaps those identified in v. 5. 30.9 As with v. 5, this prose verse appears intrusive; and both verses emphasize that nations other than Egypt will be affected on this terrible day. The Hebrew does not include doom. Cf. Isa 18.2, which also refers to divine emissaries arriving via ship. 30.10–12 Again (29.18–20), Ezekiel identifies Nebuchadrezzar as the one designated by God, i.e., Nebuchadnezzar is to be brought in to destroy Egypt; cf. 26.7–14. 30.12 I, God, the ultimate author of Egypt's destruction. The drying up of the Nile and sale of Egyptian land are new motifs. 30.13–19 Ezekiel cites various place-names to make God's judgment geographically specific. The forms of destruction remain general. Moreover, there is no apparent order to the listings. Many of the cities were associated with specific gods, e.g., On (v. 17) with Re-

Atum, Pi-beseth (v. 17) with Bastis. Apart from v. 13, there are no overt religious polemics. 30.13 Memphis, which lies about fifteen miles south of Cairo, was the early capital and largest city in Egypt during most of its history. Both religious images (though the words for idols and images are uncertain and may refer to humans) and leaders (a prince) will be destroyed. 30.14 Pathros, or "land of Pathros" (so reads the Greek manuscript tradition); see note on 29.14. Zoan, a city (probably Avaris [Greek Tanis]) in the eastern Nile Delta. Thebes, the capital of Egypt during much of its history, located in Middle Egypt. 30.15 Pelusim is near Zoan in the northeast Delta. 30.17 On, Heliopolis, only six miles northeast of Cairo. Pibeseth, Bubastis, in the eastern Delta. 30.18 Tehaphnehes, near the northern shore of the Suez Gulf.

- 19 Thus I will execute acts of judgment on Egypt.
Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Proclamation Against Pharaoh

20 In the eleventh year, in the first month, on the seventh day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: 21 Mortal, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt; it has not been bound up for healing or wrapped with a bandage, so that it may become strong to wield the sword. 22 Therefore thus says the Lord God: I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will break his arms, both the strong arm and the one that was broken; and I will make the sword fall from his hand. 23 I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them throughout the lands. 24 I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand; but I will break the arms of Pharaoh, and he will groan before him with the groans of one mortally wounded. 25 I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, but the arms of Pharaoh shall fall. And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon. He shall stretch it out against the land of Egypt, 26 and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them throughout the countries. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

The Lofty Cedar

31 In the eleventh year, in the third month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: 2 Mortal, say to Pharaoh king of Egypt and to his hordes:

- Whom are you like in your greatness?
3 Consider Assyria, a cedar of Lebanon, with fair branches and forest shade, and of great height, its top among the clouds.^d
4 The waters nourished it, the deep made it grow tall, making its rivers flow^e around the place it was planted, sending forth its streams to all the trees of the field.
5 So it towered high above all the trees of the field; its boughs grew large and its branches long, from abundant water in its shoots.
6 All the birds of the air made their nests in its boughs; under its branches all the animals of the field gave birth to their young; and in its shade all great nations lived.

30.20–26 The fourth pronouncement. The date in v. 20 is April 29, 587 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2). 30.21 The bodily imagery probably refers to a military defeat of Hophra by Nebuchadnezzar, when the pharaoh came to Judah's aid during the siege of Jerusalem by the Babylonians (Jer 37.5). The defeat probably occurred in 588 B.C.E. 30.23–24 The historical allusion sets the stage for an announcement that both Hophra's arms will be broken, an act that symbolizes total defeat for Egypt (mortally wounded). Remaining with the "arm" imagery, God will strengthen Nebuchadnezzar's arms. 30.26 Cf. 29.12.

31.1–18 The fifth pronouncement. The date in v. 1 is June 21, 587 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2). This pronouncement utilizes the imagery of a cedar from Lebanon in a poem, vv. 2b–9, and two interpretations, vv. 10–14, 15–18. As with the first pronouncement, the fifth is directed to Pharaoh (vv. 2, 18), though apart from these verses there is no explicit reference to Egypt. Cf. the RSV translation in vv. 11–13, 15–17, where the verbs are translated in the future tense. The NRSV by contrast reads them correctly as past tense. 31.2 Cf. the analogous question in v. 18. 31.3 Cf. the RSV's conjectural translation, "Behold I will liken you," to the NRSV's translation of the Hebrew, Consider Assyria. However, the word translated Assyria may result from a scribal error in a word meaning "cypress." The tree is greater than life; some have termed it a cosmic or world tree, with its top in the clouds (cf. Gen 11.4) and its roots in the primeval deep. Cf. 17.23; Dan 4; Mk 4.32; and the tree of life, Gen 2–3. 31.4 The deep. See Gen 1.2; 7.11; 8.2; 49.25; Deut 33.13; Isa 51.9–11. The tree is so important that the poet may speak of its rivers. 31.5 Towered and branches present Aramaic spellings. 31.6 The poet uses hyperbole, all the birds, all the animals, all great nations, to reinforce the cosmic scale of this tree. It

- 7 It was beautiful in its greatness, in the length of its branches;
for its roots went down to abundant water.
- 8 The cedars in the garden of God
could not rival it, nor the fir trees equal its boughs;
the plane trees were as nothing compared with its branches;
no tree in the garden of God was like it in beauty.
- 9 I made it beautiful
with its mass of branches, the envy of all the trees of Eden that were in the garden of God.
- 10 Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Because it^f towered high and set its top among the clouds,^g and its heart was proud of its height, ¹¹I gave it into the hand of the prince of the nations; he has dealt with it as its wickedness deserves. I have cast it out. ¹²Foreigners from the most terrible of the nations have cut it down and left it. On the mountains and in all the valleys its branches have fallen, and its boughs lie broken in all the watercourses of the land; and all the peoples of the earth went away from its shade and left it.
- 13 On its fallen trunk settle
all the birds of the air, and among its boughs lodge
all the wild animals.
- 14 All this is in order that no trees by the waters may grow to lofty height or set their tops among the clouds,^g and that no trees that drink water may reach up to them in height.

For all of them are handed over to death,
to the world below;
along with all mortals,
with those who go down to
the Pit.

15 Thus says the Lord God: On the day it went down to Sheol I closed the deep over it and covered it; I restrained its rivers, and its mighty waters were checked. I clothed Lebanon in gloom for it, and all the trees of the field fainted because of it. ¹⁶I made the nations quake at the sound of its fall, when I cast it down to Sheol with those who go down to the Pit; and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that were well watered, were consoled in the world below.
¹⁷They also went down to Sheol with it, to those killed by the sword, along with its allies,^h those who lived in its shade
among the nations.

18 Which among the trees of Eden was like you in glory and in greatness?
Now you shall be brought down with the trees of Eden to the world below; you shall lie among the uncircumcised, with those who are killed by the sword. This is Pharaoh and all his horde, says the Lord God.

provides protection for birthing and living; cf. 17.23. 31.7 Beautiful in its greatness. Cf. Gen 3.6 for a tree that was "a delight to the eyes." 31.8–9 A new tone of rivalry and envy between the great tree and the cedars in the garden of God. This element suggests the great tree was not located in the garden; see v. 18. Moreover, 17.23 speaks of a tree being planted on the mountain of God. Plane trees, perhaps a form of pine; cf. Isa 41.19. 31.9 God is the explicit creator of this tree. 31.10–14 Indictment and sentence passed. 31.10 The tree ("you" in the Hebrew, though other manuscript traditions read it) took inappropriate pride in its stature. Cf. 28.17 for similar language applied to the king of Tyre. 31.11 The prince of the nations, lit. "a ram," which probably refers to Nebuchadnezzar. 31.12 Foreigners, the Neo-Babylonians, cut down the tree, leaving both timber and detritus. 31.13 Ironically, the tree still appears to provide shelter for birds and animals, though people have left (v. 12). All taint of civilization has disappeared. 31.14 An almost sermonic conclusion for the benefit of other "trees." 31.14b This verse appears related to vv. 15–18. 31.15–18 Fate in the underworld; cf. 26.19–21; 28.8; 32.17–32. 31.15–16 I closed the deep over it and covered it. Cf. the Greek manuscript tradition and the rsv translation, "I will make the deep mourn for it." The tree, as would a person, descends into Sheol, the netherworld (see also 32.21, 27), which could be viewed as a watery abyss. God controls the watery powers (cf. Gen 8.2). Whereas the trees of the field fainted, the trees of Eden apparently are also in Sheol and are comforted since they share the same fate as that of the great tree. 31.17 Hebrew text is problematical here. 31.18 The question now asks the pharaoh for a comparison with the trees of Eden; cf. 28.10 on the motif of the uncircumcised.

Lamentation over Pharaoh and Egypt

32 In the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me:
 2 Mortal, raise a lamentation over Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say to him:

You consider yourself a lion
 among the nations,
 but you are like a dragon in
 the seas;
 you thrash about in your streams, trouble the water with your feet,
 and foul yourⁱ streams.

3 Thus says the Lord God:
 In an assembly of many peoples
 I will throw my net over you;
 and I^j will haul you up in my dragnet.

4 I will throw you on the ground, on the open field I will fling you,
 and will cause all the birds of the air to settle on you, and I will let the wild animals of the whole earth gorge themselves with you.

5 I will strew your flesh on the
 mountains,
 and fill the valleys with your carcass.^k

6 I will drench the land with your flowing blood
 up to the mountains, and the watercourses will be filled with you.

7 When I blot you out, I will cover
 the heavens,
 and make their stars dark;
 I will cover the sun with a cloud,

and the moon shall not give its light.

8 All the shining lights of the heavens
 I will darken above you,
 and put darkness on your land,
 says the Lord God.

9 I will trouble the hearts of many
 peoples,
 as I carry you captive^l among
 the nations,
 into countries you have not known.

10 I will make many peoples appalled at you;
 their kings shall shudder
 because of you.
 When I brandish my sword
 before them,
 they shall tremble every moment
 for their lives, each one of them, on the day of your downfall.

11 For thus says the Lord God:
 The sword of the king of Babylon shall come against you.

12 I will cause your hordes to fall
 by the swords of mighty ones, all of them most terrible among
 the nations.

They shall bring to ruin the pride
 of Egypt,
 and all its hordes shall perish.

13 I will destroy all its livestock from beside abundant waters;
 and no human foot shall trouble
 them any more,

32.1–16 The sixth pronouncement, March 3, 586 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2). Vv. 2, 16 suggest that these verses are one lament; cf. ch. 19. However, only v. 2 contains the language and form of lament. Other sections (vv. 3–8, 9–10, 11–14, 15) are oracular utterances. 32.2 Ezekiel addresses Pharaoh directly and likens him to a sea dragon (not the crocodile as in 29.3), instead of the self-proffered and typical royal heraldic symbol, the lion. The parallel nouns seas and streams connote mythic waters; cf. 31.4. The lament functions to indict the pharaoh for contaminating all waters. 32.3–8 Judgment on the dragon. 32.3 My net may allude to the archetypal combat, attested in the Babylonian Enuma Elish, when Marduk netted and then killed Tiamat, the sea dragon.

32.4–6 A vivid depiction of the fate of the dragon's carcass; cf. 29.5. The immense scale—animals of the whole earth, fill the valleys—demonstrate the mythic proportions of the dragon that has been slain; cf. Isa 51.9. 32.7–8 The motif of darkness suggests that this is the day of the Lord; cf. 30.3; Joel 2.1–2; 3.15; Zeph 1.15, though Ezek 32.8 here recalls the plague of darkness (Ex 10.21–29). 32.9–10 Pharaoh (or Egypt), now as captive, will be paraded among various nations, perhaps a reference to exile; cf. 29.12–13. 32.11 The king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar; cf. 29.19. 32.12 Mighty ones may be translated “warriors”; cf. 32.21, 27. 32.13–14 On the motif of turbid versus clear water, cf. v. 2. Cf. 29.11 for similar

The women of the nations shall

Over Egypt and all its hordes they shall chant it,
says the Lord God.

Dirge over Egypt

- 17 In the twelfth year, in the first month,^m on the fifteenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me:
- 18 Mortal, wail over the hordes
of Egypt,
and send them down,
with Egyptⁿ and the daughters of majestic nations,
to the world below,
with those who go down to
the Pit.
- 19 "Whom do you surpass in beauty?

Go down! Be laid to rest with the uncircumcised!"

20 They shall fall among those who are killed by the sword. Egypt^o has been handed over to the sword; carry away both it and its hordes. 21 The mighty chiefs shall speak of them, with their helpers, out of the midst of Sheol: "They have come down, they lie still, the uncircumcised, killed by the sword."

22 Assyria is there, and all its company, their graves all around it, all of them killed, fallen by the sword. 23 Their graves are set in the uttermost parts of the Pit. Its company is all around its grave, all of them killed, fallen by the sword, who spread terror in the land of the living.

24 Elam is there, and all its hordes around its grave; all of them killed, fallen by the sword, who went down uncircumcised into the world below, who spread terror in the land of the living. They bear their shame with those who go down to the Pit. 25 They have made Elamⁿ a bed among the slain with all its hordes, their graves all around it, all of them uncircumcised, killed by the sword; for terror of them was spread in the land of the living, and they bear their shame with those who go down to the Pit; they are placed among the slain.

26 Meshech and Tubal are there, and all their multitude, their graves all around them, all of them uncircumcised, killed by the sword; for they spread terror in the imagery of desolation. 32.15 A final and summary saying, which includes language typical of Ezekiel. 32.16 The women of the nations, apparently women regularly undertook the role of public lamentation; see similarly Jer 9.17–18.

32.17–32 The seventh pronouncement, April 27, 586 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2), depicts the demography of the Pit or Sheol, to which Pharaoh and his army will descend (cf. note on 26.20).
32.18 Wail, a word different from "lamentation" (v. 16); cf. Jer 9.10, 17–19. Ezekiel not only is to wail; the utterance is performative—it will send them down. With Egypt . . . below. The Hebrew is difficult; one may translate "majestic nations have brought her down to the world below." 32.19–20 V. 19 is the beginning of the song of wailing. If one includes the first three Hebrew words of v. 20, lit. "in the midst of those killed by the sword," with v. 19, one discovers that the Pit is populated with the uncircumcised and those who suffer a violent death (in distinction from those who, as a common biblical formula says, "go down to peace in Sheol"). Egypt is personified in the masculine singular in the Hebrew, translated it here. One infers that in the netherworld there is a separate place (the Pit?) for the unclean, the nations listed here. 32.21 Mighty chiefs could be translated "mighty gods," an ironic reference to minor deities in the underworld. 32.22–23 The first in a series of nations who are already in the netherworld, Assyria was defeated at Nineveh by the Babylonians (and Medes) in 612 B.C.E. All around it, or simply "round its grave." Uttermost parts. Cf. Isa 14.15. 32.24–25 Elam, an empire just to the east of Babylonia, was defeated decisively by the Assyrians in the mid-seventh century B.C.E. 32.26–28 Meshech and Tubal, lit. "Meshech-Tubal," the area of Asia Minor, land of the living. ²⁷And they do not lie with the fallen warriors of long ago^p who went down to Sheol with their weapons of war, whose swords were laid under their heads, and whose shields^q are upon their bones; for the terror of the warriors was in the land of the living. ²⁸So you shall be broken and lie among the uncircumcised, with those who are killed by the sword.

²⁹ Edom is there, its kings and all its princes, who for all their might are laid with those who are killed by the sword; they lie with the uncircumcised, with those who go down to the Pit.

³⁰ The princes of the north are there, all of them, and all the Sidonians, who have gone down in shame with the slain, for all the terror that they caused by their might; they lie uncircumcised with those who are killed by the sword, and bear their shame with those who go down to the Pit.

³¹ When Pharaoh sees them, he will be consoled for all his hordes—Pharaoh and all his army, killed by the sword, says the Lord God. ³²For he^r spread terror in the land of the living; therefore he shall be laid to rest among the uncircumcised, with those who are slain by the sword—Pharaoh and all his multitude, says the Lord God.

Ezekiel, Israel's Sentry

33 The word of the LORD came to me: ²O Mortal, speak to your people and say to them, If I bring the sword upon a land, and the people of the land take one of their number as their sentinel; ³and if the sentinel sees the sword coming upon the land and blows the trumpet and warns the people; ⁴then if any who hear the sound of the trumpet do not take warning, and the sword comes and takes them away, their blood shall be upon their own heads. ⁵They heard the sound of the trumpet and did not take warning; their blood shall be upon themselves. But if they had taken warning, they would have saved their lives. ⁶But if the sentinel sees the sword coming and does not blow the trumpet, so that the people are not warned, and the sword comes and takes any of them, they are taken away in their iniquity, but their blood I will require at the sentinel's hand.

⁷ So you, mortal, I have made a sentinel for the house of Israel; whenever you hear a word from my mouth, you shall give them warning from me. ⁸If I say to the wicked, "O wicked ones, you shall surely die," and you do not speak to warn the wicked to turn from their ways, the wicked shall die in their iniquity, but their blood I will require at your hand. ⁹But if you warn the wicked to turn from their ways, and they do not turn from their ways, the wicked shall die in their iniquity, but you will have saved your life.

God's Justice and Mercy

though the specific nation is uncertain (cf. 27.13). 32.27 The honorable burials of ancient military heroes; cf. Gen 10.8–9. 32.29–30 Syro-Palestinian groups in the Pit: Edom (cf. 25.12–14); princes of the north (Phoenician rulers?); Sidonians (28.20–23). 32.31–32 Pharaoh consoled by his colleagues in the Pit (31.16).

spond. Blood . . . upon their own heads. Cf. 17.19. 33.6 The case in which the sentinel does not sound the alarm. In both this case and the previous one (vv. 2–5), the people die. Their blood I will require. The Hebrew uses a parallel but different term for "require" in v. 8; cf. 3.18. The implication is that God will avenge the death of the person who had not been warned. 33.7–9 An oracle to Ezekiel in which two more cases are adduced. In v. 8 the wicked are not warned. In v. 9 the wicked are warned, but do not turn. Again, in both cases, the wicked die. You shall surely die, the pronouncement of a legal death sentence; cf. Gen 2.17; 20.7; 1 Sam 14.44; 22.16. 33.10–20 God responds to the people's plight; see similarly ch. 18. 33.10 As in ch. 18, the section begins with a quotation from the people, which, however, focuses on the sins of the present generation, we waste away because of them; how then can we live?" ¹¹Say to them, As I live, says the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from their ways and live; turn back, turn back from your evil ways; for why will you die, O house of Israel? ¹²And you, mortal, say to your people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not save them when they transgress; and as for the wickedness of the wicked, it shall not make them stumble when they turn from their wickedness; and the righteous shall not be able to live by their righteousness^s when they sin. ¹³Though I say to the righteous that they shall surely live, yet if they trust in their righteousness and commit iniquity, none of their righteous deeds shall be remembered; but in the iniquity that they have committed they shall die. ¹⁴Again, though I say to the wicked, "You shall surely die," yet if they turn from their sin and do what is lawful and right — ¹⁵if the wicked restore the pledge, give back what they have taken by robbery, and walk in the statutes of life, committing no iniquity — they shall surely live, they shall not die. ¹⁶None of the sins that they have committed shall be remembered against them; they have done what is lawful and right, they shall surely live.

¹⁷Yet your people say, "The way of the Lord is not just," when it is their own way that is not just. ¹⁸When the righteous turn from their righteousness, and commit iniquity, they shall die for it. ¹⁹And when the wicked turn from their wickedness, and do what is lawful and right, they shall live by it. ²⁰Yet you say, "The way of the Lord is not just." O house of Israel, I will judge all of you according to your ways!

The Fall of Jerusalem

²¹In the twelfth year of our exile, in the tenth month, on the fifth day of the month, someone who had escaped from Jerusalem came to me and said, "The city has fallen." ²²Now the hand of the LORD had been upon me the evening before the fugitive came; but he had opened my mouth by the time the fugitive came to me in the morning; so my mouth was opened, and I was no longer unable to speak.

The Survivors in Judah

²³The word of the LORD came to me: ²⁴Mortal, the inhabitants of these waste places in the land of Israel keep saying, "Abraham was only one man, yet he got possession of the land; but we are many; the land is surely given us to possess." ²⁵Therefore say to them, Thus says the Lord God: You eat flesh with the blood, and lift up your eyes to your idols, and shed blood; shall you then possess the land? ²⁶You depend on your swords, you commit abominations, and each of you defiles his neighbor's wife; shall you then possess the land? ²⁷Say this to them, Thus says the Lord God: As I live, surely those who are in the waste places shall fall by the sword; and those who are in the open field I will give to the wild animals to be devoured; and those who are in strongholds and in caves shall die by pestilence. ²⁸I will make the land a desolation and a waste, and its proud might shall come to an end; and the mountains of Israel shall be so desolate that no one will pass through. ²⁹Then they shall know that I am the LORD, when I have made the land a desolation and a waste because of

The issue is one of theodicy or God's justice. 33.21–22 Twelfth year ... month, January 19, 585 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2), the day on which news of Jerusalem's fall came to Ezekiel in exile. Unable to speak. Cf. 24.15–27 on the issue of Ezekiel's dumbness. The hand of the LORD, a reference to spirit possession, which may have also involved lack of speech; cf. 1.3. 33.23–29 Judahites in the land. As with 11.14–16, the issue involves claims to land ownership in Judah. The leitmotif waste characterizes the land after it had been devastated by the Babylonians. 33.24 A proverbial saying, quite different from the people's rationale in 11.15. 33.25–26 Specific ritual and ethical indictments of those who live in Judah. 33.27 The punishments are typical of Ezekiel (5.12; 7.15; 14.15–19). 33.28–29 The land, which had already been destroyed, might suffer further devastation; cf. 6.14. The people in the land have lost their claim to that territory because all their abominations that they have committed.

30 As for you, mortal, your people who talk together about you by the walls, and at the doors of the houses, say to one another, each to a neighbor, "Come and hear what the word is that comes from the LORD." ³¹They come to you as people come, and they sit before you as my people, and they hear your words, but they will not obey them. For flattery is on their lips, but their heart is set on their gain. ³²To them you are like a singer of love songs,^u one who has a beautiful voice and plays well on an instrument; they hear what you say, but they will not do it. ³³When this comes—and come it will!—then they shall know that a prophet has been among them.

Israel's False Shepherds

34 The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel: prophesy, and say to them—to the shepherds: Thus says the Lord GOD: Ah, you shepherds of Israel who have been feeding yourselves! Should not shepherds feed the sheep? ³You eat the fat, you clothe yourselves with the wool, you slaughter the fatlings; but you do not feed the sheep. ⁴You have not strengthened the weak, you have not healed the sick, you have not bound up the injured, you have not brought back the strayed, you have not sought the lost, but with force and harshness you have ruled them. ⁵So they were scattered, because there was no shepherd; and scattered, they became food for all the wild animals. ⁶My sheep were scattered, they wandered over all the mountains and on every high hill; my sheep were scattered over all the face of the earth, with no one to search or seek for them.

⁷ Therefore, you shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: ⁸As I live, says the Lord GOD, because my sheep have become a prey, and my sheep have become food for all the wild animals, since there was no shepherd; and because my shepherds have not searched for my sheep, but the shepherds have fed themselves, and have not fed my sheep; ⁹therefore, you shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: ¹⁰Thus says the Lord GOD, I am against the shepherds; and I will demand my sheep at their hand, and put a stop to their feeding the sheep; no longer shall the shepherds feed themselves. I will rescue my sheep from their mouths, so that they may not be food for them.

God, the True Shepherd

¹¹ For thus says the Lord GOD: I myself will search for my sheep, and will seek them out. ¹²As shepherds seek out their flocks when they are among their scattered sheep, so I will seek out my sheep. I will rescue them from all the places to

of all their abominations. 33.30–33 Judahites in exile. 33.30 Now those in Babylon are quoted, providing the rationale for gatherings attested in 8.1; 14.1; 20.1. 33.31 They come . . . as people come means "they come in groups." As my people, i.e., as a religious assembly: cf. 37.12. 33.33 Cf. 2.5. Vv. 31–33 are related to 33.1–9, since they portray a prophet functioning as sentinel and the people not heeding his words.

34.1–31 The structure of this chapter devoted to shepherds is complex. Two primary sections (vv. 1–16, 17–31) may be subdivided further. 34.1–16 The first half of the chapter focuses primarily on shepherds, a symbol for kings throughout the ancient Near East, including Israel. 34.1–10 A woe oracle. Ah may be translated "woe." Neglect of duties is the primary indictment; all are articulated using the metaphoric sphere of the shepherd's life. 34.3 Fat. The Greek manuscript tradition reads "milk." Not all the action in this verse appears improper. 34.4 Specific acts of omission are cited. 34.5–6 Because of improper care, the flock was scattered, attacked, and dispersed in dangerous territory. My sheep. God owns the flock. All the face of the earth, perhaps a hyperbolic description of exile, which included Egypt as well as Babylon. 34.7–8 These verses seem intrusive. V. 7 duplicates v. 9. 34.8 A shift to a third-person address about my shepherds. 34.9–10 A judgment upon the shepherds. God will reclaim the flock and rescue them. Concern for the well-being of the sheep appears more prominent than does punishment of the shepherds. 34.11–15 God restores the flock, places them in their own land (v. 13), and performs properly the role of shepherd. 34.12 When they are among, lit. "when he is among"; the Hebrew is awkward. Day of clouds and which they have been scattered on a day of clouds and thick darkness. ¹³I will bring them out from the peoples and gather them from the countries, and will bring them into their own land; and I will feed them on the mountains of Israel, by the watercourses, and in all the inhabited parts of the land. ¹⁴I will feed them with good pasture, and the mountain heights of Israel shall be their pasture; there they shall lie down in good grazing land, and they shall feed on rich pasture on the mountains of Israel. ¹⁵I myself will be the shepherd of my sheep, and I will make them lie down, says the Lord God. ¹⁶I will seek the lost, and I will bring back the strayed, and I will bind up the injured, and I will strengthen the weak, but the fat and the strong I will destroy. I will feed them with justice.

¹⁷ As for you, my flock, thus says the Lord God: I shall judge between sheep and sheep, between rams and goats: ¹⁸Is it not enough for you to feed on the good pasture, but you must tread down with your feet the rest of your pasture? When you drink of clear water, must you foul the rest with your feet? ¹⁹And must my sheep eat what you have trodden with your feet, and drink what you have fouled with your feet?

²⁰ Therefore, thus says the Lord God to them: I myself will judge between the fat sheep and the lean sheep. ²¹Because you pushed with flank and shoulder, and butted at all the weak animals with your horns until you scattered them far and wide, ²²I will save my flock, and they shall no longer be ravaged; and I will judge between sheep and sheep.

²³ I will set up over them one shepherd, my servant David, and he shall feed them: he shall feed them and be their shepherd. ²⁴And I, the LORD, will be their God, and my servant David shall be prince among them; I, the LORD, have spoken.

thick darkness, the day of the Lord, which has already transpired; cf. 30.3. 34.14 See similarly Ps 23. 34.16 A verse transitional between vv. 1–15 and vv. 17–31. I will destroy foreshadows the language of judgment in vv. 17–22. 34.17–30 Various sayings concerning the proper administration of the flock by God. 34.17–19 God addresses the flock, which is made up of diverse animals. 34.18–19 Questions that interrogate the flock for feeding and drinking in ways that make it difficult for all the flock to eat and drink. 34.19 My sheep . . . you, i.e., a distinction within the flock. 34.20–21 Judgment ensues, though in what it consists is unclear. Physical condition (fat versus lean), which results from the behavior described in vv. 18–19, provides the criterion for judgment. 34.21 You, apparently the fat sheep. 34.22 Saving and judging the flock are interdependent; cf. v. 10. 34.23–24 A member of the Davidic line will function as shepherd, though as prince (cf. 44.1–3), not as king. My servant, a typical designation of David (e.g., 2 Sam 3.18). On a future David, cf. Hos 3.5; Jer 30.9. One shepherd, not multiple rulers, as was the case during the period 597–587 B.C.E. when Jehoiachin was in exile and Zedekiah on the throne in Judah; cf. 37.19. 34.25–30 A covenant of peace. The blessings that conclude the so-called Holiness code (Lev 26.4–6) provide striking parallels to the weal depicted here; cf. Ezek 16.60; 37.26; Isa 54.10. The covenant obligations devolve on God. 34.26 My hill, probably a reference to Zion. 34.31 A concluding pronouncement using flock and shepherd imagery to convey the reality of a covenant relationship; cf. 11.20; 14.11.

Judgment on Mount Seir

35 The word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, set your face against Mount Seir, and prophesy against it, ³and say to it, Thus says the Lord God:

I am against you, Mount Seir;
I stretch out my hand
against you
to make you a desolation and
a waste.

⁴ I lay your towns in ruins;
you shall become a desolation, and you shall know that I am
the LORD.

⁵Because you cherished an ancient enmity, and gave over the people of Israel to the power of the sword at the time of their calamity, at the time of their final punishment; ⁶therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, I will prepare you for blood, and blood shall pursue you; since you did not hate bloodshed, bloodshed shall pursue you. ⁷I will make Mount Seir a waste and a desolation; and I will cut off from it all who come and go. ⁸I will fill its mountains with the slain; on your hills and in your valleys and in all your watercourses those killed with the sword shall fall. ⁹I will make you a perpetual desolation, and your cities shall never be inhabited. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

¹⁰ Because you said, "These two nations and these two countries shall be mine, and we will take possession of them,"—although the LORD was there—¹¹therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, I will deal with you according to the anger and envy that you showed because of your hatred against them; and I will make myself known among you," when I judge you. ¹²You shall know that I, the LORD, have heard all the abusive speech that you uttered against the mountains of Israel, saying, "They are laid desolate, they are given us to devour." ¹³And you magnified yourselves against me with your mouth, and multiplied your words against me; I heard it. ¹⁴Thus says the Lord God: As the whole earth rejoices, I will make you desolate. ¹⁵As you rejoiced over the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so I will deal with you; you shall be desolate, Mount Seir, and all Edom, all of it. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Blessing on Israel

36 And you, mortal, prophesy to the mountains of Israel, and say: O mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD. ²Thus says the Lord God: Because the enemy said of you, "Aha!" and, "The ancient heights have become our possession," ³therefore prophesy, and say: Thus says the Lord God: Because

35.1–36.15 Oracles concerning mountains, both Edomite and Israelite. The structure is complex. Ch. 35 is made up of four "proof sayings" ("Because . . . therefore": vv. 3–4, 5–9, 10–13, 14–15), whereas 36.1–15 may be construed as an elaborated oracle of salvation. 35.1–2 Mount Seir, a mountainous area east of the Arabah that extends north-south throughout Edom. Seir may be equated with Edom, e.g., Gen 36.8; Num 24.18. Ezekiel had addressed Edom earlier (25.12–14). 35.3–4 The language is typical of Ezekiel. 35.5–6 Ancient enmity. Cf. the prior indictment of the Philistines, 25.15. In the case of Edom and Israel, such enmity exists within kinship lines (Gen 25.27–34; 27.41–45; cf. Jer 49.7–22; Obadiah). For reference to Edomite action during the defeat of Judah, see Ob 11–14. Blood, bloodshed belong to the concept of blood-guilt (cf. Gen 9.6). 35.8 Imagery used earlier (9.7; 11.6; 30.11; 32.5–6). 35.9 Cf. Mal 1.2–5 for the notion of God's perpetual (eternal) anger at Edom. 35.10 Two nations . . . two countries, Israel and Judah; cf. 37.22. Not just those in the land

(11.15; 33.24), but non-Israelites lay claim to the land. 35.12–13 Abusive speech, you uttered, your mouth, your words. Verbal impropriety receives special attention. 35.12 The mountains of Israel are addressed in 36.1–15. To devour, the language of destruction by animals, birds, or fire (15.4, 6; 29.5; 34.5, 8). 35.14–15 Punishment in kind for Edom. Just as Edom gloated at the destruction of Judah, the whole earth will gloat at the destruction of Edom; cf. Ob 12–13. 36.1–15 Concerning salvation for Israel's mountains, a discourse with complex structure, i.e., the numerous oracular formulas (vv. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 13). 36.1 Mountains of Israel (cf. 35.12; Deut 3.25), a way of referring to the entire country. 36.2 Aha, quoted earlier in the mouths of the Ammonites (25.3) and the Tyrians (26.2). Ancient heights, poetic diction for the mountains; the word translated heights is elsewhere in the book translated "high places." Cf. 6.3, 6; 20.29; Num 21.28; Deut 32.13; Mic 3.12. Our possession. Cf. the claim in v. 10. 36.3 The rest of the nations. V. 5 uses the same phrase (cf. 25.16); all probably refer to the nations elsewhere in-they made you desolate indeed, and crushed you from all sides, so that you became the possession of the rest of the nations, and you became an object of gossip and slander among the people; ⁴therefore, O mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God: Thus says the Lord God to the mountains and the hills, the watercourses and the valleys, the desolate wastes and the deserted towns, which have become a source of plunder and an object of derision to the rest of the nations all around; ⁵therefore thus says the Lord God: I am speaking in my hot jealousy against the rest of the nations, and against all Edom, who, with wholehearted joy and utter contempt, took my land as their possession, because of its pasture, to plunder it. ⁶Therefore prophesy concerning the land of Israel, and say to the mountains and hills, to the watercourses and valleys, Thus says the Lord God: I am speaking in my jealous wrath, because you have suffered the insults of the nations; ⁷therefore thus says the Lord God: I swear that the nations that are all around you shall themselves suffer insults.

⁸ But you, O mountains of Israel, shall shoot out your branches, and yield your fruit to my people Israel; for they shall soon come home. ⁹See now, I am for you; I will turn to you, and you shall be tilled and sown; ¹⁰and I will multiply your population, the whole house of Israel, all of it; the towns shall be inhabited and the waste places rebuilt; ¹¹and I will multiply human beings and animals upon you.

They shall increase and be fruitful; and I will cause you to be inhabited as in your former times, and will do more good to you than ever before. Then you shall know that I am the LORD. ¹²I will lead people upon you—my people Israel—and they shall possess you, and you shall be their inheritance. No longer shall you bereave them of children.

¹³ Thus says the Lord God: Because they say to you, “You devour people, and you bereave your nation of children,” ¹⁴therefore you shall no longer devour people and no longer bereave your nation of children, says the Lord God; ¹⁵and no longer will I let you hear the insults of the nations, no longer shall you bear the disgrace of the peoples; and no longer shall you cause your nation to stumble, says the Lord God.

The Renewal of Israel

¹⁶ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁷Mortal, when the house of Israel lived on their own soil, they defiled it with their ways and their deeds; their conduct in my sight was like the uncleanness of a woman in her menstrual period. ¹⁸So I poured out my wrath upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for the idols with which they had defiled it. ¹⁹I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed through the countries; in accordance with their conduct and their deeds I judged them. ²⁰But when they came to the nations, dicted in the book. 36.4 God continues to speak to Israel using geographic vocabulary. 36.5 Hot jealousy. Cf. the variant in v. 6 (cf. Ex 20.5; Josh 24.19; 1 Kings 14.22). As befits ch. 35, Edom is the only nation singled out. 36.6 Vocabulary found in vv. 4–5. 36.7 I swear, lit. “I lift up my hand.” 36.8 God continues to speak to the depopulated mountains, whose inhabitants, now in exile, will soon come home. Instead of being desolate, the mountains will produce verdure and consumable crops for the benefit of the people (see similarly 17.8). 36.9 I am for you. On this terse affirmation of the covenant relationship, cf. Lev 26.9. 36.10–11 God addresses the issue of repopulation, which was a serious problem after 587 B.C.E. 36.12 Inheritance. Cf. 35.15; Deut 26.9. Bereave them of children, perhaps an addition in which the mountains are viewed as negative; see 6.1–14; Deut 12.1–3. 36.13 The nations observe that the mountains, i.e., the land, devours people. Cf. the similar rhetoric in Num 13.32. An external observer might think that those who lived in Israel were doomed because of all the wars fought in that area. 36.15 Cause your nation to stumble. See note on 36.12. The mountains were not simply neutral geographic venues.

36.16–38 Discourse on the restoration of Israel, which is made up of several discrete utterances (vv. 17–21, 22–32, 33–36, 37–38). 36.17–21 A cursory theological survey of Israelite history that adumbrates themes and images used elsewhere in the book and serves as a prologue to the longest section in the discourse. 36.17 Their own soil (cf. 28.25), “their land.” On menstrual uncleanness, which is used here in a simile, see Lev 15.19–30. 36.18 Blood, here of violence, cf. 22.4. 36.20 By dint of the response of those countries to which Israel came, God’s name was profaned. My holy name; i.e., it is holiness that is subject to profanation. The conception is wherever they came, they profaned my holy name, in that it was said of them, "These are the people of the LORD, and yet they had to go out of his land."²¹ But I had concern for my holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the nations to which they came.

²² Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: It is not for your sake, O house of Israel, that I am about to act, but for the sake of my holy name, which you have profaned among the nations to which you came. ²³ I will sanctify my great name, which has been profaned among the nations, and which you have profaned among them; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD, says the Lord God, when through you I display my holiness before their eyes. ²⁴ I will take you from the nations, and gather you from all the countries, and bring you into your own land. ²⁵ I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and you shall be clean from all your uncleannesses, and from all your idols I will cleanse you. ²⁶ A new heart I will give you, and a new spirit I will put within you; and I will remove from your body the heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh. ²⁷ I will put my spirit within you, and make you follow my statutes and be careful to observe my ordinances. ²⁸ Then you shall live in the land that I gave to your ancestors; and you shall be my people, and I will be your God. ²⁹ I will save you from all your uncleannesses, and I will summon the grain and make it abundant and lay no famine upon you. ³⁰ I will make the fruit of the tree and the produce of the field abundant, so that you may never again suffer the disgrace of famine among the nations. ³¹ Then you shall remember your evil ways, and your dealings that were not good; and you shall loathe yourselves for your iniquities and your abominable deeds. ³² It is not for your sake that I will act, says the Lord God; let that be known to you. Be ashamed and dismayed for your ways, O house of Israel.

³³ Thus says the Lord God: On the day that I cleanse you from all your iniquities, I will cause the towns to be inhabited, and the waste places shall be rebuilt. ³⁴ The land that was desolate shall be tilled, instead of being the desolation that it was in the sight of all who passed by. ³⁵ And they will say, "This land that was desolate has become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined towns are now inhabited and fortified." ³⁶ Then the nations that are left all around you shall know that I, the LORD, have rebuilt the ruined places, and replanted that which was desolate; I, the LORD, have spoken, and I will do it.

dialectical: the people of Israel have profaned God's name, even though it is God who exiled them. 36.21 I had concern for, lit. "I grieved for." 36.22–32 The rationale for and design of God's new plan for Israel. 36.22, 32 Both at beginning and end, Ezekiel makes clear that God acts on behalf of the holy name, not for the sake of the people; cf. Isa 43.22–28. 36.23 I will sanctify my great name, presumably by the purificatory acts that follow, which will be apparent to Israelite and non-Israelite alike. Israel must return and remain in its land in order for God's name to be holy. 36.24 Purification will occur after the people have returned to their own land. 36.25 On cleansing lustration rites, which here remove the uncleanness and idols, cf. Num 19.9–22; Ps 51.7. 36.26 Then God will give the people a new heart . . . and a new spirit; cf. 11.19; 18.31; Jer 31.31–34; Ps 51.10. For Ezekiel the new heart is to the old heart as flesh is to stone; the former did not enable life. 36.27 The new spirit (v. 26) is construed as my spirit, God's spirit (cf. Lev 26.3; Gen 2.7), which will enable Israelites to obey the covenant statutes. 36.28 The covenant formula (e.g., 11.20; 14.11) reinforces Israel's ability to remain in the land. 36.29–30 Cf. 34.27. 36.33–36 Destroyed towns and fields, of a sort described in 36.4, will be rebuilt. 36.35 Just as foreigners commented on the ignominious state of Israel in exile, they will attest verbally to the restored country—it will be like the garden of Eden; cf. Jer 31.23–28; Isa 51.3. 36.37–38 The first instance of Israel being allowed to request something (cf. 14.3; 20.3)—repopulation; cf. vv. 10–11. Cf. covenant blessings of population, Lev 26.9. The evidence for great numbers, two flocks for sacrifice, allows for a return to the imagery of God's people as a flock (cf. ch. 34).

The Valley of Dry Bones

37 The hand of the LORD came upon me, and he brought me out by the spirit of the LORD and set me down in the middle of a valley; it was full of bones. ²He led me all around them; there were very many lying in the valley, and they were very dry. ³He said to me, "Mortal, can these bones live?" I answered, "O Lord God, you know." ⁴Then he said to me, "Prophecy to these bones, and say to them: O dry bones, hear the word of the LORD. ⁵Thus says the Lord God to these bones: I will cause breath^y to enter you, and you shall live. ⁶I will lay sinews on you, and will cause flesh to come upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath^y in you, and you shall live; and you shall know that I am the LORD."

⁷ So I prophesied as I had been commanded; and as I prophesied, suddenly there was a noise, a rattling, and the bones came together, bone to its bone. ⁸I looked, and there were sinews on them, and flesh had come upon them, and skin had covered them; but there was no breath in them. ⁹Then he said to me, "Prophecy to the breath, prophecy, mortal, and say to the breath:^z Thus says the Lord God: Come from the four winds, O breath,^z and breathe upon these slain, that they may live." ¹⁰I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood on their feet, a vast multitude.

¹¹ Then he said to me, "Mortal, these bones are the whole house of Israel. They say, 'Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are cut off completely.' ¹²Therefore prophecy, and say to them, Thus says the Lord God: I am going to open your graves, and bring you up from your graves, O my people; and I will bring you back to the land of Israel. ¹³And you shall know that I am the LORD, when I open your graves, and bring you up from your graves, O my people. ¹⁴I will put my spirit within you, and you shall live, and I will place you on your own soil; then you shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken and will act, says the LORD."

The Two Sticks

¹⁵ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁶Mortal, take a stick and write on it, "For Judah, and the Israelites associated with it"; then take another stick and write on it, "For Joseph (the stick of Ephraim) and all the house of Israel associated with it"; ¹⁷and join them together into one stick, so that they may become one in your hand. ¹⁸And when your people say to you, "Will you not show us what you mean by

37.1–14 The valley of dry bones (vv. 1–10) and its meaning (vv. 11–14). 37.1 The hand of the LORD came upon me suggests spirit possession behavior; cf. 1.3; 8.1; 33.22. He brought me out by the spirit of the LORD seems awkward if he is the deity; cf. 11.5, 24. Valley, or "plain"; see note on 3.22. The venue is Mesopotamia. 37.3 After having shown Ezekiel the bones in the valley, God asks him a question that, if rhetorical, deserves a negative answer. The prophet demurs with a response that affirms the power of the deity. 37.4–5 The prophet is ordered to address the bones with an oracle, which concludes with an echo of the "know" motif (v. 6). 37.6 Breath, or "spirit"; cf. 36.26–27. 37.7–10 Ezekiel performs as ordered but must utter a second oracle to the breath, or the "spirit"; cf. Gen 2.7; Eccl 3.20–21; 12.7. The four winds. Cf. 42.20; Jer 49.36; Dan 8.8; Zech 2.6; 6.5; but the breath comes from and is not identical with the winds of the compass points. Slain. One senses the imagery of a battlefield full of long dead warriors; cf. 32.4–5. If so, the valley of dry bones is no straightforward allegory of Israel in exile. 37.11 An interpretation of the bones as the whole house of Israel, i.e., those in various Diaspora settings as well as those still in the land (cf. vv. 15–22). The quotation reflects the vocabulary and style of lamentation (e.g., Ps 31.10; 35.10) on bones, in which various symbolically graphic descriptions of physical malaise may occur. On being cut off, cf. Ps 88.5; Isa 53.8; Lam 3.54. 37.12–14 The prophet continues to speak to all Israel as if the people were dead. However, the imagery is new—not that of unburied bones but of corpses in graves. 37.14 Cf. 36.27–28.

37.15–28 The two sticks become one, a symbolic action with several interpretations. 37.15–19 The symbolic action and its primary interpretation. 37.16 Stick, perhaps a wooden staff (cf. Num 17.1–13, a narrative in which the names of Israelite ancestral houses were written upon staffs), or a wooden writing board. Less likely is a shepherd's crook or a royal scepter. The Hebrew noun is the generic word for tree or wood. The most probable forms of the original inscriptions were: "For Judah" and these?" 19 say to them, Thus says the Lord God: I am about to take the stick of Joseph (which is in the hand of Ephraim) and the tribes of Israel associated with it; and I will put the stick of Judah upon it,^a and make them one stick, in order that they may be one in my hand. 20 When the sticks on which you write are in your hand before their eyes, 21 then say to them, Thus says the Lord God: I will take the people of Israel from the nations among which they have gone, and will gather them from every quarter, and bring them to their own land. 22 I will make them one nation in the land, on the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king over them all. Never again shall they be two nations, and never again shall they be divided into two kingdoms. 23 They shall never again defile themselves with their idols and their detestable things, or with any of their transgressions. I will save them from all the apostasies into which they have fallen,^b and will cleanse them. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

24 My servant David shall be king over them; and they shall all have one shepherd. They shall follow my ordinances and be careful to observe my statutes. 25 They shall live in the land that I gave to my servant Jacob, in which your ancestors lived; they and their children and their children's children shall live there forever; and my servant David shall be their prince forever. 26 I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will bless^c them and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary among them forevermore. 27 My dwelling place shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. 28 Then the nations shall know that I the LORD sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary is among them forevermore.

Invasion by Gog

38 The word of the LORD came to me: 2 Mortal, set your face toward Gog, of the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. Prophesy against him³ and say: Thus says the Lord God: I am against you, O Gog, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal; 4 I will turn you around and put hooks into your jaws, and I will lead you out with all your army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed in full armor, a great company, all of them with shield and buckler, wielding swords. 5 Persia, Ethiopia,^d and Put are with them, all of them with buckler and helmet; 6 Gomer and all its troops; Beth-togarmah from the remotest parts of the north with all its troops—many peoples are with you.

7 Be ready and keep ready, you and all the companies that are assembled around you, and hold yourselves in reserve for them. 8 After many days you shall be mustered; in the latter years you shall go against a land restored from war,

^a Heb I will put them upon it ^b Another reading is from all the settlements in which they have sinned

"For Joseph," symbolizing the Southern and Northern kingdoms respectively. 37.19 National reunification—one stick—is the goal (so also vv. 21–22). 37.22 One king. Cf. v. 25; 34.23–24; 46.1–18, though the term king is not used in those places. 37.24b–26 The people will be in a covenant relationship; cf. 34.25. 37.27–28 My sanctuary, the temple in Jerusalem, which foreshadows chs. 40–48.

38.1–39.29 Discourse against Gog of Magog. Two complex chapters directed against Gog, the ruler and general of Magog's forces. His army will be decimated in a cataclysmic defeat, once it attacks Israel. After the drama has been played out, Israel will dwell securely in the land. Gog and Magog appear transhistorical, though the name Gog may derive from the name of the Lydian ruler Gyges. The name of the land Magog was probably created to rhyme with Gog; for another toponymic rhyme, cf. 27.10; 30.5. 38.2 Chief prince does not imply subordination to someone but highest status among a plurality of rulers, e.g., a regional group of rulers (26.16; 32.30). Meshech and Tubal. Cf. 27.13; note on 32.26–28; Gen 10.2. 38.4 I will turn you . . . lead you out. God physically drags Gog and his army out for battle; cf. 19.4. Mention of numerous weapons becomes especially important in light of 39.9–10. 38.5 The force is international, though these names may be later additions to the passage. 38.6 Gomer (the Cimmerians) and Beth-togarmah (cf. 27.14; Gen 10.3) are both associated with Asia Minor, i.e., from the remotest parts of the north. 38.8 After many days, often viewed as an eschatological formula, pertaining to an end-time or a future time of judgment and transformation. A land restored from war, presumably a reference to Israel restored after exile, i.e., from the perspec-

a land where people were gathered from many nations on the mountains of Israel, which had long lain waste; its people were brought out from the nations and now are living in safety, all of them. ⁹You shall advance, coming on like a storm; you shall be like a cloud covering the land, you and all your troops, and many peoples with you.

¹⁰ Thus says the Lord God: On that day thoughts will come into your mind, and you will devise an evil scheme. ¹¹You will say, "I will go up against the land of unwallled villages; I will fall upon the quiet people who live in safety, all of them living without walls, and having no bars or gates"; ¹²to seize spoil and carry off plunder; to assail the waste places that are now inhabited, and the people who were gathered from the nations, who are acquiring cattle and goods, who live at the center of the earth. ¹³Sheba and Dedan and the merchants of Tarshish and all its young warriors^f will say to you, "Have you come to seize spoil? Have you assembled your horde to carry off plunder, to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to seize a great amount of booty?"

¹⁴ Therefore, mortal, prophesy, and say to Gog: Thus says the Lord God: On that day when my people Israel are living securely, you will rouse yourself^g ¹⁵and come from your place out of the remotest parts of the north, you and many peoples with you, all of them riding on horses, a great horde, a mighty army; ¹⁶you will come up against my people Israel, like a cloud covering the earth. In the latter days I will bring you against my land, so that the nations may know me, when through you, O Gog, I display my holiness before their eyes.

Judgment on Gog

¹⁷ Thus says the Lord God: Are you he of whom I spoke in former days by my servants the prophets of Israel, who in those days prophesied for years that I would bring you against them? ¹⁸On that day, when Gog comes against the land of Israel, says the Lord God, my wrath shall be aroused. ¹⁹For in my jealousy and in my blazing wrath I declare: On that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel; ²⁰the fish of the sea, and the birds of the air, and the animals of the field, and all creeping things that creep on the ground, and all human beings that are on the face of the earth, shall quake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the cliffs shall fall, and every wall shall tumble to the ground. ²¹I will summon the sword against Gog^h in all my mountains, says the Lord God; the swords of all will be against their comrades. ²²With pestilence and bloodshed I will enter into judgment with him; and I will pour down torrential rains and hailstones, fire and sulfur, upon him and his troops and the many peoples that are with him. ²³So I will display my greatness and my holiness and make myself known in tive of Ezekiel and his contemporaries in the quite distant future. 38.9 For similar descriptions of military advance, see Isa 10.3; Jer 4.13; Joel 2.2. 38.10–13 Gog and his scheme for plunder. For similar language concerning an enemy of Israel, see Jer 4.13. 38.11 Unwallled villages. Cf. Esth 9.19; Zech 2.4. 38.12 Center or navel of the earth, in Greek the omphalos, which must refer to Jerusalem, so 5.5. 38.13 The three names are all nations cited in the commercial nation listing: Sheba (27.22); Dedan (27.20); Tarshish (27.12). Their interest in plunder is conveyed in prolix questions. 38.14–18 God declaims to Gog. 38.14 On that day, another eschatological formula; cf. note on v. 8. For the remainder of the verse, cf. vv. 4–5. 38.16 Through you, a foreshadowing of Gog's fate. 38.17 The Hebrew Masoretic tradition preserves a textual error that results in the verses being construed as a question. It is preferable to read with Greek (Septuagint) and Latin (Vulgate) an indicative sentence, "You are he of whom I spoke ..." For the notion of earlier prophets, cf. Zech 1.4. Such earlier oracles might have been similar to Jer 4.5–6.26. 38.18–23 God's theophanic response. 38.18–19 On that day, the day of the Lord; cf. 30.3. 38.19–22 A classic description of a theophany in which the deity's appearance wreaks havoc with the natural order and, when it occurs in a military context, with any enemy of the Lord. 38.19 On theophanic shaking, cf. Joel 2.10; 2.30. 38.20 The fish ... the earth. Using vocabulary drawn from the Priestly creation account in Gen 1, the objects of such shaking are specified. On geographic disorder, cf. Isa 2.14; Zech 14.4–5. 38.22 An eclectic assemblage of destructive natural phenomena directed at Gog. 38.23 Reflexive verbs in the Hebrew highlight God's role in the destruction the eyes of many nations. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Gog's Armies Destroyed

39 And you, mortal, prophesy against Gog, and say: Thus says the Lord God: I am against you, O Gog, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal! ²I will turn you around and drive you forward, and bring you up from the remotest parts of the north, and lead you against the mountains of Israel. ³I will strike your bow from your left hand, and will make your arrows drop out of your right hand. ⁴You shall fall upon the mountains of Israel, you and all your troops and the peoples that are with you; I will give you to birds of prey of every kind and to the wild animals to be devoured. ⁵You shall fall in the open field; for I have spoken, says the Lord God. ⁶I will send fire on Magog and on those who live securely in the coastlands; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

⁷ My holy name I will make known among my people Israel; and I will not let my holy name be profaned any more; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD, the Holy One in Israel. ⁸It has come! It has happened, says the Lord God. This is the day of which I have spoken.

⁹ Then those who live in the towns of Israel will go out and make fires of the weapons and burn them—bucklers and shields, bows and arrows, handpikes and spears—and they will make fires of them for seven years. ¹⁰They will not need to take wood out of the field or cut down any trees in the forests, for they will make their fires of the weapons; they will despoil those who despoiled them, and plunder those who plundered them, says the Lord God.

The Burial of Gog

¹¹ On that day I will give to Gog a place for burial in Israel, the Valley of the Travelers^j east of the sea; it shall block the path of the travelers, for there Gog and all his horde will be buried; it shall be called the Valley of Hamon-gog.^k ¹²Seven months the house of Israel shall spend burying them, in order to cleanse the land. ¹³All the people of the land shall bury them; and it will bring them honor on the day that I show my glory, says the Lord God. ¹⁴They will set apart men to pass through the land regularly and bury any invaders^l who remain on the face of the land, so as to cleanse it; for seven months they shall make their search. ¹⁵As the searchers^l pass through the land, anyone who sees a human bone shall set up a sign by it, until the buriers have buried it in the Valley of Hamon-gog.^k ¹⁶(A city Hamonah^m is there also.) Thus they shall cleanse the land.

¹⁷ As for you, mortal, thus says the Lord God: Speak to the birds of every kind and to all the wild animals: Assemble and come, gather from all around to the sacrificial feast that I am preparing for you, a great sacrificial feast on the mountains of Israel, and you shall eat flesh and of Gog. 39.1-5 Destruction on the mountains of Israel. 39.1-2 Parallel in formulation to 38.1-2, 8. 39.3 Personal combat between God the warrior and Gog, who is depicted as an archer. 39.4 Birds ... wild animals. Cf. 29.5. 39.6 Send fire on reflects the mode of punishment in Amos's oracles against the nations (1.4, 7, 10, 12; 2.5). The coastlands may refer to Tyre (26.15, 18; 27.3) or, more generally, the maritime trading regions (38.13). 39.7 My holy name. Cf. v. 25; 36.20-23. 39.8 It has come! It has happened. Cf. the RSV translation, "Behold, it is coming and it will be brought about," which is preferable, since the reference is to the day of the Lord. 39.9-10 Destruction of Gog's weaponry; cf. Ps 46.9. Those who live in towns. Cf. v. 13, all the people of the land. Seven years, an idealized number based on the sabbath and sabbatical cycle; cf. vv. 12, 14. On the specific weapons, cf. 23.24. Buckler, a small shield. 39.10 Israel apparently uses the wood for domestic purposes. 39.11-16 Burying Gog. 39.11 Valley of the Travelers, Hebrew "Valley of the Obarim"; however, perhaps one should read "Abarim," a mountain range east of the Dead Sea in northern Moab. The place of burial would be outside the land, hence avoiding contamination from corpse impurity (see Num 19.11-13) and allowing for purification (Ezek 39.12, 16). 39.14 A group set apart from all the people, who search for bones for another seven months. 39.15 Yet another group, the buriers. 39.17-20 An elaboration of 39.4b. Ezekiel is to summon birds and animals for a sacrificial feast, perhaps with allusions to earlier Canaanite my-drink blood. ¹⁸You shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth—of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bulls, all of them fatlings of Bashan. ¹⁹You shall eat fat until you are filled, and drink blood until you are drunk, at the sacrificial feast that I am preparing for you. ²⁰And you shall be filled at my table with horses and charioteers,ⁿ with warriors and all kinds of soldiers, says the Lord God.

Israel Restored to the Land

²¹ I will display my glory among the nations; and all the nations shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid on them. ²²The house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God, from that day forward. ²³And the nations shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity, because they dealt treacherously with me. So I hid my face from them and gave them into the hand of their adversaries, and they all fell by the sword. ²⁴I dealt with them according to their uncleanness and their transgressions, and hid my face from them.

²⁵ Therefore thus says the Lord God: Now I will restore the fortunes of Jacob, and have mercy on the whole house of Israel; and I will be jealous for my holy name. ²⁶They shall forget^o their shame, and all the treachery they have practiced against me, when they live securely in their land with no one to make them afraid, ²⁷when I have brought them back from the peoples and gathered them from their enemies' lands, and through them have displayed my holiness in the sight of many nations. ²⁸Then they shall know that I am the LORD their God because I sent them into exile among the nations, and then gathered them into their own land. I will leave none of them behind; ²⁹and I will never again hide my face from them, when I pour out my spirit upon the house of Israel, says the Lord God.

The Vision of the New Temple

40 In the twenty-fifth year of our exile, at the beginning of the year, on the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after the city was struck down, on that very day, the hand of the LORD was upon me, and he brought me there. ²He brought me, in visions of God, to the land of Israel, and set me down upon a very high mountain, on which was a structure like a city to the south. ³When he brought me there, a man was there, whose appearance shone like bronze, with a linen cord and a measuring reed in his hand; and he was standing in the gateway.

ⁿ Heb chariots ^o Another reading is They shall bear thography; cf. Isa 34.5–7; Zeph 1.7. 39.18 The proper sacrificial character is underlined by construing the dead warriors as animals acceptable for sacrifice. Fatlings of Bashan. Cf. Ps 22.12; Am 4.1. In standard Israelite practice, the blood and fat were not consumed by humans (so 44.7, 15; Lev 3.16–17). 39.21–29 Concluding oracles. 39.21–22 God's actions perceived by both the nations and Israel; cf. 39.6–8. 39.23–24 Defeat and exile are treated as God's just punishment. Hide my face. Cf. Pss 13.1; 22.24; 27.9; 104.29; Isa 54.8; 57.17; 59.2; 64.7; Num 6.24–26. 39.25–29 Restore the fortunes. Cf. 16.53–58; 29.14; Jer 33.26. Jealous for my holy name. Cf. 36.22–23; Joel 2.18. 39.27 When I have brought them back. Return is still a future event. 39.29 Pour out my spirit. Cf. 36.26–27; Joel 2.28–29.

40.1–48.35 The new temple and polity. Ezek 40–48, the fourth major section of the book, is the report of visionary experience. Ezekiel travels to Jerusalem, receives a tour of the new temple complex (chs. 40–42), and perceives the glory of the Lord returning to the rebuilt temple (43.4–5). Then he is instructed in the Torah (43.12–46.24) relevant to the new structure and the community gathered around it. Finally, in chs. 47–48, the land beyond the temple is defined and described. 40.1–42.20 The temple and its courtyards. 40.1–4 Prologue. The date in v. 1 is April 28, 573 B.C.E. (see note on 1.2). A quarter century after Ezekiel and the first deportees had been taken into exile and fourteen years after Jerusalem had been razed, he returns via visionary experience (the hand of the Lord, in visions of God) to Jerusalem. 40.2 A very high mountain, Mount Zion, upon which the temple stood; cf. 20.40; 43.12; Isa 2.2. A city to the south places Jerusalem south of the temple; cf. 48.15–19. 40.3 Like bronze. As with the creatures in 1.7, bronze characterizes the man as something other than a human; cf. 8.2. A linen cord and a measuring reed, two instruments for linear measurement. The reed (also in v. 5) was a little longer than 10 feet or 3 meters.

4The man said to me, "Mortal, look closely and listen attentively, and set your mind upon all that I shall show you, for you were brought here in order that I might show it to you; declare all that you see to the house of Israel."

5 Now there was a wall all around the outside of the temple area. The length of the measuring reed in the man's hand was six long cubits, each being a cubit and a handbreadth in length; so he measured the thickness of the wall, one reed; and the height, one reed. 6Then he went into the gateway facing east, going up its steps, and measured the threshold of the gate, one reed deep.^p There were 7recesses, and each recess was one reed wide and one reed deep; and the space between the recesses, five cubits; and the threshold of the gate by the vestibule of the gate at the inner end was one reed deep. 8Then he measured the inner vestibule of the gateway, one cubit. 9Then he measured the vestibule of the gateway, eight cubits; and its pilasters, two cubits; and the vestibule of the gate was at the inner end. 10There were three recesses on either side of the east gate; the three were of the same size; and the pilasters on either side were of the same size. 11Then he measured the width of the opening of the gateway, ten cubits; and the width of the gateway, thirteen cubits. 12There was a barrier before the recesses, one cubit on either side; and the recesses were six cubits on either side. 13Then he measured the gate from the back^q of the one recess to the back^q of the other, a width of twenty-five cubits, from wall to wall.^r 14He measured^s also the vestibule, twenty cubits; and the gate next to the pilaster on every side of the court.^t 15From the front of the gate at the entrance to the end of the inner vestibule of the gate was fifty cubits. 16The recesses and their pilasters had windows, with shutters^u on the inside of the gateway all around, and the vestibules also had windows on the inside all around; and on the pilasters were palm trees.

17 Then he brought me into the outer court; there were chambers there, and a pavement, all around the court; thirty chambers fronted on the pavement. 18The pavement ran along the side of the gates, corresponding to the length of the gates; this was the lower pavement. 19Then he measured the distance from the inner front of^v the lower gate to the outer front of the inner court, one hundred cubits.^w

20 Then he measured the gate of the outer court that faced north—its depth and width. 21Its recesses, three on either side, and its pilasters and its vestibule were of the same size as those of the first gate; its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. 22Its windows, its vestibule, and its palm trees were of the same size as those of the gate that faced toward the east. Seven steps led up to it; and its vestibule was on the inside.^x 23Opposite the gate on the north, as on the east, was a gate to the inner court; he measured from gate to gate, one hundred cubits.

24 Then he led me toward the south, and there was a gate on the south; and he measured its pilasters and its vestibule;

The cord does not recur; cf. Zech 2.1. 40.4 The rationale for Ezekiel's experience is the imperative to declare all that you see; cf. 43.10. 40.5 A long cubit was about 518 millimeters long; the ratio of a short to long cubit was 6 to 7. The distinction between a short and long cubit was known throughout the ancient Near East. 40.5–16 The eastern gate (gateway facing east) to the temple compound, which has the basic configuration of city gates excavated at Gezer, Hazor, and Megiddo (which date to the Solomonic era), in this case a passageway with four recessed rooms (three recesses and one vestibule on either side). Such fortified gates make Ezekiel's temple rather like a religious citadel. As with other city gates, this wall met the gate before the first recess, with the rest of the gate structure inside the temple area. Apart from v. 5b, which may be a later addition, the measurements provide a groundplan, i.e., with no elevations, though there were seven stairs just before the gate (see v. 22). The entire gate complex was almost ninety feet long. Windows provided light in the rooms. 40.16 Pilasters, projecting columns, which may have been door jambs, were decorated with palm trees; cf. 1 Kings 6.29, 32, 35; 7.36. 40.17–19 The outer courtyard was lined with thirty chambers; cf. Jer 35.2–4; Neh 13.4–14 for such rooms, which could have been used for meeting, storage, etc. 40.20–27 The north and they had the same dimensions as the others. ²⁵There were windows all around in it and in its vestibule, like the windows of the others; its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. ²⁶There were seven steps leading up to it; its vestibule was on the inside.^x It had palm trees on its pilasters, one on either side. ²⁷There was a gate on the south of the inner court; and he measured from gate to gate toward the south, one hundred cubits.

²⁸ Then he brought me to the inner court by the south gate, and he measured the south gate; it was of the same dimensions as the others. ²⁹Its recesses, its pilasters, and its vestibule were of the same size as the others; and there were windows all around in it and in its vestibule; its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. ³⁰There were vestibules all around, twenty-five cubits deep and five cubits wide. ³¹Its vestibule faced the outer court, and palm trees were on its pilasters, and its stairway had eight steps.

³² Then he brought me to the inner court on the east side, and he measured the gate; it was of the same size as the others. ³³Its recesses, its pilasters, and its vestibule were of the same dimensions as the others; and there were windows all around in it and in its vestibule; its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. ³⁴Its vestibule faced the outer court, and it had palm trees on its pilasters, on either side; and its stairway had eight steps.

³⁵ Then he brought me to the north gate, and he measured it; it had the same dimensions as the others. ³⁶Its recesses, its pilasters, and its vestibule were of the same size as the others;^y and it had windows all around. Its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. ³⁷Its vestibule^z faced the outer court, and it had palm trees on its pilasters, on either side; and its stairway had eight steps.

³⁸ There was a chamber with its door in the vestibule of the gate,^a where the burnt offering was to be washed. ³⁹And in the vestibule of the gate were two tables on either side, on which the burnt offering and the sin offering and the guilt offering were to be slaughtered. ⁴⁰On the outside of the vestibule^b at the entrance of the north gate were two tables; and on the other side of the vestibule of the gate were two tables. ⁴¹Four tables were on the inside, and four tables on the outside of the side of the gate, eight tables, on which the sacrifices were to be slaughtered. ⁴²There were also four tables of hewn stone for the burnt offering, a cubit and a half long, and one cubit and a half wide, and one cubit high, on which the instruments were to be laid with which the burnt offerings and the sacrifices were slaughtered. ⁴³There were pegs, one handbreadth long, fastened all around the inside. And on the tables the flesh of the offering was to be laid.

south gates, which are fundamentally similar to the east gate. 40.28-37 Three gates (south, east, north) leading from the outer to the inner courtyards, which involved an elevation of eight stairs. These gates are similar to the aforementioned, though with a reversal in the order of vestibule and recesses. 40.38-43 Chambers, located in one of the inside gates (probably the north one since it had just been described), were to be used for preparation of animals for sacrifices—washing and slaughter. On burnt, sin, and guilt offerings, see Lev 1; 4-7. 40.44-46 Rooms for the priests: the north chamber for Zadokites, who alone could perform the altar sacrifice (cf. 44.15), the south for priests of lesser status. The singers, Levitical singers (1 Chr 16). 40.47 The inner court was a square, with the altar

The Temple

48 Then he brought me to the vestibule of the temple and measured the pilasters of the vestibule, five cubits on either side; and the width of the gate was fourteen cubits; and the sidewalls of the gate were three cubits^d on either side. 49 The depth of the vestibule was twenty cubits, and the width twelve^e cubits; ten steps led up^f to it; and there were pillars beside the pilasters on either side.

41 Then he brought me to the nave, and measured the pilasters; on each side six cubits was the width of the pilasters.^g 2 The width of the entrance was ten cubits; and the sidewalls of the entrance were five cubits on either side. He measured the length of the nave, forty cubits, and its width, twenty cubits. 3 Then he went into the inner room and measured the pilasters of the entrance, two cubits; and the width of the entrance, six cubits; and the sidewalls^h of the entrance, seven cubits. 4 He measured the depth of the room, twenty cubits, and its width, twenty cubits, beyond the nave. And he said to me, This is the most holy place.

5 Then he measured the wall of the temple, six cubits thick; and the width of the side chambers, four cubits, all around the temple. 6 The side chambers were in three stories, one over another, thirty in each story. There were offsetsⁱ all around the wall of the temple to serve as supports for the side chambers, so that they should not be supported by the wall of the temple. 7 The passageway^j of the side chambers widened from story to story; for the structure was supplied with a stairway all around the temple. For this reason the structure became wider from story to story. One ascended from the bottom story to the uppermost story by way of the middle one. 8 I saw also that the temple had a raised platform all around; the foundations of the side chambers measured a full reed of six long cubits. 9 The thickness of the outer wall of the side chambers was five cubits; and the free space between the side chambers of the temple 10 and the chambers of the court was a width of twenty cubits all around the temple on every side. 11 The side chambers opened onto the area left free, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south; and the width of the part that was left free was five cubits all around.

12 The building that was facing the temple yard on the west side was seventy cubits wide; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick all around, and its depth ninety cubits.

13 Then he measured the temple, one hundred cubits deep; and the yard and the building with its walls, one hundred cubits deep; 14 also the width of the east front of the temple and the yard, one hundred cubits.

15 Then he measured the depth of the building facing the yard at the west, together with its galleries^k on either side, one hundred cubits.

(43.13-17) near the temple itself; cf. 1 Kings 8.64; 2 Kings 16.14. 40.48-41.4 Ten steps lead up to the temple's entrance—into the vestibule. The three rooms arranged on a linear axis had the following dimensions: vestibule (35 feet long by 21 feet wide), nave (71 feet long by 25 feet wide), the inner room (35 feet by 35 feet); cf. the dimensions of the Solomonic temple (1 Kings 6), from which Ezekiel's temple differs in important ways. Though the man entered the inner room, Ezekiel did not. Silence throughout their tour is broken when the man announces: "This is the most holy place." 40.49 Pillars, similar to the placement of Solomon's pillars, but without names; cf. 1 Kings 7.15-22. 41.5-11 Three stories of thirty rooms each abutting the exterior walls; cf. 1 Kings 6.5-10. 41.8 Raised platform, probably an allusion to the final elevation upon which the temple was built. 41.12-15a. Concluding exterior measurements both of the temple and the building, which was similar in size to the temple, though the purpose of this latter structure is unknown; cf. 1 Chr 26.18. 41.15b-26 Interior decoration of the temple, expressed in ways different from the language and motifs typical of accounts of Ezekiel's tour through the temple complex. 41.15b-16 Only the vestibule and nave are explicitly mentioned in the Hebrew text. They are paneled (cf. 1 Kings 6.9; 7.3, 7), but much remains obscure, especially in v. 16, though windows with recessed^a frames. Facing the threshold the temple was paneled with wood all around, from the floor up to the windows (now the windows were covered),¹⁷ to the space above the door, even to the inner room, and on the outside. And on all the walls all around in the inner room and the nave there was a pattern.^o ¹⁸It was formed of cherubim and palm trees, a palm tree between cherub and cherub. Each cherub had two faces: ^{19a}a human face turned toward the palm tree on the one side, and the face of a young lion turned toward the palm tree on the other side. They were carved on the whole temple all around; ²⁰from the floor to the area above the door, cherubim and palm trees were carved on the wall.^p

²¹ The doorposts of the nave were square. In front of the holy place was something resembling ²²an altar of wood, three cubits high, two cubits long, and two cubits wide;^q its corners, its base,^r and its walls were of wood. He said to me, "This is the table that stands before the LORD."²³ The nave and the holy place had each a double door. ²⁴The doors had two leaves apiece, two swinging leaves for each door. ²⁵On the doors of the nave were carved cherubim and palm trees, such as were carved on the walls; and there was a canopy of wood in front of the vestibule outside. ²⁶And there were recessed windows and palm trees on either side, on the side-walls of the vestibule.^s

The Holy Chambers and the Outer Wall

42 Then he led me out into the outer court, toward the north, and he brought me to the chambers that were opposite the temple yard and opposite the building on the north. ²The length of the building that was on the north side^t was^u one hundred cubits, and the width fifty cubits. ³Across the twenty cubits that belonged to the inner court, and facing the pavement that belonged to the outer court, the chambers rose^v gallery^w by gallery^w in three stories. ⁴In front of the chambers was a passage on the inner side, ten cubits wide and one hundred cubits deep,^x and its^y entrances were on the north. ⁵Now the upper chambers were narrower, for the galleries^w took more away from them than from the lower and middle chambers in the building. ⁶For they were in three stories, and they had no pillars like the pillars of the outer^z court; for this reason the upper chambers were set back from the ground more than the lower and the middle ones. ⁷There was a wall outside parallel to the chambers, toward the outer court, opposite the chambers, fifty cubits long. ⁸For the chambers on the outer court were fifty cubits long, while those opposite the temple were one hundred cubits long. ⁹At the foot of these chambers ran a passage that one entered from the east in order to enter them from the outer court. ¹⁰The width of the passage^a was fixed by the wall of the court.

On the south^b also, opposite the vacant area and opposite the building, there were chambers ¹¹with a passage in front of them; they were similar to the chambers on the north, of the same length and width, with the same exits^c and arrangements and doors. ¹²So the entrances of the chambers to the south were entered

7.6. 42.1–14 The Hebrew text is at many places problematical; moreover, the precise physical character and location of the buildings is difficult to determine, though they are related to the outer court (v. 1; cf. 40.17). The buildings function as temple sacristies and may be related to the tradition of the two chambers described in 40.44–46. Each was three stories high. Specific attention is devoted to passages and doors, which is consistent with the concern to limit access to the holy. 42.1 The building, a structure west of and hence

13 Then he said to me, "The north chambers and the south chambers opposite the vacant area are the holy chambers, where the priests who approach the LORD shall eat the most holy offerings; there they shall deposit the most holy offerings—the grain offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offering—for the place is holy. 14 When the priests enter the holy place, they shall not go out of it into the outer court without laying there the vestments in which they minister, for these are holy; they shall put on other garments before they go near to the area open to the people."

15 When he had finished measuring the interior of the temple area, he led me out by the gate that faces east, and measured the temple area all around. 16 He measured the east side with the measuring reed, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed. 17 Then he turned and measured^e the north side, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed. 18 Then he turned and measured^e the south side, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed. 19 Then he turned to the west side and measured, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed. 20 He measured it on the four sides. It had a wall around it, five hundred cubits long and five hundred cubits wide, to make a separation between the holy and the common.

The Divine Glory Returns to the Temple

43 Then he brought me to the gate, the gate facing east. 2 And there, the glory of the God of Israel was coming from the east; the sound was like the sound of mighty waters; and the earth shone with his glory. 3 The^f vision I saw was like the vision that I had seen when he came to destroy the city, and^g like the vision that I had seen by the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face. 4 As the glory of the LORD entered the temple by the gate facing east, 5 the spirit lifted me up, and brought me into the inner court; and the glory of the LORD filled the temple.

behind the temple; see 41.12. 42.13 The grain offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offering are reserved for priestly consumption (see 44.29); cf. 40.39 for a similar list of sacrifices. Such ritually prepared food is to remain in the sacristies, a holy precinct. 42.14 Requirements for the use of ritual apparel. Priestly vestments that are worn in the temple building are not to be worn in the temple's outer courtyard (see similarly 44.19). 42.15–20 Dimensions of the temple complex: a square with each side 500 cubits long. The process of measuring parallels the description in 40.6–37; movement is from the east to the north, south, and then west. 42.20 The purpose of the wall is defined not as a defensive structure but as boundary between the holy and the common (i.e., the sacred and the profane). On this distinction elsewhere in Ezekiel, cf. 22.26; 44.23. Given this statement about the function of the wall, the defensive character of the gates becomes even more important, since they must guard against the intrusion of the common into the holy.

43.1–12 The glory of God returns to the temple. 43.1–2 The gate facing east, i.e., the gate from which the glory of God departed (10.19) and the gate at which Ezekiel's visionary tour had begun (40.6). From the east. Cf. 11.23 for the last explicit reference to the eastward movement of the glory of God. The sound of mighty waters. See note on 1.24. The earth shone. Cf. 1.4, 13 for the symbolism of light. 43.3 Allusions to 8.1–11.25 and 1.1–28a, respectively. And Ezekiel's behavior is similar—I fell upon my face (see 1.28b). 43.5 The spirit lifted me up. Cf. 3.12, 14; 8.3; 11.1, 24 for the spirit transporting Ezekiel. The glory of the LORD filled the temple, an event analogous to the presence of God filling the tabernacle and temple, respectively (Ex 40.34–35; 1 Kings 8.10–13). 43.6 The man, the one who had conducted Ezekiel's earlier visionary tour of the temple compound and who, despite God's presence in the temple, continues to perform this role (44.1, 4; 46.19). 43.7–12 God's new Torah. God promises never again to leave the temple (vv. 7, 9). 43.7 Place of my throne, Jerusalem (Jer 3.16–17; 17.12). Soles of my feet. The ark of the covenant was understood to be the object upon which the feet of the deity might rest (cf. esp. 1 Chr 28.2; but also Ps 132.7; Isa 60.13; Lam 2.1; and, for an entirely different conception, Isa 66.1). Their kings, perhaps a reference to royal burials near the temple (cf. 2 Kings 21.18; 21.26), or perhaps a reference to royal "steles" erected in the temple area and commemorating the dead king (the final of the temple. ⁷He said to me: Mortal, this is the place of my throne and the place for the soles of my feet, where I will reside among the people of Israel forever. The house of Israel shall no more defile my holy name, neither they nor their kings, by their whoring, and by the corpses of their kings at their death.^h ⁸When they placed their threshold by my threshold and their doorposts beside my doorposts, with only a wall between me and them, they were defiling my holy name by their abominations that they committed; therefore I have consumed them in my anger. ⁹Now let them put away their idolatry and the corpses of their kings far from me, and I will reside among them forever.

¹⁰ As for you, mortal, describe the temple to the house of Israel, and let them measure the pattern; and let them be ashamed of their iniquities. ¹¹When they are ashamed of all that they have done, make known to them the plan of the temple, its arrangement, its exits and its entrances, and its whole form—all its ordinances and its entire plan and all its laws; and write it down in their sight, so that they may observe and follow the entire plan and all its ordinances. ¹²This is the law of the temple: the whole territory on the top of the mountain all around shall be most holy. This is the law of the temple.

The Altar

¹⁸ Then he said to me: Mortal, thus says the Lord God: These are the ordinances for the altar: On the day when it is erected for offering burnt offerings upon it and for dashing blood against it, ¹⁹you shall give to the levitical priests of the family of Zadok, who draw near to me to minister to me, says the Lord God, a bull for a sin offering. ²⁰And you shall take some of its blood, and put it on the four horns of the altar, and on the four corners of the ledge, and upon the rim all around; thus you shall purify it and make Hebrew phrase in the Masoretic Text is ambiguous). 43.8 A specific critique of the earlier proximity of palace to temple as well as more general reference to their abominations. 43.9 A challenge and promise to the present generation. 43.10 The first portion corresponds to the charge in 40.4 whereas let them measure . . . involves the people's pragmatic and emotional response. 43.11 In distinction to 40.4, Ezekiel is charged with writing down the plans for the temple. Its exits and its entrances, the permeable portions of the boundary between the sacred and the profane. 43.12 This is the law of the temple. Law is a translation of the Hebrew Torah. The claim is extraordinary, since Israel already knew an authoritative book of Torah (2 Kings 22.8). The whole territory . . . shall be most holy, the primary theme of Ezek 40–48.

43.13–27 The construction and consecration of the altar. 43.13–17 The dimensions of the altar, a stepped structure, with each ascending level smaller in area than the one before (base, 18 square cubits; lower ledge, 16 cubits; upper ledge 14 cubits; hearth with four horns, 12 square cubits). 43.13 Cubit. See note on 40.5. 43.15–16 This difficult term translated altar hearth, in the Hebrew looks like the phrase "the mountain of God" (v. 15) or "the lion of God." (vv. 15–16). The latter phrase is very similar to Ariel in Isa 29.1–2, 7. Some have suggested that the configuration of the altar as well as the Hebrew reflect the Mesopotamian ziggurat. 43.15 Archaeologists have discovered numerous stone altars with horns at the four corners of the top. Cf. Ex 27.2; 29.12; 1 Kings 1.50–51; Am 3.14. 43.17 The altar was so high, over twenty feet, that it required steps. 43.18–27 Consecration of the altar requires one week. 43.19 Family of Zadok. Only Zadokites, not all Levitical priests, may offer sacrifices on the altar. On the first day, both anointing rituals with blood (cf. Lev 16.18; Ex 29.16) and burnt offerings will take place. Sin offering. See Lev 4.1–5.13. 43.20 Purify . . . make atonement, both cleanse and remove any residual atonement for it. ²¹You shall also take the bull of the sin offering, and it shall be burnt in the appointed place belonging to the temple, outside the sacred area.

²² On the second day you shall offer a male goat without blemish for a sin offering; and the altar shall be purified, as it was purified with the bull. ²³When you have finished purifying it, you shall offer a bull without blemish and a ram from the flock without blemish. ²⁴You shall present them before the LORD, and the priests shall throw salt on them and offer them up as a burnt offering to the LORD. ²⁵For seven days you shall provide daily a goat for a sin offering; also a bull and a ram from the flock, without blemish, shall be provided. ²⁶Seven days shall they make atonement for the altar and cleanse it, and so consecrate it. ²⁷When these days are over, then from the eighth day onward the priests shall offer upon the altar your burnt offerings and your offerings of well-being; and I will accept you, says the Lord God.

The Closed Gate

44 Then he brought me back to the outer gate of the sanctuary, which faces east; and it was shut. ²The LORD said to me: This gate shall remain shut; it shall not be opened, and no one shall enter by it; for the LORD, the God of Israel, has entered by it; therefore it shall remain shut. ³Only the prince, because he is a prince, may sit in it to eat food before the LORD; he shall enter by way of the vestibule of the gate, and shall go out by the same way.

Admission to the Temple

⁴ Then he brought me by way of the north gate to the front of the temple; and I looked, and lo! the glory of the LORD filled the temple of the LORD; and I fell upon my face. ⁵The LORD said to me: Mortal, mark well, look closely, and listen attentively to all that I shall tell you concerning all the ordinances of the temple of the LORD and all its laws; and mark well those who may be admitted to the temple and all those who are to be excluded from the sanctuary. ⁶Say to the rebellious house,^k to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: O house of Israel, let there be an end to all your abominations ⁷in admitting foreigners, uncircumcised in heart and flesh, to be in my sanctuary, profaning my temple when you offer to me my food, the fat and the blood. You^l have broken my covenant with all your abominations. ⁸And you have not kept charge of my sacred offerings; but you have appointed foreigners^m to act for you in keeping my charge in my sanctuary.

⁹ Thus says the Lord God: No foreigner, uncircumcised in heart and flesh, of all the foreigners who are among the people of Israel, shall enter my sanctuary. ¹⁰But the Levites who went far from me, impurity; cf. Ex 29.36; Lev 8.15. 43.21 Outside the sacred area. See Lev 4.12, 21; 8.17. 43.22-24 The second day's offerings. 43.24 Salt is elsewhere used only for vegetarian offerings; see Lev 2.13; Num 18.19; 2 Chr 13.5; Ezek 47.11. 43.25-27 Seven days of offerings mirrors other rituals for dedication. (Ex 29.37; Lev 8.33, 35). 43.27 Offerings of well-being, RSV translation, "peace offerings," which priests and supplicants could eat; see Lev 3.1-17.

44.1-3 The exterior east gate closed. The east gate, described in 40.6-16, is shut because God is now in the temple. Such action makes the gate function as part of the wall, which is a boundary between the holy and the common (42.20). 44.2 The closed gate apparently symbolizes the final (43.7, 9) reentry of God into the temple. 44.3 The prince, the "civil" ruler in Ezekiel's new polity; see 46.1-18. Eat food before the LORD, i.e., consume food prepared as part of a sacrifice, e.g., a well-being sacrifice. What was a gate becomes a ritual dining area. 44.4-5 Reprise. These two verses recapitulate much in 40.4; 43.2-3, 12. One key difference is that the gate now used is the north one, presumably due to the closing of the east gate (44.2). In addition, v. 5b links the language of ordinances and laws to the ensuing regulations regarding admission to the temple complex. 44.6-16 Admission of priests to the temple. 44.6-8 The prophet inveighs against Israel for allowing foreigners to worship at the sanctuary; see similarly Lev 22.25 and contrast Isa 56.3-8. For specific instances, see 1 Chr 9.2; Neh 13.4-9. 44.7, 9 Uncircumcised in heart and flesh. Cf. Lev 26.41; Deut 10.16; Jer 4.4; 9.25. Consistent with Deut 23.2-4, no foreigners who reside in Judahite territory are to be allowed into the temple precinct. 44.10-14 The Levites, who were enfranchised to sacrifice in Deut 18.6-8, are demoted because of idolatrous behavior, though going astray from me after their idols when Israel went astray, shall bear their punishment. ¹¹They shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having oversight at the gates of the temple, and serving in the temple; they shall slaughter the burnt offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall attend on them and serve them. ¹²Because they ministered to them before their idols and made the house of Israel stumble into iniquity, therefore I have sworn concerning them, says the Lord God, that they shall bear their punishment. ¹³They shall not come near to me, to serve me as priest, nor come near any of my sacred offerings, the things that are most sacred; but they shall bear their shame, and the consequences of the abominations that they have committed. ¹⁴Yet I will appoint them to keep charge of the temple, to do all its chores, all that is to be done in it.

The Levitical Priests

¹⁵ But the levitical priests, the descendants of Zadok, who kept the charge of my sanctuary when the people of Israel went astray from me, shall come near to me to minister to me; and they shall attend me to offer me the fat and the blood, says the Lord God. ¹⁶It is they who shall enter my sanctuary, it is they who shall approach my table, to minister to me, and they shall keep my charge. ¹⁷When they enter the gates of the inner court, they shall wear linen vestments; they shall have nothing of wool on them, while they minister at the gates of the inner court, and within. ¹⁸They shall have linen turbans on their heads, and linen undergarments on their loins; they shall not bind themselves with anything that causes sweat. ¹⁹When they go out into the outer court to the people, they shall remove the vestments in which they have been ministering, and lay them in the holy chambers; and they shall put on other garments, so that they may not communicate holiness to the people with their vestments. ²⁰They shall not shave their heads or let their locks grow long; they shall only trim the hair of their heads. ²¹No priest shall drink wine when he enters the inner court. ²²They shall not marry a widow, or a divorced woman, but only a virgin of the stock of the house of Israel, or a widow who is the widow of a priest. ²³They shall teach my people the difference between the holy and the common, and show them how to distinguish between the unclean and the clean. ²⁴In a controversy they shall act as judges, and they shall decide it according to my judgments. They shall keep my laws and my statutes regarding all my appointed festivals, and they shall keep my sabbaths holy. ²⁵They shall not defile themselves by going near to a dead person; for father or mother, however, and for son or daughter, and for brother or unmarried sister they may defile themselves. ²⁶After he has become clean, they shall count seven days for him. ²⁷On the day that he goes into the holy place, into the inner court, to minister in the holy place, he shall offer his sin offering, says the Lord God.

²⁸ This shall be their inheritance: I am their inheritance; and you shall give them no holding in Israel; I am their holding. ²⁹They shall eat the grain offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offer-

no specific charges are leveled. Nonetheless, they are to have a role in the temple compound, i.e., oversight of the gates and preparation of sacrifices, the more so since foreigners have been barred from such activity. 44.15–16 The Zadokites, because of past orthodox behavior, will conduct sacrifices. Zadok, a priest in Jerusalem when David ruled (2 Sam 20.25), became prominent during Solomon's reign (1 Kings 1.41–45). 44.16 My table. See 41.22.

44.17–31 Priestly duties. 44.17–18 Priestly apparel. Linen. See note on 9.1–2. 44.19 Cf. the description of holy chambers (42.1–14). Communicate holiness. See note on 46.20. 44.20 Tonsure is forbidden; cf. Lev 21.5. Deut 14.1–2 indicates that shaving one's head as a form of lam-

Deut 33.8–10. 44.24 Act as judges. Cf. Ex 22.9 for such a case; Deut 17.8–9; 19.17; 21.1–5. 44.25 Corpse defilement. See Lev 21.1–3; Num 19. 44.26 For the laity it takes seven days to remove corpse defilement, twice that for priests. 44.28 No holding. Cf. the rsv translation, “no inheritance,” i.e., the tradition that the Levitical priests had no land holdings (Num 18.20–24; Josh 13.14; 18.7); cf. Ezek 45.1–5; 48.8–14. 44.29 On the priestly portion of the grain offering, see Lev 2.3, the sin offering, Lev 6.24, and the guilt offering, Lev 7.6; more generally, see Num 18.9–13. On every devoted

ing; and every devoted thing in Israel shall be theirs. ³⁰The first of all the first fruits of all kinds, and every offering of all kinds from all your offerings, shall belong to the priests; you shall also give to the priests the first of your dough, in order that a blessing may rest on your house. ³¹The priests shall not eat of anything, whether bird or animal, that died of itself or was torn by animals.

The Holy District

45 When you allot the land as an inheritance, you shall set aside for the LORD a portion of the land as a holy district, twenty-five thousand cubits long and twentyⁿ thousand cubits wide; it shall be holy throughout its entire extent. ²Of this, a square plot of five hundred by five hundred cubits shall be for the sanctuary, with fifty cubits for an open space around it. ³In the holy district you shall measure off a section twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand wide, in which shall be the sanctuary, the most holy place. ⁴It shall be a holy portion of the land; it shall be for the priests, who minister in the sanctuary and approach the LORD to minister to him; and it shall be both a place for their houses and a holy place for the sanctuary. ⁵Another section, twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand cubits wide, shall be for the Levites who minister at the temple, as their holding for cities to live in.^o

6 Alongside the portion set apart as the holy district you shall assign as a holding for the city an area five thousand cubits wide, and twenty-five thousand cubits long; it shall belong to the whole house of Israel.

7 And to the prince shall belong the land on both sides of the holy district and the holding of the city, alongside the holy district and the holding of the city, on the west and on the east, corresponding in length to one of the tribal portions, and extending from the western to the eastern boundary ⁸of the land. It is to be his property in Israel. And my princes shall no longer oppress my people; but they shall let the house of Israel have the land according to their tribes.

9 Thus says the Lord God: Enough, O princes of Israel! Put away violence and oppression, and do what is just and right. Cease your evictions of my people, says the Lord God.

Weights and Measures

10 You shall have honest balances, an honest ephah, and an honest bath.^p ¹¹The ephah and the bath shall be of the same measure, the bath containing one-tenth of a homer, and the ephah one-tenth of a homer; the homer shall be the standard measure. ¹²The shekel shall be thing, cf. Num 18.14; Lev 27.28-29. 44.30 On other priestly income, cf. Num 18.25-30. Dough. Cf. the RSV translation, "coarse meal." 44.31 See Ex 22.31; Lev 17.15, where the prohibition applies to all people, but cf. Lev 22.8, where the stipulation devolves specifically on priests.

45.1-8 Instruction about a holy district in the restored land, which treats the matter of priestly inheritance differently than does 44.28 and continues the distinction between Levites and priests. 45.1 Inheritance, i.e., in perpetuity; see 48.14. The district is a square plot, 25,000 cubits on a side. Cf. the longer description of land divisions in 48.8-22. 45.2 Land for the sanctuary, a plot 500 cubits square, and open space; cf. 42.20; 48.8, 17. 45.3-4 The share of the land for the priests. According to 48.10, the temple is located in this priestly allotment. 45.5 The Levites' share. The forty-eight Levitical cities (Josh 21.1-42) are all to be located in this section. 45.6 Land for the city. Cf. 48.15-20. 45.7 The prince's portion, which lies to the east and west of all three other allocations. 45.9 Princes of Israel, language reminiscent of Ezekiel before 587 B.C.E. (e.g., 21.12), which in this context may have been secondarily applied to the priests in the new polity. On earlier evictions, see 1 Kings 21.1-16; Isa 5.8; Mic 2.2. But land possession was important for Ezekiel as well, e.g., 11.14-16.

45.10-12 Dry volume and weight. Not only are measures standardized, Israel is admonished to adhere to them. Such admonitions are consistent with earlier stipulations (Lev 19.35-36; Deut 25.13-16). Earlier prophets had inveighed against violation of standard measures, e.g., Am 8.5; Mic 6.10-11. Cf. Prov 11.1; 20.10. The base for dry measurement was the homer (the Hebrew word suggests that it was the load one donkey could bear), approximately 5-6 bushels. The shekel (the standard for weight) weighed a little less than one-half ounce, though both a "heavy" and a "light" shekel are known—thus justifying such a call for standardization.

Offerings

13 This is the offering that you shall make: one-sixth of an ephah from each homer of wheat, and one-sixth of an ephah from each homer of barley, ¹⁴and as the fixed portion of oil, ^q one-tenth of a bath from each cor (the cor, ^r like the homer, contains ten baths); ¹⁵and one sheep from every flock of two hundred, from the pastures of Israel. This is the offering for grain offerings, burnt offerings, and offerings of well-being, to make atonement for them, says the Lord God. ¹⁶All the people of the land shall join with the prince in Israel in making this offering. ¹⁷But this shall be the obligation of the prince regarding the burnt offerings, grain offerings, and drink offerings, at the festivals, the new moons, and the sabbaths, all the appointed festivals of the house of Israel: he shall provide the sin offerings, grain offerings, the burnt offerings, and the offerings of well-being, to make atonement for the house of Israel.

Festivals

18 Thus says the Lord God: In the first month, on the first day of the month, you shall take a young bull without blemish, and purify the sanctuary. ¹⁹The priest shall take some of the blood of the sin offering and put it on the doorposts of the temple, the four corners of the ledge of the altar, and the posts of the gate of the inner court. ²⁰You shall do the same on the seventh day of the month for anyone who has sinned through error or ignorance; so you shall make atonement for the temple.

²¹In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month, you shall celebrate the festival of the passover, and for seven days unleavened bread shall be eaten. ²²On that day the prince shall provide for himself and all the people of the land a young bull for a sin offering. ²³And during the seven days of the festival he shall provide as a burnt offering to the LORD seven young bulls and seven rams without blemish, on each of the seven days; and a male goat daily for a sin offering. ²⁴He shall provide as a grain offering an ephah for each bull, an ephah for each ram, and a hin of oil to each ephah. ²⁵In the seventh month, on the fifteenth day of the month and for the seven days of the festival, he shall make the same provision for sin offerings, burnt offerings, and grain offerings, and for the oil.

Miscellaneous Regulations

46 Thus says the Lord God: The gate of the inner court that faces east shall remain closed on the six working days; but on the sabbath day it shall be opened and on the day of the new moon it shall be opened. ²The prince shall enter

45.13–17 Offerings, which follow in the measures just defined. The people's agricultural products (grain, olive oil, livestock) are subject to a tax of the following percentages: grain (1.5 percent, olive oil (1 percent), livestock (.5 percent); these are payable in the form of offerings in kind (grain offerings, burnt offerings, and offerings of well-being). 45.16 Cf. the RSV translation, "all the people of the land shall give this offering to the prince of Israel." 45.17 The prince is subject to a higher tax; cf. 45.22–46.15 on the prince's obligations for the sacrificial system.

45.18–25 Rites of purification and festivals. 45.18–20 An otherwise unattested annual rite of temple purification; cf. 43.18–27 for the use of blood in purification rites and Lev 16 on the Day of Atonement. 45.20 Purification of the individual (anyone), though the text is difficult. 45.21–25 Passover and Festival of Booths (Tabernacles). Ezekiel has revised significantly the standard festival calendar (cf. Num 28) by highlighting these two primary feasts. 45.21 Calendar for the Passover celebration. 45.22–24 The prince's responsibilities for Passover sacrifices. 45.25 The festival, the fall harvest festival otherwise known as Booths, Ingathering, or Tabernacles. Cf. Lev 23.33–36; Num 29.12–38; Deut 16.13–15, where it continues for eight days.

46.1–18 Stipulations regarding the prince. 46.1–7 The prince and sacrifices. The inner east gate is to be closed except on the sabbath and new moon (cf. the closing of the exterior east gate [44.1–3]). When the prince enters and moves through the gate to stand at the interior door with the appropriate offerings (v. 2), the priests will perform his sacrifices. By contrast, the people of the land (v. 3) may only come near the outside open-by the vestibule of the gate from outside, and shall take his stand by the post of the gate. The priests shall offer his burnt offering and his offerings of well-being, and he shall bow down at the threshold of the gate. Then he shall go out, but the gate shall not be closed until evening. ³The people of the land shall bow down at the entrance of that gate before the LORD on the sabbaths and on the new moons. ⁴The burnt offering that the prince offers to the LORD on the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish and a ram without blemish; ⁵and the grain offering with the ram shall be an ephah, and the grain offering with the lambs shall be as much as he wishes to give, together with a hin of oil to each ephah. ⁶On the day of the new moon he shall offer a young bull without blemish, and six lambs and a ram, which shall be without blemish; ⁷as a grain offering he shall provide an ephah with the bull and an ephah with the ram, and with the lambs as much as he wishes, together with a hin of oil to each ephah. ⁸When the prince enters, he shall come in by the vestibule of the gate, and he shall go out by the same way.

⁹ When the people of the land come before the LORD at the appointed festivals, whoever enters by the north gate to worship shall go out by the south gate; and whoever enters by the south gate shall go out by the north gate: they shall not return by way of the gate by which they entered, but shall go out straight ahead. ¹⁰When they come in, the prince shall come in with them; and when they go out, he shall go out.

¹¹ At the festivals and the appointed seasons the grain offering with a young bull shall be an ephah, and with a ram an ephah, and with the lambs as much as one wishes to give, together with a hin of oil to an ephah. ¹²When the prince provides a freewill offering, either a burnt offering or offerings of well-being as a freewill offering to the LORD, the gate facing east shall be opened for him; and he shall offer his burnt offering or his offerings of well-being as he does on the sabbath day. Then he shall go out, and after he has gone out the gate shall be closed.

¹³ He shall provide a lamb, a yearling, without blemish, for a burnt offering to the LORD daily; morning by morning he shall provide it. ¹⁴And he shall provide a grain offering with it morning by morning regularly, one-sixth of an ephah, and one-third of a hin of oil to moisten the choice flour, as a grain offering to the LORD; this is the ordinance for all time. ¹⁵Thus the lamb and the grain offering and the oil shall be provided, morning by morning, as a regular burnt offering.

ing of the gate. 46.4 On the sabbath sacrifices, cf. those in Num 28.9–10. 46.6 On new moon sacrifices, cf. those in Num 28.11–15. 46.8–10 Entering and exiting during festivals. As with v. 2, the prince approaches the interior east gate from the outside and proceeds to the inner door. Though he makes ritual entrance at the same time as the people, they must use different exterior gates from those through which they entered. Moreover they must move according to either a north-south or south-north axis, apparently a form of traffic control during major festivals. 46.11 See v. 7. 46.12–15 Instructions for the prince when making a freewill (noncalendrical) or daily (calendrical) offering. On the freewill or voluntary offering, which may result from payment of a vow, see Lev 22.18–23; on the daily offering, see Num 28.3–8. 46.16–18 The prince's land (45.7; 48.21–22) may be inherited by his sons, but it is to remain in that family in perpetuity. Such land could be temporarily granted to someone outside, one of his servants, but the land would revert to kin ownership on the year of liberty, i.e., the year of release associated with the jubilee celebration (Lev 25.8–17). 46.18a The prince is not to take others' inheritance; cf. note on 45.9.

46.19–24 Sacrifice preparation areas for priests and laity. Near the inner north gate and in the holy chambers, there is a room where priests entrance, which was at the side of the gate, to the north row of the holy chambers for the priests; and there I saw a place at the extreme western end of them. ²⁰He said to me, "This is the place where the priests shall boil the guilt offering and the sin offering, and where they shall bake the grain offering, in order not to bring them out into the outer court and so communicate holiness to the people."

²¹Then he brought me out to the outer court, and led me past the four corners of the court; and in each corner of the court there was a court— ²²in the four corners of the court were small courts, forty cubits long and thirty wide; the four were of the same size. ²³On the inside, around each of the four courts^t was a row of masonry, with hearths made at the bottom of the rows all around. ²⁴Then he said to me, "These are the kitchens where those who serve at the temple shall boil the sacrifices of the people."

Water Flowing from the Temple

47 Then he brought me back to the entrance of the temple; there, water was flowing from below the threshold of the temple toward the east (for the temple faced east); and the water was flowing down from below the south end of the threshold of the temple, south of the altar. ²Then he brought me out by way of the north gate, and led me around on the outside to the outer gate that faces toward the east;^v and the water was coming out on the south side.

³ Going on eastward with a cord in his hand, the man measured one thousand cubits, and then led me through the water; and it was ankle-deep. ⁴Again he measured one thousand, and led me through the water; and it was knee-deep. Again he measured one thousand, and led me through the water; and it was up to the waist. ⁵Again he measured one thousand, and it was a river that I could not cross, for the water had risen; it was deep enough to swim in, a river that could not be crossed. ⁶He said to me, "Mortal, have you seen this?"

Then he led me back along the bank of the river. ⁷As I came back, I saw on the bank of the river a great many trees on the one side and on the other. ⁸He said to me, "This water flows toward the eastern region and goes down into the Arabah; and when it enters the sea, the sea of stagnant waters, the water will become fresh. ⁹Wherever the river goes,^w every living creature that swarms will live, and there will be very many fish, once these waters reach there. It will become fresh; and everything will live where the river goes. ¹⁰People will stand fishing beside the prepare the guilt, sin, and grain offerings; cf. 42.13. 46.20 Communicate holiness to the people. The holy is a threat to the people, e.g., when Uzzah touched the ark and died (2 Sam 6.6–7); cf. 44.19. 46.21–24 Sizable cooking areas in the four corners of the exterior court. Those who serve at the temple, i.e., the Levites, prepare foodstuffs on behalf of the people; cf. 2 Chr 35.11–13.

47.1–12 The guide returns to show Ezekiel a stream flowing out from beneath the temple, past the altar and out from under the exterior east gate. Water imagery had already been associated with the presence of the deity (1.24; 43.2). The river apparently reflects the motif of the deity's garden or dwelling as a watery and fertile place (e.g., Gen 2.10–14; Ps 46.4), which clearly links the river to Jerusalem; see note on 28.2. Late prophetic writings—Joel 3.18 ("a fountain shall come forth from the house of the LORD and water the Wadi Shittim") and Zech 13.1; 14.8 ("on that day living waters shall flow out from Jerusalem")—share Ezekiel's basic expectation. 47.2 The flow is to the southeast. 47.3–5 The man takes four measurements at 1,000 cubit intervals, which reveals that the river is growing progressively larger and deeper—it is ankle-deep, knee-deep, up to the waist, and finally could not be crossed. 47.6–7 As they retrace their steps, Ezekiel observes the fertile growth on the riverbanks; cf. descriptions of the Jordan banks (Jer 12.5; Zech 11.3). 47.8 The river continues southeast into the Arabah, which means here the Jordan rift valley just north of the sea, the Dead Sea. The water will become fresh; cf. 2 Kings 2.22 for the same Hebrew expression. 47.9–12 The river as a source of fertility. 47.9 The river goes. The Masoretic tradition reads "the two rivers go," which reflects an expectation of two rivers attested in Zech 14.8. The verse utilizes vocabulary from Gen 1 (living creature, swarms, fish). 47.10 Fish will be prolific and the fishing excellent (cf. 26.5, 14 on earlier fishing imagery). En-gedi, an oasis with spring, waterfall, and small canyon on the western bank of the Dead Sea. En-glain. Site unknown, though sea^x from En-gedi to En-eglaim; it will be a place for the spreading of nets; its fish will be of a great many kinds, like the fish of the Great Sea. ¹¹But its swamps and marshes will not become fresh; they are to be left for salt. ¹²On the banks, on both sides of the river, there will grow all kinds of trees for food. Their leaves will not wither nor their fruit fail, but they will bear fresh fruit every month, because the water for them flows from the sanctuary. Their fruit will be for food, and their leaves for healing."

The New Boundaries of the Land

13 Thus says the Lord GOD: These are the boundaries by which you shall divide the land for inheritance among the twelve tribes of Israel. Joseph shall have two portions. ¹⁴You shall divide it equally; I swore to give it to your ancestors, and this land shall fall to you as your inheritance.

15 This shall be the boundary of the land: On the north side, from the Great Sea by way of Hethlon to Lebo-hamath, and on to Zedad,^y ¹⁶Berothah, Sibraim (which lies between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath), as far as Hazar-hatticon, which is on the border of Hauran. ¹⁷So the boundary shall run from the sea to Hazar-enon, which is north of the border of Damascus, with the border of Hamath to the north.^z This shall be the north side.

18 On the east side, between Hauran and Damascus; along the Jordan between Gilead and the land of Israel; to the eastern sea and as far as Tamar.^a This shall be the east side.

19 On the south side, it shall run from Tamar as far as the waters of Meribath-kadesh, from there along the Wadi of Egypt^b to the Great Sea. This shall be the south side.

20 On the west side, the Great Sea shall be the boundary to a point opposite Lebo-hamath. This shall be the west side.

21 So you shall divide this land among you according to the tribes of Israel. ²²You shall allot it as an inheritance for yourselves and for the aliens who reside among you and have begotten children among you. They shall be to you as citizens of Israel; with you they shall be allotted an inheritance among the tribes of Israel. ²³In whatever tribe aliens reside, there you shall assign them their inheritance, says the Lord GOD.

The Tribal Portions

48 These are the names of the tribes: Beginning at the northern border, on the Hethlon road,^c from Lebo-hamath, as far as Hazar-enon (which is on the border of Damascus, with Hamath to the north), and^d extending from the east side to the west,^e Dan, one some scholars think it lies on the eastern bank of the Dead Sea. Like the fish of the Great Sea, which probably refers to a prolific fishery and not specific salt-water species. 47.11 Saline wetlands will be preserved, not for ecological reasons but for salt production, i.e., they are to be left for salt, which was used in ritual practice (43.24). 47.12 Cf. v. 7, a picture of preternatural fertility: deciduous trees whose leaves do not fall and that bear fruit every month. The fertility provides for food and healing. All this is attributable to the source of the river: the sanctuary.

47.13-48.29 New configuration of the land. 47.13-22 Boundaries and allocation of the land. This process suggests Ezekiel envisions a new settlement preceded by a new exodus and wilderness wanderings (20.33-35). 47.13 Joseph ... two portions, i.e., Manasseh and Ephraim, 48.4-5. 47.14 What was promised to the ancestors will be fulfilled for a future generation.

47.15-21 The idealized perimeter boundary of the land: on the north, basically Damascus to the coast; on the east, the Jordan; south, a line through Kadesh-barnea on the southern side; and west, the Mediterranean. Cf. earlier Israelites, e.g., in Num 34; Josh 15. Striking is the absence of Transjordanian tribal land (Num 34.13-15). 47.22-23 Quite a liberal allowance concerning inheritance and aliens. Cf. Lev 19.34; 24.22; Num 15.29; Deut 23.2-8 on the status of the so-called resident aliens. In order to "inherit" land, the alien family must be of two generations. 48.1-29 Boundaries inside the land. 48.1-7 Tribal allocations to the north of the holy sector (vv. 8-22): Dan, Asher, Naphtali, Manasseh, Ephraim, Ruben, Judah. Each tribe receives an equal portion of land. The grants are strips of land that extend from the eastern to western borders. The rationale for the ordering of the tribal land is unclear, e.g., Benjamin south of Judah. Cf.

⁸ Adjoining the territory of Judah, from the east side to the west, shall be the portion that you shall set apart, twenty-five thousand cubits in width, and in length equal to one of the tribal portions, from the east side to the west, with the sanctuary in the middle of it. ⁹The portion that you shall set apart for the LORD shall be twenty-five thousand cubits in length, and twenty^f thousand in width. ¹⁰These shall be the allotments of the holy portion: the priests shall have an allotment measuring twenty-five thousand cubits on the northern side, ten thousand cubits in width on the western side, ten thousand in width on the eastern side, and twenty-five thousand in length on the southern side, with the sanctuary of the LORD in the middle of it. ¹¹This shall be for the consecrated priests, the descendants^g of Zadok, who kept my charge, who did not go astray when the people of Israel went astray, as the Levites did. ¹²It shall belong to them as a special portion from the holy portion of the land, a most holy place, adjoining the territory of the Levites. ¹³Alongside the territory of the priests, the Levites shall have an allotment twenty-five thousand cubits in length and ten thousand in width. The whole length shall be twenty-five thousand cubits and the width twenty^h thousand. ¹⁴They shall not sell or exchange any of it; they shall not transfer this choice portion of the land, for it is holy to the LORD.

¹⁵ The remainder, five thousand cubits in width and twenty-five thousand in length, shall be for ordinary use for the city, for dwellings and for open country. In the middle of it shall be the city; ¹⁶and these shall be its dimensions: the north side four thousand five hundred cubits, the south side four thousand five hundred, the east side four thousand five hundred, and the west side four thousand five hundred. ¹⁷The city shall have open land: on the north two hundred fifty cubits, on the south two hundred fifty, on the east two hundred fifty, on the west two hundred fifty. ¹⁸The remainder of the length alongside the holy portion shall be ten thousand cubits to the east, and ten thousand to the west, and it shall be alongside the holy portion. Its produce shall be food for the workers of the city. ¹⁹The workers of the city, from all the tribes of Israel, shall cultivate it. ²⁰The whole portion that you shall set apart shall be twenty-five thousand cubits square, that is, the holy portion together with the property of the city.

²¹ What remains on both sides of the holy portion and of the property of the city shall belong to the prince. Extending from the twenty-five thousand cubits of the holy portion to the east border, and westward from the twenty-five thousand cubits to the west border, parallel to the tribal portions, it shall belong to the prince. The holy portion with the sanctuary of the temple in the middle of it, ²²and the property of the Levites and of the city, shall be in the middle of that which belongs to the prince. DANIEL

THE BOOK APPEARING UNDER THE NAME OF DANIEL is actually by an unknown author. A Daniel is mentioned in Ezek 14.14–20; 28.3 as a righteous sage of antiquity alongside two non-Israelite heroes of the Hebrew Bible, Noah and Job. A non-Israelite Daniel (or Danel) is mentioned as a just judge in the Aqhat legend from Ugarit (fourteenth century B.C.E.). The name of such a wise and righteous legendary figure was probably chosen to enhance the text.

Genre and Structure

The book as a whole is usually described as an apocalypse, a genre in which revelation is mediated in a narrative framework to a human recipient through otherworldly beings. Apocalypses often use conventions such as pseudonymity and employ a variety of literary forms. Daniel is the only full-fledged example of the genre in the Hebrew Bible but other examples include Revelation and the pseudepigraphical books of 1 Enoch and 2 Baruch. The book of Daniel has two distinct parts, a collection of stories in chs. 1–6 and four visions in chs. 7–12. The stories, narrated mostly in the third person, are about a Jew named Daniel and his companions, who are among the prisoners from Jerusalem taken into exile to Babylon. The visions, largely in the first person, are received by Daniel. The two parts are unified by the narrative framework and the character, Daniel.

Setting, Date, and Languages

The portrayal of Daniel as a Jewish exile in Babylon creates a literary setting in the sixth century B.C.E. The visions he receives there thus appear to provide insight into events in Judea in later centuries. But the literary setting is not the setting in which the book was actually written. The fact that ch. 11 obviously refers to Antiochus IV Epiphanes, the Seleucid ruler from Syria, makes it clear that the book took its final form during Antiochus's persecution of the Jews, which began with the desecration of the temple in 167 B.C.E. While one group of Jews led by the Maccabees resisted militarily, others offered passive resistance (1 Macc 1.29–38).

Much of the material in chs. 1–6 probably originated in the fourth and third centuries B.C.E. and circulated independently before being joined to the visions. The inaccurate description of the end of Antiochus's reign and of his death indicates that the book was finished before these took place in 164 B.C.E. The process by which the book was composed is further complicated by the fact that it is written in two languages, Hebrew (1.1–2.4a; 8.1–12.13) and Aramaic (2.4b–7.28). The language divisions do not correspond to the content divisions.

Authorship and Audience

Clues scattered through the book indicate that the author (or authors) belonged to “the wise,” those faithful to the covenant and supporters of Jewish religious practice in the midst of Antiochus's persecution, but not advocates of active resistance. They are sometimes identified with the Hasidim, but this term has been used so indiscriminately that it is of little value here. The tales were probably originally composed for a general audience in the eastern Diaspora, the visions for a more learned audience in Judea.

Intention

As a whole, the book of Daniel encourages and consoles Jews facing persecution in the reign of Antiochus. In chs. 1–6, it provides them with heroic role models of Jews who thrive because they remain faithful to Jewish law while serving a foreign king. In chs. 7–12, it holds out promise of deliverance in the new kingdom of God for those who remain faithful in the face of persecution. Together these messages enunciate the book's major theme of God's sovereign control of history.

Place in the Canon

Daniel's place among the prophetic books derives from its location in the Greek Septuagint canon. The Hebrew canon, on the other hand, places it among the Writings, between Esther and Ezra. The placement of the book bears significantly on the history of its interpretation as prophecy or apocalyptic. The book itself, however, is the shorter version of Daniel preserved in the Hebrew canon. The two major Greek versions, the Septuagint and the Theodotion, contain the Prayer of Azariah (3.24–45), the Song of the Three Jews (3.46–90), and the stories of Susanna (13.1–64), Bel (14.1–22), and the Dragon (14.23–42). These additions are found in the Apocrypha. Manuscript fragments of Daniel were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls in three caves in Qumran. Two other compositions linked with the name of Daniel were also found there: the Prayer of Nabonidus and, in fragmentary form, the Apocalypse of Pseudo-Daniel.

Four Young Israelites at the Babylonian Court

1 In the third year of the reign of King Jehoiakim of Judah, King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon came to Jerusalem and besieged it. ²The Lord let King Jehoiakim of Judah fall into his power, as well as some of the vessels of the house of God. These he brought to the land of Shinar,^a and placed the vessels in the treasury of his gods.

⁶Among them were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, from the tribe of Judah. ⁷The palace master gave them other names: Daniel he called Belteshazzar, Hananiah he called Shadrach, Mishael he called Meshach, and Azariah he called Abednego.

⁸ But Daniel resolved that he would not defile himself with the royal rations of food and wine; so he asked the palace master to allow him not to defile himself. ⁹Now God allowed Daniel to receive favor and compassion from the palace master. ¹⁰The palace master said to Daniel, "I am afraid of my lord the king; he has appointed your food and your drink. If he should see you in poorer condition than the other young men of your own age, you would endanger my head with the king." ¹¹Then Daniel asked the guard whom the palace master had appointed over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: ¹²"Please test your servants for ten

1.1–6.28 The edifying popular tales in chs. 1–6 are linked to the visions in chs. 7–12 by the central character, Daniel, and a focus on the sovereignty and power of God. They incorporate older, traditional material and exhibit many characteristics of folklore including stereotyped characters, stylized plots, marvelous interventions, and extensive repetition and elaboration. In chs. 2, 4, and 5 wise courtiers compete to interpret dreams and visions, while in chs. 3 and 6, Jewish courtiers are miraculously delivered from mortal danger after coming into conflict with foreign courtiers and their king. There are many parallels with the stories of Joseph (Gen 39–41), Mordecai (Esther), and the Assyrian story of Ahikar. 1.1–21 This introduction in Hebrew to the Aramaic stories in chs. 2–6 sets the time, place, and general circumstance of exile in Babylon and introduces five of the eight major characters in the remaining stories. days. Let us be given vegetables to eat and water to drink. ¹³You can then compare our appearance with the appearance of the young men who eat the royal rations, and deal with your servants according to what you observe.” ¹⁴So he agreed to this proposal and tested them for ten days. ¹⁵At the end of ten days it was observed that they appeared better and fatter than all the young men who had been eating the royal rations. ¹⁶So the guard continued to withdraw their royal rations and the wine they were to drink, and gave them vegetables. ¹⁷To these four young men God gave knowledge and skill in every aspect of literature and wisdom; Daniel also had insight into all visions and dreams.

¹⁸ At the end of the time that the king had set for them to be brought in, the palace master brought them into the presence of Nebuchadnezzar, ¹⁹and the king spoke with them. And among them all, no one was found to compare with Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; therefore they were stationed in the king's court. ²⁰In every matter of wisdom and understanding concerning which the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters in his whole kingdom. ²¹And Daniel continued there until the first year of King Cyrus.

Nebuchadnezzar's Dream

2 In the second year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed such dreams that his spirit was troubled and his sleep left him. ²So the king commanded that the magicians, the enchanters, the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans be summoned to tell the king his dreams. When they came in and stood before the king, ³he said to them, “I have had such a dream that my spirit is troubled by the desire to understand it.” ⁴The Chaldeans said to the king (in Aramaic),^b “O king, live forever! Tell your servants the dream, and we will reveal the interpretation.” ⁵The king answered the Chaldeans, “This is a public decree: if you do not tell me both the dream and its interpretation, you shall be torn limb from limb, and your houses shall be laid in ruins. ⁶But if you do tell me the dream and its interpretation, you shall receive from me gifts and rewards and great honor. Therefore tell me the dream and its interpretation.” ⁷They answered a second time, “Let the king first tell his servants the dream, then we can give its interpretation.” ⁸The king answered, “I know with certainty that you are trying to gain time, because you see I have firmly decreed: ⁹if

In Dan 1.20, the four Jews prove to be ten times better. 1.20 The Hebrew term translated magicians is derived from Egyptian and found only in the stories of Joseph (Gen 41.8, 24) and Moses and Aaron (Ex 7.11, 22; 8.3, 14, 15; 9.11), both of which are set at the Egyptian royal court. Enchanters, a term derived from Akkadian meaning “incantation priest”; see 2.2; 4.7; 5.7. 1.21 First year of King Cyrus, 539 B.C.E., the end of Daniel's service at the royal court but not the end of his career, which continues until 536 B.C.E. 2.1–49 God's superiority demonstrated through a contest to interpret a king's dream; in this contest the wisdom skills of Daniel are pitted against those of the Babylonian wise men. The plot is similar to the Joseph story (Gen 41) and the Assyrian story of Ahikar. Duplications (e.g., 2.16, 25) and inconsistencies (e.g., 2.34–35, 45) suggest an older story was expanded. 2.1 Second year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign, 603 B.C.E.; this is inconsis-

Chaldeans*. See 1.4, 20. Originally these terms designated different religious specialists, but here they are used synonymously; see 4.7. To tell . . . his dreams, a difficult task (repeated in 2.6, 9). Providing interpretations was a common practice, attested in numerous Mesopotamian divination tablets, but not the telling of the dream itself (2.11). 2.4 O king, live forever, a royal greeting used for Persian kings until the Islamic period (beginning in the mid-seventh century C.E.); see 3.9; 5.10; 6.6, 21. 2.5 On the threat of punishment, see 2.9, 12. Torn . . . laid in ruins. See 3.29. 2.6 On the promise of reward, see 2.48. 2.9 This verse suggests the king has not you do not tell me the dream, there is but one verdict for you. You have agreed to speak lying and misleading words to me until things take a turn. Therefore, tell me the dream, and I shall know that you can give me its interpretation.”¹⁰ The Chaldeans answered the king, “There is no one on earth who can reveal what the king demands! In fact no king, however great and powerful, has ever asked such a thing of any magician or enchanter or Chaldean.”¹¹ The thing that the king is asking is too difficult, and no one can reveal it to the king except the gods, whose dwelling is not with mortals.”

¹² Because of this the king flew into a violent rage and commanded that all the wise men of Babylon be destroyed. ¹³ The decree was issued, and the wise men were about to be executed; and they looked for Daniel and his companions, to execute them. ¹⁴ Then Daniel responded with prudence and discretion to Arioch, the king’s chief executioner, who had gone out to execute the wise men of Babylon; ¹⁵ he asked Arioch, the royal official, “Why is the decree of the king so urgent?” Arioch then explained the matter to Daniel. ¹⁶ So Daniel went in and requested that the king give him time and he would tell the king the interpretation.

God Reveals Nebuchadnezzar’s Dream

¹⁷ Then Daniel went to his home and informed his companions, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, ¹⁸ and told them to seek mercy from the God of heaven concerning this mystery, so that Daniel and his companions with the rest of the wise men of Babylon might not perish. ¹⁹ Then the mystery was revealed to Daniel in a vision of the night, and Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

²⁰ Daniel said:

- “Blessed be the name of God
from age to age,
for wisdom and power are his.
²¹ He changes times and seasons, deposes kings and sets up kings;
he gives wisdom to the wise and knowledge to those who have understanding.
²² He reveals deep and hidden
things;
he knows what is in the
darkness,
and light dwells with him.
²³ To you, O God of my ancestors, I give thanks and praise,
for you have given me wisdom and power,
and have now revealed to me
what we asked of you,
for you have revealed to us what the king ordered.”

Daniel Interprets the Dream

²⁴ Therefore Daniel went to Arioch, whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babylon, and said to him, “Do not destroy the wise men of Babylon; bring me in before the king, and I will give the king the interpretation.”

²⁵ Then Arioch quickly brought Daniel before the king and said to him: “I have found among the exiles from Judah a man who can tell the king the interpretation.” ²⁶ The king said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, “Are you able to tell me the dream that I have seen and its interpretation?” ²⁷ Daniel answered the king, “No wise men, enchanters, magicians, or diviners can show to the king the mystery that the king is asking, ²⁸ but there is a God in heaven who reveals mysteries, and he has disclosed to King Nebuchadnezzar what will happen at the end of forgotten his dreams but is testing the competence of the wise men. 2.11 The task exceeds human ability. 2.13–23 Widely regarded as a late addition to harmonize with ch. 1. Daniel has direct access to the king, in contrast to 2.24 where Arioch introduces him to the king as an exile. 2.17 See 1.6–7; 2.49. 2.18 The God of heaven, a Persian title for the Jewish God, occurs frequently in texts from the Persian period (539 B.C.E.) onward; see 2.19, 37, 44; Ezra 1.2; 5.11, 12; 6.9, 10; 7.12, 21, 23; Neh 1.4, 5; 2.4, 20; Jon 1.9; Tob 10.11; Jdt 5.8; 6.19; 11.17. Mystery, a loanword from Old Persian meaning something secret, implies knowledge gained through divine revelation, not conventional wisdom. days. Your dream and the visions of your head as you lay in bed were these: ²⁹To you, O king, as you lay in bed, came thoughts of what would be hereafter, and the revealer of mysteries disclosed to you what is to be. ³⁰But as for me, this mystery has not been revealed to me because of any wisdom that I have more than any other living being, but in order that the interpretation may be known to the king and that you may understand the thoughts of your mind.

³¹ "You were looking, O king, and lo! there was a great statue. This statue was huge, its brilliance extraordinary; it was standing before you, and its appearance was frightening. ³²The head of that statue was of fine gold, its chest and arms of silver, its middle and thighs of bronze, ³³its legs of iron, its feet partly of iron and partly of clay. ³⁴As you looked on, a stone was cut out, not by human hands, and it struck the statue on its feet of iron and clay and broke them in pieces. ³⁵Then the iron, the clay, the bronze, the silver, and the gold, were all broken in pieces and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, so that not a trace of them could be found. But the stone that struck the statue became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.

³⁶ "This was the dream; now we will tell the king its interpretation. ³⁷You, O king, the king of kings—to whom the God of heaven has given the kingdom, the power, the might, and the glory, ³⁸into whose hand he has given human beings, wherever they live, the wild animals of the field, and the birds of the air, and whom he has established as ruler over them all—you are the head of gold. ³⁹After you shall arise another kingdom inferior to yours, and yet a third kingdom of bronze, which shall rule over the whole earth. ⁴⁰And there shall be a fourth kingdom, strong as iron; just as iron crushes and smashes everything,^c it shall crush and shatter all these. ⁴¹As you saw the feet and toes partly of potter's clay and partly of iron, it shall be a divided kingdom; but some of the strength of iron shall be in it, as you saw the iron mixed with the clay. ⁴²As the toes of the feet were part iron and part clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly brittle. ⁴³As you saw the iron mixed with clay, so will they mix with one another in marriage,^d but they will not hold together, just as iron does not mix with clay. ⁴⁴And in the days of those kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed, nor shall this kingdom be left to another people. Daniel and His Friends Promoted 46 Then King Nebuchadnezzar fell on his face, worshiped Daniel, and commanded that a grain offering and incense be offered to him. ⁴⁷The king said to Daniel, “Truly, your God is God of gods and Lord of kings and a revealer of mysteries, for you have been able to reveal this mystery!” ⁴⁸Then the king promoted Daniel, gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon and chief prefect over all the wise men of Babylon. ⁴⁹Daniel made a request of the king, and he appointed Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego over the affairs of the province of Babylon. But Daniel remained at the king’s court.

The Golden Image

3 King Nebuchadnezzar made a golden statue whose height was sixty cubits and whose width was six cubits; he set it up on the plain of Dura in the province of Babylon. ²Then King Nebuchadnezzar sent for the satraps, the prefects, and the governors, the counselors, the treasurers, the justices, the magistrates, and all the officials of the provinces, to assemble and come to the dedication of the statue that King Nebuchadnezzar had set up. ³So the satraps, the prefects, and the governors, the counselors, the treasurers, the justices, the magistrates, and all the officials of the provinces, assembled for the dedication of the statue that King Nebuchadnezzar had set up. When they were standing before the statue that Nebuchadnezzar had set up, ⁴the herald proclaimed aloud, “You are commanded, O peoples, nations, and languages, ⁵that when you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble, you are to fall down and worship the golden statue that King Nebuchadnezzar has set up. ⁶Whoever

The issue is resolved in a wondrous way in favor of God by a mysterious figure who protects the Jews from harm in the fire. Extensive use of repetition and hyperbole adds to the story’s folktale quality. The unified structure and Daniel’s absence suggest the story originated independently of others in chs. 1–6, possibly in the early Hellenistic or late Persian period. 3.1 Golden statue, of a Babylonian god or of the king; see Jdt 3.8; 6.2. Giant colossi were widely used free-standing art forms in Egypt and Mesopotamia; Diodorus Siculus (first century B.C.E.) and Herodotus (fifth century B.C.E.) report a gold statue of Zeus (Bel?) in Babylon; see Isa 40.19; Jer 10.3–10. Sixty . . . six cubits, about 30 by

3 meters, obelisk shaped; the proportions reflect the Babylonian sexagesimal number system. Dura in Aramaic or dûru in Babylonian, meaning “fortress” or “city wall,” is usually the first part of a place-name and is not to be identified with any specific place. 3.2 The list of officials is given in order of precedence; the terms for prefects and governors derive from Akkadian, all others from Old Persian; see 3.3, 27. Dedication. See 1 Kings 8.63; 2 Chr 7.9; Neh 12.27. 3.4–6 The order to worship the statue creates a problem for the Jews who cannot obey without breaching a basic tenet of their faith. 3.4 Peoples, nations, and languages, a stereotyped phrase used as a rhetorical device to create hyperbole; e.g., 3.7, 29; 4.1; 5.19; 7.14; Esth 1.22; 3.12; 8.9; Rev 5.9; 7.9. 3.5 The list of instruments, used as hyperbole, is repeated in 3.7, 10, 15; see 1 Chr 25.1. Lyre, a Greek loanword; an Asiatic variant of an instrument with three to twelve strings. Trigon, a triangular four-stringed instrument. Harp, a Greek loanword; an instrument with ten strings across a sound board. Drum. The Greek loanword symphonia usually means “harmony,” but it is attested as an instrument from 200 B.C.E.; the rsv translates “bagpipe.” Fall down and worship, repeated in 3.6, 11, 15; see 2.46. 3.6 A known, but not a common, form of execution; see Gen 38.24 (probably in an open fire, not in a furnace); Jer 29.21–22; 2 Macc 6.11;

does not fall down and worship shall immediately be thrown into a furnace of blazing fire." ⁷Therefore, as soon as all the peoples heard the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble, all the peoples, nations, and languages fell down and worshiped the golden statue that King Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

⁸ Accordingly, at this time certain Chaldeans came forward and denounced the Jews. ⁹They said to King Nebuchadnezzar, "O king, live forever! ¹⁰You, O king, have made a decree, that everyone who hears the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble, shall fall down and worship the golden statue, ¹¹and whoever does not fall down and worship shall be thrown into a furnace of blazing fire. ¹²There are certain Jews whom you have appointed over the affairs of the province of Babylon: Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. These pay no heed to you, O king. They do not serve your gods and they do not worship the golden statue that you have set up."

¹³ Then Nebuchadnezzar in furious rage commanded that Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego be brought in; so they brought those men before the king. ¹⁴Nebuchadnezzar said to them, "Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, that you do not serve my gods and you do not worship the golden statue that I have set up? ¹⁵Now if you are ready when you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble to fall down and worship the statue that I have made, well and good.^e But if you do not worship, you shall immediately be thrown into a furnace of blazing fire, and who is the god that will deliver you out of my hands?"

¹⁶ Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego answered the king, "O Nebuchadnezzar, we have no need to present a defense to you in this matter. ¹⁷If our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the furnace of blazing fire and out of your hand, O king, let him deliver us.^f ¹⁸But if not, be it known to you, O king, that we will not serve your gods and we will not worship the golden statue that you have set up."

The Fiery Furnace

¹⁹ Then Nebuchadnezzar was so filled with rage against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego that his face was distorted. He ordered the furnace heated up seven times more than was customary, ²⁰and ordered some of the strongest guards in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego and to throw them into the furnace of blazing fire. ²¹So the men were bound, still wearing their tunics,^g their trousers,^g their hats, and their other garments, and they were thrown into the furnace of blazing fire. ²²Because the king's command was urgent and the furnace was so overheated, the raging flames killed the men who lifted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. ²³But the three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, fell down, bound, into the furnace of blazing fire.

²⁴ Then King Nebuchadnezzar was astonished and rose up quickly. He said to his counselors, "Was it not three men that we threw bound into the fire?" They answered the king, "True, O king." ²⁵He replied, "But I see four men unbound,

The fourth figure is described as an angel in walking in the middle of the fire, and they are not hurt; and the fourth has the appearance of a god.”^h 26Nebuchadnezzar then approached the door of the furnace of blazing fire and said, “Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, servants of the Most High God, come out! Come here!” So Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego came out from the fire. 27And the satraps, the prefects, the governors, and the king’s counselors gathered together and saw that the fire had not had any power over the bodies of those men; the hair of their heads was not singed, their tunics were not harmed, and not even the smell of fire came from them. 28Nebuchadnezzar said, “Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who has sent his angel and delivered his servants who trusted in him. They disobeyed the king’s command and yielded up their bodies rather than serve and worship any god except their own God. 29Therefore I make a decree: Any people, nation, or language that utters blasphemy against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego shall be torn limb from limb, and their houses laid in ruins; for there is no other god who is able to deliver in this way.” 30Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the province of Babylon.

Dan 3.28. 3.26 Most High God, a title used by both Jews and non-Jews; see 4.2; Gen 14.19–20; Num 24.16; Deut 32.8; Isa 14.14; 1 Esd 6.31; 2 Macc 3.31; Mk 5.7; Acts 16.17. 3.28 A doxology in the form of a short hymn of praise. 3.29 A royal decree granting legitimacy and protection to the Jewish religion; see Ezra 4–7. Torn . . . laid in ruins. See 2.5. 3.30 A typical folk motif of reward for heroes; see 2.48.

4.1–47 This text differs markedly from other stories in chs. 1–6. Although many folk elements are present, including the motif of dream interpretation, the literary form is not the tale but the epistle or public proclamation. It begins (4.1–18) and ends (4.34–37) in the first person with a third-person tale in between (4.19–33). The tightly circular rhetorical structure emphasizes the central theme of God’s sovereignty. The king first acknowledges God’s sovereignty and greatness (4.2–3) and prospers (4.4), then asserts his own sovereignty and greatness (4.30) and is brought low (4.32–33) as predicted (4.22), only to accept God’s sovereignty again (4.34–35) and have his own greatness restored by God. Daniel’s role is less prominent than in ch. 2. 4.1–2 Epistolary introduction and greeting; see, e.g., 1 Macc 10.18; 14.20; 15.2, 16; 2 Macc 1.1, 10; 1 Cor 1.1–3; Rom 1.1, 7; Gal 1.1–3; Eph 1.1–2. 4.1 Peoples, nations, and languages. See note on 3.4. 4.2 Signs and wonders, a typical description of marvelous acts of God, especially in relation to the exodus from Egypt; see 4.3; 6.27; Ex 7.3; Deut 4.34; 6.22; Isa 8.18; Mk 13.22; Jn 4.48. Most High God. See 4.34; Ps 145.13. 4.5 Dream. See 2.1. Frightened, terrified. See 5.6; 7.15. The effect of the dream is stronger than in 2.1, which creates foreboding about the interpretation. 4.6–7 The task is only to interpret, not tell the dream, but the Chaldeans still fail; no punishment is threatened; see 2.2–11. 4.7 Magicians . . . Chaldeans. See notes on 1.4; 2.2. Diviners were the most important type of religious intermediary in Babylonia; here the term is used simply as a synonym for “wise men.” 4.8 Name of my god. there was a tree at the center of

and its height was great.

11 The tree grew great and strong,
its top reached to heaven, and it was visible to the ends of the whole earth.

12 Its foliage was beautiful,
its fruit abundant,
and it provided food for all.
The animals of the field found shade under it,
the birds of the air nested in
its branches,
and from it all living beings
were fed.

13 “I continued looking, in the visions of my head as I lay in bed, and there was a holy watcher, coming down from heaven.

14 He cried aloud and said:

‘Cut down the tree and chop off
its branches,
strip off its foliage and scatter its fruit.

Let the animals flee from beneath it
and the birds from its branches.

15 But leave its stump and roots in
the ground,
with a band of iron and bronze,
in the tender grass of the field.

Let him be bathed with the dew of heaven,
and let his lot be with the animals of the field
in the grass of the earth.

16 Let his mind be changed from that of a human,
and let the mind of an animal
be given to him.
And let seven times pass over him.

17 The sentence is rendered by the decision is given by order of the holy ones,

in order that all who live
may know that the Most High is sovereign

he gives it to whom he will human beings.’

18 “This is the dream that I, King Nebuchadnezzar, saw. Now you, Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation, since all the wise men of my kingdom are unable to tell me the interpretation. You are able, however, for you are endowed with a spirit of the holy gods.”^l king said, "Belteshazzar, do not let the dream or the interpretation terrify you." Belteshazzar answered, "My lord, may the dream be for those who hate you, and its interpretation for your enemies! ²⁰The tree that you saw, which grew great and strong, so that its top reached to heaven and was visible to the end of the whole earth, ²¹whose foliage was beautiful and its fruit abundant, and which provided food for all, under which animals of the field lived, and in whose branches the birds of the air had nests— ²²it is you, O king! You have grown great and strong. Your greatness has increased and reaches to heaven, and your sovereignty to the ends of the earth. ²³And whereas the king saw a holy watcher coming down from heaven and saying, 'Cut down the tree and destroy it, but leave its stump and roots in the ground, with a band of iron and bronze, in the grass of the field; and let him be bathed with the dew of heaven, and let his lot be with the animals of the field, until seven times pass over him'— ²⁴this is the interpretation, O king, and it is a decree of the Most High that has come upon my lord the king: ²⁵You shall be driven away from human society, and your dwelling shall be with the wild animals. You shall be made to eat grass like oxen, you shall be bathed with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over you, until you have learned that the Most High has sovereignty over the kingdom of mortals, and gives it to whom he will. ²⁶As it was commanded to leave the stump and roots of the tree, your kingdom shall be re-established for you from the time that you learn that Heaven is sovereign. ²⁷Therefore, O king, may my counsel be acceptable to you: atone for^o your sins with righteousness, and your iniquities with mercy to the oppressed, so that your prosperity may be prolonged."

Nebuchadnezzar's Humiliation

²⁸ All this came upon King Nebuchadnezzar. ²⁹At the end of twelve months he was walking on the roof of the royal palace of Babylon, ³⁰and the king said, "Is this not magnificent Babylon, which I have built as a royal capital by my mighty power and for my glorious majesty?" ³¹While the words were still in the king's mouth, a voice came from heaven: "O King Nebuchadnezzar, to you it is declared: The kingdom has departed from you! ³²You shall be driven away from human society, and your dwelling shall be with the animals of the field. You shall be made to eat grass like oxen, and seven times shall pass over you, until you have learned that the Most High has sovereignty over the kingdom of mortals and gives it to whom he will." ³³Immediately the sentence was fulfilled against Nebuchadnezzar. He was driven away from human society, ate grass like oxen, and his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until his hair grew as long as eagles' feathers and his nails became like birds' claws.

Belshazzar's Feast

5 King Belshazzar made a great festival for a thousand of his lords, and he was drinking wine in the presence of the thousand.

2 Under the influence of the wine, Belshazzar commanded that they bring in the vessels of gold and silver that his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple in Jerusalem, so that the king and his lords, his wives, and his concubines might drink from them. ³So they brought in the vessels of gold and silver^p that had been taken out of the temple, the house of God in Jerusalem, and the king and his lords, his wives, and his concubines drank from them. ⁴They drank the wine and praised the gods of gold and silver, bronze, iron, wood, and stone.

The Writing on the Wall

5 Immediately the fingers of a human hand appeared and began writing on the plaster of the wall of the royal palace, next to the lampstand. The king was watching the hand as it wrote. ⁶Then the king's face turned pale, and his thoughts terrified him. His limbs gave way, and his knees knocked together. ⁷The king cried aloud to bring in the enchanters, the Chaldeans, and the diviners; and the king

Equilibrium has been restored—Nebuchadnezzar is recognized as sovereign king of Babylon and God as sovereign King of heaven; see Pss 93.1–2; 97.1; 99.1; Jer 10.7, 10.

5.1–31 The contest here involves the interpretation of mysterious writing, not a dream (chs. 2, 4). The sovereignty of God is asserted against a king who is unrepentant in his arrogance and sacrilege. The repetitive style of vv. 1–23 contrasts with the economical style of vv. 24–31. Direct references to earlier chapters, especially to ch. 4, suggest a late date. The historical inaccuracy of previous chapters continues. 5.1 King Belshazzar, a new king whose name in Babylonian means "Bel, protect the king"; in fact, Belshazzar was never king of Babylon but only regent while Nabonidus was at Teima; see 4.28–33; 7.1; 8.1. A great festival. See Esth 1.3–8. 5.2 Under the influence of wine. See Esth 1.7–9. Vessels . . . of the temple in Jerusalem. See 1.2. His father Nebuchadnezzar. See 5.11–12, 22; Bar 1.11.

Some biblical texts speak of two classes of women in royal harems (see 1 Kings 11.3; Song 6.8): wives, queenly consorts (see Neh 2.6; Ps 45.9) and concubines, lower-rank women in the harem. 5.3–4 Belshazzar profanes temple vessels by having his whole retinue, including his concubines, drink from them and commits a sacrilege by using them in the praise of idols; both acts mock the power and sovereignty of God, as 5.23 makes explicit. 5.4 The gods of . . . stone, a list of elements very similar to one in the Prayer of Nabonidus from Qumran where Nabonidus is indicted for idolatry. It recalls elements of the statue in Dan 2. See 5.23; Deut 4.28; Pss 115.4–8; 135.15–18. 5.5 Immediately, swiftness of response similar to the speed of punishment in 5.30. Fingers of a human hand, a popular marvelous motif in folk tales; see Ex 31.18. 5.6 See 5.9. Here fear is so intense it has physical manifestations; see Ps 69.23; Isa 21.3; Ezek 21.7; Nah 2.10. 5.7–8 The double task of reading and interpreting the writing (see 2.2–9). As usual, the Babylonian wise men fail; see 2.2–11; 4.7, 18. Political reward is promised those who are successful (see 5.16, 29; 2.6) but there is no threat of punishment for failure (see 2.5, 9, 13). 5.7 Purple, a sign of dignity and/or royalty; see Esth 8.15; Song 3.10; 1 Macc said to the wise men of Babylon, "Whoever can read this writing and tell me its interpretation shall be clothed in purple, have a chain of gold around his neck, and rank third in the kingdom."⁸ Then all the king's wise men came in, but they could not read the writing or tell the king the interpretation.⁹ Then King Belshazzar became greatly terrified and his face turned pale, and his lords were perplexed.

¹⁰ The queen, when she heard the discussion of the king and his lords, came into the banqueting hall. The queen said, "O king, live forever! Do not let your thoughts terrify you or your face grow pale."¹¹ There is a man in your kingdom who is endowed with a spirit of the holy gods.^q In the days of your father he was found to have enlightenment, understanding, and wisdom like the wisdom of the gods. Your father, King Nebuchadnezzar, made him chief of the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans, and diviners,^r ¹² because an excellent spirit, knowledge, and understanding to interpret dreams, explain riddles, and solve problems were found in this Daniel, whom the king named Belteshazzar. Now let Daniel be called, and he will give the interpretation."

The Writing on the Wall Interpreted

¹³ Then Daniel was brought in before the king. The king said to Daniel, "So you are Daniel, one of the exiles of Judah, whom my father the king brought from Judah?" ¹⁴ I have heard of you that a spirit of the gods^s is in you, and that enlightenment, understanding, and excellent wisdom are found in you. ¹⁵ Now the wise men, the enchanters, have been brought in before me to read this writing and tell me its interpretation, but they were not able to give the interpretation of the matter. ¹⁶ But I have heard that you can give interpretations and solve problems. Now if you are able to read the writing and tell me its interpretation, you shall be clothed in purple, have a chain of gold around your neck, and rank third in the kingdom."

¹⁷ Then Daniel answered in the presence of the king, "Let your gifts be for yourself, or give your rewards to someone else! Nevertheless I will read the writing to the king and let him know the interpretation. ¹⁸ O king, the Most High God gave your father Nebuchadnezzar kingship, greatness, glory, and majesty. ¹⁹ And because of the greatness that he gave him, all peoples, nations, and languages trembled and feared before him. He killed those he wanted to kill, kept alive those he wanted to keep alive, honored those he wanted to honor, and degraded those he wanted to degrade. ²⁰ But when his heart was lifted up and his spirit was hardened so that he acted proudly, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and his glory was stripped from him. ²¹ He was driven from human society, and his mind was made like that of an animal. His dwelling was with the wild asses, he was fed grass like oxen, and his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until he learned that the Most High God has sovereignty over the kingdom of mortals, and sets over it whomever he will. ²² And you, Belshazzar his son, have not humbled your heart, even though you knew all this! ²³You have exalted yourself against the Lord of heaven! The vessels of his temple have been brought in before you, and you and your lords, your wives and your concubines have been drinking wine from them. You have praised the gods of silver and gold, of bronze, iron, wood, and stone, which do not see or hear or know; but the God in whose power is your very breath, and to whom belong all your ways, you have not honored.

²⁴“So from his presence the hand was sent and this writing was inscribed. ²⁵And this is the writing that was inscribed: MENE, MENE, TEKEL, and PARSIN. ²⁶This is the interpretation of the matter: MENE, God has numbered the days of your kingdom and brought it to an end; ²⁷TEKEL, you have been weighed on the scales and found wanting; ²⁸PERES,^u your kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians.”

²⁹Then Belshazzar gave the command, and Daniel was clothed in purple, a chain of gold was put around his neck, and a proclamation was made concerning him that he should rank third in the kingdom.

³⁰That very night Belshazzar, the Chaldean king, was killed. ^{31v}And Darius the Mede received the kingdom, being about sixty-two years old.

The Plot Against Daniel

6 It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom one hundred twenty satraps, stationed throughout the whole kingdom, ²and over them three presidents, including Daniel; to these the satraps gave account, so that the king might suffer no loss. ³Soon Daniel distinguished himself above all the other presidents and satraps because an excellent spirit was in him, and the king planned to appoint him over the whole kingdom. ⁴So the presidents and the satraps tried to find grounds for complaint against Daniel in connection with the kingdom. But they could find no grounds for complaint or any corruption, because he was faithful, and no negligence or corruption could be found in him. ⁵The men said, “We shall not find any ground for complaint against this Daniel unless we find it in connection with the law of his God.”

PARSIN*, units of monetary weight or value in Aramaic: the mina, shekel, and half-mina. A mina was worth between 50 and 60 shekels. 5.26–28 The enigmatic words require further interpretation; Daniel's explanation is allegorical, not literal, and creates puns by reading the Aramaic nouns as similar-sounding verbal roots; see Am 8.1–2. 5.26 MENE sounds like mn, “to number”; see Ps 90.12. 5.27 TEKEL sounds like tkl, “to weigh”; see Job 31.6; Prov 16.2; 21.2; 24.12. 5.28 PERES sounds like prs, “to divide”; there is a second pun on the word Persians. Medes, people of Media, an obscure kingdom with its capital at Ecbatana. Media played a role in the Babylonian conquest of the Assyrians at Nineveh in 612 B.C.E. but was incorporated into the Persian Empire by 550/49 B.C.E.; see 7.5; 8.3–4; 9.1. Persians, people in the territory roughly corresponding to modern Iran; they defeated the Medes in 550/49 B.C.E.; in 331 B.C.E. their empire fell to Alexander the Great; see 6.8, 12, 15; 7.6; 8.3–4; 9.1. 5.29 Daniel accepts the reward spurned earlier (5.17); see 2.48; Gen 41.40–45; Esth 8.15. 5.30 Punishment is swift and severe with no chance for repentance; see Isa 13.17–22; 21.1–10; Jer 51.8–16, 39–46. 5.31 Darius the Mede is not a historical figure; Babylon was conquered by Cyrus the Great of Persia in 539 B.C.E., not by the Medes, despite the prophecies of Isa 13.17–22; 21.1–10; Jer 50.9, 41; 51.11, 28; see Dan 9.1.

6.1–28 A sacred legend similar in structure and style to the one in ch. 3. Despite an unusually benevolent king, conflict with jealous rivals puts Daniel in a life-threatening situation from which he is wondrously delivered by an angel. The underlying issue is again God's sovereignty, which is introduced in 6.7 and culminates in 6.26–27. Extensive use is made of repetition and elaboration (e.g., 6.3–4, 7–8, 12). 6.1 Darius. See note on 5.31. Satraps, officials who administered large regions called satrapies, which were subdivided into provinces ruled by governors (see 3.2); only twenty to thirty satrapies are known from Persian records so the number here may include provinces (see Esth 1.1; 8.9; 1 Esd 3.2). 6.2 Three might be an allusion to third in 5.7, 16, 29; see Gen 41.41–42; 1 Esd 3.9. Presidents. No such officials are known from Persian documents. 6.3 An excellent spirit. See 5.12. Appoint him over the whole kingdom. See Gen 41.41–44. 6.5 The conspiracy is politically, not religiously, motivated.

6 So the presidents and satraps conspired and came to the king and said to him, "O King Darius, live forever! 7 All the presidents of the kingdom, the prefects and the satraps, the counselors and the governors are agreed that the king should establish an ordinance and enforce an interdict, that whoever prays to anyone, divine or human, for thirty days, except to you, O king, shall be thrown into a den of lions. 8 Now, O king, establish the interdict and sign the document, so that it cannot be changed, according to the law of the Medes and the Persians, which cannot be revoked." 9 Therefore King Darius signed the document and interdict.

Daniel in the Lions' Den

10 Although Daniel knew that the document had been signed, he continued to go to his house, which had windows in its upper room open toward Jerusalem, and to get down on his knees three times a day to pray to his God and praise him, just as he had done previously. 11 The conspirators came and found Daniel praying and seeking mercy before his God. 12 Then they approached the king and said concerning the interdict, "O king! Did you not sign an interdict, that anyone who prays to anyone, divine or human, within thirty days except to you, O king, shall be thrown into a den of lions?" The king answered, "The thing stands fast, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which cannot be revoked." 13 Then they responded to the king, "Daniel, one of the exiles from Judah, pays no attention to you, O king, or to the interdict you have signed, but he is saying his prayers three times a day."

14 When the king heard the charge, he was very much distressed. He was determined to save Daniel, and until the sun went down he made every effort to rescue him. 15 Then the conspirators came to the king and said to him, "Know, O king, that it is a law of the Medes and Persians that no interdict or ordinance that the king establishes can be changed."

16 Then the king gave the command, and Daniel was brought and thrown into the den of lions. The king said to Daniel, "May your God, whom you faithfully serve, deliver you!" 17 A stone was brought and laid on the mouth of the den, and the king sealed it with his own signet and with the signet of his lords, so that nothing might be changed concerning Daniel. 18 Then the king went to his palace and spent the night fasting; no food was brought to him, and sleep fled from him.

Daniel Saved from the Lions

19 Then, at break of day, the king got up and hurried to the den of lions. 20 When he came near the den where Daniel was, he cried out anxiously to Daniel, "O Daniel, servant of the living God,

When the king agrees to make this law (6.9), he unwittingly challenges the sovereignty of God. Den, a pit or subterranean area with a small opening (see 6.17); there is no evidence of lions being kept this way. The hunting and caging of lions is well documented in Mesopotamian inscriptions and art. The danger posed by the lions' power took on symbolic value. See 1 Kings 13.24; Pss 22.21; 58.6; 91.13; Ezek 19.2–9. 6.8 Cannot be revoked. The scheme is designed to trap both Daniel and the king; see Esth 1.19; 8.8. *Medes . . . He is distressed at Daniel's plight and the realization he has been tricked; see 2.1; 3.13; 4.5; 5.6. Despite his royal power, the king cannot save Daniel; only the power of God will save him; see 6.16, 22–23, 27. 6.17 The king sealed . . . lords, an assurance that no human help could be given. Seals were made by pressing the signet into clay and were regularly used on official correspondence; see 1 Kings 21.8; Esth 3.12; 8.8, 10. 6.20–22 The king does not observe the angel himself, as in ch. 3. 6.20 The living God. See Deut 5.26; Ps 42.2; Jer 10.10; has your God whom you faithfully serve been able to deliver you from the lions?"²¹ Daniel then said to the king, "O king, live forever! ²²My God sent his angel and shut the lions' mouths so that they would not hurt me, because I was found blameless before him; and also before you, O king, I have done no wrong." ²³Then the king was exceedingly glad and commanded that Daniel be taken up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no kind of harm was found on him, because he had trusted in his God. ²⁴The king gave a command, and those who had accused Daniel were brought and thrown into the den of lions—they, their children, and their wives. Before they reached the bottom of the den the lions overpowered them and broke all their bones in pieces.

²⁵ Then King Darius wrote to all peoples and nations of every language throughout the whole world: "May you have abundant prosperity! ²⁶I make a decree, that in all my royal dominion people should tremble and fear before the God of Daniel:

For he is the living God, enduring forever.

His kingdom shall never be destroyed,
and his dominion has no end.

²⁷ He delivers and rescues, he works signs and wonders in heaven and on earth;
for he has saved Daniel from the power of the lions."

²⁸ So this Daniel prospered during the reign of Darius and the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

Visions of the Four Beasts

7 In the first year of King Belshazzar of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions of his head as he lay in bed. Then he wrote down the dream:^w ^{21,x} Daniel,

As the property of men, children and . . . wives could be punished along with them; see Num 16.25–33; Josh 7.24; Judg 20.48; 21.10; 2 Sam 21.5–9; Esth 9.12–14. 6.25 Peoples and nations of every language. See note on 3.4. 6.26a Darius's edict goes even further than that of Nebuchadnezzar (3.29) in ordering all to revere God. 6.26–27 The rationale for the edict is a doxology as in 4.3, 34–35, 37 recognizing the sovereignty of God. 6.26 The living God. See 6.20. Enduring forever . . . no end. See 4.3, 34; Ex 15.18; Pss 10.16; 29.10; 66.7; 102.12. 6.27 Signs and wonders. See 4.2–3. 6.28 Cyrus the Persian allowed Jewish exiles to return home in 539 B.C.E., exhibiting moderation and religious sensitivity toward conquered peoples; see 5.31; 10.1; Ezra 1.1–4; 6.3–5; Isa 44.28; 45.1; 48.14.

7.1–12.13 It is generally agreed that these chapters focus on the reign of Antiochus IV Epiphanes (175–164 B.C.E.). The chronological sequence of the visions parallels that of the stories in chs. 1–6. These visions are similar to the visions in Am 7.7–9; Zech 1.8–17, 18–21; 2.1–5; 4.1–5, 10b–14; 5.1–4, 5–11; 6.1–8. While the visions of chs. 7 and 8 are symbolic visions, the rest are direct revelations to Daniel. The symbolic vision in ch. 7 is received in a dream (as in ch. 2); in both visions a detailed description is given and an interpretation requested and received. In ch. 7 this contact with the divine realm produces a feeling of fear; see 4.5; 5.5, 6; 7.15, 28. All the visions present past events as if about to happen. There are indications of editorial activity in these chapters, but the unevenness in the imagery may be due to deliberate contrasts by the author. 7.1–28 Although the translation indicates a mixture of prose and poetical sections, the whole chapter has a rhythmic prose style often very close to poetry. Ch. 7 is connected in its language, Aramaic, to chs. 2–6 and in theme to ch. 2 and chs. 8–12. The theme of four world kingdoms superseded by a fifth more ideal kingdom has a long history in the Near East before and after the time of the composition of Daniel. Here the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes has negatively colored the portrayal of the entire fourth kingdom and indeed of all four kingdoms, a view much more negative than in ch. 2. 7.1 The first year of King Belshazzar of Babylon (see 5.1, 30), a sixth-century date to present the vision as an ancient prediction. 7.2 Four winds . . . stirring up. Ordinary winds would blow from one direction. Daniel's dream and night vision give a setting beyond the mundane. As in other ancient Near Eastern creation traditions, the sea is associated with mythological monsters, forces of chaos; see Job 26.12–13; Pss 74.13–17; 89.9–10; Isa 27.1; 51.9–10. Here the sea spawns mythological beasts saw in my vision by night the four winds of heaven stirring up the great sea, ³and four great beasts came up out of the sea, different from one another. ⁴The first was like a lion and had eagles' wings. Then, as I watched, its wings were plucked off, and it was lifted up from the ground and made to stand on two feet like a human being; and a human mind was given to it. ⁵Another beast appeared, a second one, that looked like a bear. It was raised up on one side, had three tusks^y in its mouth among its teeth and was told, "Arise, devour many bodies!" ⁶After this, as I watched, another appeared, like a leopard. The beast had four wings of a bird on its back and four heads; and dominion was given to it. ⁷After this I saw in the visions by night a fourth beast, terrifying and dreadful and exceedingly strong. It had great iron teeth and was devouring, breaking in pieces, and stamping what was left with its feet. It was different from all the beasts that preceded it, and it had ten horns. ⁸I was considering the horns, when another horn appeared, a little one coming up among them; to make room for it, three of the earlier horns were plucked up by the roots. There were eyes like human eyes in this horn, and a mouth speaking arrogantly.

symbolizing kingdoms (Dan 7.17). In regard to the four kingdoms, see note on 2.36–45. 7.4 First, the Babylonian Empire, as in 2.36. Like a lion . . . eagles' wings. Winged lions are well known from Assyro-Babylonian art. Wings . . . plucked off may refer to 4.10–33; human being and human mind to 4.36. 7.5 Another beast, the Median Empire; see 5.28. The savagery of the Medes attacking Babylon by divine command had been predicted (Jer 51.11) but did not occur. Up on one side, perhaps ready to spring. Three tusks may refer to its ravenous appetite for booty (if three ribs [see text note y], to the booty being devoured). 7.6 Another beast, the Persian Empire; see 5.28. Four wings may allude to the rapidity of Persia's conquests under Cyrus; see Isa 41.3. Four heads may refer to Persia's dominion in all directions or to the four kings of Persia mentioned in Ezra 1.1; 4.6, 7; Neh 12.22. 7.7 Fourth beast, the empire of Alexander the Great. Ten horns, the line of rulers of the Seleucid dynasty (which ruled Syria after the death of Alexander) culminating in Antiochus IV. The first Seleucid kings had coins decorated with horns, symbols of divine power; see 7.23–24. 7.8 Eyes and mouth indicate the horn represents a human character, the contemporary ruler Antiochus IV Epiphanes, who disposed of other claimants to the throne (see 7.24; 11.21). 7.9–14 The imagery becomes more cryptic and more poetic as the future and the heavenly realm are described; much of this judgment scene imagery partakes of traditions preserved in Psalms and the prophets; see Pss 82.1; 90.2; Isa 6; Ezek 1; see also 1 Kings 22.19. Some of the motifs suggest aspects of ancient Canaanite mythology. The image of an Ancient One and of one like a human being coming with the clouds of heaven (7.13) has been compared to myths that refer to the god El as king and father of years and Baal as a triumphant warrior god. There is, however, no cosmic battle here, only a judgment. 7.11 A violent end to the fourth kingdom. 7.12 Respite for the other kingdoms accentuates the wickedness of the fourth kingdom and anticipates 7.27. 7.13–14 The symbol of the fifth kingdom, a human figure, stands in contrast to the animal symbols from the abyss by being associated with the heavenly realm; the animals were connected with historical events, but in these two verses the scene moves beyond history. One like a

Daniel's Visions Interpreted

15 As for me, Daniel, my spirit was troubled within me,^c and the visions of my head terrified me. 16 I approached one of the attendants to ask him the truth concerning all this. So he said that he would disclose to me the interpretation of the matter: 17 "As for these four great beasts, four kings shall arise out of the earth. 18 But the holy ones of the Most High shall receive the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever—forever and ever."

19 Then I desired to know the truth concerning the fourth beast, which was different from all the rest, exceedingly terrifying, with its teeth of iron and claws of bronze, and which devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped what was left with its feet; 20 and concerning the ten horns that were on its head, and concerning the other horn, which came up and to make room for which three of them fell out—the horn that had eyes and a mouth that spoke arrogantly, and that seemed greater than the others. 21 As I looked, this horn made war with the holy ones and was prevailing over them, 22 until the Ancient One^b came; then judgment was given for the holy ones of the Most High, and the time arrived when the holy ones gained possession of the kingdom.

23 This is what he said: "As for the fourth beast, there shall be a fourth kingdom on earth

 that shall be different from all the other kingdoms;
 it shall devour the whole earth,
 and trample it down, and break it to pieces.

- 24 As for the ten horns, out of this kingdom ten kings shall arise,
 and another shall arise after
 them.

This one shall be different from the former ones,
 and shall put down three kings.

- 25 He shall speak words against the Most High,
 shall wear out the holy ones of the Most High,
 and shall attempt to change the sacred seasons and the law;
 and they shall be given into his power

human being symbolizes a new, everlasting kingdom (see 2.28, 45), which stands in contrast to those ominous kingdoms symbolized by what looked like animals; the figure is corporate and includes Israel (see 7.18, 22, 27). This human figure would then be coming from earth to God, although some scholars, to the contrary, see a descent of an angelic being (see 3.25; 6.22) from heaven underlying the vision, based on the fact that angels are described as human in appearance in 10.5, 16, 18. The association between the Jewish people and angels in this mysterious future kingdom will become clearer in the following verses and chapters. 7.15 Troubled, like Nebuchadnezzar; see 2.1; 4.4. 7.16 In chs. 1–6 Daniel was the interpreter; here he needs an interpreter. 7.18 The holy ones of the Most High could be humans or angels. In 8.10–13 they seem to be angels; this distinction may be implied by 7.27 with the phrase, the people of the holy ones of the Most High; but the fact that the recipients of the kingdom could be described by either of these two phrases would indicate that the phrases have the same meaning and refer to humans, namely, the Jewish people, who because of their tribulations have achieved a higher-than-human status. 7.20–21 The little horn of 7.8 has now become greater than the others; the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes begins. 7.25 Antiochus Epiphanes banned the observance of the sabbath and feast days (1 Macc 1.41–53). A time . . . time. The persecution is for a limited time, three and a half years, half of the perfect number seven.

- 26 Then the court shall sit in judgment, and his dominion shall be taken away,
to be consumed and totally destroyed.
- 27 The kingship and dominion and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the holy ones of the Most High;
their kingdom shall be an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey them."

28 Here the account ends. As for me, Daniel, my thoughts greatly terrified me, and my face turned pale; but I kept the matter in my mind.

Vision of a Ram and a Goat

8 In the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar a vision appeared to me, Daniel, after the one that had appeared to me at first. ²In the vision I was looking and saw myself in Susa the capital, in the province of Elam,^e and I was by the river Ulai.^f ³I looked up and saw a ram standing beside the river.^g It had two horns. Both horns were long, but one was longer than the other, and the longer one came up second. ⁴I saw the ram charging westward and northward and southward. All beasts were powerless to withstand it, and no one could rescue from its power; it did as it pleased and became strong.

⁵ As I was watching, a male goat appeared from the west, coming across the face of the whole earth without touching the ground. The goat had a horn^h between its eyes. ⁶It came toward the ram with the two horns that I had seen standing beside the river,^g and it ran at it with savage force. ⁷I saw it approaching the ram. It was enraged against it and struck the ram, breaking its two horns. The ram did not have power to withstand it; it threw the ram down to the ground and trampled upon it, and there was no one who could rescue the ram from its power. ⁸Then the male goat grew exceedingly great; but at the height of its power, the great horn was broken, and in its place there came up four prominent horns toward the four winds of heaven.

8.1–27 The language of the book returns to Hebrew and the literary style deteriorates, possibly because the author was more at home in Aramaic. There is also increasing concern with actual contemporary history from the time of the Medes and Persians through to Antiochus IV. The animal symbolism is explained, even though the meaning is quite obvious. The chapter refers to some of the same events as ch. 7. 8.1 Third year of . . . Belshazzar, two years later than 7.1. 8.2 The text is obscure but Daniel, while still in Babylon, seems to be transported in vision to Susa, the winter capital of the Medo-Persian Empire in the province of Elam. The river Ulai, at or near Susa, a setting similar to that of Ezek 1.1 (Ezekiel's vision by the river Chebar). Rivers and gates (see text note f) provide equally good "boundary" places where communication with divine beings is possible; see Gen 32.22–32 (a river); Gen 28.10–19 (Bethel, "house of God," "gate of heaven"). 8.3 Ram with two horns, the Medes and the Persians symbolically merged as in 6.8, 12; cf. chs. 2 and 7, where separate symbols were used. Longer one, Persia, see note on 5.28.

8.4 The expansion of the Medo-Persian Empire. 8.5–7 The goat advancing so swiftly from the west refers to the Macedonian army, which quickly conquered the whole Persian Empire. Horn between its eyes, Alexander the Great, as 8.21 indicates; see 2.40; 7.7; 11.3. 8.8 Height of its power. Alexander died in 323 B.C.E. and the kingdom was divided up among four generals, four prominent horns; see 2.41. 8.9 A little one, the author is interested only in the Seleucid kingdom in Syria and especially in one of its rulers, represented by the little horn. It is generally agreed that this refers to Antiochus Epiphanes and his campaigns: south to Egypt, east to Parthia, and finally toward the beautiful land, namely, Judea, as indicated by the references to the sanctuary or temple in 8.10–13; see 11.16, 41, 45. 8.10 If the imagery is based on Isa 14.12–14, Antiochus is pictured as challenging heaven itself; host here probably refers to angels; see 4.35. Stars, a mythic element; see Judg 5.20. The motif of a rebellion by lower powers against the heavenly forces is found in Canaanite and other Near Eastern myths.

down to the earth some of the host and some of the stars, and trampled on them. ¹¹Even against the prince of the host it acted arrogantly; it took the regular burnt offering away from him and overthrew the place of his sanctuary. ¹²Because of wickedness, the host was given over to it together with the regular burnt offering;^j it cast truth to the ground, and kept prospering in what it did. ¹³Then I heard a holy one speaking, and another holy one said to the one that spoke, "For how long is this vision concerning the regular burnt offering, the transgression that makes desolate, and the giving over of the sanctuary and host to be trampled?"^j ¹⁴And he answered him,^k "For two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings; then the sanctuary shall be restored to its rightful state."

Gabriel Interprets the Vision

¹⁵ When I, Daniel, had seen the vision, I tried to understand it. Then someone appeared standing before me, having the appearance of a man, ¹⁶and I heard a human voice by the Ulai, calling, "Gabriel, help this man understand the vision." ¹⁷So he came near where I stood; and when he came, I became frightened and fell prostrate. But he said to me, "Understand, O mortal,^l that the vision is for the time of the end."

¹⁸ As he was speaking to me, I fell into a trance, face to the ground; then he touched me and set me on my feet. ¹⁹He said, "Listen, and I will tell you what will take place later in the period of wrath; for it refers to the appointed time of the end. ²⁰As for the ram that you saw with the two horns, these are the kings of Media and Persia. ²¹The male goat^m is the king of Greece, and the great horn between its eyes is the first king. ²²As for the horn that was broken, in place of which four others arose, four kingdoms shall arise from hisⁿ nation, but not with his power.

8.11–12 Antiochus interfered with the offerings in the temple, a direct affront to the prince of the host (God). 1 Macc 1.41–59 describes his profanation of the temple and erection, on the altar of burnt offering, of a foreign altar, referred to as the transgression that makes desolate in Dan 8.13 and as an abomination that desolates in 9.27; 11.31; 12.11; see 1 Macc 4.36–59. 8.13–14 Daniel overhears the conversation of a holy one and another holy one (angels; see Zech 2.3–4) and learns how long the desolation of the sanctuary and of the interference with the daily burnt offerings will last: two thousand three hundred . . . mornings, 1,150 days, almost as long as the length of time in 7.25 and 12.7, namely, three and a half years, about 1,260 days, which corresponds roughly to the period of the desecration of the sanctuary according to 1 Macc 1.54–4.52. 8.13 Transgression . . . desolate. See note on 8.11–12. 8.15 Appearance of a man. There is no explicit mention of an eternal kingdom as in 7.14, 18, 22, 27. 8.18 On Daniel's reaction and the angel touching him, see 10.8–10, 16, 18; Ezek 1.28–2.2. 8.19 The period of wrath, possibly the wrath of Antiochus or the wrath of God; contexts here and in 11.36 may suggest a fixed time during which God is angry with the Jewish people and uses Antiochus as the rod of divine anger; see Isa 5.1–30; 10.1–12; Zech 1.12–17. 8.20–25 Gabriel's explanation spells out what was quite obvious in Daniel's description of the vision in 8.5–12; it reflects what is known of that historical period from the time of the Medes and Persians to the reign of Antiochus IV. 8.22 The four kingdoms (horns) mentioned in 8.8 are here said to lack the power that Alexander had. 8.23–25 Brief rhythmic phrases spell out the acts of the tyrant Antiochus; both form and content are reminiscent of Isa 14.4–21. ²⁷ So I, Daniel, was overcome and lay sick for some days; then I arose and went about the king's business. But I was dismayed by the vision and did not understand it.

Daniel's Prayer for the People

9 In the first year of Darius son of Ahasuerus, by birth a Mede, who became king over the realm of the Chaldeans— ²in the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, perceived in the books the number of years that, according to the word of the LORD to the prophet Jeremiah, must be fulfilled for the devastation of Jerusalem, namely, seventy years.

³ Then I turned to the Lord God, to seek an answer by prayer and supplication with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. ⁴I prayed to the LORD my God and made confession, saying,

"Ah, Lord, great and awesome God, keeping covenant and steadfast love with those who love you and keep your commandments, ⁵we have sinned and done wrong, acted wickedly and rebelled, turning aside from your commandments and ordinances. ⁶We have not listened to your servants the prophets, who spoke in your name to our kings, our princes, and our ancestors, and to all the people of the land.

⁷ "Righteousness is on your side, O Lord, but open shame, as at this day, falls on us, the people of Judah, the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and all Israel, those who are near and those who are far away, in all the lands to which you have driven them, because of the treachery that they have committed against you. ⁸Open shame, O LORD, falls on us, our kings, our officials, and our ancestors, because we have sinned against you. ⁹To the Lord human hands, divine intervention in the defeat of Antiochus; see 2.34; 7.26. 8.26 Seal up. Daniel is to keep the vision secret until later, since it is supposedly being given in the middle of the sixth century (8.1); this emphasizes the mystery the future holds. 8.27 King's, Belshazzar's (8.1). Did not understand. Daniel's lack of understanding after the explanation of 8.19–26 may be a literary artifice pointing ahead to the very detailed presentation in ch. 11.

9.1–27 A reinterpretation of Jeremiah's prophecy of a seventy-year exile to reassure Jews that their religious persecution by Antiochus Epiphanes will soon end. 9.1 Darius. See note on 5.31. Ahasuerus, Hebrew for Xerxes. Both Darius and Xerxes were names of later Persians, not Median kings. Who became king over the . . . Chaldeans, a reminder of the fall of the Babylonian Empire in 539 B.C.E. to introduce thoughts of the end of captivity. 9.2 Seventy years (Jer 25.11, 12; 29.10), a round number indicating a long exile, lasting a lifetime; see Ps 90.10; Isa 23.15. ² Chr 36.22–23 considers this prophecy fulfilled by Cyrus's decree in 539 B.C.E., but the persecution by Antiochus and the continued devastation of Jerusalem would have called this fulfillment into question. As a sixth-century B.C.E. character, Daniel would have been disturbed about the Babylonian devastation of Jerusalem, but in the second century B.C.E., the actual time of composition, the ravages of Antiochus are the underlying and central concern of the book. This double perspective must be kept in mind in reading the prayer in 9.4–19. 9.3 Supplication. See 9.17, 18, 20, 23. Sackcloth and ashes, traditional signs of mourning; see 10.2–3; Neh 9.1; Esth 4.1–3; Jer 4.8; 6.26; 49.3; Joel 1.13–14. 9.4–19 A communal confession of sin and petition for mercy. The quality of the Hebrew is superior to that in surrounding verses; hence it is sometimes considered a later addition. More likely it is a traditional prayer reminiscent in language and theology of the "Deuteronomistic" corpus in Deuteronomy–2 Kings and included to explain why the tribulation spoken of by Jeremiah is prolonged; see 1 Kings 8.23–53; Ezra 9.6–15; Neh 1.5–11; 9.6–37. The people's troubles are not the result of a predetermined divine plan, as in the visions, but are due to sin. 9.4 Great and awesome God. See Deut 7.21; Neh 1.5; 9.32. Covenant and steadfast love. See Deut 7.9, 12. Keep your commandments. our God belong mercy and forgiveness, for we have rebelled against him,¹⁰ and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God by following his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets.

11 "All Israel has transgressed your law and turned aside, refusing to obey your voice. So the curse and the oath written in the law of Moses, the servant of God, have been poured out upon us, because we have sinned against you. 12 He has confirmed his words, which he spoke against us and against our rulers, by bringing upon us a calamity so great that what has been done against Jerusalem has never before been done under the whole heaven. 13 Just as it is written in the law of Moses, all this calamity has come upon us. We did not entreat the favor of the LORD our God, turning from our iniquities and reflecting on his^p fidelity. 14 So the LORD kept watch over this calamity until he brought it upon us. Indeed, the LORD our God is right in all that he has done; for we have disobeyed his voice.

15 "And now, O Lord our God, who brought your people out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand and made your name renowned even to this day—we have sinned, we have done wickedly. 16 O Lord, in view of all your righteous acts, let your anger and wrath, we pray, turn away from your city Jerusalem, your holy mountain; because of our sins and the iniquities of our ancestors, Jerusalem and your people have become a disgrace among all our neighbors. 17 Now therefore, O our God, listen to the prayer of your servant and to his supplication, and for your own sake, Lord,^q let your face shine upon your desolated sanctuary.

18 Incline your ear, O my God, and hear. Open your eyes and look at our desolation and the city that bears your name. We do not present our supplication before you on the ground of our righteousness, but on the ground of your great mercies. 19 O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, listen and act and do not delay! For your own sake, O my God, because your city and your people bear your name!"

The Seventy Weeks

20 While I was speaking, and was praying and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the LORD my God on behalf of the holy mountain of my God— 21 while I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen before in a vision, came to me in swift flight at the time of the evening sacrifice. 22 He came^r and said to me, "Daniel, I have now come out to give you wisdom and understanding. 23 At the beginning of your supplications a word went out, and I have come to declare it, for you are greatly beloved. So consider the word and understand the vision:

Conflict of Nations and Heavenly Powers

10 In the third year of King Cyrus of Persia a word was revealed to Daniel, who was named Belteshazzar. The word was true, and it concerned a great conflict. He understood the word, having received understanding in the vision.

² At that time I, Daniel, had been mourning for three weeks. ³I had eaten no rich food, no meat or wine had entered my mouth, and I had not anointed myself at all, for the full three weeks. ⁴On the twenty-fourth day of the first month, as I was standing on the bank of the great river (that is, the Tigris), ⁵I looked up and saw a man clothed in linen, with a belt of gold from Uphaz around his waist. ⁶His body was like beryl, his face like lightning, his eyes like flaming torches, his arms and legs like the gleam of burnished bronze, and the sound of his words like the roar of a multitude. ⁷I, Daniel, alone saw the vision; the people who were with me did not see the vision, though a great trembling fell upon them, and they fled and hid themselves. ⁸So I was left alone to see this great vision. My strength left me, and my complexion grew deathly pale, and I retained no strength. ⁹Then I heard the sound of his words; and when I heard the sound of his words, I fell into a trance, face to the ground.

¹⁰ But then a hand touched me and roused me to my hands and knees. ¹¹He said to me, "Daniel, greatly beloved, pay attention to the words that I am going to speak to you. Stand on your feet, for I have now been sent to you." So while he was speaking this word to me, I stood up trembling. ¹²He said to me, "Do not fear, Daniel, for from the first day that you set your mind to gain understanding and to humble yourself before your God, your words have been heard, and I have come because of your words. ¹³But the prince of the kingdom of Persia opposed me

10.1–12.13 Chs. 10–12 comprise a single vision: a long preparation on 10.1–11.1, then in 11.2–12.4 another survey of the future. The survey contains brief references to the Persian Empire and the conquests and demise of Alexander, then lengthy descriptions of the conflict between Ptolemies and Seleucids with its effects on Judea; everything leads up to the final wickedness of Antiochus IV. All this takes place against the backdrop of a heavenly struggle and culminates in the deliverance of the elect, especially the wise. A supplementary vision in 12.5–13 indicates that the time of this final deliverance is uncertain.

The idea of struggles between angelic princes is an adaptation of the common mythology of the ancient Near East: there was a god over every nation; if nations battled, the more significant battle was waged be-twenty-one days. So Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me, and I left him there with the prince of the kingdom of Persia,^v ¹⁴and have come to help you understand what is to happen to your people at the end of days. For there is a further vision for those days."

¹⁵ While he was speaking these words to me, I turned my face toward the ground and was speechless. ¹⁶ Then one in human form touched my lips, and I opened my mouth to speak, and said to the one who stood before me, "My lord, because of the vision such pains have come upon me that I retain no strength. ¹⁷ How can my lord's servant talk with my lord? For I am shaking,"^w no strength remains in me, and no breath is left in me."

¹⁸ Again one in human form touched me and strengthened me. ¹⁹ He said, "Do not fear, greatly beloved, you are safe. Be strong and courageous!" When he spoke to me, I was strengthened and said, "Let my lord speak, for you have strengthened me." ²⁰ Then he said, "Do you know why I have come to you? Now I must return to fight against the prince of Persia, and when I am through with him, the prince of Greece will come. ²¹ But I am to tell you what is inscribed in the book of truth. There is no one with me who contends against these princes except Michael, your 11 prince. ¹ As for me, in the first year of Darius the Mede, I stood up to support and strengthen him.

² "Now I will announce the truth to you. Three more kings shall arise in Persia. The fourth shall be far richer than all of them, and when he has become strong through his riches, he shall stir up all against the kingdom of Greece. ³ Then a warrior king shall arise, who shall rule with great dominion and take action as he pleases. ⁴ And while still rising in power, his kingdom shall be broken and divided toward the four winds of heaven, but not to his posterity, nor according to the dominion with which he ruled; for his kingdom shall be uprooted and go to others besides these.

"In those times ^{7a} a branch from her roots shall rise up in his place. He shall come against the army and enter the fortress of the king of the north, and he shall take action against them and prevail. ⁸ Even their gods, with their idols and with their precious vessels of silver and gold, he shall carry off to Egypt as spoils of war. 10 "His sons shall wage war and assemble a multitude of great forces, which shall advance like a flood and pass through, and again shall carry the war as far as his fortress. 11 Moved with rage, the king of the south shall go out and do battle against the king of the north, who shall muster a great multitude, which shall, however, be defeated by his enemy. 12 When the multitude has been carried off, his heart shall be exalted, and he shall overthrow tens of thousands, but he shall not prevail. 13 For the king of the north shall again raise a multitude, larger than the former, and after some years^x he shall advance with a great army and abundant supplies.

14 "In those times many shall rise against the king of the south. The lawless among your own people shall lift themselves up in order to fulfill the vision, but they shall fail. 15 Then the king of the north shall come and throw up siege-works, and take a well-fortified city. And the forces of the south shall not stand, not even his picked troops, for there shall be no strength to resist. 16 But he who comes against him shall take the actions he pleases, and no one shall withstand him. He shall take a position in the beautiful land, and all of it shall be in his power. 17 He shall set his mind to come with the strength of his whole kingdom, and he shall bring terms of peace^y and perform them. In order to destroy the kingdom,^z he shall give him a woman in marriage; but it shall not succeed or be to his advantage. 18 Afterward he shall turn to the coastlands, and shall capture many. But a commander shall put an end to his insolence; indeed,^a he shall turn his insolence back upon him. 19 Then he shall turn back toward the fortresses of his own land, but he shall stumble and fall, and shall not be found.

HOSEA

THE PROPHECY OF HOSEA is an exposition of one word of the Lord found in his book: “I have been the LORD your God ever since the land of Egypt; you know no God but me and besides me there is no savior” (13.4). Hosea’s task as prophet was to apply that word to the life of his people in a time when its meaning had been virtually lost.

The Historical Setting

The time was approximately the period from 750 to 722 B.C.E. The place was the Northern Kingdom, Israel. Hosea’s career began in the relatively quiet years of the reign of Jeroboam II (ca. 786–746 B.C.E.). From 745 on Assyria’s military incursions in the area were the background for everything that happened in Israel. Hosea’s sayings reflect the war of Israel and Syria against Judah to force the Southern state into an anti-Assyrian alliance and the aftermath of that struggle. He seems to have been active particularly during the time of King Hoshea’s fatal rebellion against Assyria that led to the end of the Northern Kingdom. The biblical accounts of the period are found in 2 Kings 14.23–17.41.

Two features of this period get special attention in Hosea’s prophecy. One was the religious pluralism in Israel and the flourishing worship of the god Baal. Baal was the storm god in the Canaanite pantheon; he was believed to be the source of rain and fertility in the land. He was worshiped in various manifestations at local shrines, and Hosea refers at times to a plurality of Baals. The other feature was royal politics in the Northern Kingdom. After Jeroboam’s reign there was a series of revolutions involving assassinations. In the midst of this instability the acting kings were incessantly intriguing with different foreign powers to cope with Assyrian pressure.

The Prophet

Hosea’s book tells us nothing directly about Hosea himself. His sayings suggest that he was a man of broad learning and great rhetorical skills. He refers to the royal city of Samaria and the sanctuaries of Gilgal and Bethel where presumably he appeared as prophet. There are narratives about him in chs. 1 and 3 but they are prophecy in type and function, not biography. Both tell about symbolic actions the Lord commanded Hosea to perform. They are transparent vehicles of Hosea's message, but quite opaque as sources of information. Ch. 1 says he married a wife of whoredom, but in what way Gomer fit the category is not said. The children she bore were given names symbolic of God's judgment. In ch. 3 Hosea reports that he purchased and sequestered an adulteress but does not identify her in any further way. What this all meant for Hosea's public and private life can be imagined; what his marital life involved in detail remains hidden.

The Book

The book has two major parts. The first, chs. 1–3, is organized by the theme of marriage as a metaphor for God's relation to the chosen people. The narratives in chs. 1 and 3 stand as a frame around a long speech of God portraying Israel as God's promiscuous wife. Narratives and speech major in a message of accusation and punishment but conclude with the promises of restoration after punishment (1.10–2.1; 2.14–23; 3.5). The second part, chs. 4–14, is composed wholly of sayings arranged in literary units of varying length. The order of the units seems to be generally chronological, covering the span of Hosea's activity as a prophet. In ch. 9 the units begin to feature recollections of Israel's past. This second part is divided at the end of ch. 11 by a promise of salvation that draws an intermediate conclusion to its message of judgment. Then, the sayings of judgment in chs. 12–13 reach a final conclusion in a promise of restoration in ch. 14. In the process of being preserved in writing the material in chs. 2, 4–13 has been worked up in conflated compositions that blur the shape of individual sayings. The compositions generally have a thematic and/or structural pattern.

Among the numerous notes in the NRSV, there are twelve that call the Hebrew text uncertain and seventeen that identify conjectural changes in the text translated. All together they point to the unusual difficulty of the Hebrew text for translators. The title and some other features of the book indicate that it was put in its present form for readers in Judah. The extent to which Hosea's material was expanded in the process is a matter of disagreement.

The Prophecy

Hosea's prophecy is based on a specific understanding of the Lord as God of Israel and Israel as the people of the Lord. Israel came to know its God and to be the people of God through the history that began with the exodus, led through the wilderness, and culminated in the gift of life in the land. The covenant that the Lord made with Israel as the authority for its life and its instruction defines the steadfast love and knowledge of God required of the people of God. On the basis of this theology Hosea announced the Lord's indictment of the people for unfaithfulness in their religious and political life. In their anxious desire for crops and prosperity Israel continued to worship the old Baals, the owners and husbands of the land, and even to worship the Lord as if the Lord were a Baal. In their anxious search for kings and allies who would save them from the dangers threatening their national existence, Israel's leaders were driven into a habit of revolutions, assassinations, and foreign alliances, all of which disavowed trust in the Lord. For both failures Hosea used the metaphors of whoredom and adultery and portrayed the Lord as the aggrieved husband of a faithless wife. He proclaimed a searing and total punishment that would end the nation's career of promiscuity. But in an amazing way Hosea saw behind the wrath of God a love that would not let the people be wiped out. The very judgment itself would take Israel back into the wilderness for a new beginning, a new covenant, and a new gift of the land in a second history of reconciliation and regeneration. James Luther Mays

Hosea's Children as Symbols of Judgment

2 When the LORD first spoke through Hosea, the LORD said to Hosea, "Go, take for yourself a wife of whoredom and have children of whoredom, for the land commits great whoredom by forsaking the LORD." ³So he went and took Gomer daughter of Diblaim, and she conceived and bore him a son.

4 And the LORD said to him, "Name him Jezreel;^a for in a little while I will punish the house of Jehu for the blood of Jezreel, and I will put an end to the kingdom of the house of Israel. ⁵On that day I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel."

6 She conceived again and bore a daughter. Then the LORD said to him, "Name her Lo-ruhamah,^b for I will no longer have pity on the house of Israel or forgive them. ⁷But I will have pity on the house of Judah, and I will save them by the LORD their God; I will not save them by bow, or by sword, or by war, or by horses, or by horsemen."

a That is God sows b That is Not pitied

1.1 Word of the LORD is a formula used in titles of prophetic books to identify them as communication from Israel's God. Hosea is a shortened form of Hoshaiāh, which in Hebrew means "Yahweh has saved." The prophet's career is dated by reference to the reigns of Judean and Israelite kings recorded in 2 Kings 15–18.

1.2–2.1 The book opens with an account of God's commission to Hosea to marry and beget children to bear names that are signs of the Lord's response to Israel's unfaithfulness. 1.2 The symbolic meaning of whoredom is clear from the text. It is a metaphor for Israel's involvement with the religion of the culture area and its sexual rites to ensure the fertility of the land. What the term means about the character and identity of Hosea's wife is unclear. The children are to be children of whoredom, but the following account says they are children of Hosea and his wife. Perhaps for wife and children the term means simply that they belong to a people who are religiously promiscuous (see the Introduction). 1.3 The name Gomer daughter of Diblaim says nothing about her identity as a wife of whoredom. Her role is simply to be the mother of the children who bear the symbolic names. 1.4–5 In this context Jezreel refers to a plain in the central section of Israel and to a city on its perimeter associated with the bloody violence of the power politics practiced by the kings of Israel to gain throne and wealth. See 1 Kings 21; 2 Kings 9–10. The Jeroboam who was king during Hosea's early career was a descendant of the house of Jehu. 1.5 Break the bow is an idiom for the destruction of a state's military power; Israel's defeat by Assyria in 722 B.C.E. is anticipated. 1.6 The verb in the name Lo-ruhamah means to feel and act bonded to a child or kin or a needy person. 1.7 A contrast between Judah's escape from Assyria and the fate of Israel; see 2 Kings 19.35–37. 1.9 The name Lo-ammi, "Not my people," negates the basic relation between Israel and its God, the covenant that the Lord established with Israel at Sinai (Ex 19–24). 1.10–2.1 A salvation prophecy that foresees a time when the negations of the children's names will be reversed in a revival of Judah and Israel as the Children of the living God. 1.10 The promise that Israel's population would be as numerous as the sand of the sea renews the Lord's promise to the ancestors, Abraham and Jacob (Gen 22.17; 32.12). 1.11 The term head is used instead of "king" because the restored Israel is to be as it was before the time of the monarchy. Here Jezreel means "God sows" the people in the land, i.e., is the source of their life and fertility; see 2.22–23; cf. note on 1.4–5.

2.2–23 This long complex section takes up the theme of the wife of whoredom from 1.2. It is composed as a speech of the Lord setting forth the guilt of Israel and a plan for the nation's punishment and reconciliation. The speech is cast in an idiom much like an allegory. The Lord is an aggrieved husband dealing with an unfaithful wife who is variously the people and the land Israel. The lovers (vv. 5, 7, 10, 12, 13) are the local manifestations of the Canaanite storm and fertility deity Baal. The speech reaches its climax in a promise of reconciliation (vv. 14–15) that is then developed in a further series of sayings (vv. 16–23). 2.2 Identification of the speech, the protagonists, and the problem. Plead is the term for a process of accusation, argument, and persuasion aimed at settling conflict; that is what the entire speech is. In the opening imperative the Lord invites individual Israelites to join his process against their mother, Israel as a people and a land. The phrase not my wife does not assume a divorce has occurred; it declares that the wife by promiscuity has deserted the status of wife and relieved the husband of any responsibility for her. Cultic jewelry was worn on the forehead and between the breasts by devotees of Baal; see 2.13. 2.3 The wife as a person and as the land. 2.5 Go after my lovers alludes to the practice of sexual rites in Canaanite religion to guarantee the fruitfulness of the land. 2.6–8 The Lord's purpose is to bring Israel back to an acknowledgment of her dependence on his provision.

- and she shall seek them,

2.9–13 The Lord's purpose will be achieved by withholding the produce of the land to demonstrate who is really its giver. 2.14 Allure in many contexts means "seduce"; the Lord must overwhelm Israel's will in order to regain it. The wilderness is the place where Israel was truly dependent on the Lord. 2.15 The Valley of Achor offers a route out of the wilderness into the heart of the land. The Lord will bring about a recapitulation of the original gift of the land. 2.16–17 The right name. 2.16 An implication that in their worship Israelites used Baal as a title for their god Yahweh, a practice that would confuse the identity of the two deities. In Hebrew Baal is both the name of the chief deity of Canaan and the legal title of a husband; "man" (NRSV, husband) is the more intimate and personal term. 2.17 Mentioned by name refers to the ritual use of a deity's name. 2.18 The gift of safety. The purpose of a covenant was to create conditions of peace between its parties. Here the Lord makes a covenant with creatures and also provides freedom from war. A life of security in the land depended on Israel's faithfulness to the covenant (Lev 25.18–19), but after judgment it will be provided by the Lord's own action (as in Ezek 34.25–31). 2.19–20 The new marriage. 2.19 Take you for my wife refers to the first legal step in a Hebrew marriage when the bridegroom pays a bride-price to the father-in-law. 3 The LORD said to me again, "Go, love a woman who has a lover and is an adulteress, just as the LORD loves the people of Israel, though they turn to other gods and love raisin cakes." 2 So I bought her for fifteen shekels of silver and a homer of barley and a measure of wine.^t 3 And I said to her, "You must remain as mine for many days; you shall not play the whore, you shall not have intercourse with a man, nor I with you." 4 For the Israelites shall remain many days without king or prince, without sacrifice or pillar, without ephod or teraphim. 5 Afterward the Israelites shall return and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; they shall come in awe to the LORD and to his goodness in the latter days.

The LORD's Indictment

4 Hear the word of the LORD,
O people of Israel;
for the LORD has an indictment against the inhabitants of the land.
There is no faithfulness or loyalty,
and no knowledge of God in
the land.
2 Swearing, lying, and murder, and stealing and adultery break out;
bloodshed follows bloodshed.
3 Therefore the land mourns, and all who live in it languish;
together with the wild animals
and the birds of the air, even the fish of the sea are perishing.

repetition forms a chain that connects the Lord with every phase of fertility. 2.22 The name Jezreel (cf. notes on 1.4-5; 1.11) is climax and meaning of the sequence; it is Israel's God who sows the crops and in v. 23 also sows Israel back into its land. 2.23 The names Lo-ruhamah and Lo-ammi are reversed as already in 2.1.

3.1-5 Ch. 3, like 1.2-8, tells about God's commission to Hosea to make his own life a symbolic enactment of God's way with Israel. 3.1 The meaning of again is not clear; it may correspond to first in 1.2 to mark this unit as the second commission of a symbolic act. What the command to love entails is wholly defined by the Lord's love for Israel. The woman is identified only as an adulteress, all the symbol requires. Raisin cakes are sacrificial offerings to a Canaanite goddess (see Jer 7.18; 44.19). 3.2 Payment of a price implies the woman was in the legal possession of someone. 3.4 Israel must live without government, religious ritual, and media for consulting a deity. The loss of these features of corporate life is tantamount to a loss of national identity among the nations. 3.5 The resolution corresponds to 2.7, 15.

4.1-3 This saying serves as an introduction to chs. 4-11. 4.1 Indictment (Hebrew riv) includes both associations and trial proceedings; see 12.1. plead in 2.2, and contend in 4.4. Loyalty (Hebrew chesed), a crucial term in Hosea's theological vocabulary, is the attitude and act that make the best of a given or assumed relationship between persons or with God. The term chesed is variously translated in NRSV as loyalty (4.1), steadfast love (2.19; 10.12), and love (6.4, 6; 12.6). Knowledge of God, another crucial term, is acknowledgment and practice of dependence on God in worship and conduct; see 2.8, 20; 4.6; 6.6. 4.2 Murder, and stealing and adultery correspond to three commandments in the Decalogue (Ex 20.13-15); swearing refers to unreliable oaths. 4.3 The land as the gift of the Lord for the life of the people suffers from the sins of its inhabitants.

4.4-19 The theme of whoredom from chs. 2-3 continues. Both priest (vv. 4-11) and people (vv. 12-19) are guilty of cultic heresy. 4.4 The singular priest may refer to the chief priest; the entire profession is addressed in the Kingship for Israel was inaugurated there (1 Sam 11.14–15) and Israel’s kings were responsible for religious apostasy and political unreliability.

10.1–8 The shrines (vv. 1–2, 8) and king (vv. 3–4, 7) and calf image (vv. 5–6) in which Israel invested wealth and hope will be swept

See note on 4.15. On the calf image in the shrine at Bethel, see note on 8.5–6. 10.8 The high places of Aven (Hebrew, “wrong”) are the hilltop sanctuaries of v. 1.

They shall say to the mountains,

Sowing and Reaping

- 9 Since the days of Gibeah you have sinned, O Israel;
there they have continued.
Shall not war overtake them in Gibeah?
10 I will come^x against the wayward people to punish them;
and nations shall be gathered against them
when they are punished^y for their double iniquity.
11 Ephraim was a trained heifer that loved to thresh,
and I spared her fair neck;
but I will make Ephraim break
the ground;
Judah must plow;
Jacob must harrow for himself.
12 Sow for yourselves righteousness;
reap steadfast love;
break up your fallow ground;
for it is time to seek the LORD, that he may come and rain righteousness upon you.
13 You have plowed wickedness,
you have reaped injustice,
you have eaten the fruit of lies.
Because you have trusted in your power
and in the multitude of your warriors, 14 therefore the tumult of war shall rise against your people, and all your fortresses shall

be destroyed,
as Shalman destroyed Beth-arbel on the day of battle when mothers were dashed in pieces with their children.
15 Thus it shall be done to you,
O Bethel,
because of your great
wickedness.
At dawn the king of Israel shall be utterly cut off.

God's Compassion

JOEL

Content and Structure

THE WORDS OF THE COMPELLING PROPHET JOEL give us a book of vivid content: we almost immediately meet a swarm of locusts, then are led through a bitter lamentation for the “day of the LORD”; priests weep and then we abruptly hear of a promised joy; the theme of judgment recurs and finally there is a happy ending.

Distressing metaphors tell of an invasion, but by what nation? The book does not say. The Assyrians, Babylonians, Persians—each has been accused, with the dating of the book assigned anywhere from 800 to 300 B.C.E. Dividing the book into parts, each with its own date, would be somewhat conjectural and destroy its loose but flowing unity. The brilliant poet probably conflated all the distressing invasions the Israelites had gone through in history and brought the same theology to each.

Authorship and Historical Background

Nor do we know who the prophet is. 1.1 gives only his patronymic, which occurs nowhere else in the Bible. Joel’s name is a common one, meaning the same as that of Elijah, (“My God is Yah [the LORD]”), but with the elements reversed.

The historical theme of the book is a locust plague and the theological theme is the “day of the LORD”; the scheme of the book is to put the two side by side. Palestine is in the path of locust movements that have occurred throughout history up to the present day. If they move by migration, they originate in the Sudan, move up through northeast Africa, through the Arabah, and into the Levant.

The surprisingly positive note the book gives to public worship and religious ritual is quite the opposite of that of the eighth-century prophets, Amos, Micah, Hosea, and Isaiah, who in general were critical of it, at least of the incongruity between the people’s behavior and what they prayed for. Priests, also called “ministers” here, are given the nonsacrificial role of lamenters. But the people have their role also—they must repent.

In fact, there will be a role “afterward” (2.28) for all people, and it will be that of prophesying. Male and female shall do this, one of the few places in the OT where women prophets are mentioned (see Huldah in 2 Kings 22.14–20 and Miriam in Ex 15.20 for others).

Startling apocalyptic elements appear from time to time in the book (2.31; 3.16) presaging a fuller usage of this language in Ezek 1 and Zech 1–8 and the fullest in the OT in Dan 7.9–10, 13–14. This genre of literature shows an overturning of nature near an end time, after which there will be no more problems.

Message

To put the theology in a nutshell: the invaders have come as punishment (though the book never specifies the crimes), so Israel must repent by worship and fasting. The “day of the LORD” predicted of old has come. This is a time (not necessarily a twenty-four hour period that can be dated), when the Lord will see to it that all his promises will be fulfilled, whether for punishment or for prosperity. If the Israelites repent and return to the Lord, the army will leave and never again return. Their enemies will fall and their lands will be fertile forever.

sumably later book and Amos. 1.8 Lament was often done in the ancient Near East by women (see Jer 9.17–22). In Ezek 8.14 women weep for Tammuz, a Babylonian god. In Jer 31.15 Rachel, no doubt an eponym for lamenting women, laments for the captured Israelites. 1.9 The invasion of the army (a nation, v. 6), both symbolic and actual, has caused the temple services to cease. 1.13–20 A ritual lament. 1.13–14 The lament is led by priests and includes the elders, indeed Archaeology has recovered many prayers of lamentation from Babylonia from about this time. 1.15 The day of the LORD is a major theme in Joel and an often used prophetic motif (see Introduction), very close to themes in Am 5.18 and Zeph 1.14–16, the latter with many of the images of Joel.

these elements is found elsewhere (see Ex 34.6; Ps 103.8–9). 2.17 The vestibule and the altar. The prophet seems to know something about the temple and its practices. The vestibule was at the entrance and the altar was at the extreme front, so this is another way of saying the whole temple. We can picture a procession here or the description of the places where prayer was offered.

2.18–27 A response to the people's lamentation from a kindly God. The crops will grow again, the army (v. 20) will go away; indeed there will be a reversal in that abundance will be theirs and they will praise God's name (v. 26). Then they will know that God is in their midst (v. 27), as Isa 7.14 pictures in the name Immanuel, "with us is God." 2.20 Northern army. Other than from Egypt almost all of Israel's invasions came from the north. The eastern sea is the Persian (Arabian) Gulf, and the western sea is the Mediterranean. Stench. Victims of present-day locust swarms describe the fetid odor from the millions of dead insects remaining when the plague is over. 2.25 The reversal of fortune refers to the locusts, now an army, in the same terms as in 1.4.

And my people shall never again
be put to shame.

- 27 You shall know that I am in the midst of Israel,
and that I, the LORD, am your God and there is no other.
And my people shall never again
be put to shame.

God's Spirit Poured Out

- 28g Then afterward
I will pour out my spirit on
all flesh;
your sons and your daughters
shall prophesy,
your old men shall dream dreams,
and your young men shall see visions.
29 Even on the male and female slaves,
in those days, I will pour out my spirit.

30 I will show portents in the heavens and on the earth, blood and fire and columns of smoke. ³¹The sun shall be turned to darkness, and the moon to blood, before the great and terrible day of the LORD comes. ³²Then everyone who calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved; for in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem there shall be those who escape, as the LORD has said, and among the survivors shall be those whom the LORD calls.

Judgment on the Nations

^{3h} For then, in those days and at that time, when I restore the fortunes of Judah and Jerusalem, ²I will gather all the nations and bring them down to the valley of Jehoshaphat, and I will enter into judgment with them there, on account of my people and my heritage Israel, because they have scattered them among the nations: They have divided my land, ³and cast lots for my people, and traded boys for prostitutes, and sold girls for wine, and drunk it down.

4 What are you to me, O Tyre and Sidon, and all the regions of Philistia? Are you paying me back for something? If you are paying me back, I will turn your deeds back upon your own heads swiftly and speedily. ⁵For you have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried my rich treasures into your temples. ⁱ ⁶You have sold the people of Judah and Jerusalem to the Greeks, removing them far from their own border. ⁷But now I will rouse them to leave the places to which you have sold them, and I will turn your deeds back upon your own heads. ⁸I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the people of Judah, and they will sell them to the Sabeans, to a nation far away;
for the LORD has spoken.

2.27 This assurance of God's presence has the tone of an ending, delineating one of the several divisions in the book. Never again. The invasions will not occur over and over again, as in the past, but will come to an end. The theme is repeated in 3.17.

2.28–32 All will be prophets of the "day of the LORD." 2.28–29 The spirit poured out tells of a prophetic fervor, a kind of an ecstasy, as in Num 11.25. But unlike anything seen before, the spirit will fall on all human beings, irrespective of their social status or class. This will occur afterward . . . in those days, a "day of the LORD" motif, sometime in the future. 2.30–31 Cf. 2.10; 3.15. With these apocalyptic elements, the text slips into a different "language." This genre appears rarely in the OT (Ezek 32.7; Am 8.9; Isa 13.10), but often in intertestamental literature, the Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha, and the NT (Revelation).

2.32 Everyone who calls must mean Israelites by context.

3.1–8 Now the nations who were cruel toward Israel will be judged (see Zeph 2). 3.2 The location of the valley of Jehoshaphat is unknown, although there could have been a valley named for this early Israelite king. It was undoubtedly chosen in this prophecy for its symbolic meaning: "The Lord judges." 3.4–6 This criticizes Tyre and Sidon and Philistia for plundering and selling the people of Judah and Jerusalem to the Greeks, a historical note we do not find elsewhere. The Greeks here are the Ionian Greeks, who inhabited the western coast of Asia Minor, as the Hebrew term for them, Yavan, indicates. 3.8 Sabeans, an important trading and caravan people whose homeland was on the western side of the tip of the Arabian Peninsula, part of today's Yemen.

3.9-17 Further symbolism of judgment on Israel's neighbors. 3.10a An ironic reversal of Mic 4.3 and Isa 2.4, peaceful there, warlike here. 3.12 The Lord will judge them in the valley called "The Lord judges" (see 3.2). 3.14 Valley of decision, again an unknown place, but apparently an echo of the valley of Jehoshaphat of 3.2, 12. 3.15 Sun and moon are darkened. Like 2.10 and 2.31, one of the several cases in which the book quotes itself. 3.16 An almost exact replica of half of the opening prophetic verse of Am 1.2. Shake is the same Hebrew word as that of Am 1.1. One of these prophets quotes the other, a rare event in prophetic literature, and we are fairly sure it is Joel who quotes Amos.

3.18-21 An ideal, utopian ending. The passage starts with an "in that day" verse, matching the themes of the ends of other prophetic books, as in Am 9.11-15; Hos 14.4-9; Mic 7.11-20; Zeph 3.14-20; Isa 66.10-14. 3.18 Wine . . . milk . . . water. The people's salvation will be symbolized by material forms, as drinking wine in Am 9.14, flourishing gardens in Hos 14.7, and fortunes restored in Zeph 3.20. Fountain . . . from the house of the LORD, as the water from the temple in Ezek 47.1-12. Pharaoh Neco Egypt controlled and exploited Israel (see 2 Kings 23.31–35). The tradition that Edom plundered Jerusalem when it was being

AMOS

OF THE FOUR PROPHETIC BOOKS that originated with eighth-century B.C.E. figures—Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, and Micah—Amos is the earliest one. But Amos was by no means the earliest prophet in ancient Israel. The historical books of the OT allude to the existence of other prophets since the eleventh century B.C.E. (see 1 Sam 9.9–13; 2 Sam 12).

Historical Circumstances

The superscription (1.1) locates Amos in the reigns of two kings, Uzziah of Judah (783–742 B.C.E.) and Jeroboam II of Israel (786–746 B.C.E.). Allusions elsewhere in the book, especially in 7.9–10, confirm this report and also verify that the prophet was a native of the southern kingdom of Judah who came to the northern kingdom of Israel to proclaim the word of God. While the earthquake by which Amos is dated (1.1) cannot be identified, the report that the prophet spoke “two years before the earthquake” suggests that Amos was active for a very short time.

More precisely, the circumstances assumed by the prophet’s message place Amos in the last decade or so of the reign of Jeroboam II, about 760 B.C.E. The reigns of Jeroboam II and Uzziah were long and relatively peaceful. There had been no major threats to the small states from major Near Eastern powers such as Egypt or Assyria, and peace seems to have been accompanied by prosperity, at least for a few and—according to Amos—at the expense of many. There seems to have been a breakdown in the old tribal and family systems of land ownership and the emergence of a wealthy class at the top of the society.

But Israel and Judah would not be left on their own much longer. At about the time the long reigns of Uzziah and Jeroboam ended, a new and aggressive king came to the throne in Assyria. He was Tiglath-pileser III (745–727 B.C.E.), whose goal was to incorporate the little states of Syria and Palestine into his empire. He would not live to conquer Israel, but his successors would invade the Northern Kingdom, destroy its cities, and carry the people into exile. Samaria, the capital city, fell to the Assyrian king Sargon II in 722/21 B.C.E., and the history of Israel came to an end. The prophecies of Amos thus were fulfilled some forty years after he uttered them.

Only a few details are preserved concerning the life of Amos. His home of Tekoa is in the Judean hills south of Bethlehem, and by trade he was “a herdsman, and a dresser of sycamore trees” (7.14) who was called to prophecy in Israel. Since Amos addressed his words particularly to those who lived in Samaria and Bethel, it is reasonable to conclude that he was active in those two northern cities.

The Book of Amos

The book of Amos is a collection of the words of and traditions concerning the prophet. The material sometimes is organized carefully but at other points the logic of the collection is difficult to discern. Most of the book consists of speeches attributed to the prophet. Most of his speeches are prophetic announcements; i.e., he speaks in the name of the Lord concerning the immediate future. Some of his speeches were reports of his threatening visions. Although it is possible that Amos himself later dictated his speeches to someone or even wrote them down himself, it is more likely that the addresses were collected and recorded by others. In addition to speeches there are reports about the prophet's activities (1.1; 7.10–17) and three fragments of hymns (4.13; 5.8–9; 9.5–6).

Not everything in the book comes from the prophet or even from his time. The first verse looks back on the prophet's activity and talks about him. Likewise the story of the prophet's clash with Amaziah the priest of Bethel (7.10–17) speaks of Amos from the perspective of a third party. A few other passages reflect a later perspective and must have been added as the book was saved and circulated in Judah, long after the state of Israel fell. These include the prophecy against Judah (2.4–5), the hymnic passages, the concluding prophecies of hope (9.8c–15), and a few others.

The Message of the Prophet and of the Book

The message of Amos is direct and uncompromising. Over and over he announces to the people of Israel that, because of their social injustice and religious arrogance, the Lord will punish them by means of a total military disaster. His addresses typically make a logical connection between Israel's unjust actions—past and present—and the Lord's coming judgment. Rarely does the prophet call for the people to change their behavior.

The words of Amos are so startling and dramatic that they might appear to be unprecedented, but the message of the prophet did not arise out of thin air. Rather, Amos over and over again appeals to traditions that he and his hearers held in common. Among these is the belief that the Lord brought Israel out of Egypt and granted the people the land of Canaan (2.9–10; 3.1–2; 9.7–8). The prophet also takes it for granted that the people of Israel had always known that the Lord expected of them justice and righteousness. Consequently, he is not introducing any new moral or legal expectations, but simply holding the people accountable for their transgressions. In this respect Amos is not radical, but conservative, calling Israel back to what had been revealed from the beginning of its history.

Although Amos relies upon earlier beliefs and traditions, he does introduce some new perspectives. First, he seems to have been the first to stress that Israel's election itself may be a reason for judgment (3.12–2) and that Israel is not the only people the Lord has chosen (9.7–8). Second, Amos is the first one we know of who announced total and complete judgment upon Israel.

Just as Amos depended upon tradition, so his words became part of tradition, being collected and handed down in Judah after Israel fell to Assyria. In the process of centuries, additions were made to the scroll, generally with a view toward applying the old prophetic message to new circumstances. For example, although Amos did not speak against Judah, an announcement against Judah (2.4–5) was subsequently added, to apply the now validated words of judgment to the Southern Kingdom. Gene M. Tucker

1.1–2 These verses serve as an introduction to the whole book. 1.1 This verse is the superscription to the book, providing its title, The words of Amos, and information concerning the background of the prophet, the object of his words, and the date of his activity. In addition to locating Amos in the reigns of Uzziah (783–743 B.C.E.) and Jeroboam (786–746 B.C.E.), the editor provides a specific date, two years before the earthquake. 1.2 The motto summarizes the message of the book: the word of the Lord through the Judean prophet roars northward to bring destruction.

1.3–2.16 Seven similar prophecies against foreign nations are followed by a prophecy against Israel. The foreigners are not judged because they are Israel's enemies but because of violations against other neighbors. The sequence of condemning foreigners, then Judah, and finally Israel would have been rhetorically powerful before an Israelite audience, but there is no reason to doubt the seriousness of those judgments as well as that against Israel. 1.3 The phrase for three transgressions of X and for four, a refrain in the series of announcements (e.g., 1.6; 1.9; 1.11), probably means an indefinite but finally decisive number of violations. The meaning of the Hebrew phrase translated I will not revoke the punishment, lit. "I will not cause it to return," is uncertain, but it likely refers to the Lord's promise not to stop the effects of the transgressions. 1.4 The Aramean king Hazael established a dy-dictment of Judah is quite different from the preceding ones, all of which had listed violations of standards of international conduct as reasons for Yahweh's judgment. The language of the accusation, law of the Lord . . . his statutes . . . after which their ancestors walked, is that of Deuteronomy, indicating that the judgment against Judah was added after the time of Amos and probably even after Jerusalem had fallen to the Babylonians. 2.6–8 Israel is accused of injustice against the poor and of several forms of religious corruption. 2.6 Sell the righteous, a reference to enslavement for nonpayment of debts. 2.7 Push the afflicted out of the way, probably the denial of legal due process in the courts. Father and son go in to the same girl. The accusation may refer to the violation of laws concerning incest, although there is no law that exactly parallels this situation (but see Lev 18.15; 20.12), or the offense may be the exploitation of the girl. 2.9–11 As further foundation for the announcement of judgment Yahweh reminds Israel of his saving acts on their behalf. 2.9 Amorite. See Num 21.21–31. 2.11 The nazirites, "separated or consecrated ones," took vows that included abstinence from wine and strong drink (see v. 12; Num 6.1–21). The only person specifically named as a Nazirite was Samson (see Judg 13.4–7), whose consecration included the vow that his hair would never be cut. 2.13–16 The Lord announces judgment against Israel in the form of a military catastrophe in which the army is routed and even the most

4.1–3 A prophecy of punishment against the wealthy women of Samaria, ridiculed as cows of Bashan. Bashan was a region in northern Transjordan known for its sleek cattle (cf. Deut 32.14; Ps 22.12). Typically, the prophecy includes a summons to attention (v. 1a), an indictment (v. 1b), and an announcement of punishment (vv. 2–3). 4.1 The women are guilty of social injustice and arrogance, epitomized by what they say to their husbands. 4.4–5 Through ironic calls to worship or parodies of pilgrim songs to the traditional sanctuaries at Bethel and Gilgal (Gen 28.10–22; Josh 5.2–9; Am 7.10–17), Amos asserts that worship and transgression have become synonymous (see 5.21–24). 4.6–13 Because a series of disasters sent by the Lord has failed to persuade Israel to return to its God, the people will now meet (v. 12) that God directly. The meaning of the refrain that links the series, yet you did not return to me, is not self-evident. In some instances the expression refers to obedience to God generally (Deut 4.30; 30.2), but elsewhere “to return” or “to turn” to the Lord refers specifically to acts of confession and repentance (Isa 19.22; Hos 14.2; Joel 2.12). 4.6 Cleanness of teeth . . . and lack of bread, hunger, resulting from famine. 4.7–8 Drought did not lead Israel to its God. 4.9 Crops were destroyed by disease and in-

- the locust devoured your fig trees and your olive trees;
yet you did not return to me,
says the LORD.
- 10 I sent among you a pestilence after the manner of Egypt;
I killed your young men with
the sword;
I carried away your horses;ⁿ and I made the stench of your camp go up into your nostrils;
yet you did not return to me,
says the LORD.
- 11 I overthrew some of you,
as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah,
and you were like a brand
snatched from the fire;
yet you did not return to me,
says the LORD.
- 12 Therefore thus I will do to you,
O Israel;
because I will do this to you,
prepare to meet your God,
O Israel!
- 13 For lo, the one who forms the mountains, creates the wind,
reveals his thoughts to
mortals,
makes the morning darkness,
and treads on the heights of
the earth—
the LORD, the God of hosts, is his name!
- 5 Hear this word that I take up over you in lamentation, O house of Israel:
2 Fallen, no more to rise,
is maiden Israel;
forsaken on her land,
with no one to raise her up.
3 For thus says the Lord God:
The city that marched out a thousand
shall have a hundred left,
and that which marched out a hundred
shall have ten left.^o 4 For thus says the LORD to the house of Israel:
Seek me and live;
5 but do not seek Bethel, and do not enter into Gilgal or cross over to Beer-sheba; for Gilgal shall surely go into exile,
and Bethel shall come to nothing.
6 Seek the LORD and live, or he will break out against the house of Joseph like fire, and it will devour Bethel, with no one to quench it.
7 Ah, you that turn justice to and bring righteousness to

the ground!

sects. 4.10 A pestilence after the manner of Egypt. The prophet alludes to the tradition of the plagues against Egypt (Ex 5–11, esp. 9.3–7, 15). The remainder of the verse refers to a military disaster. 4.11 By the time of Amos, Sodom and Gomorrah were synonymous with total and divinely sent destruction (Gen 19.12–29; Isa 1.9; Jer 49.18). 4.12 Although the verse is cryptic, the therefore that links it to the recital of Israel's failure to return indicates that prepare to meet your God is an announcement of judgment. The encounter with God will not be pleasant. 4.13 Words from a hymn that probably once functioned in worship conclude the announcement against Israel (see also 5.8–9; 9.5–6).

5.1–3 The prophet calls for the people (house of Israel) to hear a lamentation, that is, a dirge or funeral song. 5.2 Since it is maiden Israel that has died, the song announces the death of the nation. 5.3 The military forces will be decimated. 5.4–7 Exhortations to seek the Lord as the path to life. See also 5.14–15. 5.4 Seek is probably a technical term for inquiring of God or turning to God in a service of prayer. 5.5 Seeking the Lord is contrasted with making pilgrimages to the famous religious centers at Bethel (see 3.14; 4.4; 7.10–17), Gilgal, and Beer-sheba (see 8.14; Gen 21.14, 32–33; 26.23–25), which are destined for exile and destruction. 5.6 House of Joseph, the northern kingdom of Israel. 5.7 Justice . . . righteousness. See 5.24. 5.8–9 Like many of the psalms, this hymn extols the Lord as

- and turns deep darkness into
the morning,
and darkens the day into night,
who calls for the waters of
the sea,
and pours them out on the surface of the earth,
the LORD is his name, 9 who makes destruction flash out against the strong,
so that destruction comes upon the fortress.
- 10 They hate the one who reproves
in the gate,
and they abhor the one who speaks the truth.
- 11 Therefore because you trample on the poor
and take from them levies
of grain,
you have built houses of
hewn stone,
but you shall not live in them;
you have planted pleasant vineyards,
but you shall not drink
their wine.
- 12 For I know how many are your
transgressions,
and how great are your sins —
you who afflict the righteous, who take a bribe,
and push aside the needy in
the gate.
- 13 Therefore the prudent will keep silent in such a time;
for it is an evil time.
- 14 Seek good and not evil,
that you may live;
- and so the LORD, the God of hosts, will be with you, just as you have said.
- 15 Hate evil and love good,
and establish justice in the gate;
it may be that the LORD, the God
of hosts,
will be gracious to the remnant
of Joseph.
- 16 Therefore thus says the LORD,
the God of hosts, the Lord:
In all the squares there shall be wailing;
and in all the streets they shall say, "Alas! alas!"
They shall call the farmers to
mourning,
and those skilled in lamentation, to wailing;
- 17 in all the vineyards there shall be wailing,
for I will pass through the midst of you,
says the LORD.
- 18 Alas for you who desire the day
of the LORD!
Why do you want the day of
the LORD?
It is darkness, not light;
- 19 as if someone fled from a lion,
and was met by a bear;
or went into the house and rested
a hand against the wall, and was bitten by a snake.

the creator of the cosmos. 5.8 The Lord made the constellations (Pleiades and Orion), causes day and night, and brings the rain from the sea. 5.9 The one who controls natural forces also acts in history to destroy. 5.10–13 Accusations of injustice against the wealthy and powerful members of the community who take advantage of the poor (v. 11) and the needy (v. 12). 5.10 They are the ones addressed as you in v. 11, i.e., the prophet's audience. The gate is the location of the law court. 5.11 Ironically, the wealthy will lose the very things they have acquired unjustly. 5.12 Push aside the needy in the gate, use the legal process to take advantage of the poor. 5.13 The prophet refers enigmatically to the time of judgment (evil time). 5.14–15 Further exhortations to seek the Lord. See 5.4–7. 5.15 It is possible that it is not too late to change and avert the coming disaster. Be gracious; pardon. Remnant of Joseph, what is left of the Northern Kingdom, Israel. 5.16–20 Contrary to popular expectations, a day of death and destruction lies ahead. 5.16–17 As in 5.1–2, mourning songs announce the death of Israel. Those skilled in lamentation are professional mourners (Jer 9.17–19; Ezek 8.14; 2 Chr 35.25). 5.18–20 The day of the LORD will be a dark day of judgment. In this earliest prophetic reference to the expectation, Amos repudiates and reverses the false hopes of his hearers through the use of rhetorical questions and metaphorical language. For subsequent understandings of the "day of the LORD" see Ezek 30.1–4;

- 21 I hate, I despise your festivals, and I take no delight in your solemn assemblies.
- 22 Even though you offer me your burnt offerings and grain
offerings,
I will not accept them;
and the offerings of well-being of your fatted animals
I will not look upon.
- 23 Take away from me the noise of your songs;
I will not listen to the melody of your harps.
- 24 But let justice roll down like waters,
and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream.

25 Did you bring to me sacrifices and offerings the forty years in the wilderness, O house of Israel? 26 You shall take up Sakkuth your king, and Kaiwan your star-god, your images,^p which you made for yourselves; 27 therefore I will take you into exile beyond Damascus, says the LORD, whose name is the God of hosts.

- 6 Alas for those who are at ease and for those who feel secure the notables of the first of the

nations,
to whom the house of Israel resorts!

- 2 Cross over to Calneh, and see;
from there go to Hamath
the great;
then go down to Gath of the Philistines.
Are you better^q than these kingdoms?
Or is your^r territory greater than their^s territory,
- 3 O you that put far away the evil day,
and bring near a reign of
violence?
- 4 Alas for those who lie on beds
of ivory,
and lounge on their couches,
and eat lambs from the flock,
and calves from the stall;
5 who sing idle songs to the sound of the harp,
and like David improvise on instruments of music;
6 who drink wine from bowls, and anoint themselves with the finest oils,
but are not grieved over the ruin of Joseph!

first to go into exile,
and the revelry of the loungers
shall pass away.

Joel 2.1–2; Zeph 1.14–18. 5.21–27 The prophet has the Lord speaking in the strongest terms (I hate, I despise, v. 21) to reject all kinds of religious practices and to call instead for justice and righteousness (v. 24; see Isa 1.10–17; Mic 6.6–8). 5.21 Festivals and solemn assemblies include both regular and unscheduled gatherings for prayer, sacrifice, and celebration. 5.22 Three common types of sacrifice are rejected. 5.23 The Lord considers sacred music to be noise (see 8.10). 5.24 Amos frequently speaks of justice and righteousness in tandem (see also 5.7; 6.12). Justice is the establishment of the right, and of the person in the right, through fair legal procedures (5.15; Deut 25.1), in accordance with the will of the Lord. Righteousness is that quality of life in relationship with others in the community that gives rise to justice. 5.25 Contrary to the pentateuchal account of Israel's history (Ex 19–Num 10), Amos asserts that sacrifices and offerings were not given during the wandering in the wilderness. 5.26 Sakkuth and Kaiwan were Mesopotamian deities. 5.27 Exile beyond Damascus, i.e., to Assyria.

6.1–7 Indictments of a self-indulgent society conclude (v. 7) with an announcement of judgment. 6.1–3 The powerful and wealthy (notables) are accused of arrogant self-satisfaction. 6.1 Although the message of Amos is to the Northern Kingdom (Israel) and its capital (Samaria) in particular, here he includes the leaders of Jerusalem (Zion) as well. 6.2 Calneh and Hamath were Syrian cities to the north of Israel, perhaps taken by Assyria in 738 B.C.E.; Gath was one of the five Philistine cities to the west. 6.4–6 The upper class, including the political leadership, indulge themselves with rich food, drink, and entertainment but have no concern for the troubles of the nation (ruin of Joseph, v. 6). 6.4 Alas does not appear in the Hebrew text. 6.7 The leaders will lead the way into exile.

and I will deliver up the city and all that is in it.

Visions of Judgment

7 This is what the Lord God showed me: he was forming locusts at the time the latter growth began to sprout (it was the latter growth after the king's mowings). ² When they had finished eating the grass of the land, I said,

"O Lord God, forgive, I beg you!
How can Jacob stand?
He is so small!"

- ³ The LORD relented concerning this;
"It shall not be," said the LORD.

⁴ This is what the Lord God showed me: the Lord God was calling for a shower of fire,^y and it devoured the great deep and was eating up the land. ⁵ Then I said,

"O Lord God, cease, I beg you!
How can Jacob stand?
He is so small!"

- ⁶ The LORD relented concerning this;
"This also shall not be," said the Lord God.

⁷ This is what he showed me: the Lord

^t Or who makes a burning for him ^u Heb he ^v Or Does one plow them with oxen ^w Or in a thing of nothingness ^x Or horns ^y Or for a judgment by fire

6.8–14 Diverse materials have been combined to advance the common theme of the Lord's judgment on the city (v. 8), presumably Samaria. 6.8 The Lord solemnly swears (see 4.2; 8.7) to hand over (deliver up) the city and its inhabitants to its enemies. 6.9–10 A narrative sketches a mysterious and ominous little scene of survivors hiding among the ruins and the bodies of the slain. 6.12 The prophet employs proverbial sayings to show that Israel's sins are unnatural and ridiculous behavior. 6.13 Israel boasts that its military conquests were achieved through its own strength. The names of cities in the Transjordan conquered by Jeroboam II (2 Kings 14.25) are turned into puns, "not a thing" and "horns," the sarcastic use of a symbol of strength. 6.14 The Lord promises to bring an unnamed enemy to oppress the people from one end of the land to the other.

7.1–9.4 Five vision reports organize this section of the book. 7.1–9 Amos reports three visions of divine judgment against Israel. In the first two (vv. 1–3, 4–7) he intercedes on behalf of the people and the Lord relents, but in the third, as in the fourth and fifth (8.1–3; 9.1–4) he does not intercede and the sentence is not lifted. 7.1 Showed me, technical language in autobiographical style for the introduction of a vision report (7.4, 7; 8.1). Locusts were a familiar threat to crops and therefore to the lives of the people. 7.3 Relented, or "repented." Reports that God repented or reversed a decision are not uncommon in the Hebrew scriptures (see esp. Jon 3.9–10; 4.2; Joel 2.14, 18–19). 7.4 Shower of fire, better "judgment by fire." Since it devoured the great deep, the waters believed to surround the earth and heavens (see Gen 1.2), as well as the land, this was no ordinary flame but a cosmic fire. 7.7 The Hebrew word translated plumb line appears only in this context and therefore its was standing beside a wall built with a plumb line, with a plumb line in his hand. ⁸And the LORD said to me, “Amos, what do you see?” And I said, “A plumb line.” Then the Lord said, “See, I am setting a plumb line in the midst of my people

Israel;

I will never again pass them by;
⁹ the high places of Isaac shall be made desolate,
and the sanctuaries of Israel
shall be laid waste, and I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.”

Amaziah and Amos

¹⁰ Then Amaziah, the priest of Bethel, sent to King Jeroboam of Israel, saying, “Amos has conspired against you in the very center of the house of Israel; the land is not able to bear all his words. ¹¹For thus Amos has said, ‘Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel must go into exile away from his land.’”

¹²And Amaziah said to Amos, “O seer, go, flee away to the land of Judah, earn your bread there, and prophesy there; ¹³but never again prophesy at Bethel, for it is the king’s sanctuary, and it is a temple of the kingdom.”

¹⁴ Then Amos answered Amaziah, “I am ^zno prophet, nor a prophet’s son; but I am ^za herdsman, and a dresser of sycamore trees, ¹⁵and the LORD took me from following the flock, and the LORD said to me, ‘Go, prophesy to my people Israel.’

¹⁶ “Now therefore hear the word of the LORD.

You say, ‘Do not prophesy against Israel, and do not preach against the house of Isaac.’

¹⁷ Therefore thus says the LORD:

‘Your wife shall become a prostitute in the city, and your sons and your daughters shall fall by
the sword,
and your land shall be parceled
out by line;
you yourself shall die in an unclean land,
and Israel shall surely go into exile away from its land.’”

8 This is what the Lord God showed me—a basket of summer fruit.^a ²He said, “Amos, what do you see?” And I said, “A basket of summer fruit.”^a Then the LORD said to me,

“The end^b has come upon my people Israel;

I will never again pass them by.

³ The songs of the temple^c shall become wailings in that day,”

says the Lord God;

“the dead bodies shall be many,
cast out in every place. Be silent!”

meaning is uncertain. 7.9 The high places were the locations of sanctuaries for legitimate worship and sacrifice until they were outlawed in the time of Josiah (2 Kings 23.8). Isaac as a name for the land of Israel is unusual.

7.10–17 Conflict between prophet and priest. The report from the perspective of a third person first gives the background (vv. 10–11) and then reports the dialogue between Amos and Amaziah (vv. 12–15) that concludes with the prophet’s announcement of judgment against the priest, his family, and his people (vv. 16–17). 7.10–11 Amos is accused of conspiracy against the state because of words of judgment such as those found in 7.9. 7.12–13 Amaziah does not challenge the right of Amos to prophesy but only his authority to speak at the royal sanctuary and, by implication, in the state of Israel. 7.14 I am no prophet. The Hebrew clause could be translated “I was no prophet.” Prophet’s son, member of a prophetic guild (see 2 Kings 2.3; 4.1). 7.15 Amos asserts the authority of his divine vocation against the authority of the priest. 7.16–17 Judgment is announced upon Amaziah and his household because he has opposed the word of God.

8.1–3 The fourth vision report parallels the third one (7.7–9) in form and effect: divine judgment upon Israel. 8.2 The Hebrew for basket of summer fruit (gayitz) is a pun on the word for end (qetz). 8.4–8 Because of Israel’s corrupt business practices that oppress the needy and the poor

- and bring to ruin the poor of the land, 5 saying, "When will the new moon be over so that we may sell grain;
 and the sabbath,
 so that we may offer wheat for sale?
 We will make the ephah small and the shekel great,
 and practice deceit with false balances, 6 buying the poor for silver and the needy for a pair of sandals, and selling the sweepings of the wheat."
- 7 The LORD has sworn by the pride of Jacob:
 Surely I will never forget any of their deeds.
 8 Shall not the land tremble on this account, and everyone mourn who lives in it,
 and all of it rise like the Nile, and be tossed about and sink again, like the Nile of Egypt?
- 9 On that day, says the Lord God,
 I will make the sun go down at noon,
 and darken the earth in broad daylight.
 10 I will turn your feasts into mourning,
 and all your songs into lamentation;
 I will bring sackcloth on all loins,
 and baldness on every head;
 I will make it like the mourning for an only son,
 and the end of it like a bitter day.
- 11 The time is surely coming, says the Lord God,
 when I will send a famine on the land;
 not a famine of bread, or a thirst for water,
 but of hearing the words of the LORD.
 12 They shall wander from sea to sea,
 and from north to east;
 they shall run to and fro, seeking the word of the LORD, but they shall not find it.
- 13 In that day the beautiful young women and the young men shall faint for thirst.
 14 Those who swear by Ashimah of Samaria, and say, "As your god lives, O Dan," and, "As the way of Beer-sheba lives" — they shall fall, and never rise again.
- 9 I saw the LORD standing beside^d the altar, and he said:
 Strike the capitals until the thresholds shake, and shatter them on the heads of all the people;^e and those who are left I will kill with the sword;
 not one of them shall flee away,
 not one of them shall escape.
- 2 Though they dig into Sheol, from there shall my hand take them;
- ^d Or on ^e Heb all of them

(vv. 4–6), the Lord will intervene against the land (vv. 7–8). 8.5 The new moon was obviously a monthly religious festival day when business was suspended. 8.6 Buying the poor, a reference to debt slavery (see 2.6). 8.8 Land, the earth. 8.9–14 The coming "day of the LORD" will be a time of darkness (5.18–20), mourning, famine, and thirst. 8.9 The imagery of a solar eclipse is a portent of the darkness of death. 8.11–12 Worse than a famine will be the Lord's withdrawal of his word. 8.14 Ashimah and the way of Beer-sheba are either the names of gods or pejorative titles applied to gods.

9.1–4 The fifth vision report is unlike the previous ones in form, lacking the introductory formula and dialogue between the prophet and the Lord, and it is the vision of the most severe judgment. 9.1 The prophet sees the Lord himself and hears him giving orders for the total destruction of the people. 9.2–4 There is no escape from the Lord, not even in death or captivity. 9.2 Sheol, the underworld realm of the

The Lord is the name of the one who created the world and whose touch can cause it to melt or toss about. 9.7–8 Against people who had come to view their election by God arrogantly, the prophet points out that the Lord had been concerned for and had brought up other nations as well. 9.8 The Israelites' election has become the occasion for their self-satisfaction and therefore for their judgment (see 3.1–2). In a later addition to the book, an exception is made for Judah (house of Jacob). 9.9–10 Typically in the book of Amos judgment is announced on the people as a whole, but these verses restrict it to certain sinners. 9.9 The simile of a sieve suggests the process of separating the sinners from the others.

9.11–15 Announcements of salvation. Since the prophecies presume that the nation has been destroyed and the people exiled, they probably come from the time of the Babylonian exile (597–539 B.C.E.). 9.11–12 The Lord promises to restore the Davidic kingdom, rebuild its cities, and restore its territory. 9.11 That day. other texts in Amos (5.18–21; 2.16; 8.3), the “day of the LORD” is a time of salvation for God’s people. 9.13–15 In the new age, nature will be incredibly fruitful and the people will be secure in their land. Those who experienced the judgment announced by Amos now see God acting to save and restore.

OBADIAH

THE SHORTEST BOOK OF THE OT, Obadiah carries the name of an otherwise unknown prophet meaning “slave/servant of Yah (i.e., Yahweh, ‘the LORD’).” The time of writing is unknown, though internal evidence suggests an exilic or early postexilic date. The title verse calls it a “vision,” using a special Hebrew word for what the prophets saw, as in Isa 1.1.

Structure and Content

Obadiah has much of the terminology of the better-known prophetic books, and its theology also follows that of the other prophets. The book divides neatly into two parts: vv. 1–14, an oracle against Edom, blasted for its anti-Judah words and actions at the time of Judah’s calamity, and vv. 15–21, a utopian picture of the Judeans possessing the lands of their neighbors.

The first part is a genre called “oracles against the nations” (see Isa 13–23; Jer 46–51; Ezek 26–32). Jer 49.7–22 and Ezek 25.12–14 are also diatribes against Edom. The second part strains our historical knowledge in listing a surprising array of states that shall be dispossessed by the remaining Judeans and the exiled Israelites. Each of these areas touches Judah on either the north, east, or south.

As in the theology of other “oracles against the nations,” Edom has been proud and so will be “brought to the ground” (v. 3). Also, Edom has done “violence” to its “brother Jacob” (v. 10, the same theme found in Am 1.11), rejoicing when Judah was in distress, even looting it (v. 13).

The punishment will not be done at the time of the book, but at one referred to by that often used prophetic term “day of the LORD” (v. 15) and by “on that day” (v. 8). This is fair, for as the Edomites have done, the same will be done to them (v. 15). This is the ancient doctrine of retribution, found in many of the old Semitic codes of law (cf. Ex 21.24–25; Jer 50.29).

The second part flows from the first, for after Edom gets its just deserts, Israel will get its own, by the possession of the various countries enumerated. But did this ever happen? We do not know that it did, but the last verses of the prophets are full of utopian predictions of the fall of the nations and the exaltation of Israel. We compare Zeph 3.19 and Joel 3.19-21 and note that Am 9.12 has similar words to Ob 21. Richard A. Henshaw

Proud Edom Will Be Brought Low

1 The vision of Obadiah.

Thus says the Lord God
concerning Edom:
We have heard a report from
the LORD,
and a messenger has been sent
among the nations:
"Rise up! Let us rise against it for battle!"

2 I will surely make you least
among the nations;
you shall be utterly despised.

3 Your proud heart has deceived you,
you that live in the clefts of the rock,^a
whose dwelling is in the heights.

You say in your heart,
"Who will bring me down to the ground?"

4 Though you soar aloft like the eagle,
though your nest is set among
the stars,
from there I will bring you
down,

says the LORD.

5 If thieves came to you,
if plunderers by night
—how you have been destroyed! —
would they not steal only what they wanted?

If grape-gatherers came to you, would they not leave gleanings?

6 How Esau has been pillaged, his treasures searched out!

7 All your allies have deceived you, they have driven you to the border;
your confederates have prevailed
against you;

those who ate^b your bread
have set a trap for you — there is no understanding of it.

8 On that day, says the LORD,
I will destroy the wise out of Edom,
and understanding out of Mount Esau.

9 Your warriors shall be shattered, O Teman,
so that everyone from Mount Esau will be cut off.

10 For the slaughter and violence done to your brother Jacob, shame shall cover you,

^a Or clefts of Sela

1-14 An oracle against Edom, announcing destruction because of its treachery against Judah. 1 Edom, the tiny desert nation directly east of the Arabah, whose language was so close to Hebrew that its inhabitants were considered "brothers" by the biblical authors (see Gen 25.23-26; Am 1.1; Ob 12). The name Esau, Edom's eponymous ancestor in the Genesis tale, is sometimes used in this book for Edom. The Hebrew text of vv. 1-2 is almost exactly that of Jer 49.14-15, but we do not know which borrowed from which. 3 Pride is often mentioned as the reason for punishment in the "oracles," as in Isa 14.13; 16.6; 23.9; Jer 48.29; 49.4; Ezek 28.1; 31.10. The rock (Hebrew sela) refers either to the mountainous terrain of Edom or to Sela, a major Edomite city, identified by some with later Petra, which also means "rock." 4 Soar aloft . . . bring you down. There is no escape from the Lord, a theme also in Am 9.2-3. 5-9 A lamentation over Edom, whose military might and legendary wisdom (cf. Jer 49.7) could not prevent its total destruction, decreed by the Lord and brought about by the treachery of Edom's former allies. 9 Teman, an important city in Edom, here a synecdoche standing for the whole country. 10-13 Looting seems to refer to the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.E. 2 Kings 25.1-21 gives the biblical account of the fall of Jerusalem, not mentioning the Edomites, but Hebrew tradition blames the Edomites for cruelty against Judah (see Ps 137.7; Lam 4.21-22; Ezek 35.12-14). More details, however, are given in Obadiah than in any other place.

- and you shall be cut off forever.
- 11 On the day that you stood aside,
on the day that strangers carried off his wealth, and foreigners entered his gates and cast lots for Jerusalem, you too were like one of them.
- 12 But you should not have gloated^c over^d your brother on the day of his misfortune;
you should not have rejoiced over the people of Judah
on the day of their ruin;
you should not have boasted on the day of distress.
- 13 You should not have entered the gate of my people on the day of their calamity;
you should not have joined in the gloating over Judah's^e disaster on the day of his calamity;
you should not have looted his goods
on the day of his calamity.
- 14 You should not have stood at the crossings to cut off his fugitives;
you should not have handed over his survivors
on the day of distress.

Israel's Final Triumph

- 15 For the day of the LORD is near against all the nations.
As you have done, it shall be done to you;

- your deeds shall return on your own head.
- 16 For as you have drunk on my holy mountain,
all the nations around you shall drink;
they shall drink and gulp down,^f and shall be as though they had never been.
- 17 But on Mount Zion there shall be those that escape, and it shall be holy;
and the house of Jacob shall take possession of those who dispossessed them.
- 18 The house of Jacob shall be a fire,
the house of Joseph a flame,
and the house of Esau stubble;
they shall burn them and consume them,
and there shall be no survivor of the house of Esau;
for the LORD has spoken.
- 19 Those of the Negeb shall possess Mount Esau, and those of the Shephelah the land of the Philistines;
they shall possess the land of Ephraim and the land of Samaria, and Benjamin shall possess Gilead.

JONAH

THE JONAH STORY is quite different from all the other prophetic books. Other biblical prophets were primarily concerned with Israel and Judah. Although they had only minimal success, their books are filled with oracles passionately urging the people to observe Israel's covenant obligations to God. Jonah, on the other hand, is sent to the Assyrians in Nineveh—a people whose brutal actions had made their name a byword among the Israelites (cf. Nahum). He then delivers only a one-verse oracle (3.4) and succeeds marvelously, despite his best efforts to run and fail. The story is a satire, giving us a hero who says the right things in a context where his actions belie his words (1.9; 2.2–9; 4.2).

Setting and Purpose

Satire entertains, but it also has a polemical purpose—addressing major issues being faced by the writer's contemporaries. Because of its language and allusive style, most scholars believe that the story was written in the sixth or fifth century B.C.E., during or after the exile in Babylonia. This was a time of great trauma but also of great regeneration within the Jewish community. Jews had been driven out of their homeland, and there was a real possibility that the people—now living as minority groups throughout the Near East—would be assimilated into the neighboring populations. Although they were permitted to return to their homeland after the exile, there was a strong concern with maintaining traditional covenant values and identity as God's holy people over against the melting pot of the vast Persian Empire. The only recourse, many leaders concluded, was to separate the Jewish community from the outside world as much as possible. Thus one issue in the story is surely the relationship between Jew and Gentile, between the God of Israel and the nations of the world. A second concern was God's apparent unfair treatment of the Jews. Biblical traditions explained the exile as God's punishment for the Jews' neglect of the covenant laws, yet Jews now living among foreigners soon realized that the ethical norms and behavior of the surrounding peoples were more abhorrent than their own. If we deserved punishment, they asked, how could God possibly spare others whose offenses were far more serious? Finally, many Jews believed that the suffering of the present generation was caused by the sins of past generations (cf. Ezek 18.2). If God's judgment continues on to the third and fourth generation (cf. Ex 20.5), does that mean that our lives are hopelessly determined by the past? Would God be merciful if people repent of their sins and truly change their ways (cf. Jer 18.1–22)?

The Prophet

Although Jonah is a caricature of the biblical prophet, the story also depicts him as a man of faith who, like Job, is struggling to make sense of God's actions. Whereas Job is angry over undeserved suffering, Jonah's problem is undeserved forgiveness. In his anger he seeks out shelters to retreat from the world and his calling. The story ends with a question from God addressed to Jonah, placing readers in Jonah's shoes and asking us to work out appropriate resolutions to the issues raised in the story. James S. Ackerman

Jonah's Call and Flight

1 Now the word of the LORD came to Jonah son of Amittai, saying, ²"Go at once to Nineveh, that great city, and cry out against it; for their wickedness has come up before me." ³But Jonah set out to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the LORD. He went down to Joppa and found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid his fare and went on board, to go with them to Tarshish, away from the presence of the LORD.

⁴ But the LORD hurled a great wind upon the sea, and such a mighty storm came upon the sea that the ship threatened to break up. ⁵Then the mariners were afraid, and each cried to his god. They threw the cargo that was in the ship into the sea, to lighten it for them. Jonah, meanwhile, had gone down into the hold of the ship and had lain down, and was fast asleep. ⁶The captain came and said to him, "What are you doing sound asleep? Get up, call on your god! Perhaps the god will spare us a thought so that we do not perish."

⁷ The sailors^a said to one another, "Come, let us cast lots, so that we may know on whose account this calamity has come upon us." So they cast lots, and the lot fell on Jonah. ⁸Then they said to him, "Tell us why this calamity has come upon us. What is your occupation? Where do you come from? What is your country?"

^a Heb They

1.1–16 Jonah's call and flight. 1.1 Jonah is described in 2 Kings 14.23–27 as a prophet who supported the Northern Kingdom (Israel) of Jeroboam II (786–746 B.C.E.). 1.2 Nineveh, a major city in Assyria to the east—a nation that conquered the Northern Kingdom in 722 B.C.E. Although many biblical prophets gave oracles against foreign nations, no prophet actually journeyed from Israel to another land to deliver a message from God. 1.3 Tarshish, a western seaport possibly to be identified with Tartessus in Spain—on the outer edge of the then-known world. Many biblical prophets resisted their initial call from God (e.g., Ex 3.11; 4.10–17; Jer 1.6). Jonah resists even more strenuously, moving in the direction exactly opposite to the one commanded by God. His flight from the presence of the LORD is described as a series of descents, from his village in Israel into the hold of the Tarshish-bound ship. Later in the story he will descend even deeper! 1.5–6 Many polytheistic peoples believed that the best remedy for sickness or danger was to propitiate the deity whose anger had caused the calamity. Jonah refuses to heed the captain's appeal. 1.7 For other examples of determining guilt by the casting of lots, see Josh 7.16–18; 1 Sam 14.40–42. 1.9 Although he perhaps does not realize it, Jonah's pious confession of faith in God as creator both of the sea and the dry land underscores the futility of his attempt

And of what people are you?" 9 "I am a Hebrew," he replied. "I worship the LORD, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land." 10 Then the men were even more afraid, and said to him, "What is this that you have done!" For the men knew that he was fleeing from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them so.

11 Then they said to him, "What shall we do to you, that the sea may quiet down for us?" For the sea was growing more and more tempestuous. 12 He said to them, "Pick me up and throw me into the sea; then the sea will quiet down for you; for I know it is because of me that this great storm has come upon you." 13 Nevertheless the men rowed hard to bring the ship back to land, but they could not, for the sea grew more and more stormy against them. 14 Then they cried out to the LORD, "Please, O LORD, we pray, do not let us perish on account of this man's life. Do not make us guilty of innocent blood; for you, O LORD, have done as it pleased you." 15 So they picked Jonah up and threw him into the sea; and the sea ceased from its raging. 16 Then the men feared the LORD even more, and they offered a sacrifice to the LORD and made vows.

Jonah in the Fish

17^b But the LORD provided a large fish to swallow up Jonah; and Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

Jonah's Song of Thanksgiving

- 2 Then Jonah prayed to the LORD his God from the belly of the fish, saying,
 "I called to the LORD out of my distress, and he answered me;
 out of the belly of Sheol I cried,
 and you heard my voice.
 3 You cast me into the deep,
 into the heart of the seas,
 and the flood surrounded me;
 all your waves and your billows passed over me.
 4 Then I said, 'I am driven away from your sight;
 how^c shall I look again
 upon your holy temple?' 5 The waters closed in over me;
 the deep surrounded me;
 weeds were wrapped around my head
 6 at the roots of the mountains.
 I went down to the land whose bars closed upon me
 forever;
 yet you brought up my life from
 the Pit,
 O LORD my God.
 7 As my life was ebbing away,
 I remembered the LORD;
 and my prayer came to you,
 into your holy temple.
 8 Those who worship vain idols

 9 But I with the voice of

b Ch 2.1 in Heb c Theodotion: Heb surely to escape from God's presence. 1.12 Jonah is willing to accept death for his disobedience, but we have not yet learned why he feels compelled to disobey. 1.15 The Lord's hurling the great wind (v. 4) prompts the hurling overboard first of the ship's cargo (v. 5) and then finally of Jonah. 1.16 The sailors have changed from fearing the storm and crying to their gods (v. 5) to crying to (v. 14) and fearing the Lord.

1.17–2.10 God judges and delivers Jonah by means of a fish. 1.17 The Hebrew verb translated to swallow up always has a negative meaning in the Bible (Ex 15.12; Num 16.30). Thus the fish first appears as an instrument of divine judgment rather than deliverance. 2.1 Since the Hebrew verb translated prayed always refers to asking for help not yet rendered, most scholars conclude that Jonah's song of thanksgiving in vv. 2–9 was added by a later editor. If the song is read as an integral part of the story, however, we can again find Jonah saying words that do not accord with the action (cf. 1.9). It is thus possible to read the prayer ironically as false piety, since Jonah is eager to return to the temple while he has not repented for having disobeyed God's command. 2.3–6 Ancient Canaanite and Mesopotamian texts depict the underworld as a walled city located under the waters and below the mountains that were thought to support the cosmos (see Job 38.16–17; Pss 9.13–14; 107.18). 2.8–9 Jonah perceives pagans as forsakers of true loyalty (Hebrew chesed) and vows to make a proper sacrifice when he returns, while the gentile sailors in the ship above him are already completing their sacriwill sacrifice to you;

what I have vowed I will pay.
Deliverance belongs to the LORD!"

¹⁰Then the LORD spoke to the fish, and it spewed Jonah out upon the dry land.

Jonah in Nineveh

3 The word of the LORD came to Jonah a second time, saying, ²"Get up, go to Nineveh, that great city, and proclaim to it the message that I tell you." ³So Jonah set out and went to Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an exceedingly large city, a three days' walk across. ⁴Jonah began to go into the city, going a day's walk. And he cried out, "Forty days more, and Nineveh shall be overthrown!" ⁵And the people of Nineveh believed God; they proclaimed a fast, and everyone, great and small, put on sackcloth.

⁶ When the news reached the king of Nineveh, he rose from his throne, removed his robe, covered himself with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. ⁷Then he had a proclamation made in Nineveh: "By the decree of the king and his nobles: No human being or animal, no herd or flock, shall taste anything. They shall not feed, nor shall they drink water. ⁸Human beings and animals shall be covered with sackcloth, and they shall cry mightily to God. All shall turn from their evil ways and from the violence that is in their hands. ⁹Who knows? God may relent and change his mind; he may turn from his fierce anger, so that we do not perish."

¹⁰ When God saw what they did, how they turned from their evil ways, God changed his mind about the calamity that he had said he would bring upon them; and he did not do it.

Jonah and God

4 But this was very displeasing to Jonah, and he became angry. ²He prayed to the LORD and said, "O LORD! Is not this what I said while I was still in my own country? That is why I fled to Tarshish at the beginning; for I knew that you are a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love, and ready to relent from punishing. ³And now, O LORD, please take my life from me, for it is better for me to die than to live." ⁴And the LORD said, "Is it right for you to be angry?" ⁵Then Jonah went out of the city and sat down east of the city, and made a booth for himself there. He sat under it in the shade, waiting to see what would become of the city.

⁶ The LORD God appointed a bush,^d and made it come up over Jonah, to give shade over his head, to save him from his

^d Heb qiqayon, possibly the castor bean plant

ficial vows to the Lord (1.16). 2.10 God's response to Jonah's song is to have the fish spew Jonah out; a better translation would be "vomit" (see Prov 23.8; 25.16; Jer 25.27).

3.1–10 A second group of Gentiles turns to God, with king and Ninevites replacing the captain and sailors of ch. 1. The ease of Jonah's great success with the king in Nineveh should be contrasted with the prophets' repeated failure with kings in Jerusalem (e.g., Jer 36). 3.3 The literal Hebrew says that Nineveh "was a great city to God," thus contrasting with the city of Death that Jonah had almost entered during the fish episode (2.3–6). The three days it takes to traverse Nineveh recalls Jonah's three days in the belly of the fish (1.17). 3.4–5 Overthrown renders the same Hebrew verb that describes the overturning of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 19.21, 25, 29); but Jonah here uses the passive voice, which has a primary meaning of being "turned around" or "transformed" (Ex 7.17, 20; 1 Sam 10.6). 3.6 Traditional actions of mourning (Job 2.8; Gen 37.34; 2 Sam 3.31) and repentance (Job 42.6; Dan 9.3; Neh 9.1) in response to personal and national crises. 3.7–9 The repentance of Nineveh contrasts with Jonah's failure to repent in ch. 2.

4.1–11 Ch. 4 juxtaposes Jonah's response to the sparing of Nineveh with God's reason for that action. 4.2 Citing the description of God revealed to Moses on Mount Sinai (Ex 34.6–7), Jonah accuses God of being too merciful. The divine order underlying the biblical covenant is based on justice; and from Jonah's perspective, "steadfast love" (the same chesed of 2.8!) undermines that order, turning God into a capricious pagan deity. 4.3 In the continuing death/descent theme of chs. 1–2, the prophet prefers death to living in a world having no recognizable order of justice. 4.5 Certain that Nineveh will return to its evil ways, Jonah finds solace in a secure shelter that he builds for himself. 4.6–8 Reinforcing the shelter theme, God appoints a bush to save Jonah (cf. 1 Kings 19.4–18) discomfort; so Jonah was very happy about the bush. ⁷But when dawn came up the next day, God appointed a worm that attacked the bush, so that it withered. ⁸When the sun rose, God prepared a sultry east wind, and the sun beat down on the head of Jonah so that he was faint and asked that he might die. He said, "It is better for me to die than to live."

9 But God said to Jonah, "Is it right for you to be angry about the bush?"

And he said, "Yes, angry enough to die."

¹⁰Then the LORD said, "You are concerned about the bush, for which you did not labor and which you did not grow; it came into being in a night and perished in a night. ¹¹And should I not be concerned about Nineveh, that great city, in which there are more than a hundred and twenty thousand persons who do not know their right hand from their left, and also many animals?"

and then destroys it to bring the prophet to his senses. 4.8 The scorching wind (Hebrew ruach) playfully recalls the divine spirit (ruach) that traditionally inspired the prophets (Num 11.24–29; 2 Kings 2.9, 15; Joel 2.28–29). Jonah's reaction to the loss of the protective bush is the same as his reaction to the sparing of Nineveh (4.3). In the first case he is angry at God's mercy; now he misses God's protective grace. 4.9–11 Jonah had confronted God with thirty-nine words (in Hebrew) of complaint in 4.2–3. In vv. 10–11 God gets the last thirty-nine words (in Hebrew). The emphasis is on God's sovereignty over and care for the whole creation rather than on Nineveh's repentance. The bush perished in a night; both the sea captain and the king were desperate to keep their people from perishing (1.6; 3.9). And God, we learn, is attentive to that concern. 4.11 God still can't get over those animals running around in sackcloth (3.8)!

MICAH

The Prophet

THE NAME MICAH, meaning “Who is like the LORD,” is not a question but an exclamation underscoring the incomparability of the God of Israel. With Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah, Micah was one of the four eighth century B.C.E. prophets. A younger contemporary of the aristocrat Isaiah, Micah was a member of the laboring class who came from the rural area of Moresheth-gath (1.14), a small village situated about twenty-five miles southwest of Jerusalem and identified with Tell el-Judeideh. Moresheth-gath is located in the Shephelah, or foothills between the coastal plain and the central highlands of Palestine. Living in a frontier town, Micah was keenly aware of the imminence of an Assyrian incursion into the Southern Kingdom, Judah, during the latter part of the eighth century. Little is known about Micah; what is known comes from the book bearing his name.

Historical Situation

According to the superscription (1.1), Micah prophesied during the reigns of three Judahite kings: Jotham (742–735), Ahaz (735–715), and Hezekiah (715–687 B.C.E.). More likely, Micah’s prophetic career spanned only the last quarter of the eighth century B.C.E. Ahaz, son of Jotham and father of Hezekiah, was a weak and indecisive king.

Hezekiah was a vigorous ruler who enjoyed the confidence of both priests and prophets. He was responsible for centralizing worship in the Jerusalem temple and for suppressing illicit cult practices throughout Judah. He also expanded the western boundaries of Jerusalem to accommodate the influx of refugees from Samaria following the demise of the Northern Kingdom in 722. Under the threat of Assyrian invasion, he strengthened the walls of Jerusalem, and constructed a 1750-foot tunnel to protect Jerusalem’s exposed water supply. When the Assyrian king Sargon II died in 705, Hezekiah formed a coalition with Phoenicia and Philistia (Ashkelon and Ekron) against Sennacherib, the successor of Sargon.

International Setting

The latter half of the eighth century B.C.E. witnessed the resurgence of the neo-Assyrian empire under the imperialist king Tiglath-pileser III (745–727). Assyria, preoccupied with domestic problems in the first part of the century, was bent on expanding westward after 745. Damascus was conquered in 732. Ten years later the Northern Kingdom (Israel) was vanquished, and large numbers were deported. In 711 the Philistine city of Ashdod was besieged. In 701, when Sennacherib attacked the Southern Kingdom (Judah), already an Assyrian vassal, forty-six fortified towns fell. Mic 1.10–15 lists the towns conquered by Sennacherib, many near his hometown. Jerusalem was spared when Hezekiah paid indemnity.

Structure

The book of Micah is well preserved, compared to Hosea, although textual problems and some inconsistencies make certain passages difficult. Micah is usually divided into two major parts: 1.2–5.15 and 6.1–7.20, but scholars disagree over which sections belong to the prophet himself. The first three chapters are thought to be genuine; the remainder may be later expansions. Such opinions, however, are highly speculative. The arrangement of the oracles form a pattern alternating between oracles of doom and oracles of salvation: doom (1.1–2.11), salvation (2.12–13); doom (3.1–12), salvation (4.1–5.15); doom (6.1–7.7), salvation (7.8–20). This schema is probably from a later compiler, although the editing of Micah over time is a complex and uncertain matter. The specific historical circumstances of Micah's oracles are equally uncertain.

The Message

Though a native of the Southern Kingdom, Micah did not espouse the David-Zion tradition, with its belief in the inviolability of Jerusalem. In fact, he delivered a bitter oracle against Jerusalem (3.9–12). Micah favored the Moses-Sinai tradition of the Northern Kingdom, with its emphasis on the exodus and Moses as the centerpiece.

Micah was concerned principally with ethical issues. He declared that the sins of Judah would inevitably lead to punishment, with Assyria acting as God's instrument of punishment. The prophet focuses on the crimes of the corrupt officials, both religious and political, whom Micah attacks scathingly for their exploitation of the people. Priests, prophets, and judges were self-serving and corrupt.

Micah also placed much of the blame on the capital cities—Samaria in the north and Jerusalem in the south. The destruction of Samaria in 722 B.C.E. was cited as a warning to Judah of what would befall Jerusalem.

Like Amos, who lived slightly earlier, Micah inveighed against socioeconomic injustice (chs. 2, 3, 6). Religious worship without social justice was meaningless.

Micah spoke out boldly in defense of the shepherds and poor farmers whose lands were being expropriated by the rich.

Despite all the indictments, Micah also had a message of divine forgiveness and hope. He spoke of the restoration of the temple and the salvation of the remnant. Micah foresees the centrality of Jerusalem in the life of the nations and looks forward to universal peace (4.1–5). The book ends with a psalm of hope in a future restoration (7.8–20). *Philip J. Judgment Pronounced Against Samaria

- 2 Hear, you peoples, all of you; listen, O earth, and all that is
in it;
and let the Lord God be a witness against you,
the Lord from his holy temple.
3 For lo, the LORD is coming out of
his place,
and will come down and tread upon the high places of
the earth.
4 Then the mountains will melt under him
and the valleys will burst open,

like wax near the fire,
like waters poured down a steep place.
5 All this is for the transgression of Jacob
and for the sins of the house
of Israel.

What is the transgression of Jacob?

Is it not Samaria?
And what is the high place^a
of Judah?

Is it not Jerusalem?

- 6 Therefore I will make Samaria a heap in the open country,
a place for planting vineyards.
I will pour down her stones into
the valley,
and uncover her foundations.
7 All her images shall be beaten
to pieces,

^a Heb what are the high places

1.1 Superscription. Added by an editor who compiled the collection of oracles, the superscription situates the book in time and place. King Omri (ca. 876–869 B.C.E.) established Samaria as the capital of the northern kingdom of Israel. Situated about forty miles north of Jerusalem, Samaria was well located: the region was fertile, the city was defensible (perched on a hill about three hundred feet above the valley), and it was close to the trade routes. After David (ca. 1000–961 B.C.E.) captured Jerusalem from the Jebusites, it became the political and religious capital of the United Kingdom. When the Northern Kingdom seceded in 920 B.C.E., Jerusalem remained the capital of the Southern Kingdom. The Jerusalem of David, known as the City of David, occupied only the southeast section of present-day Jerusalem.

1.2–7 Oracle of divine judgment. A covenant lawsuit (Hebrew rîv) between the Lord and the people over their violation of the covenant proceeds like a court trial, with God as plaintiff and the people as defendants. Nature is called to bear witness against the people. The covenant lawsuit is a common literary form in the prophets, the classic example being Mic 6.1–8. 1.2 Holy temple refers to heaven. 1.3–4 A theophany or manifestation of God depicted in poetic language. 1.5 Jacob represents the Northern Kingdom. A high place was an artificially constructed elevation, open-air or roofed, serving as a shrine where illicit religious rites were practiced; it was most often associated with Canaanite religious practice but was also connected with popular Israelite religion. Only from the eighth century on were the high places condemned. 1.7 A polemic

The Doom of the Cities of Judah

- 8 For this I will lament and wail;
I will go barefoot and naked;
I will make lamentation like and mourning like the 9 For her wound^b is incurable.

It has come to Judah;
it has reached to the gate of
my people,
to Jerusalem.
10 Tell it not in Gath, weep not at all;

11 Pass on your way,

inhabitants of Shaphir,
in nakedness and shame;
the inhabitants of Zaanan

Beth-ezel is wailing

yet disaster has come down from
the LORD
to the gate of Jerusalem.
13 Harness the steeds to the chariots,
inhabitants of Lachish;
it was the beginning of sin
to daughter Zion,
for in you were found
the transgressions of Israel.
14 Therefore you shall give against idolatry. Idolatrous worship is described as harlotry or prostitution. Sacred prostitution was sometimes practiced at these religious shrines.

1.8–16 Lamentation. Vv. 8–9 introduce the lamentation. 1.8 Barefoot and naked signifies mourning. Out of love for his people Micah weeps over the inevitable fate of Judah and its capital Jerusalem. Jackals and ostriches are often linked in biblical descriptions of the wilderness. 1.10–16 All the towns mentioned in this section are situated in Judah, southwest of Jerusalem, the region of the country best known to Micah. In almost every case the prophet first mentions the name of the town and then makes a wordplay on its name. The text is not well preserved, so there is some uncertainty about the meaning of the names. Also, not all the towns can be identified. The historical event associated with this disaster would have been Sennacherib's campaign in 701 B.C.E. 1.10 Gath, one of the five Philistine cities, has not been identified with certainty, but it probably is located at Tell es-Safi (Tel Zafit), twelve miles east of the Philistine city of Ashdod. Beth-leaphrah ("house of dust"), may be identified with et-Taiyibeh, northwest of Hebron in the hill country of Judah. Rolling in the dust (Hebrew 'aphar) was a way of expressing grief or mourning. Roll yourselves (hitpallashti) may be a pun on "Philistines." 1.11 Shaphir may be located at Khirbet el-Qom, a hill west of Hebron. Zaanan has not been located, but there is a pun on the verb form come forth (Hebrew yats'ah). Beth-ezel may be modern Deir el-Asal, in the vicinity of Hebron. 1.12 The site of Maroth has not been identified, but the wordplay consists in the sharp contrast between Maroth, meaning "to be bitter," and the adjective good. 1.13 Lachish, situated thirty miles southwest of Jerusalem in the Judean hills, was the most important city in Judah after Jerusalem. In the reign of Hezekiah two massive city walls fortified Lachish. Stratum III of Lachish, dating to 701 B.C.E., is an indisputable witness to Sennacherib's devastation of the city. Micah reproaches the people of Lachish for relying on horses and chariots. The wordplay is on the name Lachish and the phrase (to) the steeds (Hebrew larekesh). Daughter Zion personifies Jerusalem. 1.14 Achzib, tentatively identified with Tell el-Beida, northeast of Lachish. The pun focuses on the Hebrew root kzb ("to lie"), found both in the name Achzib and deception ('akzab). 1.15 Mare-shah, modern Tell Sandahannah, is one mile southeast of Beit Jibrin (Eleutheropolis). Famous as an underground city because of its caves, it is known in Greek as Marisa. The play is on the name Mare-shah and the Hebrew participle yoresh ("to possess"), although not obvious in the translation conqueror. Adullam may be located at

Social Evils Denounced

- 2 Alas for those who devise wickedness
and evil deeds^c on their beds!
When the morning dawns, they perform it,
because it is in their power.
2 They covet fields, and seize
them;
houses, and take them away;
they oppress householder
and house,
people and their inheritance.
3 Therefore thus says the LORD:
Now, I am devising against this family an evil
from which you cannot remove your necks;
and you shall not walk haughtily,
for it will be an evil time.
4 On that day they shall take up a taunt song against you, and wail with bitter
lamentation,
and say, "We are utterly ruined;
the LORD^d alters the inheritance of my people; how he removes it from me!
Among our captors^e he parcels out our fields."

- 5 Therefore you will have no one to cast the line by lot in the assembly of the LORD.
6 "Do not preach"—thus they preach—
"one should not preach of such things;
disgrace will not overtake us." 7 Should this be said, O house
of Jacob?
Is the LORD's patience exhausted?
Are these his doings?
Do not my words do good to one who walks uprightly?
8 But you rise up against my people^f as an enemy;
you strip the robe from the peaceful,^g
from those who pass by trustingly with no thought of war.
9 The women of my people you from their pleasant houses;

from their young children you my glory forever.

Tell esh-Sheikh Madkur, five miles south of Beth-shemesh. David took refuge from Saul in a cave near Adullam (1 Sam 22.1; 2 Sam 23.13). 1.16 The lament concludes with a description of mourning rites. Although artificial baldness was prohibited (Lev 19.27; Deut 14.1), shaving the head was sometimes practiced as a sign of mourning.

2.1–11 The prophet inveighs against social sins. 2.1–5 Land monopoly by the greedy rich at the expense of the defenseless poor. 2.2 To lose one's inheritance was to lose one's independence. 2.3 The metaphor of a yoked ox describes the punishment for expropriation of land. 2.4 A mocking song. 2.5 Those who have grabbed the land of others will be deprived permanently of their own inheritance in Israel. Assembly of the LORD refers to the religious community of Israel. 2.6–11 The Hebrew text is not well preserved, so the meaning is sometimes difficult. The land-grabbers tried to silence Micah because they found his message unpalatable. 2.7–9 Micah's response to those who would silence him. He continues to indict those who exploit the poor, especially widows and orphans. 2.11 Micah states sarcastically that the people would prefer false preachers, plied with liquor, who lie, to those who tell the truth.

A Promise for the Remnant of Israel

- 12 I will surely gather all of you,
 O Jacob,
 I will gather the survivors
 of Israel;
 I will set them together
 like sheep in a fold,
 like a flock in its pasture;
 it will resound with people.
- 13 The one who breaks out will go up before them;
 they will break through and
 pass the gate,
 going out by it.
 Their king will pass on before
 them,
 the LORD at their head.

Wicked Rulers and Prophets

- 3 And I said:
 Listen, you heads of Jacob and rulers of the house of Israel!
 Should you not know justice? —
- 2 you who hate the good and love the evil,
 who tear the skin off my people,ⁱ
 and the flesh off their bones;
- 3 who eat the flesh of my people, flay their skin off them,
 break their bones in pieces, and chop them up like meat^j
 in a kettle,
 like flesh in a caldron.
- 4 Then they will cry to the LORD,
 but he will not answer them;
 he will hide his face from them at that time,

because they have acted wickedly.

- 5 Thus says the LORD concerning
 the prophets
 who lead my people astray, who cry "Peace"
 when they have something to eat,
 but declare war against those who put nothing into their mouths.
- 6 Therefore it shall be night to you,
 without vision,
 and darkness to you, without revelation.
 The sun shall go down upon
 the prophets,
 and the day shall be black
 over them;
- 7 the seers shall be disgraced,
 and the diviners put to shame;
 they shall all cover their lips,
 for there is no answer
 from God.
- 8 But as for me, I am filled with power,
 with the spirit of the LORD,
 and with justice and might,
 to declare to Jacob his transgression
 and to Israel his sin.
- 9 Hear this, you rulers of the house
 of Jacob
 and chiefs of the house of Israel,
 who abhor justice
 and pervert all equity,
- 10 who build Zion with blood and Jerusalem with wrong!

2.12–13 Oracle of salvation dated by some to the Babylonian exile (587–539 B.C.E.). The Lord who is shepherd-king speaks (Ezek 34; Jer 23.1–4). The promised restoration is described in terms of a new exodus (Isa 49.9–12). 2.12 Survivors are those who will be redeemed.

3.1–12 Announcement of judgment on the political and religious leaders for abuse of power. 3.1–4 Using the gruesome metaphor of cannibalism, Micah describes graphically the ruthless injustice of Jerusalem's public officials in rendering legal decisions. Ultimately, the offending rulers will experience the same fate when God chooses to ignore them. 3.5–8 Indictment of venal prophets in contrast to selfless prophets like Micah. Mercenary prophets tell the people what they want to hear, but in so doing mislead them.

3.5 Peace (Hebrew shalom) means wholeness, well-being, integrity. 3.6 The punishment of avaricious prophets is described in ominous figures of darkness. 3.7 Cover their lips was a popular mourning custom (Ezek 24.17, 22). 3.8 In contrast, Micah lists the God-given endowments of the genuine prophet that enable him to speak the truth. 3.9–12 A recapitulation including the inevitable judgment of doom on Jerusalem. 3.10 Archaeology testifies to the building activities underway in Jerusalem at that time, obviously

Peace and Security Through Obedience

- 4 In days to come
the mountain of the LORD’s
house
shall be established as the highest
of the mountains,
and shall be raised up above
the hills.
Peoples shall stream to it,
2 and many nations shall come
and say:

to the house of the God of Jacob;
that he may teach us his ways
and that we may walk in his paths.”
For out of Zion shall go forth and shall arbitrate between strong nations far away;

they shall beat their swords into

neither shall they learn war
any more;
4 but they shall all sit under their own fig trees,

and no one shall make them afraid;
for the mouth of the LORD of hosts has spoken.

each in the name of its god, but we will walk in the name of the LORD our God
forever and ever.

Restoration Promised

done at the expense of the poor. 3.11 Secular and religious leaders, despite their patently unscrupulous conduct, believed that God would protect them on the basis of the Davidic covenant. 3.12 The crassness of the leaders will result in the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple. This announcement of judgment echoes 1.6 on Samaria. Micah’s prophecy was cited a century later in defense of Jeremiah (Jer 26.18–19). By predicting the doom of Jerusalem, Micah and Jeremiah stood in sharp contrast to Isaiah, who believed the holy city was invulnerable.

4.1–5 A poem of universal peace for the future, closely paralleled in Isa 2.2–4, but in marked contrast to Mic 3.12. The source may be an anonymous prophet borrowed from by both Micah and Isaiah. 4.1 The Lord resided on Jerusalem’s Temple Mount, considered the center of the world. 4.2 Three times each year on the major feasts (Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles) pilgrims went up to Jerusalem (Ps 122.1, 4). Instruction (Hebrew torah), in the sense of divine teachings. 4.3 A classic description of disarmament. To conserve scrap metal, the conversion from weapons to agricultural tools (as described here) was reversed in times of war (Joel 3.10). 4.4 Lacking in Isaiah (see note on 4.1–5). The possession of land brings security. 4.5 We designates God’s people.

4.6–5.15 A series of promises of restoration of uncertain date. 4.6–8 Oracle of salvation. It may relate to the exile, but it could also apply to the tragedy of Samaria in 722 or of Jerusalem in 702 B.C.E. Like a good shepherd the Lord assembles the scattered sheep, including the maimed. 4.7 The dispersed will be brought back to Jerusaand the LORD will reign over them in Mount Zion now and forevermore.

- 8 And you, O tower of the flock, hill of daughter Zion, to you it shall come, the former dominion shall come, the sovereignty of daughter Jerusalem.
- 9 Now why do you cry aloud? Is there no king in you? Has your counselor perished, that pangs have seized you like a woman in labor?
- 10 Writhe and groan,^k O daughter Zion, like a woman in labor; for now you shall go forth from the city and camp in the open country; you shall go to Babylon. There you shall be rescued, there the LORD will redeem you from the hands of your enemies.
- 11 Now many nations are assembled against you, saying, "Let her be profaned,

- and let our eyes gaze upon Zion."
- 12 But they do not know the thoughts of the LORD; they do not understand his plan, that he has gathered them as sheaves to the threshing floor.
- 13 Arise and thresh, O daughter Zion, for I will make your horn iron and your hoofs bronze; you shall beat in pieces many peoples, and shall devote their gain to the LORD, their wealth to the Lord of the whole earth.

lem, where the Lord will rule over them from the Temple Mount. 4.8 Tower of the flock is also a place-name: Migdal Eder, situated between Bethlehem and Hebron, where Jacob tented after burying Rachel (Gen 35.21). Towers were sometimes erected to protect pastures. Here tower of the flock designates Mount Zion. Hill (Hebrew ophel) refers to the fortified upper sector of capital cities where the palace and other royal buildings stood. In Jerusalem, Ophel designated the area lying between the Temple Mount and the City of David on the southeast hill. 4.9–10 Oracle of salvation, thought to be late on account of "Babylon" (v. 10), which may be a later updating of the oracle. If it is contemporary, the king would be Hezekiah. Counselor is a title of the king. The travail of childbirth is a common metaphor for the distress of suffering people. 4.10 Redeem (Hebrew ga'al). The Hebrew root designates obligations based on bonds of blood, such as purchasing the freedom from slavery of a kinsman or avenging the murder of a relative. 4.11–13 Oracle of salvation expressed in a harsh simile of threshing grain. 4.13 Iron and bronze symbolize strength and hardness, respectively. Devote (Hebrew chrm) designates holy war, involving total destruction of persons and possessions (Deut 20.16–17).

5.1–6 Passage cited partially in Mt 2.6 in connection with Jesus' birth in Bethlehem. The meaning of this fragment concerning the restoration of Israel's kingship is somewhat uncertain and obscure. 5.1 They strike . . . upon the cheek is an act of humiliation expressing contempt for the king. It may refer to King Hezekiah who, in 701 B.C.E., was cowed by Sennacherib. 5.2 Bethlehem, a small town five miles south of Jerusalem, assumed importance in the Christian era on account of its association with the birth of Jesus. David, a native of Bethlehem, was anointed there by Samuel (1 Sam 16.1–13). Ephrathah is identified with Bethlehem. The relationship between Bethlehem and Ephrathah is unclear. Ephrathah may have been the ancient name of Bethlehem, or it may have been absorbed into Bethlehem. This undistinguished town was paradoxically to be the source of salvation. Me refers to God. Whose ori-

The Total Corruption of the People

- 7 Woe is me! For I have become like one who,
after the summer fruit has been gathered,
after the vintage has been gleaned,
finds no cluster to eat;
there is no first-ripe fig for which I hunger.
- 2 The faithful have disappeared
from the land,
and there is no one left who
is upright;
they all lie in wait for blood,
and they hunt each other with nets.

- 3 Their hands are skilled to do evil;
the official and the judge ask for a bribe,
and the powerful dictate what they desire;
thus they pervert justice.^a
- 4 The best of them is like a brier, the most upright of them a thorn hedge.
The day of their^b sentinels, of their^b punishment,
has come;
now their confusion is at hand.
- 5 Put no trust in a friend, have no confidence in a loved one;
guard the doors of your mouth from her who lies in your embrace;
- 6 for the son treats the father with contempt,
the daughter rises up against her mother,
the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law;
your enemies are members of your own household.
- 7 But as for me, I will look to
the LORD,
I will wait for the God of my salvation;
my God will hear me.

Penitence and Trust in God

- 8 Do not rejoice over me, O my
enemy;
when I fall, I shall rise;
when I sit in darkness,
the LORD will be a light to me.
- 9 I must bear the indignation of
the LORD,

NAHUM

Date

NAHUM IS A POETIC BOOK filled with vivid images that express the Lord's coming judgment against Nineveh. The brief superscription (1.1) gives no hint of the date of Nahum's activity. However, it is reasonable to assume that the oracles were delivered after the fall of Thebes (663 B.C.E.), alluded to in 3.8, and prior to the fall of Nineveh (612 B.C.E.).

Content and Message

The announcement of Nineveh's impending fall is placed in the context of the initial psalm (1.2–8), which pictures a God of enormous power who sees Judah's need for assurance that the Lord will deliver it. Nearly one hundred years after the destruction of the Northern Kingdom (Israel) at the hand of the Assyrians (722 B.C.E.) and prior to Josiah's reform (621 B.C.E.), Judah must have heard these oracles as both reassuring and terrifying. To know that the Lord "is slow to anger but great in power" (1.3) and "a stronghold in a day of trouble" (1.7) gives profound assurance in the face of a terrible enemy like Assyria. On the other hand, Judah knows that there are those in its midst who question the Lord's resolve to destroy the enemy (1.9–10). Nahum's oracles do not call the Judahites into account for their transgressions but must have reminded them that their God above all else will not permit oppression. The assortment of utterances collected in the book of Nahum encompasses both judgment and salvation. Judgment will come for any people, like the inhabitants of Nineveh, who would subvert God's justice. Salvation will come to Judah as a result of God's judgment on Nineveh (1.12), thus making possible once again the joyous celebration of sacred festivals (1.15).

Canonical Context

The book of Nahum has often been criticized as vengeful and lacking in the strong moral tone of a book like Amos. Some have suggested reading Jonah as a complement to Nahum, to make sure that God's compassion is seen. These concerns about the religious and theological perspectives of Nahum, along with a series of literary and historical issues, continue all too often to impede the reading of the book. However, one must see the bold metaphors of the vision of Nahum (1.1), place the book among his contemporaries such as Habakkuk, Jeremiah, and Zephaniah, and hear the interplay between God's judgment and salvation. Kent Harold Richards

A Psalm of God's Power

- 2 A jealous and avenging God is
the LORD,
the LORD is avenging and
wrathful;
the LORD takes vengeance on his adversaries
and rages against his enemies.
3 The LORD is slow to anger but great in power,
and the LORD will by no means clear the guilty.

His way is in whirlwind and
storm,
and the clouds are the dust of his feet.

- 4 He rebukes the sea and makes it dry,
and he dries up all the rivers; Bashan and Carmel wither,

and the bloom of Lebanon fades.

- 5 The mountains quake
before him,
and the hills melt;
the earth heaves before him,
the world and all who live in it.

- 6 Who can stand before his indignation?
Who can endure the heat of his anger?
His wrath is poured out like fire,
and by him the rocks are broken in pieces.

- 7 The LORD is good,
a stronghold in a day of trouble;
he protects those who take refuge
in him,

- 8 even in a rushing flood.
He will make a full end of his adversaries,^a
and will pursue his enemies into darkness.

1.1 The title, or superscription, identifies Nahum as an oracle (lit. "burden"; cf. Isa 13.1; Hab 1.1; Zech 9.1; Mal 1.1) against Nineveh and as a book of the vision. No other superscription of a prophetic book refers to the contents as a book, although Hab 2.2 refers to the Lord instructing the prophet to "write the vision." Vision is used in prophetic superscriptions (Isa 1.1; Ob 1). Elkosh, an unknown location mentioned no other place in the Bible.

1.2–8 (9) An incomplete alphabetic (acrostic) psalm (cf. Pss 9–10); only the first half of the Hebrew alphabet can be reconstructed. The psalm expresses in awesome, theophanic terms the Lord's protection of those who take refuge (v. 7; cf.

Pss 27.1; 31.4) in the God who is creator and judge of all adversaries. 1.2 God. The Hebrew uses El and not the more common Elohim. Wrathful, lit. "a baal of wrath." That the Hebrew uses terms such as baal and El, which were divine names in the Canaanite religion, suggests Canaanite mythic images, along with the terms "sea" and "rivers" (v. 4) and the images of storm and fire throughout the psalm (cf. Ps 29). Avenging and vengeance arise from a legal sense of justifiable vindication and not rancorous retaliation (see Ps 94). 1.3 See Ex 34.6–7. 1.4 Bashan, Carmel, and Lebanon are especially noted for fertility, so their drying up enforces the power of the theophanic images (cf. Isa 19.5–7).

Assurance of Deliverance

- 9 Why do you plot against the LORD?
He will make an end;
no adversary will rise up twice.
- 10 Like thorns they are entangled, like drunkards they are drunk;
they are consumed like dry straw.
- 11 From you one has gone out who plots evil against the LORD, one who counsels wickedness.
- 12 Thus says the LORD,
"Though they are at full strength and many,^b
they will be cut off and pass away.
Though I have afflicted you,
I will afflict you no more.
- 13 And now I will break off his yoke
from you
and snap the bonds that bind you."
- 14 The LORD has commanded concerning you:
"Your name shall be perpetuated no longer;
from the house of your gods I will cut off
the carved image and the cast image.
I will make your grave, for you are worthless."
- 15^c Look! On the mountains the feet of one
who brings good tidings,

who proclaims peace!
Celebrate your festivals, O Judah, fulfill your vows,
for never again shall the wicked invade you;
they are utterly cut off.

Oracles Against Nineveh

- 2 A shatterer^d has come up
against you.
Guard the ramparts;
watch the road;
gird your loins;
collect all your strength.
- 2 (For the LORD is restoring the majesty of Jacob,
as well as the majesty of Israel, though ravagers have ravaged
them
and ruined their branches.)
- 3 The shields of his warriors are red;
his soldiers are clothed in crimson.
The metal on the chariots flashes on the day when he musters
them;
the charger^e prance.
- 4 The chariots race madly through the streets,
they rush to and fro through
the squares;
their appearance is like torches,
they dart like lightning.

1.9–15 The prophet's promise and assurance of Judah's deliverance. The addressee is ambiguous, not only because the English language does not distinguish gender and number in the second person, "you," but also because the Hebrew text uses diverse second-person grammatical forms. Judah and Jerusalem seem to be addressed in vv. 9–10, 11–13 and are specifically cited in v. 15. The second masculine singular of v. 14 is best understood as an address to the king of Assyria. 1.15 The import of this section is clear, namely, the one bringing good tidings and peace has arrived and Judah may celebrate, because the end of Nineveh has come. According to 2 Kings 23.21–25, the public celebration of Passover was possible after the Assyrian domination was concluded during the reign of Josiah (640–609 B.C.E.).

2.1–3.19 Oracles concerning the king of Assyria and Nineveh, the capital of Assyria. The king of Assyria is specifically addressed in 3.18 and is the assumed addressee in 2.1, you. Nineveh (2.8), City of bloodshed (3.1), is spoken of extensively between the addresses to the king at the beginning and end. These diverse oracles declare to Judah that the Assyrians will no longer be the oppressor. 2.1–13 A succession of diverse and powerful images depicting the fall of Nineveh. 2.2 Parentheses indicate a later insertion. The verse draws on earlier prophetic motifs and ties the chapter back into the assurance of deliverance in the previous chapter. 2.3–5 The images, possibly of a siege, begin with a swift, finely outfitted army reminiscent of the warrior imagery in 1.2–8. 2.6, 8 The water/flood images of 1.4, 8 are revisited with convincing power given the location of Nineveh near the Tigris River. 2.11–13 The taunting image of the lion concludes the section. The lion, associated with Assyria’s ferocious strength even in Assyrian reliefs, succumbs. The taunt is reinforced by virtue of the frequent identification of the Lord with the power of the lion (Hos 5.14; 13.8; Am 3.8). 3.1–17 A woe oracle addressed to Nineveh. 3.1–3 The oracle commences with the war imagsouth of modern Cairo. Ethiopia's twenty-fifth dynasty controlled Egypt during this period. The listing of Egypt, Put (precise location unknown), and the Libyans illustrates the indomitability of Thebes. 3.11–14 Even more than Thebes, Nineveh will be little more than like the first-ripe figs which fall. 3.15–17 The oracle concludes with a multileveled comparison of Nineveh and its leaders with the locust. First, the comparison concerns the way they both devour (v. 15a), then ironically suggests that Nineveh must multiply (vv. 15b–16a) as rapidly as the locust, and concludes with the notion of the ephemerality of Nineveh's guards and scribes (v. 17) who, like the locust, will disappear. 3.18–19 From the leaders in the preceding verses the book turns to address the king of Assyria, who is so bewildered with the destruction that he must be told his leaders are asleep, most probably meaning they are dead (see Ps 13.3; Jer 51.39; 57). All who hear the news, presumably even those beyond Judah, will clap their hands. They will rejoice at knowing the Assyrian king finally will get what he has given to so many neighboring people, death and suffering. The book ends with a question, just as does the book of Jonah, which also is concerned with Nineveh.

HABAKKUK

Traditional Interpretations of the Book

THE BOOK OF HABAKKUK gives little direct information about the prophet or the historical background out of which his words emerge. This has led to diverse understandings of the book and the prophet within religious traditions. In Jewish tradition the prayer of Habakkuk in ch. 3 is associated with the giving of the Torah at Sinai. The development of the Christian doctrine of “justification by faith” adapts Hab 2.4b (cf. Rom 1.17, Gal 3.11). The members of the Qumran community, who wrote what we now refer to as the Dead Sea Scrolls, related Hab 1–2 to their own time (first century B.C.E.) in a commentary which has been preserved. An addition to Daniel entitled Bel and the Dragon from the second century B.C.E. refers to the prophet Habakkuk, and some versions attribute the addition to Habakkuk.

Historical Background and Message

Considerable agreement exists among scholars that the oracles come from different occasions during the last quarter of the seventh century B.C.E. and the first decade of the sixth century B.C.E. The Chaldeans (1.6–10), who bring God’s judgment on Judah in 597 B.C.E., generate for Habakkuk after 597 the concern that confidence in the righteousness of God will not be understood. While some of the oracles seem to be addressed to the injustices of a Judean king like Jehoiakim (609–598 B.C.E.; see 1.2–4), it is clear that this is not the ultimate message of Habakkuk. That message is found in the concluding prayer in which the prophet sees God’s intervention portrayed in cosmic, theophanic terms. Habakkuk’s repeated complaints and questions find their answer in the affirmation “God, the LORD, is my strength” (3.19).

Literary Character

The book uses diverse types of literature to convey its meaning. Dominant among these is the first-person, almost autobiographical, account in the dialogue between the prophet and God. This is further developed within the prayer of

ch. 3, which ends on the above-mentioned note of confidence found in individual thanksgivings. Some have seen the book shaped by liturgical concerns because of the numerous musical and liturgical elements, especially in the last chapter, and the dialogical shaping of the first two chapters. The identification of no single type of literature will provide a key to the book. Rather, one must be attentive with eye and ear to the powerful images of justice and injustice, confidence and doubt, salvation and judgment, God and humankind. Kent Harold Richards

Dialogue Between Prophet and God

- 2 O LORD, how long shall I cry for help,
and you will not listen?
Or cry to you "Violence!"
and you will not save?
- 3 Why do you make me see wrongdoing
and look at trouble?
Destruction and violence are
before me;
strife and contention arise.
- 4 So the law becomes slack and justice never prevails.
The wicked surround the righteous—
therefore judgment comes forth perverted.
- 5 Look at the nations, and see!
Be astonished! Be astounded!
For a work is being done in your days
that you would not believe if you were told.
- 6 For I am rousing the Chaldeans,

- that fierce and impetuous nation,
who march through the breadth
of the earth
to seize dwellings not their own.
- 7 Dread and fearsome are they;
their justice and dignity proceed from themselves.
- 8 Their horses are swifter than
leopards,
more menacing than wolves
at dusk;
their horses charge.
Their horsemen come from
far away;
they fly like an eagle swift to devour.
- 9 They all come for violence,
with faces pressing^a forward;
they gather captives like sand.
- 10 At kings they scoff,
and of rulers they make sport.
They laugh at every fortress,
and heap up earth to take it.
- 11 Then they sweep by like the wind;
they transgress and become guilty;
their own might is their god!

^a Meaning of Heb uncertain

1.1 The title, or superscription, identifies Habakkuk as an oracle (lit. "burden"; cf. Isa 13.1; Nah 1.1; Zech 9.1; Mal 1.1) from a prophet. This heading is for chs. 1–2 since at the beginning of ch. 3 there is another superscription (see 3.1).

1.2–2.20 A series of exchanges between the prophet and God. 1.2–4 Habakkuk begins the exchange with God using language typical of the complaint (see Job 19.1–7; Ps 13) to question how long and why the injustice within Judah, perpetrated by the wicked, will persist. 1.2 "Violence!" is shouted by Habakkuk. The term appears six times in Habakkuk (cf. 1.3, 9; 2.8, 17), always signifying confusion and the disruption of order (cf. Gen 6.11, 13). 1.4 Law (Hebrew torah) refers to all that would maintain order including prophetic oracle and priestly instruction. 1.5–11 The speaker is not explicitly identified, but it seems to be God responding, somewhat unexpectedly with an oracle of judgment. The judgment will be brought by the Chaldeans (e.g., Babylonians), an enemy. This motif of God's judgment being carried out by an enemy of God's people is a frequent prophetic motif (e.g., Isa 5.26–30; Jer 32.4–5, 24–25, 28–29). Despite the frequency of the motif, it seems to emphasize the unexpected-ness of God's response. 1.12–17 Habakkuk's second complaint registers the shock that God could use the enemy (v. 15) to bring judgment on the people since God's eyes are too pure to behold evil (v. 13). 1.12 Holy One is used widely in Isaiah (e.g., Isa 1.4; 5.19, 24) and later in Hab 3.13. 1.14 You have made people like the fish of the sea begins the comparison of people to fish. Here people are likened to fish and crawling things that have no ruler. This is in stark opposition to the views expressed in Ps 8, where humans are slightly less than God and provide order for the entire natural world. 1.15 Moreover, the enemy who is bringing the judgment treats the people merely as fish. 1.16 Sacrifices to his net emphasizes the value the Babylonians placed on those implements with which they attained their power.

2.1–4 The prophet takes his watchpost (see Isa 21.8; Ezek 33.1–9) to await God's response to his second complaint. 2.2 Write the vision is indicative of the connection in Habakkuk and other prophetic traditions between hearing and seeing (see Am 1.1; Mic 1.1). Putting the vision in writing is to preserve it for the appropriate time of fulfillment (see Isa 30.8). 2.4 Contrasted with the proud are the righteous [who] live by their faith and trust in the reliability of God's fulfilling the vision. 2.5–20 A series of five woe oracles expands on the meaning of 2.1–4. 2.5 The arrogant are the same as the proud (v. 4). Gather, a bringing together in a negative sense just as the gathering in 1.15. 2.6 The taunt of the Babylonians by everyone who has suffered at their hands. Alas, (also vv. 9, 12, 15, 17) sets off each of the

ple and, with mocking riddles, say about them,

“Alas for you who heap up what is not your own!”

How long will you load yourselves with goods taken in pledge?

7 Will not your own creditors suddenly rise,

and those who make you
tremble wake up?

Then you will be booty for
them.

8 Because you have plundered
many nations,

all that survive of the peoples shall plunder you —

because of human bloodshed, and
violence to the earth,
to cities and all who live in
them.

9 “Alas for you who get evil gain for your houses,
setting your nest on high to be safe from the reach of harm!”

10 You have devised shame for your house
by cutting off many peoples;
you have forfeited your life.

11 The very stones will cry out from the wall,
and the plaster^g will respond
from the woodwork.

12 “Alas for you who build a town
by bloodshed,
and found a city on iniquity!”

13 Is it not from the LORD of hosts that peoples labor only to feed the flames,
and nations weary themselves
for nothing?

14 But the earth will be filled with the knowledge of the glory

of the LORD,
as the waters cover the sea.

15 “Alas for you who make your neighbors drink,
pouring out your wrath^h until they are drunk,
in order to gaze on their
nakedness!”

16 You will be sated with contempt instead of glory.

Drink, you yourself, and stagger!ⁱ

The cup in the LORD’s right hand will come around to you, and shame will come upon your glory!

17 For the violence done to Lebanon will overwhelm you;
the destruction of the animals will terrify you —^j
because of human bloodshed and
violence to the earth,
to cities and all who live in
them.

18 What use is an idol
once its maker has shaped it — a cast image, a teacher of lies?
For its maker trusts in what has been made,
though the product is only an idol that cannot speak!

19 Alas for you who say to the

and there is no breath in it at all.

following five woe oracles directed toward the various crimes of the Babylonians. 2.6b–8 The first woe oracle is directed toward plundering. 2.8 Repeated again in 2.17b. 2.9–11 The second woe oracle indicates that even the buildings constructed for safety by the Babylonians will cry out (cf. 1.2) against the injustices. 2.12–14 The third woe oracle suggests that those who build a town by bloodshed will be punished, and this will become visible when the glory of the LORD fills the earth (cf. Isa 11.9). 2.15–17 The metaphor of drinking is used in this fourth woe oracle to speak of how the oppressor degraded the oppressed (see Jer 51.7) by forcing them to drink and how the cup in the LORD’s right hand will be turned on the oppressor in like manner (see Jer 25.15–27). Violence. See note on 1.2. 2.18–20 The final woe oracle decries idolatry, namely, the inability to recognize the true God. The woe oracles conclude with the simple request, amongst all the clatter of these words, to keep silence before the Lord (cf. Ps 46.10).

- 20 But the LORD is in his holy temple; let all the earth keep silence
before him!

The Prayer of Habakkuk

3 A prayer of the prophet Habakkuk according to Shigionoth.

- 2 O LORD, I have heard of your renown, and I stand in awe, O LORD, of your work.
In our own time revive it;
in our own time make it known;
in wrath may you remember mercy.
- 3 God came from Teman,
the Holy One from Mount Paran. Selah
His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise.
- 4 The brightness was like the sun;
rays came forth from his hand,
where his power lay hidden.
- 5 Before him went pestilence, and plague followed close behind.
- 6 He stopped and shook the earth;
he looked and made the nations tremble.
The eternal mountains were shattered;
along his ancient pathways
the everlasting hills sank low.
- 7 I saw the tents of Cushan under affliction;
the tent-curtains of the land of Midian trembled.

- 8 Was your wrath against the rivers,^k O LORD?
Or your anger against the rivers,^k or your rage against the sea,^l when you drove your horses, your chariots to victory?
- 9 You brandished your naked bow,

You split the earth with rivers.
- 10 The mountains saw you,
and writhed;
a torrent of water swept by;
the deep gave forth its voice.
The sun^o raised high its hands;
- 11 the moon^p stood still in its exalted place, at the light of your arrows speeding by,
at the gleam of your flashing spear.
- 12 In fury you trod the earth,
in anger you trampled nations.
- 13 You came forth to save your people,
to save your anointed.
You crushed the head of the wicked house, laying it bare from foundation to roof.ⁿ Selah

3.1–19 The so-called prayer of Habakkuk consists of a theophanic vision report (vv. 3–15) embedded in the prophet's prayerful declaration of trust in God (vv. 2, 16–19a) and provided with an editorial superscription and postscript (vv. 1, 19b). 3.1 Shigionoth (see Ps 7.1), a musical and liturgical term, along with Selah (vv. 3, 9, 13; see Ps 3), which may indicate that the prayer was used in the temple. 3.2 An introduction to the prayer requesting that the Lord's work (cf. 1.5) be renewed. The request is that this new work bring salvation. 3.3–15 Description of the new work in a theophanic vision that causes both people and the earth to shake (cf. Judg 5.4–5; Nah 1.3–5).

is the source of his confidence (vv. 18–19a). 3.19b To the leader: with stringed instruments is a concluding musical and liturgical notation, much like those found in the superscriptions to many psalms (see, e.g., Pss 4; 6; 54; 61; 76).

ZEPHANIAH

Setting

THE WORDS IN ZEPHANIAH reflect a time early in the reign of Josiah (640–609 B.C.E.) before his reforms were fully developed. As reported in Kings (2 Kings 22.1–23.25), Josiah came to the throne when he was eight years old and not until he was eighteen is there mention of the beginning of his reforming activities. Zephaniah condemns the religious and political leadership, but says little about Josiah, who proves to be one of the few kings since David and Solomon to provide strong moral leadership.

Content and Message

An awareness of the corruption and injustice rampant in Judah is coupled with earlier prophetic traditions, so much so that some have suggested that Zephaniah may have been a disciple of Isaiah. The “day of the LORD” traditions are used to bring a message of judgment against Judah, but not a judgment void of promise and hope. The promise seems to have rested with a just remnant who were among the humble and not part of the corrupt and disobedient leaders with whom Zephaniah must have been intimately familiar, since he was undoubtedly from a prominent family. The restoration of salvation among God’s people may stem in part from later editors of the Zephaniah traditions. Nevertheless, it is abundantly clear that God’s announcement of judgment brought by Zephaniah was inextricably bound to an anticipated return of fortune for God’s people.

Canonical Significance

The book of Zephaniah has never attained the stature of the books of Isaiah or Amos or any of the prophetic traditions on which Zephaniah relied. Nevertheless, the book is a vital link in prophetic traditions. It employs traditional announcements of judgment and salvation. It develops the “day of the LORD” traditions that gave rise to the medieval hymn Dies Irae. More importantly, it serves as a reminder of the need for religious renewal—not otherworldly renewal, but one where this world will come to reflect God's vision of a world without violence, injustice, and oppression, a world where even God may sing in response to human singing (3.14–17). Kent Harold Richards

1.1 The title, or superscription, identifies the book as a revelation from the Lord, names the recipient with genealogical information, and concludes with historical information (cf. Hos 1.1; Joel 1.1; Mic 1.1). The long genealogy suggests that the prophet came from a prominent family. Zephaniah is a fairly common Hebrew name meaning "the LORD hides or protects." In the days of King Josiah, 640–609 B.C.E.

1.2–2.3 A variety of individual announcements of judgment from different occasions that develop older prophetic traditions, especially the "day of the LORD" motif. 1.2–3 An announcement of judgment against all humans and animals sets a universal context which is developed throughout the book. I will sweep away occurs three times to emphasize the totality of the destruction (cf. Ps 26.9). From the face of the earth begins and ends this judgment, forming a literary device known as an inclusio. The phrase calls to mind the threefold repetition of it in the flood story (cf. Gen 6.7; 7.4; 8.8). Says the LORD is a formulaic identification of an oracle of the Lord used extensively in Zephaniah and other prophetic literature. 1.4–6 The beginning of the series of specific announcements of judgment against Judah and Jerusalem. I will stretch out my hand typically announces an action against an enemy (see Ezek 14.9, 13; 25.13) instead of toward the Lord's people. Idolatrous priests translates a rare Hebrew word that refers to pagan priests banned by Josiah (see 2 Kings 23.5; Hos 10.5). The list of those who will be cut off in vv. 5–6 includes syncretists who worship the heavenly bodies (cf. Deut 4.19) and Milcom, an Ammonite deity (cf. 2 Kings 23.13), as well as those who were unfaithful (turned back; see Ps 78.57). 1.7–13 A direct address to the prophet begins this section. 1.7 The day of the LORD is a major motif known widely in Judah and Israel. The expectation was that the Lord would appear one day to destroy all enemies and that this day would be one of great victory for the Lord's people. However, just as with Amos's hearers (Am 5.17–20), Zephaniah announces that the day will bring punishment and not rescue for the Lord's people. Sacrifice plays further on the unexpected since Judah will become the offering.

- 8 And on the day of the LORD's sacrifice
I will punish the officials and the king's sons
and all who dress themselves in foreign attire.
- 9 On that day I will punish all who leap over the threshold, who fill their master's house with violence and fraud.
- 10 On that day, says the LORD,
a cry will be heard from the Fish Gate,
a wail from the Second Quarter,
a loud crash from the hills.
- 11 The inhabitants of the Mortar wail,
for all the traders have perished;
all who weigh out silver are
cut off.
- 12 At that time I will search Jerusalem with lamps,
and I will punish the people who rest complacently^d on their dregs,
those who say in their hearts,
"The LORD will not do good, nor will he do harm."
- 13 Their wealth shall be plundered, and their houses laid waste.
Though they build houses,
they shall not inhabit them;
though they plant vineyards,
they shall not drink wine
from them.
- 14 The great day of the LORD is near,
near and hastening fast;
the sound of the day of the LORD is bitter,
the warrior cries aloud there.
- 15 That day will be a day of wrath,
a day of distress and anguish,
a day of ruin and devastation,
a day of darkness and gloom,
a day of clouds and thick
darkness,
- 16 a day of trumpet blast and battle cry
against the fortified cities and against the lofty battlements.
- 17 I will bring such distress upon
people
that they shall walk like the blind;
because they have sinned
against the LORD,
their blood shall be poured out
like dust,
and their flesh like dung.
- 18 Neither their silver nor their gold will be able to save them on the day of the LORD's wrath;
in the fire of his passion the whole earth shall be consumed;
for a full, a terrible end he will make of all the inhabitants of the earth.
- 2 Gather together, gather,
O shameless nation,

See 1 Sam 5.5. 1.10 Fish Gate. See Neh 12.38–39. 1.11 Mortar is a district in Jerusalem. 1.14–18 These verses develop with even greater anticipation (hastening fast) the coming of the day of the LORD. While Judah and Jerusalem are not mentioned in this section, given the immediate context it is apparent they are the recipients of the announcement of utter desolation. 1.18 The whole earth shall be consumed returns to the broader context of 1.2–3 and serves to underscore the comprehensiveness of the destruction. 2.1–3 A hint that the people might avoid the “day of the LORD’s” wrath. 2.1 Gather together. The Hebrew term is used for the gathering of straw or sticks (see Ex 5.7–12; Num 15.32), contrasting with the gathering for rejoicing in 3.20. The shameless nation is Judah. The Hebrew term translated shameless is unusual; the phrase means lit. a “nation not longing for [God]” (see Ps 84.2). 2.3 Perhaps indicates only a hope, not an assurance, that judgment is avoidable.

Judgment Against Jerusalem and a Remnant

- 3 Ah, soiled, defiled, oppressing city!
2 It has listened to no voice;
it has accepted no correction.
It has not trusted in the LORD;
it has not drawn near to its God.
- 3 The officials within it
are roaring lions;
its judges are evening wolves that leave nothing until
the morning.
- 4 Its prophets are reckless,
faithless persons;
its priests have profaned what is sacred,
they have done violence to the law.
- 5 The LORD within it is righteous;
he does no wrong.
Every morning he renders his
judgment,
each dawn without fail;
but the unjust knows no shame.
- 6 I have cut off nations;
their battlements are in ruins;
I have laid waste their streets
so that no one walks in them;
their cities have been made
desolate,
without people, without
inhabitants.
- 7 I said, "Surely the city^k will fear me,

it will accept correction;
it will not lose sight^l
of all that I have brought
upon it."
But they were the more eager to make all their deeds corrupt.

- 8 Therefore wait for me, says
the LORD,
for the day when I arise as a witness.
For my decision is to gather
nations,
to assemble kingdoms,
to pour out upon them my
indignation,
all the heat of my anger;
for in the fire of my passion
all the earth shall be consumed.
- 9 At that time I will change the speech of the peoples
to a pure speech,
that all of them may call on the name of the LORD
and serve him with one accord.
- 10 From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia^m
my suppliants, my scattered ones,
shall bring my offering.

3.14–20 The call to sing assumes that the restoration anticipated in 3.8–13 has occurred. 3.14 Sing aloud, a public invitation to respond to the salvation that has come. 3.16 On that day no longer refers to the day on which punishment arises (1.9, 10), but a day on which it can be said, Do not fear, an introduction to words of salvation (see Isa 10.24). 3.17 With loud singing. The same Hebrew word used to call the people to sing aloud

(v. 14) now has the Lord responding in kind. 3.19 Oppressors includes those within Judah and those in other nations. 3.20 Gather no longer carries the irony of gathering straw (see note on 2.1) but is more like the gathering a shepherd does of lambs (Isa 40.11; Jer 23.3). The restoration of fortunes envisaged is much like that described in Deut 30.1–4.

HAGGAI

Name

THE BOOK OF HAGGAI gives us no personal information about the seer whose name it bears. Were it not for references to “the prophets Haggai and Zechariah” in Ezra 5.1; 6.14, we would not even have reason to link these two contemporary figures. Neither prophet ever mentions the other, though their work surely brought them together in the small town that was postexilic Jerusalem. Perhaps Haggai’s name, which is derived from the Hebrew verbal root hgg, “to make a pilgrimage,” gains significance from his single-minded effort to bring about the reconstruction of that goal of all ancient Judean pilgrimages, the temple in Jerusalem.

Date, Content, and Message

In contrast to the person of the author, information about the date of the book of Haggai is unusually precise. The chronological notices attached to the four oracles of the book place Haggai’s work between mid-August and mid-December, 520 B.C.E., early in the reign of Darius I (the Great), who ruled the Persian Empire from 522 to 486 B.C.E. In the decades after Cyrus repatriated the Judean exiles from their Babylonian captivity in 539 B.C.E., modest prosperity had evidently begun to return to the land. Encouraged by the edict of Cyrus (Ezra 1.1–4), Sheshbazzar, the leader of the returned exiles, may even have made a start at rebuilding the ruined temple in Jerusalem (see Ezra 5.14–16). Work must have stopped, however, for in 520 the prophet Haggai warns that until the temple is up and running, normalcy will elude the Judean community.

The sequence of sermons in the book moves from the prophet’s initial exhortation to Zerubbabel the governor and Joshua the high priest through the beginning of the reconstruction project to the blessings that began to flow on the occasion of the consecration of the still unfinished structure. The actual completion of the work in 516/5 B.C.E. (see Ezra 6.15) evidently lay outside Haggai’s experience. But what he saw under way moved him deeply, for he understood it as a prelude to the coming messianic age. W. Sibley Towner

The Scandal of the Ruined Temple

1 In the second year of King Darius, in the sixth month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest: ²Thus says the LORD of hosts: These people say the time has not yet come to rebuild the LORD's house. ³Then the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai, saying: ⁴Is it a time for you yourselves to live in your paneled houses, while this house lies in ruins? ⁵Now therefore thus says the LORD of hosts: Consider how you have fared. ⁶You have sown much, and harvested little; you eat, but you never have enough; you drink, but you never have your fill; you clothe yourselves, but no one is warm; and you that earn wages earn wages to put them into a bag with holes.

⁷ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Consider how you have fared. ⁸Go up to the hills and bring wood and build the house, so that I may take pleasure in it and be honored, says the LORD. ⁹You have looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and when you brought it home, I blew it away. Why? says the LORD of hosts. Because my house lies in ruins, while all of you hurry off to your own houses. ¹⁰Therefore the heavens above you have withheld the dew, and the earth has withheld its produce. ¹¹And I have called for a drought on the land and the hills, on the grain, the new wine, the oil, on what the soil produces, on human beings and animals, and on all their labors.

¹² Then Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, and Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of the prophet Haggai, as the LORD their God had sent him; and the people feared the LORD. ¹³Then Haggai, the messenger of the LORD, spoke to the people with the LORD's message, saying, I am with you, says the LORD. ¹⁴And the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and worked on the house of the LORD of hosts, their God, ¹⁵on the twenty-fourth day of the month, in the sixth month.

The Splendor of the Second Temple

2 In the second year of King Darius, ¹in the seventh month, on the twenty-first day of the month, the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai, saying: ²Speak now to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and to the remnant of the people, and say, ³Who is left among you that saw this house in its former glory? How does it look to you now? Is it not in your sight as nothing? ⁴Yet now take courage, O Zerubbabel, says the LORD; take cour-

1.1-15 The prophet speaks to Zerubbabel. 1.1 Second year . . . sixth month, August/September, 520 B.C.E. Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel was the grandson of Jehoiachin (Jeconiah), the Judean king who enjoyed royal favor in Babylonian captivity (2 Kings 25.27-30). He was presumably made governor of Judah by Darius, though no mention is made of the fact elsewhere in Persian or biblical sources. Joshua son of Jehozadak is the first person to bear the title high priest in the OT (see Zech 6.11). His father was a priest among the exiles in Babylon (1 Chr 6.15). 1.2 With its reference to the heavenly army at the Lord's command, the title LORD of hosts depicts God as Divine Warrior. These people might either refer to the entire Judean community or to the remnant (see v. 12) who had returned from Babylonian exile more than two decades earlier; however, the reference to paneled houses in v. 4 suggests that the message of the prophet was probably directed to the more affluent community leaders. The same contrast between the LORD's house and the houses of the human authorities is present in 2 Sam 7.1-17. In that text, however, the Lord disclaims any desire for a "house." 1.11 The forms of productivity listed here constituted "blessing" for the ancient Israelites. 1.13-15 The simple but reassuring word brought by the messenger of the LORD (see Mal 3.1) results in stirred up spirits. Yet more than three weeks elapse after Haggai's first oracle before the reconstruction of the temple gets under way.

2.1-9 Second address to Zerubbabel. 2.1 Seventh month, October, 520 B.C.E. 2.3 Persons old enough to remember the appearance of the First Temple prior to its destruction in 587 would have to have been at least seventy-three years of age when Haggai said these words. 2.4-5 I am with you . . . Egypt. Haggai compares the spirit of God in the midst of the community of his day to age, O Joshua, son of Jehozadak, the high priest; take courage, all you people of the land, says the LORD; work, for I am with you, says the LORD of hosts, ⁵according to the promise that I made you when you came out of Egypt. My spirit abides among you; do not fear. ⁶For thus says the LORD of hosts: Once again, in a little while, I will shake the heavens and the earth and the sea and the dry land; ⁷and I will shake all the nations, so that the treasure of all nations shall come, and I will fill this house with splendor, says the LORD of hosts. ⁸The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, says the LORD of hosts. ⁹The latter splendor of this house shall be greater than the former, says the LORD of hosts; and in this place I will give prosperity, says the LORD of hosts.

A Rebuke and a Promise

10 On the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai, saying: ¹¹Thus says the LORD of hosts: Ask the priests for a ruling: ¹²If one carries consecrated meat in the fold of one's garment, and with the fold touches bread, or stew, or wine, or oil, or any kind of food, does it become holy? The priests answered, "No." ¹³Then Haggai said, "If one who is unclean by contact with a dead body touches any of these, does it become unclean?" The priests answered, "Yes, it becomes unclean." ¹⁴Haggai then said, So is it with this people, and with this nation before me, says the LORD; and so with every work of their hands; and what they offer there is unclean. ¹⁵But now, consider what will come to pass from this day on. Before a stone was placed upon a stone in the LORD's temple, ¹⁶how did you fare?^a When one came to a heap of twenty measures, there were but ten; when one came to the wine vat to draw fifty measures, there were but twenty. ¹⁷I struck you and all the products of your toil with blight and mildew and hail; yet you did not return to me, says the LORD. ¹⁸Consider from this day on, from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month. Since the day that the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid, consider: ¹⁹Is there any seed left in the barn? Do the vine, the fig tree, the pomegranate, and the olive tree still yield nothing? From this day on I will bless you.

The Coming Messianic Kingdom

20 The word of the LORD came a second time to Haggai on the twenty-fourth day of the month: ²¹Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, I am about to shake the heavens and the earth, ²²and to overthrow the throne of kingdoms; I am about to destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the nations, and overthrow the chariots and their riders; and the horses and their riders shall fall, every one by the

the manifestation of God's presence in the pillars of cloud and fire during the exodus from Egypt (Ex 13.21–22). 2.6–9 God will take such powerful action against all the nations that, because of their tribute in gold and silver, the splendor of the Second Temple would eclipse that of the First.

2.10–14 An indictment of the people in dialogue form. 2.10 Ninth month, early December, 520 B.C.E. 2.12 Even though the temple had not yet resumed its function as the source of holiness in Judah, the priests remember that consecrated meat cannot make other foodstuffs holy by contact (cf. Lev 6.26–27). 2.13 But things are easily subject to becoming unclean through contact with that which is ritually unclean. 2.14 Now the point of these priestly rulings becomes clear: this people cannot make offerings acceptable to God because every work of their hands (i.e., agricultural produce; see 2.17) is unclean. Perhaps offerings brought to God are rendered unclean by being brought into a sanctuary and laid upon an altar that have not themselves been cleansed and reconsecrated. 2.15–19 The prophet promises a new era. 2.15 From this day on suggests that a milestone has been reached in the temple reconstruction project. Whereas in 1.14 the people came and worked on the house of the LORD, here they have placed stone . . . upon stone, suggesting that a foundation deposit ceremony or consecration took place on the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month (v. 18). 2.17 See Am 4.9. 2.19 With the temple reconsecrated, the problem of unacceptable offerings (see 2.14) is overcome and a general blessing of agriculture ensues.

2.20–23 On the same day that he spoke the words of 2.10–19, Haggai addressed a final oracle directly to Zerubbabel. 2.21–22 The Lord's immanent intervention means cosmic quakes (see 2.6; Joel 3.16) and military disaster for the kingdoms of the nations (see Ex 15.1–10).

sword of a comrade. ²³On that day, says the LORD of hosts, I will take you, O Zerubbabel my servant, son of Shealtiel, says the LORD, and make you like a signet ring; for I have chosen you, says the LORD of hosts.

2.23 Consistent with the promise to David in 2 Sam 7.16, Zerubbabel, the descendant of David, is chosen to be the Lord's signet ring (see Sir 49.11). Just as the bearer of the king's signet ring enjoyed the authority of the king (see Esth 3.10; 8.2; Jer 22.24), so also the chosen one acted on behalf of the Lord (cf. Isa 42.1; 43.10; see also the attribution of future cosmic authority to Zerubbabel in Zech 4.6–10).

ZECHARIAH

Date, Authorship, and Context

THE BOOK OF ZECHARIAH IS GENERALLY AGREED to have been written by more than one hand. The eight visions and prophetic oracles that make up chs. 1–8 begin with the date October/November, 520 B.C.E. There seems no reason to question this chronological framework, nor for that matter the attribution of the first part of the book to one “Zechariah son of Berechiah son of Iddo.” According to Zech 7.1, his work continued until 518 B.C.E., which means that he functioned significantly longer than the five months during the year 520 in which Haggai worked. The two prophets shared the same mission, namely to advocate the reconstruction of the temple in Jerusalem.

The Judean exiles had returned from their Babylonian captivity after 539 B.C.E., armed with the so-called edict of Cyrus (Ezra 6.3–5), which permitted them to rebuild the holy sanctuary in Jerusalem. Perhaps they were guided as well by the visionary plan of restoration put forth in Ezek 40–48; certainly they were animated by the stunning promises of the great prophet of the exile, the author of Isa 40–55 (Second Isaiah). Reconstruction work began rather quickly under Sheshbazzar, the governor of Judah appointed by the Persians; but then for unknown reasons it stopped (see Ezra 5.13–16). More than a decade later, during the tension stirred up throughout the Persian Empire by the accession of Darius I in 522 B.C.E., first Haggai, then Zechariah, sprang into prophetic action. They stressed the importance of rebuilding the temple so that the elect and restored community of Judah could enjoy the God-given provisions for right relationship and right worship that were to be centered there. Apparently their words were heeded, for the temple was completed and rededicated just a few years after the end of their ministries, in 516/5 B.C.E. (see Ezra 6.15).

First and Second Zechariah Contrasted

The visions and oracles of Zech 1–8 reflect the essentially hierocratic or priestly outlook of a central prophet who belonged to temple circles and who linked Israel’s salvation with worship and sacrifice. An individual or a school with a more peripheral or socially marginal point of view speaks in Zech 9-14. This so-called Second Zechariah does not display the editorial unity of the first eight chapters of the book but reveals a pattern of steadily increasing disillusionment with the postexilic restoration and a sense that the glorious vision of a just society put forward by the author of Isa 40-55 was not going to be achieved by a priestly establishment centered in Jerusalem. In other words, these chapters take a position almost the reverse of Zech 1-8. It is difficult to date these chapters or, for that matter, to assign them to one author. The steadily more urgent sense of the impending "day of the LORD" suggests that they were produced over a number of decades. The culminating vision of ch. 14 may have occurred late in the fifth century B.C.E. This would place these chapters in the company of such other protoapocalyptic texts as Joel 2.28-3.21; Isa 24-27. W. Sibley Towner

A History of the Prophetic Word

1 In the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came to the prophet Zechariah son of Berechiah son of Iddo, saying: ²The LORD was very angry with your ancestors. ³Therefore say to them, Thus says the LORD of hosts: Return to me, says the LORD of hosts, and I will return to you, says the LORD of hosts. ⁴Do not be like your ancestors, to whom the former prophets proclaimed, "Thus says the LORD of hosts, Return from your evil ways and from your evil deeds." But they did not hear or heed me, says the LORD. ⁵Your ancestors, where are they? And the prophets, do they live forever? ⁶But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not overtake your ancestors? So they repented and said, "The LORD of hosts has dealt with us according to our ways and deeds, just as he planned to do."

First Vision: God's Horsemen

7 On the twenty-fourth day of the eleventh month, the month of Shebat, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came to the prophet Zechariah son of Berechiah son of Iddo; and Zechariah^a said, ⁸In the night I saw a man riding on a red horse! He was standing among the myrtle trees in the glen; and behind him were red, sorrel, and white horses. ⁹Then I said, "What are these, my lord?" The angel who talked with me said to me, "I will show you what they are."

a Heb and he

1.1-6 First oracle. 1.1 Eighth month . . . second year, October/November, 520 B.C.E. Zechariah son of Berechiah son of Iddo. The reference to this person in Neh 12.16 establishes that he was of a priestly family. According to Ezra 5.1; 6.14, Zechariah was the son and not the grandson of Iddo. The Zechariah who was the son of Jeberechiah (Isa 8.2) was apparently a different person, though they may have been identified with each other in Mt 23.35 (and then further confused with the martyred Zechariah of 2 Chr 24.20-22). 1.6 So they repented. Though the prophets often called for repentance (e.g., Ezek 14.6; Am 5.14-15), it is not often reported that repentance occurred (cf. Zech 7.11).

1.7-17 First vision. 1.7 Eleventh month, January/February, 519 B.C.E. The Babylonian/Persian name of the month Shebat demonstrates the extent of the foreign domination in postexilic Judah. 1.8 The man is one of the angelic host (v. 11). The myrtle trees in the glen bring to mind an Eden-like place of lush, well-watered shrubs. In Second Isaiah, myrtle is a feature of the restored Israel (see Isa 41.19; 55.13). The red, sorrel, and white colors of the horses might have symbolic values; however, it seems more likely that they simply reflect the colorations of the horses known in the ancient Near East. Horses is an indefinite number; the vision of 6.1-3 speaks of four ¹⁰So the man who was standing among the myrtle trees answered, "They are those whom the LORD has sent to patrol the earth." ¹¹Then they spoke to the angel of the LORD who was standing among the myrtle trees, "We have patrolled the earth, and lo, the whole earth remains at peace." ¹²Then the angel of the LORD said, "O LORD of hosts, how long will you withhold mercy from Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, with which you have been angry these seventy years?" ¹³Then the LORD replied with gracious and comforting words to the angel who talked with me. ¹⁴So the angel who talked with me said to me, Proclaim this message: Thus says the LORD of hosts; I am very jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion. ¹⁵And I am extremely angry with the nations that are at ease; for while I was only a little angry, they made the disaster worse. ¹⁶Therefore, thus says the LORD, I have returned to Jerusalem with compassion; my house shall be built in it, says the LORD of hosts, and the measuring line shall be stretched out over Jerusalem. ¹⁷Proclaim further: Thus says the LORD of hosts: My cities shall again overflow with prosperity; the LORD will again comfort Zion and again choose Jerusalem.

Second Vision: Four Horns and Four Smiths

^{18^b} And I looked up and saw four horns. ¹⁹I asked the angel who talked with me, "What are these?" And he answered me, "These are the horns that have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem." ²⁰Then the LORD showed me four blacksmiths. ²¹And I asked, "What are they coming to do?" He answered, "These are the horns that scattered Judah, so that no head could be raised; but these have come to terrify them, to strike down the horns of the nations that lifted up their horns against the land of Judah to scatter its people."^c

Third Vision: A Wall of Fire

^{2^d} I looked up and saw a man with a measuring line in his hand. ²Then I asked, "Where are you going?" He answered me, "To measure Jerusalem, to see what is its width and what is its length." ³Then the angel who talked with me came forward, and another angel came forward to meet him, ⁴and said to him, "Run, say to that young man: Jerusalem shall be inhabited like villages without walls, because of the multitude of people and animals in it. ⁵For I will be a wall of fire all around it, says the LORD, and I will be the glory within it."

teams. 1.10–11 The horses have been sent out from the heavenly court on reconnaissance of the earth (see 6.1–8). 1.12 The angel's cry, O LORD of hosts, how long . . . ? draws on the language of the psalms of lament (e.g., Pss 6.3; 13.2; 79.5) to press God about the duration of human suffering. These seventy years. The figure is conventional, but it can be applied to various spans of time. In Jer 25.11; 29.10 it refers to the seventy-plus years in which the Neo-Babylonian Empire flourished (612–539 B.C.E.), whereas here it refers to the period of the devastation of Jerusalem and Judah (587, the year of the destruction of the temple, to this approximate time of this oracle, 519 B.C.E.). 1.16 The image of a measuring line is drawn from the profession of carpentry (Isa 44.13). It can refer to judgment (see Isa 34.11; Lam 2.8) and, as in this case, restoration (see also Jer 31.38–39). 1.17 The LORD will . . . again choose Jerusalem. No other prophet ever claimed that God "chose" Jerusalem (see also 2.12; 3.2), but the theme is sounded in Deut 12.1–28; 1 Kings 8.44–48; 11.13.

1.18–21 Second vision. 1.19 The foreign nations that had oppressed Israel since the days of the Divided Monarchy are the horns (cf. Dan 7.19–27). 1.20–21 The four blacksmiths therefore represent the divine agents that will destroy the oppressive foreign powers (see Isa 54.16–17).

2.1–5 Third vision. 2.1 The measuring line mentioned here (in contrast to that of 1.16) is used to find the dimensions of an existing entity such as Jerusalem (cf. Am 7.17; Mic 2.4–5). 2.4 The restored city will have a multitude of human and animal inhabitants. Second Isaiah (chs. 40–55) also envisions restored Israel as "too crowded for your inhabitants" (Isa 49.19; see 54.3; Zech 14.11). 2.5 I will be a wall of fire all around it means that the Lord will provide for the safety of the new Jerusalem, even as God's presence in its midst will be disclosed by the glory within it. The priestly theme of the return of God's glory to the temple is dramatically set forth in Ezek 43.1–5.

2.6–13 Second oracle. 2.6 As Jer 6.22; 10.22 show, the north is the generic location of the you abroad like the four winds of heaven, says the LORD. ⁷Up! Escape to Zion, you that live with daughter Babylon. ⁸For thus said the LORD of hosts (after his glory^e sent me) regarding the nations that plundered you: Truly, one who touches you touches the apple of my eye.^f ⁹See now, I am going to raise^g my hand against them, and they shall become plunder for their own slaves. Then you will know that the LORD of hosts has sent me. ¹⁰Sing and rejoice, O daughter Zion! For lo, I will come and dwell in your midst, says the LORD. ¹¹Many nations shall join themselves to the LORD on that day, and shall be my people; and I will dwell in your midst. And you shall know that the LORD of hosts has sent me to you. ¹²The LORD will inherit Judah as his portion in the holy land, and will again choose Jerusalem.

¹³ Be silent, all people, before the LORD; for he has roused himself from his holy dwelling.

Fourth Vision: Joshua and the Satan

3 Then he showed me the high priest Joshua standing before the angel of the LORD, and Satan^h standing at his right hand to accuse him. ²And the LORD said to Satan,^h “The LORD rebuke you, O Satan!^h The LORD who has chosen Jerusalem rebuke you! Is not this man a brand plucked from the fire?” ³Now Joshua was dressed with filthy clothes as he stood before the angel. ⁴The angel said to those who were standing before him, “Take off his filthy clothes.” And to him he said, “See, I have taken your guilt away from you, and I will clothe you with festal apparel.” ⁵And I said, “Let them put a clean turban on his head.” So they put a clean turban on his head and clothed him with the apparel; and the angel of the LORD was standing by.

⁶ Then the angel of the LORD assured Joshua, saying ⁷“Thus says the LORD of hosts: If you will walk in my ways and keep my requirements, then you shall rule my house and have charge of my courts, and I will give you the right of access among those who are standing here. ⁸Now listen, Joshua, high priest, you and your colleagues who sit before you! For they are an omen of things to come: I am going to bring my servant the Branch. ⁹For on the stone that I have set before Joshua, on a single stone with seven facets, enemies of Israel and the place of its exile. Since Babylon is an enemy, it can be the referent here even though it lay east of Judah. 2.8 Perhaps the sense of the phrase the apple of my eye (see Deut 32.10) is that Judah is as close to God and as carefully protected as is the divine eyeball. 2.9 The prophet imagines that the returning exiles will plunder their captors (see Ex 12.35–36). Such a reversal of fortunes leads to the formula suitable for the recognition of God's work in history, you will know that the LORD of hosts has sent me (see also v. 11; 4.9; 6.15). 2.10 Daughter Zion often receives news of her rescue (see 9.9; also Isa 12.6; 52.2; 62.11; Mic 4.8; Zeph 3.14–15). 2.11 You shall know . . . sent me. See note on 2.9. 2.12 The term holy land is used nowhere else in the Hebrew Bible, though it can be found in Wis 12.3; 2 Macc 1.7. 2.13 See Hab 2.20.

3.1–10 Fourth vision. 3.1 The high priest Joshua. See note on Hag 1.1. The use of the article before the word satan in Hebrew makes clear that this is a title and not a proper name. The satan is a member of the divine council whose task it is to discover and indict malefactors (see Job 1.6–12). 1 Chr 21.1 gives to the satan the function of testing that the Lord plays in the parallel text in 2 Sam 24.1. The picture of the divine council given in 1 Kings 22.19–23 shows spirits performing various functions in God's court, including that of testing and provoking sinners. 3.2–3 In Isa 4.3–4, the filthiness of Jerusalem is purged by burning. Here Joshua has already emerged as a brand plucked from the fire and his filthiness derives not from his sin but from his ordeal. 3.4–5 These verses anticipate the consecration of the high priest in festal apparel and clean turban to his function of taking upon himself the guilt of the people so that they might be acceptable before the Lord (see Ex 28.31–38). 3.8 My servant the Branch. In Isa 11.1, the coming Davidic ruler is described as a “branch” (see also Jer 23.5; 33.15). In this verse, the Branch seems to be someone other than Joshua and his colleagues, since Joshua was not of the royal dynasty of David. The most likely referent would be Zerubbabel, who, as we know from Hag 2.20–23, embodied the hopes for a political future for Judah under a descendant of David. See also note on Zech 6.12. 3.9 A single stone with seven facets may again refer to the description of the regalia of the high priest in Ex 28.36–38, specifically to the engraved “rosette of pure gold,” which was fastened to the front of the turban of the high priest. In this instance, however, the ornament is not fabricated by any human

I will engrave its inscription, says the LORD of hosts, and I will remove the guilt of this land in a single day. ¹⁰On that day, says the LORD of hosts, you shall invite each other to come under your vine and fig tree."

Fifth Vision: The Lampstand and Olive Trees

4 The angel who talked with me came again, and wakened me, as one is wakened from sleep. ²He said to me, "What do you see?" And I said, "I see a lampstand all of gold, with a bowl on the top of it; there are seven lamps on it, with seven lips on each of the lamps that are on the top of it. ³And by it there are two olive trees, one on the right of the bowl and the other on its left." ⁴I said to the angel who talked with me, "What are these, my lord?" ⁵Then the angel who talked with me answered me, "Do you not know what these are?" I said, "No, my lord." ⁶He said to me, "This is the word of the LORD to Zerubbabel: Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, says the LORD of hosts. ⁷What are you, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel you shall become a plain; and he shall bring out the top stone amid shouts of 'Grace, grace to it!'"

⁸Moreover the word of the LORD came to me, saying, ⁹"The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also complete it. Then you will know that the LORD of hosts has sent me to you. ¹⁰For whoever has despised the day of small things shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel.

The Vision Explained

"These seven are the eyes of the LORD, which range through the whole earth." ¹¹Then I said to him, "What are these two olive trees on the right and the left of the lampstand?" ¹²And a second time I said to him, "What are these two branches of the olive trees, which pour out the oil through the two golden pipes?" ¹³He said to me, "Do you not know what these are?" I said, "No, my lord." ¹⁴Then he said, "These are the two anointed ones who stand by the Lord of the whole earth."

Sixth Vision: The Flying Scroll

5 Again I looked up and saw a flying scroll. ²And he said to me, "What do you see?" I answered, "I see a flying scroll; its length is twenty cubits, and its width ten cubits." ³Then he said to me, "This is the curse that goes out over the hand but is given to Joshua by the Lord. For Zechariah, divine intervention alone could solve the problems of contamination and deconsecration that confounded efforts to worship at the temple in the early postexilic Judean community. 3.10 See Mic 4.4.

4.1–14 Fifth vision. This apparently complex vision is made much clearer when the oracle to Zerubbabel embedded within it (vv. 6–10a) is treated separately. 4.2 The lampstand is not the familiar seven-branched candelabrum of Ex 25.31–40; 37.17–24. Archaeological evidence now confirms that the object envisioned here could be a bowl-shaped oil reservoir surmounting a golden base and fitted around the rim with seven (not forty-nine!) protruding spouts to serve as lamps. 4.6–10a Third oracle. 4.6 On Zerubbabel, see note on Hag 1.1. 4.7 O great mountain may refer to a political or priestly opponent of Zerubbabel, or simply the ruinous situation that faced him in the rebuilding project. Perhaps top stone should be understood as a stone from the former temple incorporated into the foundation deposit of the new structure. Mesopotamian sources attest to similar efforts to ensure sacral continuity. Grace, grace to it. In Hag 2.15–19, the gracious blessing of rich agricultural yield begins right after the reconsecration of the temple. 4.9 You will know . . . sent me. See note on 2.9. 4.10b These seven are the eyes of the LORD returns us to the angelic question of v. 5. If the lamps are the eyes of the Lord, then the lampstand must stand for the Lord in person. The image of the all-seeing eyes of the Lord is common in biblical tradition (see 2 Chr 16.9; Job 34.21; Pss 14.2, 66.7; Prov 15.3). 4.14 At last the two olive trees are identified as the two anointed ones (lit. "sons of the oil") and no doubt represent Joshua and Zerubbabel, the two heroes of the temple reconstruction effort in both Zech 1–8 and Haggai. The "oil" referred to here is not that used for consecration of priest or king, but is rather that used for food and lamp fuel. If the lamp burns this very oil, then there is an exquisite interrelationship between the human and divine worlds since human abundance would help feed the divine light.

5.1–4 Sixth vision. 5.1 See Ezek 2.8–3.3; Rev 10.9–11. 5.2 Since a cubit is about 18 inches in length, the dimensions of this visionary scroll were 30 by 15 feet. Such a scroll would be impossible to unroll or handle, but this is a flying scroll (v. 1), not held by human hands. 5.3 The curse is face of the whole land; for everyone who steals shall be cut off according to the writing on one side, and everyone who swears falsely^j shall be cut off according to the writing on the other side. ⁴I have sent it out, says the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter the house of the thief, and the house of anyone who swears falsely by my name; and it shall abide in that house and consume it, both timber and stones."

Seventh Vision: A Woman in a Basket

⁵ Then the angel who talked with me came forward and said to me, "Look up and see what this is that is coming out." ⁶I said, "What is it?" He said, "This is a basket^k coming out." And he said, "This is their iniquity^l in all the land." ⁷Then a leaden cover was lifted, and there was a woman sitting in the basket!^k ⁸And he said, "This is Wickedness." So he thrust her back into the basket,^k and pressed the leaden weight down on its mouth. ⁹Then I looked up and saw two women coming forward. The wind was in their wings; they had wings like the wings of a stork, and they lifted up the basket^k between earth and sky. ¹⁰Then I said to the angel who talked with me, "Where are they taking the basket?"^k ¹¹He said to me, "To the land of Shinar, to build a house for it; and when this is prepared, they will set the basket^k down there on its base."

Eighth Vision: Four Chariots

6 And again I looked up and saw four chariots coming out from between two mountains—mountains of bronze. ²The first chariot had red horses, the second chariot black horses, ³the third chariot white horses, and the fourth chariot dappled gray^m horses. ⁴Then I said to the angel who talked with me, "What are these, my lord?" ⁵The angel answered me, "These are the four windsⁿ of heaven going out, after presenting themselves before the Lord of all the earth. ⁶The chariot with the black horses goes toward the north country, the white ones go toward the west country,^o and the dappled ones go toward the south country." ⁷When the steeds came out, they were impatient to get off and patrol the earth. And he said, "Go, patrol the earth." So they patrolled the earth. ⁸Then he cried out to me, "Lo, those who go toward the north country have set my spirit at rest in the north country."

The Crowning of the Branch

⁹ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁰Collect silver and gold^p from the exiles—from Heldai, Tobijah, and Jedaiah—who have arrived from Babylon; and go the same day to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah. ¹¹Take the silver and gold and make a crown,^q and set it on the head of the high priest Joshua son of Jehozadak; ¹²say to him: Thus says the LORD of hosts: Here is a man whose name directed against violators of the eighth and ninth commandments, which forbid theft and false oaths (see Ex 20.15-16; Deut 5.19-20).

5.5-11 Seventh vision. 5.6 A basket, in Hebrew an ephah, a container of about two-thirds bushel in dry measure, typically used for such commodities as flour (Lev 5.11) and barley (Ruth 2.17). 5.8 This is Wickedness. Israel's sin is personified as a woman who could somehow fit into a basket. 5.11 The land of Shinar is Babylon, the place of Israel's exile (see Isa 11.11; Dan 1.2). Shinar was also a place of the primeval sin of the Tower of Babel (Gen 11.2). Placing the basket on its base in the house built for it suggests that the cleansing of Judah through the reconstruction of the temple would cause a corresponding desecration of worship in Babylon.

6.1-8 Eighth vision. 6.1 The patrol sent forth from divine headquarters is equipped with chariots drawn in all directions by teams of various colored horses (see note on 1.8; 1.10-11). 6.6 See note on 2.6. 6.8 My spirit at rest in the north country. God has extended right order throughout the world, even in the land of the enemy.

6.9-15 Fourth oracle. From this point on the prophet ceases to function as a visionary and assumes the more typical role of an intermediary for divine instructions. 6.12-13 A man whose name is Branch. See note on 3.8. Even though the intrusive oracle of 4.6-10a hails Zerubbabel as the builder of the temple, the crown of silver and gold is placed on the head of the priestly fig-

is Branch: for he shall branch out in his place, and he shall build the temple of the LORD. ¹³It is he that shall build the temple of the LORD; he shall bear royal honor, and shall sit upon his throne and rule. There shall be a priest by his throne, with peaceful understanding between the two of them. ¹⁴And the crown^r shall be in the care of Heldai,^s Tobijah, Jedaiah, and Josiah^r son of Zephaniah, as a memorial in the temple of the LORD.

¹⁵ Those who are far off shall come and help to build the temple of the LORD; and you shall know that the LORD of hosts has sent me to you. This will happen if you diligently obey the voice of the LORD your God.

The Fallacy of Fasting

7 In the fourth year of King Darius, the word of the LORD came to Zechariah on the fourth day of the ninth month, which is Chislev. ²Now the people of Bethel had sent Sharezer and Regem-melech and their men, to entreat the favor of the LORD, ³and to ask the priests of the house of the LORD of hosts and the prophets, "Should I mourn and practice abstinence in the fifth month, as I have done for so many years?" ⁴Then the word of the LORD of hosts came to me: ⁵Say to all the people of the land and the priests: When you fasted and lamented in the fifth month and in the seventh, for these seventy years, was it for me that you fasted? ⁶And when you eat and when you drink, do you not eat and drink only for yourselves? ⁷Were not these the words that the LORD proclaimed by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, along with the towns around it, and when the Negeb and the Shephelah were inhabited?

⁸ The word of the LORD came to Zechariah, saying: ⁹Thus says the LORD of hosts: Render true judgments, show kindness and mercy to one another; ¹⁰do not oppress the widow, the orphan, the alien, or the poor; and do not devise evil in your hearts against one another. ¹¹But they refused to listen, and turned a stubborn shoulder, and stopped their ears in order not to hear. ¹²They made their hearts adamant in order not to hear the law and the words that the LORD of hosts had sent by his spirit through the former prophets. Therefore great wrath came from the LORD of hosts. ¹³Just as, when I^u called, they would not hear, so, when they called, I would not hear, says the LORD of hosts, ¹⁴and I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations that they had not known. Thus the land they left was desolate, so that no one went to and fro, and a pleasant land was made desolate.

ure, Joshua son of Jehozadak, and not on the head of the royal figure (v. 11). Perhaps this text was edited after the final disappearance of any vestige of the house of David toward a more priestly bias. 6.13 Even so, a priest by his throne still suggests the kind of bicameral polity in the postexilic community described in Hag 1.1–15, in which priest and civil governor worked side by side. The Branch now seems to be someone who is shown to Joshua rather than Joshua himself. 6.15 You shall know . . . sent me. See note on 2.9.

7.1–14 Fifth oracle. 7.1 Fourth year . . . ninth month, November/December, 518 B.C.E. The term Chislev is based on the Babylonian/Persian name for the month. See note on 1.7. 7.3 Mention of the priests of the house of the LORD of hosts and the prophets suggests that the temple staff was back in action after the temple was reconsecrated, even though it was not yet fully reconstructed (see Hag 2.10–19). 7.5 The fast of the fifth month may have been established in memory of the destruction of the First Temple (2 Kings 25.8–9; Jer 52.12–13). The fast in the seventh month may have memorialized the death of Gedaliah, the governor of Judah (2 Kings 25.25; Jer 41.1–3). 7.7 The words . . . by the former prophets. The preexilic prophets criticized Israel's public piety as hypocritical (though fasting is mentioned only in Jer 14.12). Their criticism came at a time when Jerusalem was . . . inhabited, namely, when no evidence of the Lord's displeasure at the shallowness of such practice had as yet been manifested in destruction and dispersal. 7.9–10 The true acts of piety before God are true judgments . . . kindness and mercy and the other righteous acts enumerated here. The words are reminiscent of the great teaching of Mic 6.8 and also of the typical demands of prophetic social ethics (e.g., Isa 1.16–17; Am 5.14–15; 21–24; Mal 3.5). 7.13 The failure of Israel to achieve a hearing from God is dramatically paralleled with God's inability to receive a hearing from Israel (cf. Isa 1.15; Jer 7.13–15).

God's Promises to Zion

8 The word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying: ²Thus says the LORD of hosts: I am jealous for Zion with great jealousy, and I am jealous for her with great wrath. ³Thus says the LORD: I will return to Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; Jerusalem shall be called the faithful city, and the mountain of the LORD of hosts shall be called the holy mountain. ⁴Thus says the LORD of hosts: Old men and old women shall again sit in the streets of Jerusalem, each with staff in hand because of their great age. ⁵And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in its streets. ⁶Thus says the LORD of hosts: Even though it seems impossible to the remnant of this people in these days, should it also seem impossible to me, says the LORD of hosts? ⁷Thus says the LORD of hosts: I will save my people from the east country and from the west country; ⁸and I will bring them to live in Jerusalem. They shall be my people and I will be their God, in faithfulness and in righteousness.

⁹ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Let your hands be strong—you that have recently been hearing these words from the mouths of the prophets who were present when the foundation was laid for the rebuilding of the temple, the house of the LORD of hosts. ¹⁰For before those days there were no wages for people or for animals, nor was there any safety from the foe for those who went out or came in, and I set them all against one other. ¹¹But

now I will not deal with the remnant of this people as in the former days, says the LORD of hosts. ¹²For there shall be a sowing of peace; the vine shall yield its fruit, the ground shall give its produce, and the skies shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things. ¹³Just as you have been a cursing among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel, so I will save you and you shall be a blessing. Do not be afraid, but let your hands be strong.

¹⁴ For thus says the LORD of hosts: Just as I purposed to bring disaster upon you, when your ancestors provoked me to wrath, and I did not relent, says the LORD of hosts, ¹⁵so again I have purposed in these days to do good to Jerusalem and to the house of Judah; do not be afraid. ¹⁶These are the things that you shall do: Speak the truth to one another, render in your gates judgments that are true and make for peace, ¹⁷do not devise evil in your hearts against one another, and love no false oath; for all these are things that I hate, says the LORD.

God's Future Work of Blessing

¹⁸ The word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying: ¹⁹Thus says the LORD of hosts: The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be seasons of joy and gladness, and cheerful festivals for the house of Judah: therefore love truth and peace.

²⁰ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Peo-

8.1–17 Seven oracles on the restoration of Zion. 8.2 God's self-description as jealous is a theme of the Deuteronomists, editors responsible for the history that runs from Deuteronomy through 2 Kings (see Deut 4.24; 5.9). Here God's jealousy is zeal for achieving justice for Zion. 8.3 See Isa 11.9; 65.25; Jer 31.23. 8.4–5 The delightful vision of streets full of boys and girls as well as old men and women echoes the blessing for age and youth alike in the coming new Jerusalem in Isa 65.20. 8.6 In the Isaian tradition, too, the restored community of Judah is typically referred to as the remnant (Isa 10.22–23; 11.11; 37.31–32). 8.7–8 They shall be my people and I will be their God is a refrain heard frequently in Jeremiah (24.7; 31.33; 32.38) and Ezekiel (11.20; 14.11; 37.23, 27). The covenant stipulated that this right relationship would come into existence when Israel was faithful. 8.9–13 See Hag 1.6–11;

2.4–9, 15–19. 8.13 The exiled and dispersed Judah and Israel have been an object of hissing and cursing (see Jer 25.18; 29.18; Mic 6.16), but all that is to be reversed in a restoration era characterized by agricultural productivity and peace. 8.14–17 The prophet continues to think in terms of the covenant tradition, stressing truth and justice as the basis for a new community (see 7.9–10; Mic 6.12; Eph 4.25). 8.17 See note on 5.3.

8.18–23 Three oracles on the future joy of Judah. 8.19 To the fasts mentioned in 7.5 are now added fasts of the fourth and tenth months, which apparently memorialized events in the siege and capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar (2 Kings 25.1–4). These verses answer the question raised by the elders of Bethel (7.2–3) with a no—in the days to come fasts shall become cheerful festivals. 8.20–22 Many peoples and strong nations are among the throngs envisioned as com-ples shall yet come, the inhabitants of many cities; ²¹the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, "Come, let us go to entreat the favor of the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts; I myself am going." ²²Many peoples and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to entreat the favor of the LORD. ²³Thus says the LORD of hosts: In those days ten men from nations of every language shall take hold of a Jew, grasping his garment and saying, "Let us go with you, for we have heard that God is with you."

Approach of the Divine Warrior

9

An Oracle.

- The word of the LORD is against the land of Hadrach
and will rest upon Damascus.
For to the LORD belongs the capital^v of Aram,^w as do all the tribes of Israel;
² Hamath also, which borders on it, Tyre and Sidon, though they are very wise.
³ Tyre has built itself a rampart, and heaped up silver like dust,
and gold like the dirt of the streets.
⁴ But now, the Lord will strip it of its possessions
and hurl its wealth into the sea, and it shall be devoured by fire.

- ⁵ Ashkelon shall see it and be
afraid;
Gaza too, and shall writhe in anguish;
Ekron also, because its hopes are withered.
The king shall perish from Gaza;
Ashkelon shall be uninhabited;
⁶ a mongrel people shall settle in Ashdod,
and I will make an end of the pride of Philistia.
⁷ I will take away its blood from its mouth,
and its abominations from between its teeth;
it too shall be a remnant for
our God;
it shall be like a clan in Judah,
and Ekron shall be like the Jebusites.
⁸ Then I will encamp at my house
as a guard,
so that no one shall march to
and fro;
no oppressor shall again overrun
them,
for now I have seen with my own eyes.

The Peace of God's Victory

Jerusalem!

ing to the soon to be reconstructed temple to entreat the favor of the LORD. The universal scope of God's future work of blessing answers to the promise to Abram in Gen 12.3; it is also used to describe the work of God in Christ in such texts as Jn 12.32. 8.23 This is probably the earliest use of the term Jew in the Hebrew Bible. The universal vision of human harmony with Zion at the center responds fully to the earlier prophetic vision of the peaceable kingdom (Isa 11.6–9), the beating of swords into plowshares (Isa 2.4; Mic 4.3), the love of God for other nations mediated through the faithful prophets of Israel (Isa 19.23–25; Jonah), and the work of the servant of the Lord (Isa 42.4; 49.1–6).

9.1–11.17 The Divine Warrior and the restoration of scattered Israel. 9.1–8 These verses picture the Lord as Divine Warrior moving triumphantly toward Jerusalem prior to the "day of the Lord" (cf. Joel 2.11; Isa 63.1–6). The list of cities mentioned in this passage works its way systematically from north to south, pausing for a siege of Tyre (v. 3). Commentators point out that the conquest of the eastern Mediterranean by Alexander the Great in 332 B.C.E. followed a similar course. 9.1 An Oracle. This introductory formula, repeated in 12.1, serves to bind the two parts of Second Zechariah (chs. 9–11 and 12–14; see the Introduction). The ensuing booklet of Malachi is introduced by the same formula and perhaps should be viewed as an appendix to Zechariah. 9.7 The threats against the Philistines include application of the universal Israelite rule against the eating of blood (see Gen 9.4). The Jebusites, former inhabitants of Jerusalem, suffered defeat by David and his men (2 Sam 5.6–9). 9.9 Daughter Zion. See note on 2.10. The triumphant king arrives humble and riding on a . . . donkey, thereby demonstrating his peaceful intentions. Two Gospels (Mt 21.2–7; Jn 12.14–15) cite this text in their

- Lo, your king comes to you; triumphant and victorious is he,
humble and riding on a donkey,
on a colt, the foal of a donkey.
- 10 He^x will cut off the chariot from Ephraim
and the war-horse from Jerusalem;
and the battle bow shall be
cut off,
and he shall command peace to
the nations;
his dominion shall be from sea
to sea,
and from the River to the ends
of the earth.
- 11 As for you also, because of the blood of my covenant
with you,
I will set your prisoners free from the waterless pit.
- 12 Return to your stronghold, O prisoners of hope;
today I declare that I will restore to you double.
- 13 For I have bent Judah as
my bow;
I have made Ephraim its arrow.
I will arouse your sons, O Zion, against your sons, O Greece, and wield you like a warrior's sword.

Arrival of the Divine Warrior

- 14 Then the LORD will appear
over them,
and his arrow go forth like lightning;

- the Lord GOD will sound the
trumpet
and march forth in the whirlwinds of the south.
- 15 The LORD of hosts will protect
them,
and they shall devour and tread down the slingers;^v
they shall drink their blood^z
like wine,
and be full like a bowl, drenched like the corners of
the altar.
- 16 On that day the LORD their God will save them
for they are the flock of his people;
for like the jewels of a crown
they shall shine on his land.
- 17 For what goodness and beauty are his!
Grain shall make the young men flourish,
and new wine the young
women.

The LORD of the Rains

- 10 Ask rain from the LORD in the season of the spring rain,
from the LORD who makes the storm clouds,
who gives showers of rain to you,^a
the vegetation in the field to everyone.

accounts of Palm Sunday, but the Matthean version fails to take into consideration the parallelism of the Hebrew poetry (donkey is equivalent to colt) when it has Jesus riding on two donkeys at once. 9.10 The Divine Warrior demilitarizes the nations within the vast sweep of his dominion from the River [probably the Euphrates] to the ends of the earth (see Ps 46.8–9; Isa 57.19). 9.11 The phrase the blood of my covenant is the conventional way of referring to the sacrificially sealed covenant relationship between the Lord and the people (see Ex 24.8; Mt 26.28; Heb 9.15–22). 9.12 Cf. Isa 40.2. 9.13 God will rescue the long-vanished Northern Kingdom, Ephraim (Israel) along with Judah (see 10.7). Greece is the earliest reference to that Western power in the Bible, though the late prophet Joel refers to “the Greeks” (Joel 3.6). 9.14 In classic Divine Warrior guise, the LORD will appear over them, with the heavenly hosts. 9.15 They shall devour . . . drink their blood suggests not only the triumph of the Lord’s human allies but also a sacral ceremony comparable to the sacrifice of an animal on an altar (Ex 24.8). 9.17 In the aftermath of victory, grain shall make the young men flourish, and new wine the young women (see Jer 31.12–14; Am 9.13–14; Joel 3.18). If commentators are correct in seeing a development through Second Zechariah toward a more radical and cosmic outlook, then perhaps this first chapter in the series should not be dated as late as the reference to Greece might suggest but should be considered to be as early as the sixth-century B.C.E.

- 2 For the teraphim^b utter and the diviners see lies;

the dreamers tell false dreams,
and give empty consolation.
Therefore the people wander
like sheep;
they suffer for lack of a shepherd.

The LORD of History

- 3 My anger is hot against the
shepherds,
and I will punish the leaders;^c for the LORD of hosts cares for his flock, the house of Judah,
and will make them like his proud war-horse.
4 Out of them shall come the cornerstone,
out of them the tent peg,
out of them the battle bow,
out of them every commander.
5 Together they shall be like warriors in battle, trampling the foe in the mud
of the streets;
they shall fight, for the LORD is
with them,
and they shall put to shame the riders on horses.
6 I will strengthen the house
of Judah,
and I will save the house
of Joseph.
I will bring them back because I have compassion on them, and they shall be as though I had not rejected them;
for I am the LORD their God
and I will answer them.
7 Then the people of Ephraim shall become like warriors,

and their hearts shall be glad as
with wine.
Their children shall see it and
rejoice,
their hearts shall exult in
the LORD.

- 8 I will signal for them and gather them in,
for I have redeemed them,
and they shall be as numerous as they were before.
9 Though I scattered them among
the nations,
yet in far countries they shall remember me,
and they shall rear their children and return.
10 I will bring them home from the land of Egypt,
and gather them from Assyria;
I will bring them to the land of Gilead and to Lebanon, until there is no room for
them.
11 They^d shall pass through the sea of distress,
and the waves of the sea shall be struck down,
and all the depths of the Nile dried up.
The pride of Assyria shall be laid low,
and the scepter of Egypt
shall depart.
12 I will make them strong in
the LORD,
and they shall walk in his name,
says the LORD.

date of Zech 1–8. 10.2 The teraphim were part of the apparatus of prophetic prognosticators. They were evidently amulets or metallic images or statues of gods (see Judg 18.14–20; Ezek 21.21; Hos 3.4). The great prophets of the previous century were particularly incensed about the perversion of the prophetic office in the mouths of false prophets (see Jer 14.14; 23.23–32; Ezek 13.8–16; 22.28). 10.3 Because of the failure of Israel's human leaders, the Lord will personally be the shepherd of the house of Judah (see text note c; cf. Ezek 34.11–24, where the leaders of the people are also called “goats”). 10.7 See note on 9.13. 10.10 The theme of the gathering in of the exiles is sounded here. In a veritable new exodus, they will come from Egypt and Assyria until there is no room for them (see note on 2.4).

Two Kinds of Shepherds

4 Thus said the LORD my God: Be a shepherd of the flock doomed to slaughter. ⁵Those who buy them kill them and go unpunished; and those who sell them say, "Blessed be the LORD, for I have become rich"; and their own shepherds have no pity on them. ⁶For I will no longer have pity on the inhabitants of the earth, says the LORD. I will cause them, every one, to fall each into the hand of a neighbor, and each into the hand of the king; and they shall devastate the earth, and I will deliver no one from their hand.

7 So, on behalf of the sheep merchants, I became the shepherd of the flock doomed to slaughter. I took two staffs; one I named Favor, the other I named Unity, and I tended the sheep. ⁸In one month I disposed of the three shepherds, for I had become impatient with them, and they also detested me. ⁹So I said, "I will not be your shepherd. What is to die, let it die; what is to be destroyed, let it be destroyed; and let those that are left devour the flesh of one another!" ¹⁰I took my staff Favor and broke it, annulling the covenant that I had made with all the peoples. ¹¹So it was annulled on that day, and the sheep merchants, who were watching me, knew that it was the word of the LORD. ¹²I then said to them, "If it seems right to you, give me my wages; but if not, keep them." So they weighed out as my wages thirty shekels of silver. ¹³Then the LORD said to me, "Throw it into the treasury"^e—this lordly price at which I was valued by them. So I took the thirty shekels of silver and threw them into the treasury^e in the house of the LORD. ¹⁴Then I broke my second staff Unity, annulling the family ties between Judah and Israel.

15 Then the LORD said to me: Take once more the implements of a worthless shepherd. ¹⁶For I am now raising up in the land a shepherd who does not care for the perishing, or seek the wandering,^f or heal the maimed, or nourish the healthy,^g but devours the flesh of the fat ones, tearing off even their hoofs.

- ¹⁷ Oh, my worthless shepherd, who deserts the flock!
May the sword strike his arm and his right eye!
Let his arm be completely withered,
his right eye utterly blinded!

lay itself open to destruction, in contrast to the invitation to Judah to make itself open to divine nurture (10.1). 11.1 The cedars of Lebanon were prized for their beauty and strength (Ezek 31.2–9). 11.2 Oaks of Bashan, in the region immediately east of the Sea of Galilee, were the source of timber of high durability (see Ezek 27.6). In prophetic polemic, cedars and oaks are used as metaphors for the proud nations (see Isa 2.12–19). 11.7 So . . . I became the shepherd. An unknown individual, perhaps the prophet himself, undertakes to do acts symbolic of the recalcitrance of the Judean community. It is difficult to say who are the sheep merchants for whom he is working. 11.10 I took my staff Favor and broke it no doubt reflects the prophetic indictment of the leadership of the Judean community, perhaps in the years immediately following the reconstruction of the temple but before the first governorship of Nehemiah (445/4 B.C.E.). 11.12–13 Thirty shekels of silver is the figure assigned in Ex 21.32 as indemnity for a slave who had been gored by an ox. This was the fee paid to the traitor Judas (Mt 26.15; 27.9). The Gospel writers surely allude to these verses in reporting that Judas threw down the silver coins in the temple and that the money was used to buy the Potter's Field as a burial place (see text note ^e). 11.14 I broke my second staff Unity suggests despair for the restoration of both the Northern and Southern kingdoms (cf. 9.13; 10.6–7). 11.15–17 An expansion on these verses is to be found in 13.7–9. 11.17 God raises up a worthless shepherd so vicious that he is placed under the terrible curse of maiming and blinding.

The Day of the LORD

12

An Oracle.

The word of the LORD concerning Israel: Thus says the LORD, who stretched out the heavens and founded the earth and formed the human spirit within: ²See, I am about to make Jerusalem a cup of reeling for all the surrounding peoples; it will be against Judah also in the siege against Jerusalem. ³On that day I will make Jerusalem a heavy stone for all the peoples; all who lift it shall grievously hurt themselves. And all the nations of the earth shall come together against it. ⁴On that day, says the LORD, I will strike every horse with panic, and its rider with madness. But on the house of Judah I will keep a watchful eye, when I strike every horse of the peoples with blindness. ⁵Then the clans of Judah shall say to themselves, "The inhabitants of Jerusalem have strength through the LORD of hosts, their God."

⁶ On that day I will make the clans of Judah like a blazing pot on a pile of wood, like a flaming torch among sheaves; and they shall devour to the right and to the left all the surrounding peoples, while Jerusalem shall again be inhabited in its place, in Jerusalem.

⁷ And the LORD will give victory to the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem may not be exalted over that of Judah. ⁸On that day the LORD will shield the inhabitants of Jerusalem so that the feeblest among them on that day shall be like David, and the house of David shall be like God, like the angel of the LORD, at their head. ⁹And on that day I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

Events on the Day of the LORD

¹⁰ And I will pour out a spirit of compassion and supplication on the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that, when they look on the one^h whom they have pierced, they shall mourn for him, as one mourns for an only child, and weep bitterly over him, as one weeps over a firstborn. ¹¹On that day the mourning in Jerusalem will be as great as the mourning for Hadad-rimmon in the plain of Megiddo. ¹²The land shall mourn, each family by itself; the family of the house of David by itself, and their wives by themselves; the family of the house of Nathan by itself, and their wives by themselves; ¹³the family of the house of Levi by itself, and their wives by themselves; the family of the Shimeites by itself, and their wives by themselves; ¹⁴and all the families that are left, each by itself, and their wives by themselves.

h Heb on me

12.1–14.21 The use of the formulas on that day and a day of the LORD seventeen times in these three chapters provides them with a strong thematic unity. Now the focus will be on the culminating day of God's victory as Divine Warrior and on the paradisaical aftermath of that victory. 12.1–13.6 The purge of Jerusalem. This section may be datable to the middle of the fifth century B.C.E. when tensions between early apocalyptic visionary circles and the Jerusalem priests were beginning to grow acute. 12.1–9 These verses presuppose Jerusalem's conflict not only with the nations around it but with Judah itself. 12.1 An oracle. See note on 9.1. 12.2 A cup of reeling. See Ps 75.8. 12.3 Like the stone not cut by human hands of Dan 2.34–45, God's elect city becomes a heavy stone for all the peoples on the "day of the LORD." The motifs of the election of Jerusalem (3.2) and of the house of David (2 Sam 7.16) recur in the thinking of Second Zechariah. 12.8–9 The motif of the great battle against the nations gathered before Jerusalem is a favorite one in late prophetic eschatology (Isa 63.1–6; Ezek 38.14–23) and is taken up again in apocalyptic texts (see Joel 3.11–14; Rev 14.14–20).

12.10 The one whom they have pierced. The Hebrew text (see text note h) suggests that the prophet himself (see 13.6), or even the Lord, might be this "suffering servant" (see Isa 52.13–53.12; Mt 23.37; Jn 19.34–37); other ancient versions point to an unknown victim of intracommunity strife. 12.11 The martyrdom of the prophetic/messianic figure leads to a day of mourning in Jerusalem. If Hadad-rimmon is taken as the name of a place in the region of Megiddo and not that of a fertility god of Canaan as some commentators prefer, it should probably be identified with the Rimmon of Josh 19.13 (not that of Zech 14.10). The mourning alluded to in that case might be that for the Judean king Josiah, killed on the plain of Megiddo in 609 B.C.E., which was made customary by the prophet Jeremiah and the 13 On that day a fountain shall be opened for the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, to cleanse them from sin and impurity.

² On that day, says the LORD of hosts, I will cut off the names of the idols from the land, so that they shall be remembered no more; and also I will remove from the land the prophets and the unclean spirit. ³ And if any prophets appear again, their fathers and mothers who bore them will say to them, "You shall not live, for you speak lies in the name of the LORD"; and their fathers and their mothers who bore them shall pierce them through when they prophesy. ⁴ On that day the prophets will be ashamed, every one, of their visions when they prophesy; they will not put on a hairy mantle in order to deceive, ⁵ but each of them will say, "I am no prophet, I am a tiller of the soil; for the land has been my possession since my youth." ⁶ And if anyone asks them, "What are these wounds on your chest?"^j the answer will be "The wounds I received in the house of my friends."

My Sword Against My Shepherd

- ⁷ "Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, against the man who is my associate,"
says the LORD of hosts.

Strike the shepherd, that the sheep may be scattered;
I will turn my hand against the little ones.

- ⁸ In the whole land, says the LORD, two-thirds shall be cut off and perish,
and one-third shall be left alive.
⁹ And I will put this third into the fire,
refine them as one refines silver,
and test them as gold is tested.
They will call on my name,
and I will answer them.
I will say, "They are my people";
and they will say, "The LORD is
our God."

The "Apocalypse of Zechariah"

14 See, a day is coming for the LORD, when the plunder taken from you will be divided in your midst. ² For I will gather all the nations against Jerusalem to battle, and the city shall be taken and the houses looted and the women raped; half the city shall go into exile, but the rest of the people shall not be cut off from the city. ³ Then the LORD will go forth and fight against those nations as when he fights on a day of battle. ⁴ On singers (see 2 Chr 35.20–27). 13.1 The fountain is the first of two references in Zechariah to the river of God that flows from the Jerusalem sanctuary for the cleansing of the people (14.8; Ps 46.4; Ezek 47.1–12; Joel 3.18; Rev 22.1–2; in Jn 4.14; 7.37–38, Jesus compares himself to this life-giving stream). 13.4 Hairy mantle. None of the usual tricks of the prophetic trade will find favor on the "day of the LORD." Perhaps vv. 2–6 are intended to be a rejection of prophetic guilds associated with the temple; however, the denial that the wounds visible on the chests of the prophets are evidences of punishment for prophesying (v. 6) hints at a general repression of all forms of prophecy. 13.5 I am no prophet. Here, near the end of the prophetic period, the words of Amos, the very first writing prophet, are echoed (Am 7.14). Evidently both Amos and Second Zechariah were eager to dissociate themselves from the prophetic guilds.

13.7–9 A continuation of 11.15–17. 13.7 The man who is [God's] associate might be the prophet who serves at God's behest (Dan 8.16–17), an angel (Dan 9.21), or even the messianic leader of the remnant of Judah in the time of God's act of judgment (Dan 7.13). In any case, the suffering of this "man" opens the way for the purification and final salvation of the people (see Mt 26.31; Mk 14.27). 13.9 See Mal 3.2–4; also Isa 48.10).

14.1–21 Because this chapter achieves the most radical, even cosmic, vision of change on the "day of the LORD," it is thought to be the latest in the ongoing series of oracles and visions in Second Zechariah. It may be as late as 420 B.C.E. 14.1 On the day of the Lord, the plunder taken from you will be divided in your midst. This is not the motif of the despoiling of the oppressor nations by Israel (see 2.9; Ex 12.36; Ezek 38–39; Nah 2.9; Hag 2.7–8), but rather one of the details of the terror to be experienced by those Judeans who will have to endure the "day of the LORD's" victory. 14.3 See note on 12.8–9. 14.4 The Mount of Olives shall be split in two. The cosmic dimension of this last vision of Zechariah implies changes in the very structure of the earth itself. Perhaps that day his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives, which lies before Jerusalem on the east; and the Mount of Olives shall be split in two from east to west by a very wide valley; so that one half of the Mount shall withdraw northward, and the other half southward. ⁵And you shall flee by the valley of the LORD's mountain,^k for the valley between the mountains shall reach to Azal;^l and you shall flee as you fled from the earthquake in the days of King Uzziah of Judah. Then the LORD my God will come, and all the holy ones with him.

6 On that day there shall not be^m either cold or frost.ⁿ ⁷And there shall be continuous day (it is known to the LORD), not day and not night, for at evening time there shall be light.

8 On that day living waters shall flow out from Jerusalem, half of them to the eastern sea and half of them to the western sea; it shall continue in summer as in winter.

9 And the LORD will become king over all the earth; on that day the LORD will be one and his name one.

10 The whole land shall be turned into a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem. But Jerusalem shall remain aloft on its site from the Gate of Benjamin to the place of the former gate, to the Corner Gate, and from the Tower of Hananel to the king's wine presses. ¹¹And it shall be inhabited, for never again shall it be doomed to destruction; Jerusalem shall abide in security.

12 This shall be the plague with which the LORD will strike all the peoples that wage war against Jerusalem: their flesh shall rot while they are still on their feet; their eyes shall rot in their sockets, and their tongues shall rot in their mouths. ¹³On that day a great panic from the LORD shall fall on them, so that each will seize the hand of a neighbor, and the hand of the one will be raised against the hand of the other; ¹⁴even Judah will fight at Jerusalem. And the wealth of all the surrounding nations shall be collected — gold, silver, and garments in great abundance. ¹⁵And a plague like this plague shall fall on the horses, the mules, the camels, the donkeys, and whatever animals may be in those camps.

16 Then all who survive of the nations that have come against Jerusalem shall go up year after year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the festival of booths.^o ¹⁷If any of the families of the earth do not go up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, there will be no rain upon them. ¹⁸And if the family of Egypt do not go up and present themselves, then on them shall^p come the plague that the LORD inflicts on the nations that do not go up to keep the festival of booths.^o ¹⁹Such shall be the punishment of Egypt and the punishment of all the nations that do not go up to keep the festival of booths.^o

20 On that day there shall be inscribed on the bells of the horses, "Holy to the

by their hugeness and weight, the divine feet are sufficient to alter the landscape of Jerusalem. 14.5 The earthquake. See Am 1.1. The phrase all the holy ones with him suggests that the Lord wins divine warfare only with a full compliment of angelic forces (cf. Dan 7.22). 14.6–7 The displacement of the sun by the glory of God is a motif used by the nearly contemporary "Isaiah Apocalypse" (Isa 24–27; see also Isa 24.23; 60.19–20; Rev 22.5). 14.8 Living waters. See note on 13.1. 14.9 The LORD will be one and his name one suggests the achievement of that utter undividedness of loyalty anticipated in the Shema (Deut 6.4). The universal respect of the name of the Lord, also alluded to in Mal 1.11, is featured in the doxologies offered to the Lord by foreign kings throughout Dan 1–6. See also Rev 11.15–18; 15.3–4. 14.11 Shall be inhabited. See 2.4; Joel 3.20. The lifting of the curse pronounced in Zech 11.6 leads to the blessing of progeny promised to a covenant-obedient people in Deut 28.11. 14.14 See notes on 12.8–9; 14.1. 14.15 Those who fight against Jerusalem will experience a fate like those who oppose the covenant of God (Deut 28.20–22). 14.16–21 In the tranquility of the new age that lies beyond the "day of the LORD," the remnants of the other nations become Judaized and keep the annual pilgrimage festival of booths (see Lev 23.39–43). The vision has positive meaning for the other nations because they can find succor of the Lord's presence (see Isa 19.16–25). 14.20–21 Bells, bowls, and cooking pots will all achieve ritual purity through the direct activity of God rather than through priestly consecration (cf. Lev 27.30–33). In contrast to Joel 3.17, this vision anticipates the gathering of all

LORD." And the cooking pots in the house of the LORD shall be as holy as^q the bowls in front of the altar; ²¹and every cooking pot in Jerusalem and Judah shall be sacred to the LORD of hosts, so that all who

that the temple, the restoration of which was such a primary concern of Zechariah son of Berechiah, will finally become fit to serve as the worship center for the whole world in the new age.

MALACHI

Date and Historical Context

ALTHOUGH MALACHI IS THE LAST BOOK of the Hebrew canon of prophets, it was by no means the last of the prophetic books to be written. The criticism of temple behavior in 1.6–14; 2.11 makes clear that the Jerusalem temple is functioning once again. This means the book came into being after the time of Haggai and the author of Zech 1–8, and after the temple was rededicated in 516/5 B.C.E. (see Ezra 6.15). The fact that the sacrificial worship of the temple had had time to fall into disorder and the deep concern with intermarriage with foreign women (2.10–17), which this book shares with Ezra and Nehemiah, both suggest that it was written shortly before Nehemiah's first return in 445/4 B.C.E. during the reign of Artaxerxes I (465–424 B.C.E.)

Name, Authorship, and Message

Like the book of Haggai, Malachi gives us no personal information about its author. Even its name, “Malachi,” may not be a personal name at all but simply a title, “My messenger” (see 3.1). The name is appropriate, however, for it is the task of this late prophetic book to bring two messages: God is displeased with the lack of piety in the community gathered around the temple (1.6–2.16; 3.6–12); and God is about to send a messenger who will reunite and purify all of Israel prior to the “great and terrible day of the LORD” (4.5). The book ends on that eschatological note; in the Christian canon it is followed immediately by the Gospel announcement of the birth of Jesus. The earliest Gospel, Mark, even opens with the preaching of the “messenger” John the Baptist, whom Jesus called “Elijah who is to come” (Mt 11.14; see also Mk 9.13). This juxtaposition suggests that in early Christian eyes, the advent of the Christ was the first of the culminating events of history promised by the prophet “Malachi.”

Social Location

Unlike such early prophets as Amos and Hosea, the late prophetic book of Malachi is not simply the voice of the observant masses against a corrupt priesthood, though it readily indicts the priesthood for its failures (1.6-2.9). It identifies itself with Levitical priestly circles (2.4-6) and believes deeply in the temple, true worship, and the payment of tithes as means for obtaining the blessing of the land (3.10-12). Like Haggai and Zech 1-8 in the previous century, it is the work of a "central" prophet who worked among the ruling circles of his people, rather than at the periphery. The book fulfills its task in six disputations, followed by two brief appendices. W. Sibley Towner

The Rejection of Edom

2 I have loved you, says the LORD. But you say, "How have you loved us?" Is not Esau Jacob's brother? says the LORD. Yet I have loved Jacob³ but I have hated Esau; I have made his hill country a desolation and his heritage a desert for jackals. 4 If Edom says, "We are shattered but we will rebuild the ruins," the LORD of hosts says: They may build, but I will tear down, until they are called the wicked country, the people with whom the LORD is angry forever. 5 Your own eyes shall see this, and you shall say, "Great is the LORD beyond the borders of Israel!"

The Temple Priesthood

6 A son honors his father, and servants their master. If then I am a father, where is the honor due me? And if I am a master, where is the respect due me? says the LORD of hosts to you, O priests, who despise my name. You say, "How have we despised your name?" 7 By offering polluted food on my altar. And you say,

"How have we polluted it?"^b By thinking that the LORD's table may be despised. 8 When you offer blind animals in sacrifice, is that not wrong? And when you offer those that are lame or sick, is that not wrong? Try presenting that to your governor; will he be pleased with you or show you favor? says the LORD of hosts. 9 And now implore the favor of God, that he may be gracious to us. The fault is yours. Will he show favor to any of you? says the LORD of hosts. 10 Oh, that someone among you would shut the temple^c doors, so that you would not kindle fire on my altar in vain! I have no pleasure in you, says the LORD of hosts, and I will not accept an offering from your hands. 11 For from the rising of the sun to its setting my name is great among the nations, and in every place incense is offered to my name, and a pure offering; for my name is great among the nations, says the LORD of hosts. 12 But you profane it when you say that the Lord's table is polluted, and the food for it^d may be despised. 13 "What a weariness this is," you say, and you sniff at me,^e says the LORD of hosts. 1.1 Superscription. See note on Zech 9.1. 1.2-5 First oracle. This section is introduced in the distinctive question-and-answer style of Malachi, a mode of speech also found quite prominently in Haggai (Hag 1.4-6, 7-11; 2.3-5, 15-16). For other prophetic oracles against Edom see Isa 34; 63.1-6; Jer 49.7-22; Ezek 25.12-14; and most of the book of Obadiah. 1.2 Esau Jacob's brother. See Gen 25.24-34. Esau is identified as the ancestor of the Edomites in Gen 36.1. 1.5 The Lord's sovereignty even beyond the borders of Israel is a theme beloved to the exilic and post-exilic prophets: see Isa 19.23-25; 46.1-2; Ezek 1.1-3; Zech 9.1-8; Jon 3-4.

1.6-2.9 Second oracle. An indictment of the Jerusalemite priesthood for its failures. 1.8 Blind animals and those that are lame or sick were not acceptable for sacrifice (see Lev 22.17-30; Deut 15.21). 1.10 Shut the temple doors suggests that no worship at all would be preferable to stingy, grudging offerings. 1.11 In a universal vision of the worship of Israel's Lord, even the gentile nations are held to be able to worship the lence or is lame or sick, and this you bring as your offering! Shall I accept that from your hand? says the LORD. ¹⁴Cursed be the cheat who has a male in the flock and vows to give it, and yet sacrifices to the Lord what is blemished; for I am a great King, says the LORD of hosts, and my name is revered among the nations.

2 And now, O priests, this command is for you. ²If you will not listen, if you will not lay it to heart to give glory to my name, says the LORD of hosts, then I will send the curse on you and I will curse your blessings; indeed I have already cursed them,^f because you do not lay it to heart. ³I will rebuke your offspring, and spread dung on your faces, the dung of your offerings, and I will put you out of my presence.^g

4 Know, then, that I have sent this command to you, that my covenant with Levi may hold, says the LORD of hosts. ⁵My covenant with him was a covenant of life and well-being, which I gave him; this called for reverence, and he revered me and stood in awe of my name. ⁶True instruction was in his mouth, and no wrong was found on his lips. He walked with me in integrity and uprightness, and he turned many from iniquity. ⁷For the lips of a priest should guard knowledge, and people should seek instruction from his mouth, for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts. ⁸But you have turned aside from the way; you have caused many to stumble by your instruction; you have corrupted the covenant of Levi, says the LORD of hosts, ⁹and so I make you despised and abased before all the people, inasmuch as you have not kept my ways but have shown partiality in your instruction.

God Hates Faithlessness

10 Have we not all one father? Has not one God created us? Why then are we faithless to one another, profaning the covenant of our ancestors? ¹¹Judah has been faithless, and abomination has been committed in Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah has profaned the sanctuary of the LORD, which he loves, and has married the daughter of a foreign god. ¹²May the LORD cut off from the tents of Jacob anyone who does this—any to witness^h or answer, or to bring an offering to the LORD of hosts.

13 And this you do as well: You cover the LORD's altar with tears, with weeping and groaning because he no longer regards the offering or accepts it with favor at your hand. ¹⁴You ask, "Why does he not?" Because the LORD was a witness between you and the wife of your youth, to whom you have been faithless, though she is your companion and your wife by covenant. ¹⁵Did not one God make her?ⁱ Both flesh and spirit are his.^j And what does the one God^k desire? Godly offspring. So look to yourselves, and do not let anyone be faithless to the wife of his youth. ¹⁶For I hate^l divorce, says the LORD, the God of Israel, and covering one's garment with violence, says the LORD of hosts. So take heed to yourselves and do not be faithless.

Lord in holiness (see Ps 50.1). 1.14 See Ps 102.15. 2.2 It is the task of priests to pronounce blessings (Num 6.22–27). Malachi's curse against the priests turns their benedictions into anathemas. 2.3 The Septuagint reads "I will cut off your arm" instead of I will rebuke your offspring, perhaps as a way of stressing that the priests will not be able to perform their duty of pronouncing blessings with upraised hands. The dung of offerings was supposed to have been burned outside the camp (see Ex 29.14). 2.4–6 Because the priestly tribe of Levi supported Moses against the Aaronites in the incident of the golden calf (Ex 32.25–28), the Levites were always held in esteem by the prophets. 2.4 The covenant with Levi is nowhere described, but it is implied in Jer 33.21. 2.7 Lev 10.11 underscores the duty of priests to teach the covenant tradition, but this is the only place in the Bible in which the priest is described as the messenger of the LORD of hosts.

2.10–16 Third oracle. An indictment of the people for their conduct toward one another. 2.13–16 This is the strongest condemnation of divorce expressed anywhere in the Hebrew Bible. While divorce is permitted by Deut 24.1–4, the Bible always regards marriage as a holy covenant (Gen 2.24; 31.50; Prov 2.17; Eph 5.21–33). 2.17–3.5 Fourth oracle. 2.17 In words reminis-wearied him?" By saying, "All who do evil are good in the sight of the LORD, and he delights in them." Or by asking, "Where is the God of justice?"

3 See, I am sending my messenger to prepare the way before me, and the Lord whom you seek will suddenly come to his temple. The messenger of the covenant in whom you delight—indeed, he is coming, says the LORD of hosts.² But who can endure the day of his coming, and who can stand when he appears?

For he is like a refiner's fire and like fullers' soap; ³he will sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he will purify the descendants of Levi and refine them like gold and silver, until they present offerings to the LORD in righteousness.^m ⁴Then the offering of Judah and Jerusalem will be pleasing to the LORD as in the days of old and as in former years.

⁵ Then I will draw near to you for judgment; I will be swift to bear witness against the sorcerers, against the adulterers, against those who swear falsely, against those who oppress the hired workers in their wages, the widow and the orphan, against those who thrust aside the alien, and do not fear me, says the LORD of hosts.

Blessings Will Flow

6 For I the LORD do not change; therefore you, O children of Jacob, have not perished. ⁷Ever since the days of your ancestors you have turned aside from my statutes and have not kept them. Return to me, and I will return to you, says the LORD of hosts. But you say, "How shall we return?"

8 Will anyone rob God? Yet you are robbing me! But you say, "How are we robbing you?" In your tithes and offerings! ⁹You are cursed with a curse, for you are robbing me—the whole nation of you! ¹⁰Bring the full tithe into the storehouse, so that there may be food in my house, and thus put me to the test, says the LORD of hosts; see if I will not open the windows of heaven for you and pour down for you an overflowing blessing. ¹¹I will rebuke the locustⁿ for you, so that it will not destroy the produce of your soil; and your vine in the field shall not be barren, says the LORD of hosts. ¹²Then all nations will count you happy, for you will be a land of delight, says the LORD of hosts.

Those Written in the Book cent of the skepticism of Eccl 7.15; 8.14–15, the questioners challenge God's intention to vindicate goodness and to be just. 3.1–4 Fully cleansed by the messenger of the covenant, the Levitical priests will at last be able to perform the priestly office in righteousness. This will open the way for blessings to flow, just as was promised by Haggai at the time of the reconsecration of the temple (Hag 2.19). 3.2 See Mt 3.10–12. 3.5 God promises to be swift to bear witness (see Zeph 3.8) against all those who violate the covenant tradition. The list of sins is typical of the prophetic indictment of evildoers (see Jer 7.9; note on Zech 7.9–10). Because God is "Father of orphans and protector of widows" (Ps 68.5), the day of the Lord brings retribution to any who abuse these who are marginalized (Zeph 3.1–5).

3.6–12 Fifth oracle. Repentance issuing in right action will restore God's blessings. 3.8 The law required that God receive the first tenth of the produce of the land (see Lev 27.30; Num 18.21–24); in Deut 14.28 the tithe of every third year is given to the support of widows, orphans, and Levitical priests. 3.10 At the waters of Meribah the people "tested" God in the matter of the manna, causing God to be angry (Ps 95.8–11). God also "tests" people to determine whether they are wicked or righteous (Ps 11.4–5). Here God invites Israel to put me to the test. 3.12 Judah is assured that the test will vindicate God and that all nations will count you happy (see Pss 41.2; 72.17; Isa 61.6–9; 62.4). The charge that the Lord delights in evildoers (2.17) is here refuted by the nations who once again prove to be authentic witnesses to the truth about God's blessing (cf. 1.14).

3.13–4.3 Sixth oracle. God takes note of the faithful and will save them on the day of judgment. 3.14–15 See note on 2.17. Conventional wisdom held that the righteous prosper and evildoers fail (Ps 1.3; Prov 28.13). However, the tragedy of exile (see Lam 1.5), the ambivalence of the Preacher (see Eccl 8.10–13), and the pessimism of apocalyptic about history (see Dan 8.25; 11.36) all concede that the wicked may prosper. Malachi tacitly concedes this as well, even when they put God to the test (see 3.10); but their success is only fore the LORD of hosts? ¹⁵Now we count the arrogant happy; evildoers not only prosper, but when they put God to the test they escape.”

¹⁶ Then those who revered the LORD spoke with one another. The LORD took note and listened, and a book of remembrance was written before him of those who revered the LORD and thought on his name. ¹⁷They shall be mine, says the LORD of hosts, my special possession on the day when I act, and I will spare them as parents spare their children who serve them. ¹⁸Then once more you shall see the difference between the righteous and the wicked, between one who serves God and one who does not serve him.

4^o See, the day is coming, burning like an oven, when all the arrogant and all evildoers will be stubble; the day that comes shall burn them up, says the LORD of hosts, so that it will leave them neither root nor branch. ²But for you who revere my name the sun of righteousness shall rise, with healing in its wings. You shall go out leaping like calves from the stall. ³And you shall tread down the wicked, for they will be ashes under the soles of your feet, on the day when I act, says the LORD of hosts.

temporary. 3.16 Biblical tradition knows of two, or even three, heavenly record books. The book hinted at in Ps 139.16 seems to be a book of destiny in which the fate of the individual was written down before the beginning of time (cf. Dan 10.21; Rev 13.8; 20.15; 21.27). Here, however, the book of remembrance is juridical in character. In it the obedient deeds done by individuals during their lifetimes are recorded (see Ex 32.32–33; Ps 40.7 [cited in Heb 10.7]; 56.8; 69.28; Phil 4.3; Rev 3.5). Two references to “the books” in Dan 7.10; 12.1 could be read either way; and in the great judgment scene of Rev 20.12, both categories of books are opened together with a third one, the “book of life.” 3.17 A special possession is the title given Israel in one of the most famous election scenes in the Bible, Ex 19.5. 4.1 The English ch. 4 is 3.19–24 in the Hebrew. 4.2 For the sun of right- eousness, see Ps 84.11. One of the most familiar symbols of deity in Egyptian and Mesopotamian religion is the winged solar disk. Although God is not directly described here as a winged disk, the implication is that God will rise on the “day of the LORD” to effect justice and vindication for the righteous.

4.4–6 Two of Israel’s greatest covenant mediators are mentioned in the concluding postscripts to the book. 4.5–6 Now the “messenger” of 3.1 is identified with Elijah the prophet, who, because he did not die but was carried into heaven (2 Kings 2.11), was regarded as ready to return as the harbinger of the day of the Lord. In the Gospel tradition the identification is carried further to John the Baptist (see Mt 11.13; 17.9–13; Mk 6.14–15; Lk 1.17).

TOBIT

TOBIT, A MULTIFACETED PIECE of historical fiction about the sufferings and healing of a pious Israelite and his family, is one of the most remarkable texts to have survived from Jewish antiquity. In complex ways it offers precious evidence about the religious, intellectual, and social worlds of the people of Israel in the last centuries before the common era.

A Religious Text

Theodicy, the vindication of God's justice, is the book's central motif. Tobit, the story's protagonist, is by every account a pious and righteous Israelite who does not deserve the intense suffering he experiences. Nor does his young relative Sarah. The situation is different for the nation as a whole; Israel has been exiled because of its apostasy, and the prophets' predictions that the nation will return to the land promised to Abraham and his descendants remain unfulfilled. The author offers a twofold explanation of unjust suffering. In some cases, an unseen demonic realm causes the innocent to suffer; in others, God sends suffering to those who are righteous, but not perfect, as a temporary means of chastisement. The author solves the problem of suffering by appealing to the future. As in Job, things end well for the righteous sufferer. For Israel, the prophecies will be fulfilled when the nation's chastisement at the hands of more sinful nations is complete. But in everything a sovereign and just God is active, orchestrating human events for the good of those who are pious and righteous.

The author makes these points by means of a worldview in which visible and invisible realms interpenetrate. Readers, who are allowed to see activity in both realms, can also empathize with the real-life characters, who are oblivious to God's beneficent presence and activity.

Tobit appropriates and modifies elements in the religious traditions that were then becoming Israel's scripture. Details in the narrative recall the patriarchal stories of Genesis (Sarah's altercation with Hagar, Gen 21; Eliezer's journey for Isaac's bride, Gen 24). Tobit's piety is based on commandments and injunctions in the Torah and a wisdom tradition (attested also in Sirach) spun out of the Torah. The books of the prophets, especially Second and Third Isaiah (Isa 40–66), are considered reliable forecasts of God's future for the nation. Events and themes in chs. 1–2 echo the Mesopotamian court tales preserved in Dan 1–6 as well as the pagan story of Ahikar, which Jews and Christians adopted as their own. With its demons and archangels, its view of divine sovereignty and predestination, and its appeal to the future revelation of God's justice, Tobit's narrative also employs motifs and devices at home in apocalypses like Daniel and 1 Enoch.

A Window into a Social World

Because it is a narrative about real-life characters rather than an apocalypse, the book offers a window into its author's world and some of its customs relating to family life, marriage, burial, the eating of meals, relationships between parents and children, inequalities between the sexes, elements of religious ritual, and the obligations of the rich to the poor.

Literary Aspects

The complexity of Tobit is most obvious in its use of literary genres and themes. As a whole it is a fictional narrative about life in biblical times. It differs from its sketchier narrative counterparts in the Bible in that its characters are developed with some attention to the complexity of their emotions and motivations. Narrative tension is maintained as scenes alternate between Nineveh and Ecbatana. An element of humor helps hold readers' attention and reminds them that there is a fine line between the sublime and the ridiculous. The narrative is nuanced by its use of other genres familiar from biblical and related literature: prayers and hymns, an account of the appearance of a divine being (epiphany), two testaments containing proverbial wisdom, and a prediction of future events similar to historical apocalypses. These genres enrich the narrative and embody elements from the author's social, intellectual, and religious worlds.

Complicating an assessment of this sophisticated piece of literature are its folkloric roots, evident in motifs also found elsewhere in ancient tales about "the dangerous bride" and "the grateful dead." These folkloric elements, including a playful touch of magic, stand in tension with the story's theological reflection and the intellectual strains of its wisdom tradition. The mix reminds one that this story about a wealthy member of the royal court is also about ordinary people—their experiences and expectations, woes and worries, superstitions and naïveté. In this complexity and the artistry with which it is presented lies the story's appeal.

Date, Place of Origin, and Language

The many historical inaccuracies in the story indicate that it is a pseudonymous text written long after the time it portrays. The date of its composition is limited by its mention of the rebuilding of the temple (515 B.C.E.) and its omission of any reference to the persecution of the Jews under Antiochus IV Epiphanes (168 B.C.E.). Tobit is most likely to have been composed in the fourth or third century B.C.E.

The diaspora setting of the story, which underlies its many concerns about interactions between Israelites and Gentiles, suggests that it was written either in the Diaspora or in a predominantly gentile setting.

Tobit was composed in Aramaic. Textual fragments of the Aramaic and of a Hebrew translation were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls. The story in its entirety has been preserved in manuscripts of the Greek OT.

Function

The story's use of wisdom genres and its repeated assertions that God acts for good even in adverse circumstances indicate that the author wishes to encourage readers to trust and hope in the enactment of God's mercy in their personal lives and through the gathering of the Diaspora and the realization of God's reign over all humanity. George W. E. Nickelsburg

1 This book tells the story of Tobit son of Tobiel son of Hananiël son of Aduei son of Gabael son of Raphael son of Raguel of the descendants^a of Asiel, of the tribe of Naphtali, ²who in the days of King Shalmaneser^b of the Assyrians was taken into captivity from Thisbe, which is to the south of Kedesh Naphtali in Upper Galilee, above Asher toward the west, and north of Phogor.

Tobit's Piety in Apostate Israel

3 I, Tobit, walked in the ways of truth and righteousness all the days of my life. I performed many acts of charity for my kindred and my people who had gone with me in exile to Nineveh in the land of the Assyrians. ⁴When I was in my own country, in the land of Israel, while I was still a young man, the whole tribe of my ancestor Naphtali deserted the house of David and Jerusalem. This city had been chosen from among all the tribes of Israel, where all the tribes of Israel should offer sacrifice and where the temple, the dwelling of God, had been consecrated and established for all generations forever.

5 All my kindred and our ancestral house of Naphtali sacrificed to the calf^c that King Jeroboam of Israel had erected in Dan and on all the mountains of Galilee.

1.1–2 This superscription provides the protagonist with a genealogy and place of origin. Cf. Zeph 1.1. 1.1 Tobit is the Greek form of the Hebrew Tobi ("my good"), which may be an abbreviation for Tobiah ("Yahweh is my good"), the name of Tobit's son (Tobias in Greek). The name is appropriate to the story. 1.2 The locations of Thisbe and Phogor are uncertain. Asher is probably Hazor.

1.3–9 Tobit is a faithful and righteous exception among his compatriots, who continue Jeroboam's apostasy (1 Kings 12.25–33). 1.3 Israelite wisdom tradition describes human conduct as walking in the ways of truth and righteousness or in the ways of wrongdoing (4.5). The Northern Kingdom, Israel, was exiled to the land of the Assyrians in 722 B.C.E. under Sargon II. 1.4–5 Because God had chosen Jerusalem as the unique site for Israelite worship (Deut 12.5–7), Jeroboam's sin was apostasy. 1.5 Dan lies eleven miles from Kedesh (v. 2), not far from Tobit's home. It continued to be a site of religious activity long after the exile; cf. 1 Enoch 13.7–10, a text contemporary with the book of Tobit.

lee. ⁶But I alone went often to Jerusalem for the festivals, as it is prescribed for all Israel by an everlasting decree. I would hurry off to Jerusalem with the first fruits of the crops and the firstlings of the flock, the tithes of the cattle, and the first shearings of the sheep. ⁷I would give these to the priests, the sons of Aaron, at the altar; likewise the tenth of the grain, wine, olive oil, pomegranates, figs, and the rest of the fruits to the sons of Levi who ministered at Jerusalem. Also for six years I would save up a second tenth in money and go and distribute it in Jerusalem. ⁸A third tenth^d I would give to the orphans and widows and to the converts who had attached themselves to Israel. I would bring it and give it to them in the third year, and we would eat it according to the ordinance decreed concerning it in the law of Moses and according to the instructions of Deborah, the mother of my father Tobiel,^e for my father had died and left me an orphan. ⁹When I became a man I married a woman,^f a member of our own family, and by her I became the father of a son whom I named Tobias.

Tobit's Success in Shalmaneser's Court

10 After I was carried away captive to Assyria and came as a captive to Nineveh, everyone of my kindred and my people ate the food of the Gentiles, ¹¹but I kept myself from eating the food of the Gentiles. ¹²Because I was mindful of God with all my heart, ¹³the Most High gave me favor and good standing with Shalmaneser,^g and I used to buy everything he needed. ¹⁴Until his death I used to go into Media, and buy for him there. While in the country of Media I left bags of silver worth ten talents in trust with Gabael, the brother of Gabri. ¹⁵But when Shalmaneser^g died, and his son Sennacherib reigned in his place, the highways into Media became unsafe and I could no longer go there.

Tobit Persecuted and Restored

16 In the days of Shalmaneser^g I performed many acts of charity to my kindred, those of my tribe. ¹⁷I would give my food to the hungry and my clothing to the naked; and if I saw the dead body of any of my people thrown out behind the wall of Nineveh, I would bury it. ¹⁸I also buried any whom King Sennacherib put to death when he came fleeing from Judea in those days of judgment that the king of heaven executed upon him because of his blasphemies. For in his anger he put to death many Israelites; but I would secretly remove the bodies and bury them. So when Sennacherib looked for them he could not find them. ¹⁹Then one of the Ninevites went and informed the king about me, that I was burying them; so I hid myself. But when I realized that the king knew about me and that I was being

1.6–8 Tobit's faithfulness to the Torah is evident in his festival pilgrimages to Jerusalem (Deut 16.16–17; cf. Lk 2.41) and his presentation to the priests of first fruits of the crops (Deut 26.1–11), firstlings (Ex 13.12), tithes of the cattle (Lev 27.32), first shearings (Deut 18.4), a tenth of his crops (Lev 27.30; Deut 14.22–23), a second tenth turned to money (Deut 14.25), and a third tenth, which he distributed to the orphans and widows and to the converts (Deut 14.28–29). 1.9 Endogamy, marriage to a member of our own family (not just to an Israelite), is a major concern in Tobit; see 4.12–13.

1.10–22 Tobit's promotion in a Mesopotamian court, his persecution for pious acts, and his restoration echo Dan 1–6, Esther, and the story of Ahikar. 1.10 Nineveh was the Assyrian capital. 1.11–13 As in vv. 5–9, Tobit's piety is exceptional. Like Daniel, he is rewarded for avoiding unclean food (Dan 1.8–20; cf. Lev 11). 1.14 On Media as a site of Israelite settlement, cf.

2 Kings 17.6. The deposit of silver with Gabael is one of several providential events in the story and prepares the way for a major turn in the plot (4.1). 1.15 This section is marked by a number of historical inaccuracies. Shalmaneser V died during the siege of Samaria; his successors were his brothers Sargon II (not mentioned here or in 2 Kings 17) and Sennacherib (cf. 1.18–20). 1.16–22 Tobit's piety, like Daniel's, leads to his persecution (see Dan 3; 6). 1.17 On the obligation to give . . . food to the hungry and . . . clothing to the naked, see 4.16; Mt 25.35–36. 1.18 Sennacherib invaded Judea (2 Kings 19.35–37) in 701 B.C.E., twenty years before his death (cf. forty days, v. 21). Exposure of bodies was a common means of showing contempt (cf. 1 Kings 21.24; 2 Kings 9.30–37; Ps 79.2–3). Burial of the dead is a major motif in Tobit (2.3–8; 4.3–4; 6.15; 8.12; 14.10–13). 1.19 Punishment for burying the king's victims recalls Sophocles' Antigone.

searched for to be put to death, I was afraid and ran away. ²⁰Then all my property was confiscated; nothing was left to me that was not taken into the royal treasury except my wife Anna and my son Tobias.

²¹ But not forty^h days passed before two of Sennacherib'sⁱ sons killed him, and they fled to the mountains of Ararat, and his son Esar-haddon^j reigned after him. He appointed Ahikar, the son of my brother Hanael^k over all the accounts of his kingdom, and he had authority over the entire administration. ²²Ahikar interceded for me, and I returned to Nineveh. Now Ahikar was chief cupbearer, keeper of the signet, and in charge of administration of the accounts under King Sennacherib of Assyria; so Esar-haddon^j reappointed him. He was my nephew and so a close relative.

Tobit Blinded Because of His Piety

2 Then during the reign of Esar-haddon^j I returned home, and my wife Anna and my son Tobias were restored to me. At our festival of Pentecost, which is the sacred festival of weeks, a good dinner was prepared for me and I reclined to eat. ²When the table was set for me and an abundance of food placed before me, I said to my son Tobias, "Go, my child, and bring whatever poor person you may find of our people among the exiles in Nineveh, who is wholeheartedly mindful of God,^l and he shall eat together with me. I will wait for you, until you come back." ³So Tobias went to look for some poor person of our people.

When he had returned he said, "Father!" And I replied, "Here I am, my child." Then he went on to say, "Look, father, one of our own people has been murdered and thrown into the market place, and now he lies there strangled." ⁴Then I sprang up, left the dinner before even tasting it, and removed the body^m from the squareⁿ and laid it^m in one of the rooms until sunset when I might bury it.^m ⁵When I returned, I washed myself and ate my food in sorrow. ⁶Then I remembered the prophecy of Amos, how he said against Bethel,^o

"Your festivals shall be turned into mourning,
and all your songs into lamentation."

And I wept.

⁷ When the sun had set, I went and dug a grave and buried him. ⁸And my neighbors laughed and said, "Is he still not afraid? He has already been hunted down to be put to death for doing this, and he ran away; yet here he is again burying the dead!" ⁹That same night I washed myself and went into my courtyard and slept by the wall of the courtyard; and my face was uncovered because of the heat. ¹⁰I did not know that there were sparrows on the wall; their fresh droppings fell into my eyes and produced white films. I went to physicians to be healed, but the more they treated me with

1.21 Ahikar was the protagonist in a popular Mesopotamian story preserved by Jews and Christians; however, it makes no mention of Tobit. Other details of the story are reflected in 1.22; 2.10; 11.18; 14.10.

2.1–10 Tobit's pious concern for others—the poor and the unburied—again results in his suffering. 2.1 In addition to food laws (1.11), Tobit observes Israelite festivals, here the harvest festival of Pentecost (Deut 16.10). 2.2 On the obligation to feed the poor, cf. Lk 14.12–24; 16.19–31. For Tobit the festival must be shared with one who is wholeheartedly mindful of God, as he is (cf. 1.12). Wholehearted love and obedience of God is a cliché; cf. Deut 30.2, 6, and allusions to this Deuteronomistic language in Bar 2.30–33; Jubilees 1.14–16. 2.4–9 The rationale for this sequence of events is unclear. Contact with a corpse rendered one impure (Num 19.11–19), which explains why Tobit sleeps in the courtyard; but why may he eat in his house? 2.6 The meal provides a setting for Tobit to apply ironically to himself Am 8.10, "Your festivals . . . into lamentation," an oracle against those who trample on the poor and take their grain. 2.9–10 How does the author understand the cause of Tobit's blindness? Is it happenstance, or are the sparrows agents of a demon like Asmodeus (3.8; cf. Jubilees 11.11)? In either case, the incident triggers the divinely directed scenario recounted through the rest of the story. Although Tobit and his family cannot predict the outcome, a providential God will dispose matters for them.

ointments the more my vision was obscured by the white films, until I became completely blind. For four years I remained unable to see. All my kindred were sorry for me, and Ahikar took care of me for two years before he went to Elymais.

Tobit and Anna Have an Argument

11 At that time, also, my wife Anna earned money at women's work. 12 She used to send what she made to the owners and they would pay wages to her. One day, the seventh of Dystrus, when she cut off a piece she had woven and sent it to the owners, they paid her full wages and also gave her a young goat for a meal. 13 When she returned to me, the goat began to bleat. So I called her and said, "Where did you get this goat? It is surely not stolen, is it? Return it to the owners; for we have no right to eat anything stolen." 14 But she said to me, "It was given to me as a gift in addition to my wages." But I did not believe her, and told her to return it to the owners. I became flushed with anger against her over this. Then she replied to me, "Where are your acts of charity? Where are your righteous deeds? These things are known about you!"^p

Tobit Prays for Death

3 Then with much grief and anguish of heart I wept, and with groaning began to pray:

² "You are righteous, O Lord, and all your deeds are just;

all your ways are mercy and truth;

you judge the world.^q

³ And now, O Lord, remember me and look favorably upon me.

Do not punish me for my sins and for my unwitting offenses and those that my ancestors committed before you.

⁴ They sinned against you, and disobeyed your commandments.

So you gave us over to plunder,
exile, and death,
to become the talk, the byword,
and an object of reproach among all the nations among whom you have dispersed us.

⁵ And now your many judgments are true
in exacting penalty from me for my sins.

For we have not kept your commandments
and have not walked in accordance with truth
before you.

⁶ So now deal with me as you will;
command my spirit to be taken
from me,
so that I may be released from the face of the earth and become dust.

2.11–3.17 The destinies of two innocent sufferers are joined as reproach leads them to pray for death. 2.11–14 The humiliation of the once-wealthy public servant is complete, and the situation pits Tobit and his wife against each other. 2.12 The seventh of Dystrus in the Macedonian calendar is roughly mid-January. 2.13–14 Tobit's concern with righteousness has become an obsession. His distrust of Anna leads to her ironic rebuke; its gist is either to question the sincerity of his righteous deeds or to taunt him because they have gone unrewarded. 3.1–6 His neighbors' mockery and his wife's rebuke prompt Tobit to seek release in death. 3.2–5 The motifs in the first part of Tobit's prayer are common in Jewish prayers of confession (Dan 9.4–19; Bar 1.15–3.8; Prayer of Azariah) and may indicate that this is an excerpt or epitome of a traditional text. Vv. 2, 5 frame the section with the assertion that God's judgments are righteous, just, and true (cf. Psalms of Solomon 2.10, 15; 8.7, 26). 3.3 Though Tobit is righteous, he is not sinless; he is guilty of sins and unwitting offenses, and he does not have access to the sacrificial system to atone for them (cf. Lev 5.17–19; Psalms of Solomon 3.8). He is also liable for the sins of his ancestors (cf. Ex 20.5–6). On all these accounts, a just God is exacting judgment on him. On the manner of this judgment, see note on 11.15. 3.4 The idea that the exile is deserved punishment for Israel's sins is a common OT motif. 3.5 Tobit, the righteous exception, paradoxically acknowledges his solidarity with the sinful nation. 3.6 Tobit seeks to become dust (Gen 3.19) and find release from Anna's undeserved (lit. "false") insults.

Sarah Falsely Accused

7 On the same day, at Ecbatana in Media, it also happened that Sarah, the daughter of Raguel, was reproached by one of her father's maids. ⁸For she had been married to seven husbands, and the wicked demon Asmodeus had killed each of them before they had been with her as is customary for wives. So the maid said to her, "You are the one who kills^r your husbands! See, you have already been married to seven husbands and have not borne the name of^s a single one of them. ⁹Why do you beat us? Because your husbands are dead? Go with them! May we never see a son or daughter of yours!"

Sarah Prays for Death

10 On that day she was grieved in spirit and wept. When she had gone up to her father's upper room, she intended to hang herself. But she thought it over and said, "Never shall they reproach my father, saying to him, 'You had only one beloved daughter but she hanged herself because of her distress.' And I shall bring my father in his old age down in sorrow to Hades. It is better for me not to hang myself, but to pray the Lord that I may die and not listen to these reproaches anymore." ¹¹At that same time, with hands outstretched toward the window, she prayed and said, "Blessed are you, merciful God!

Blessed is your name forever;
let all your works praise you
forever.

12 And now, Lord,^t I turn my face
to you,

and raise my eyes toward you.

13 Command that I be released from the earth
and not listen to such reproaches any more.

of any defilement with a man,

15 and that I have not disgraced my or the name of my father in the land of my exile.

I am my father's only child;

3.7-9 Tobit's relative Sarah is also an innocent victim of circumstances beyond her control and an object of insults. 3.8-9 The meaning of the name Asmodeus is uncertain. The demon lover, a common motif in ancient folklore, also appears in 1 Enoch 6-11. Here the demon who cannot satisfy his lust kills his rival each time before the marriage is consummated, thus leaving Sarah without the possibility of offspring and making her the object of reproach (cf. Gen 16.4-6, on another Sarah and her maid; 1 Sam 1.6). For an allusion to a story about marriage to seven brothers, see Mk 12.18-25. 3.10-15 Unfair reproach leads Sarah, like Tobit, to wish and pray for death. 3.10 Sarah's rejection of suicide indicates a concern for her family lacking in Tobit's unmitigated self-pity. 3.11 Sarah adopts a common posture for prayer, with hands outstretched (Ezra 9.5; Dan 6.10). In spite of her tragedy, she can bless a merciful God (cf. Pr Azar 3). 3.14-15 Unlike Tobit, Sarah does not confess her sins. Her denial of sexual sin is puzzling (cf. Sus 42-43); perhaps she is protesting that the deaths of her husbands are unjust for a chaste woman. Her marriages to seven relatives fulfilled levirate law (Deut 25.5-10; cf. Gen 38). Unaware of Tobias's existence, she sees no further options for marriage, but unlike Tobit, she allows God another option if

The Prayers Are Heard in Heaven

16 At that very moment, the prayers of both of them were heard in the glorious presence of God. 17 So Raphael was sent to heal both of them: Tobit, by removing the white films from his eyes, so that he might see God's light with his eyes; and Sarah, daughter of Raguel, by giving her in marriage to Tobias son of Tobit, and by setting her free from the wicked demon Asmodeus. For Tobias was entitled to have her before all others who had desired to marry her. At the same time that Tobit returned from the courtyard into his house, Sarah daughter of Raguel came down from her upper room.

Tobit's Testamentary Instruction to His Son

4 That same day Tobit remembered the money that he had left in trust with Gabael at Rages in Media, 2 and he said to himself, "Now I have asked for death. Why do I not call my son Tobias and explain to him about the money before I die?" 3 Then he called his son Tobias, and when he came to him he said, "My son, when I die,^u give me a proper burial. Honor your mother and do not abandon her all the days of her life. Do whatever pleases her, and do not grieve her in anything. 4 Remember her, my son, because she faced many dangers for you while you were in her womb. And when she dies, bury her beside me in the same grave.

5 "Revere the Lord all your days, my son, and refuse to sin or to transgress his commandments. Live uprightly all the days of your life, and do not walk in the ways of wrongdoing; 6 for those who act in accordance with truth will prosper in all their activities. To all those who practice righteousness^v 7 give alms from your possessions, and do not let your eye begrudge the gift when you make it. Do not turn your face away from anyone who is poor, and the face of God will not be turned away from you. 8 If you have many possessions, make your gift from them in proportion; if few, do not be afraid to give according to the little you have. 9 So you will be laying up a good treasure for yourself against the day of necessity. 10 For almsgiving delivers from death and keeps you from going into the Darkness. 11 Indeed, almsgiving, for all who practice

^u Lat ^v The text of codex Sinaiticus goes directly from verse 6 to verse 19, reading To those who practice righteousness ¹⁹ the Lord will give good counsel. In order to fill the lacuna verses 7 to 18 are derived from other ancient authorities her death is not pleasing to God. 3.16–17 God does have an unexpected solution to the parallel problems in the Tobiad family. 3.16 In the glorious presence of God, seven angels relay human prayers and stand ready to implement God's responses (cf. Rev 1.4; 1 Enoch 20). 3.17 Raphael (Hebrew, "God has healed") is the appropriate agent to heal Tobit's and Sarah's afflictions. Tobias's preeminent right to marry Sarah, his predestined bride (6.18), has ironically been facilitated by the tragic deaths of their seven kinsmen.

4.1–19 Certain that God will answer his prayer for death, Tobit dispenses testamentary instruction to his son. The testament was a well-defined literary genre in biblical and early Jewish literature (Gen 49; 1 Enoch 81–82.3; 91; Jubilees 20–21; Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs; Testament of Job) in which a father anticipating death offered his children ethical instruction and information about the future. Tobit will offer the latter in ch. 14 in connection with his actual death.

4.1–2 One wonders why Tobit had not previously remembered the deposit of silver that would solve his financial woes. Evidently God has jogged his memory; Tobias will return from Media not only with the silver, but with the wife God has destined for him. 4.3 On the son's responsibility to provide his parents a proper burial, cf. Mt 8.21; Lk 9.59. 4.3–4 On the nuance in the allusion to the fourth (fifth) commandment (Ex 20.12), cf. Sir 7.27. 4.5 An admonition to act righteously and avoid the ways of wrongdoing (cf. 1.3) prefaces a section on the right use of money (4.6–11), which is appropriate in light of Tobias's mission. 4.7 To give alms to the poor was an important element of Jewish piety linked to biblical concerns about the poor. Here and elsewhere in ch. 4, a principle of appropriate recompense governs God's reward of the righteous (Do not turn your face away . . . and the face of God will not be turned away). 4.8 Cf. Mk 12.41–44. 4.10 Tobit has practiced the almsgiving he preaches (1.3, 17), although his depressed situation seems to undercut the notion that God rewards the righteous. Deliverance from death does not mean eternal life but avoidance of premature death. 4.11 In a diaspora situation, where Israelites could not engage in sacrificial practices, the atoning value of almsgiving as an excellent offering (cf. 12.9; Sir 35.1–2) was especially significant, as it again came to be it, is an excellent offering in the presence of the Most High.

12 "Beware, my son, of every kind of fornication. First of all, marry a woman from among the descendants of your ancestors; do not marry a foreign woman, who is not of your father's tribe; for we are the descendants of the prophets. Remember, my son, that Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, our ancestors of old, all took wives from among their kindred. They were blessed in their children, and their posterity will inherit the land. 13 So now, my son, love your kindred, and in your heart do not disdain your kindred, the sons and daughters of your people, by refusing to take a wife for yourself from among them. For in pride there is ruin and great confusion. And in idleness there is loss and dire poverty, because idleness is the mother of famine.

14 "Do not keep over until the next day the wages of those who work for you, but pay them at once. If you serve God you will receive payment. Watch yourself, my son, in everything you do, and discipline yourself in all your conduct. 15 And what you hate, do not do to anyone. Do not drink wine to excess or let drunkenness go with you on your way. 16 Give some of your food to the hungry, and some of your clothing to the naked. Give all your surplus as alms, and do not let your eye begrudge your giving of alms. 17 Place your bread on the grave of the righteous, but give none to sinners. 18 Seek advice from every wise person and do not despise any useful counsel. 19 At all times bless the Lord God, and ask him that your ways may be made straight and that all your paths and plans may prosper. For none of the nations has understanding, but the Lord himself will give them good counsel; but if he chooses otherwise, he casts down to deepest Hades. So now, my child, remember these commandments, and do not let them be erased from your heart.

Plans to Recover Money Left in Trust

20 "And now, my son, let me explain to you that I left ten talents of silver in trust with Gabael son of Gabrias, at Rages in Media. 21 Do not be afraid, my son, because we have become poor. You have great wealth if you fear God and flee from every sin and do what is good in the sight of the Lord your God."

5 Then Tobias answered his father Tobit, "I will do everything that you have commanded me, father; 2 but how can I obtain the money^w from him, since he does not know me and I do not know him? What evidence^x am I to give him so that he will recognize and trust me, and give me the money? Also, I do not know the roads to Media, or how to get there."

after the destruction of the temple in 70 C.E. 4.12–13 Returning to a concern about family (see vv. 3–4), and in keeping with his own example (1.9), Tobit advocates endogamy, recalling the patriarchal narratives (Gen 11.29; 24.3–4; 27.46–28.2; Jubilees 4.33). Israelite theory and practice on this subject varied. Mandating marriage to an Israelite are the Genesis passages just cited, Ezra 9–10, Neh 10.28–30, and many passages in Jubilees. Ruth and Joseph and Aseneth attest a more liberal attitude. In a diaspora situation, the concern for preserving national and religious identity is understandable and the problem of finding the right spouse especially difficult.

4.14–19 These verses return to the topic of vv. 5–10. 4.14 For do not keep . . . for you, cf. Lev 19.13. 4.15 The Golden Rule, what you hate, do not do to anyone, was widespread in the cultures of antiquity. In the Judeo-Christian tradition, its negative formulation is first attested here and is also attributed to Rabbi Hillel (Babylonian Talmud Shabbat 31a), James (Acts 15.20, 29 in manuscripts of the "Western tradition"), and the Twelve (Didache 1.2). The positive form of the proverb is ascribed to Jesus in Mt 7.12; Lk 6.31. On the evils of drunkenness, cf. Prov 23.29–35; Sir 31.25–30; Testament of Judah 11–14, 16. 4.17 The practice alluded to here is obscure. The idea is that one should sustain the hungry, but that it is better to leave food at the grave of the righteous than to give it to sinners (cf. Ahiqar 2.10, Syriac version). The restriction of charity to the righteous is noteworthy; cf. 2.2; Gal 6.10. 4.19 At all times bless . . . God may reflect Ps 34.1; the psalm describes the plight and fate of people like Tobit. That none of the nations has understanding (Deut 32.28) is an observation appropriate to the diaspora setting. On the concluding admonition, cf. 1 Enoch 94.5.

4.20–5.3 The conclusion of Tobit's instruction returns to the narrative that introduced it (4.1–2). 4.20 Ten talents of silver weighed about 750 pounds, worth a substantial sum. 5.1 Tobias's response to his father's instruction echoes Ex 19.8; 24.3; Josh 1.16.

"He gave me his bond and I gave him my bond. I¹ divided his in two; we each took one part, and I put one with the money. And now twenty years have passed since I left this money in trust. So now, my son, find yourself a trustworthy man to go with you, and we will pay him wages until you return. But get back the money from Gabael."²

a Travel Companion*

4 So Tobias went out to look for a man to go with him to Media, someone who was acquainted with the way. He went out and found the angel Raphael standing in front of him; but he did not perceive that he was an angel of God. ⁵Tobias^a said to him, "Where do you come from, young man?" "From your kindred, the Israelites," he replied, "and I have come here to work." Then Tobias^b said to him, "Do you know the way to go to Media?" ⁶"Yes," he replied, "I have been there many times; I am acquainted with it and know all the roads. I have often traveled to Media, and would stay with our kinsman Gabael who lives in Rages of Media. It is a journey of two days from Ecbatana to Rages; for it lies in a mountainous area, while Ecbatana is in the middle of the plain." ⁷Then Tobias said to him, "Wait for me, young man, until I go in and tell my father; for I do need you to travel with me, and I will pay you your wages." ⁸He replied, "All right, I will wait; but do not take too long."

9 So Tobias^b went in to tell his father Tobit and said to him, "I have just found a man who is one of our own Israelite kindred!" He replied, "Call the man in, my son, so that I may learn about his family and to what tribe he belongs, and whether he is trustworthy enough to go with you."

10 Then Tobias went out and called him, and said, "Young man, my father is calling for you." So he went in to him, and Tobit greeted him first. He replied, "Joyous greetings to you!" But Tobit retorted, "What joy is left for me any more? I am a man without eyesight; I cannot see the light of heaven, but I lie in darkness like the dead who no longer see the light. Although still alive, I am among the dead. I hear people but I cannot see them." But the young man^b said, "Take courage; the time is near for God to heal you; take courage." Then Tobit said to him, "My son Tobias wishes to go to Media. Can you accompany him and guide him? I will pay your wages, brother." He answered, "I can go with him and I know all the roads, for I have often gone to Media and have crossed all its plains, and I am familiar with its mountains and all of its roads."

11 Then Tobit^b said to him, "Brother, of what family are you and from what tribe? Tell me, brother." ¹²He replied, "Why do you need to know my tribe?" But Tobit^b said, "I want to be sure, brother, whose son you are and what your name is." ¹³He replied, "I am Azariah, the son of the great Hananiah, one of your relatives." ¹⁴Then Tobit said to him, "Welcome! God save you, brother. Do not feel bitter toward me, brother, because I wanted to be sure about your ancestry. It turns out that you are a kinsman, and of good and noble lineage. For I knew Hananiah and Nathan,^c the two sons of Shemeliah,^d and they used to go with me to Jerusalem and worshiped with me there, and were not led astray.

5.4–17a Tobias's need for a traveling companion (cf. 1.15) is met by the angel Raphael, who is conveniently waiting outside the door. Stories about the appearance (epiphany) of a divine being are frequent in the Bible (cf. Gen 18.1–15; Judg 13; Lk 1.8–23, 26–38) and elsewhere in antiquity (e.g., Books 1–3 of the Odyssey, where Athena travels with Telemachus). The conversation between Raphael and the two Israelites is a storyteller's delight. The divine being cannot reveal his identity and must resort to white lies and half-truths, while Tobit is unaware of the real truth of some of his own utterances. 5.5 Given

Raphael's real identity, his conversation with Tobias is a charade, although it is true that he has come here to work. 5.6 Raphael's angelic missions have doubtless taken him to Media. 5.10 Take courage is a typical admonition in epiphanies (Joseph and Aseneth 14.11; 15.2–5). 5.11–14 Tobit's queries are irrelevant, although his conclusion that your kindred are good people; you come of good stock is true in a way he cannot imagine (cf. 5.22). 5.13 The names Azariah (Hebrew, "Yahweh has helped") and Hananiah ("Yahweh has had mercy") symbolize a situation Tobit does not understand

Your kindred are good people; you come of good stock. Hearty welcome!"

15 Then he added, "I will pay you a drachma a day as wages, as well as expenses for yourself and my son. So go with my son, ¹⁶and^e I will add something to your wages." Raphael^f answered, "I will go with him; so do not fear. We shall leave in good health and return to you in good health, because the way is safe." ¹⁷So Tobit^g said to him, "Blessings be upon you, brother."

Then he called his son and said to him, "Son, prepare supplies for the journey and set out with your brother. May God in heaven bring you safely there and return you in good health to me; and may his angel, my son, accompany you both for your safety."

Family Farewells

Before he went out to start his journey, he kissed his father and mother. Tobit then said to him, "Have a safe journey."

18 But his mother^h began to weep, and said to Tobit, "Why is it that you have sent my child away? Is he not the staff of our hand as he goes in and out before us? ¹⁹Do not heap money upon money, but let it be a ransom for our child. ²⁰For the life that is given to us by the Lord is enough for us." ²¹Tobit^f said to her, "Do not worry; our child will leave in good health and return to us in good health. Your eyes will see him on the day when he returns to you in good health. Say no more! Do not fear for them, my sister. ²²For a good angel will accompany him; his journey will be successful, and he will 6 come back in good health." ¹So she stopped weeping.

The Journey to Rages

The young man went out and the angel went with him; ²and the dog came out with him and went along with them. So they both journeyed along, and when the first night overtook them they camped by the Tigris river. ³Then the young man went down to wash his feet in the Tigris river. Suddenly a large fish leaped up from the water and tried to swallow the young man's foot, and he cried out. ⁴But the angel said to the young man, "Catch hold of the fish and hang on to it!" So the young man grasped the fish and drew it up on the land. ⁵Then the angel said to him, "Cut open the fish and take out its gall, heart, and liver. Keep them with you, but throw away the intestines. For its gall, heart, and liver are useful as medicine." ⁶So after cutting open the fish the young man gathered together the gall, heart, and liver; then he roasted and ate some of the fish, and kept some to be salted.

The two continued on their way together until they were near Media.ⁱ ⁷Then the young man questioned the angel and said to him, "Brother Azariah, what medicinal value is there in the fish's heart and liver, and in the gall?" ⁸He replied, "As for the fish's heart and liver, you must burn them to make a smoke in the presence of a man or woman afflicted by a demon or evil spirit, and every affliction will flee away and never remain with that person any longer. ⁹And as for the gall, anoint a person's eyes where white films have appeared on them; blow upon them, upon the white films, and the eyes^j will be healed."

5.17a Readers are to smile at Tobit's wish that an angel accompany Tobias and "Azariah."

5.17b–6.1a Tobit's and Anna's contrasting attitudes toward their son's departure are in character. Cf. 10.1–7.

6.1b–9 The journey to Rages has several functions. Most obviously, it is the narrative device that gets Tobias to his money, his bride, and the magical devices that will heal Sarah and Tobit. It also has symbolic overtones. Readers see how God literally makes the paths of the righteous prosper (cf. 4.19), and the presence of Raphael recalls the notion that a good angel guides one along the paths of righteousness (cf. Dead Sea Scrolls Rule of the Community [1QS] 3.18–4.6; Letter of Barnabas 18; Hermas Mandates 6.2). On the angelic guide, cf. Ex 23.20; 1 Enoch 20–33. 6.3–6 Again God intervenes, this time by providing a large fish (cf. Jon 1.17).

6.10–18 The author now reveals the real

Tobias." "Here I am," he answered. Then Raphael¹ said to him, "We must stay this night in the home of Raguel. He is your relative, and he has a daughter named Sarah. ¹²He has no male heir and no daughter except Sarah only, and you, as next of kin to her, have before all other men a hereditary claim on her. Also it is right for you to inherit her father's possessions. Moreover, the girl is sensible, brave, and very beautiful, and her father is a good man." ¹³He continued, "You have every right to take her in marriage. So listen to me, brother; tonight I will speak to her father about the girl, so that we may take her to be your bride. When we return from Rages we will celebrate her marriage. For I know that Raguel can by no means keep her from you or promise her to another man without incurring the penalty of death according to the decree of the book of Moses. Indeed he knows that you, rather than any other man, are entitled to marry his daughter. So now listen to me, brother, and tonight we shall speak concerning the girl and arrange her engagement to you. And when we return from Rages we will take her and bring her back with us to your house."

¹⁴ Then Tobias said in answer to Raphael, "Brother Azariah, I have heard that she already has been married to seven husbands and that they died in the bridal chamber. On the night when they went in to her, they would die. I have heard people saying that it was a demon that killed them. ¹⁵It does not harm her, but it kills anyone who desires to approach her. So now, since I am the only son my father has, I am afraid that I may die and bring my father's and mother's life down to their grave, grieving for me—and they have no other son to bury them."

¹⁶ But Raphael¹ said to him, "Do you not remember your father's orders when he commanded you to take a wife from your father's house? Now listen to me, brother, and say no more about this demon. Take her. I know that this very night she will be given to you in marriage. ¹⁷When you enter the bridal chamber, take some of the fish's liver and heart, and put them on the embers of the incense. An odor will be given off; ¹⁸the demon will smell it and flee, and will never be seen near her any more. Now when you are about to go to bed with her, both of you must first stand up and pray, imploring the Lord of heaven that mercy and safety may be granted to you. Do not be afraid, for she was set apart for you before the world was made. You will save her, and she will go with you. I presume that you will have children by her, and they will be as brothers to you. Now say no more!" When Tobias heard the words of Raphael and learned that she was his kinswoman,^m related through his father's lineage, he loved her very much, and his heart was drawn to her.

7 Now when theyⁿ entered Ecbatana, Tobias¹ said to him, "Brother Azariah, take me straight to our brother Raguel." So he took him to Raguel's house, where they found him sitting beside the courtyard door. They greeted him first, and he replied, "Joyous greetings, brothers; welcome and good health!" Then he brought them into his house. ²He said to his wife Edna, "How much the young man resembles my kinsman Tobit!" ³Then Edna questioned them, saying, "Where are you from, brothers?" purposes for the journey. In addition to finding the medicine to heal Tobit (6.9), Tobias will rid Sarah of her demon, and each will find in the other the kind of spouse recommended by Tobit (4.12–13) and the very spouse foreordained by God. Recovering the money from Gabael is a bonus. The section is rich in psychological insight. 6.11 "Azariah" plays the marriage broker (cf. Gen 24, where the servant may be Eliezer, Hebrew, "El is my help"). 6.14–18 Tobias's hesitation is not simply self-serving; it reflects concern for his parents, which Raphael cleverly parries by reference to his father's command. 6.18 The youth's acquiescence is remarkable, given that he is unaware of his companion's real identity, but his trust in the Lord of Heaven carries him through the dilemma. Do not be afraid is typical of the vocabulary of epiphanies (cf. Lk 1.13, 30).

7.1–9a The arrival of Tobias and "Azariah" at Raguel's house is marked by a concern about of Naphtali who are exiles in Nineveh.”⁴ She said to them, “Do you know our kinsman Tobit?” And they replied, “Yes, we know him.” Then she asked them, “Is he^o in good health?”⁵ They replied, “He is alive and in good health.” And Tobias added, “He is my father!”⁶ At that Raguel jumped up and kissed him and wept.⁷ He also spoke to him as follows, “Blessings on you, my child, son of a good and noble father!^p O most miserable of calamities that such an upright and beneficent man has become blind!” He then embraced his kinsman Tobias and wept.⁸ His wife Edna also wept for him, and their daughter Sarah likewise wept.⁹ Then Raguel^q slaughtered a ram from the flock and received them very warmly.

The Wedding of Tobias and Sarah

When they had bathed and washed themselves and had reclined to dine, Tobias said to Raphael, “Brother Azariah, ask Raguel to give me my kinswoman^r Sarah.”¹⁰ But Raguel overheard it and said to the lad, “Eat and drink, and be merry tonight. For no one except you, brother, has the right to marry my daughter Sarah. Likewise I am not at liberty to give her to any other man than yourself, because you are my nearest relative. But let me explain to you the true situation more fully, my child.^s I have given her to seven men of our kinsmen, and all died on the night when they went in to her. But now, my child, eat and drink, and the Lord will act on behalf of you both.” But Tobias said, “I will neither eat nor drink anything until you settle the things that pertain to me.” So Raguel said, “I will do so. She is given to you in accordance with the decree in the book of Moses, and it has been decreed from heaven that she be given to you. Take your kinswoman;^t from now on you are her brother and she is your sister. She is given to you from today and forever. May the Lord of heaven, my child, guide and prosper you both this night and grant you mercy and peace.”¹² Then Raguel summoned his daughter Sarah. When she came to him he took her by the hand and gave her to Tobias,^u saying, “Take her to be your wife in accordance with the law and decree written in the book of Moses. Take her and bring her safely to your father. And may the God of heaven prosper your journey with his peace.”¹³ Then he called her mother and told her to bring writing material; and he wrote out a copy of a marriage contract, to the effect that he gave her to him as wife according to the decree of the law of Moses.^v Then they began to eat and drink.

¹⁵ Raguel called his wife Edna and said to her, “Sister, get the other room ready, and take her there.”¹⁶ So she went and made the bed in the room as he had told her, and brought Sarah^w there. She wept for her daughter.^x Then, wiping away the tears,^y she said to her, “Take courage, my daughter; the Lord of heaven grant you joy^z in place of your family ties and well-being. 7.7 Raguel echoes a major motif in the story when he observes that Tobit's blindness is incongruous for one who is upright and beneficent. 7.9b–16 Raphael, Raguel, and Tobias now work out the details of the marriage. The narrative seems to reflect actual customs of hospitality: greetings, ablutions, and a sumptuous meal (cf. Gen 18.1–8; Lk 7.44) for males only (see vv. 12–13). 7.9b One normally did not discuss business before the meal; Tobias's breach of etiquette underscores the urgency of his request. 7.10 Raguel's suggestion to eat and drink, and be merry may be an ironic reformulation of the familiar aphorism. If past events are any indicator, tomorrow Sarah's new husband will be dead. Cf. Lk 12.19–20 for a similar ironic reformulation. The narrative presumes throughout the law of levirate marriage (Deut 25.5–10). Although such marriage was a duty, honesty leads Raguel to offer Tobias the option to decline. 7.11–12 Raguel's assertion that the Lord will act on behalf of you both and his wish that the Lord grant you mercy and peace suggest that his pessimism, which will return in 8.9–10, is momentarily tempered. The titles Lord of Heaven and God of Heaven are typical of contemporary Mesopotamian documents (cf. Dan 2.19, 37, 44; 5.23). In Tobit the titles appear primarily in quasi-liturgical formulas of blessing (see 5.17; 6.18; 7.16; 8.15; 9.6; 10.11–13). 7.16 Edna also vacillates between sorrow and hope. Her repeated take courage may translate the same Aramaic phrase as Raphael's do not be afraid (6.18), spoken to Tobias on the same subject.

sorrow. Take courage, my daughter.” Then she went out.

The Wedding Night Brings Healing and Rejoicing

8 When they had finished eating and drinking they wanted to retire; so they took the young man and brought him into the bedroom. ²Then Tobias remembered the words of Raphael, and he took the fish's liver and heart out of the bag where he had them and put them on the embers of the incense. ³The odor of the fish so repelled the demon that he fled to the remotest parts^w of Egypt. But Raphael followed him, and at once bound him there hand and foot.

⁴ When the parents^x had gone out and shut the door of the room, Tobias got out of bed and said to Sarah,^y “Sister, get up, and let us pray and implore our Lord that he grant us mercy and safety.” ⁵So she got up, and they began to pray and implore that they might be kept safe. Tobias^z began by saying,

“Blessed are you, O God of our ancestors,
and blessed is your name in all generations forever.

Let the heavens and the whole creation bless you forever.

⁶ You made Adam, and for him you made his wife Eve
as a helper and support.
From the two of them the human race has sprung.
You said, ‘It is not good that the man should be alone;
let us make a helper for him like himself.’

⁷ I now am taking this kinswoman of mine,
not because of lust,
but with sincerity.
Grant that she and I may find mercy
and that we may grow old
together.”

⁸And they both said, “Amen, Amen.”

⁹Then they went to sleep for the night.

But Raguel arose and called his servants to him, and they went and dug a grave, ¹⁰for he said, “It is possible that he will die and we will become an object of ridicule and derision.” ¹¹When they had finished digging the grave, Raguel went into his house and called his wife, ¹²saying, “Send one of the maids and have her go in to see if he is alive. But if he is dead, let us bury him without anyone knowing it.” ¹³So they sent the maid, lit a lamp, and opened the door; and she went in and found them sound asleep together. ¹⁴Then the maid came out and informed them that he was alive and that nothing was wrong. ¹⁵So they blessed the God of heaven, and Raguel^x said, “Blessed are you, O God, with every pure blessing;

let all your chosen ones bless you.^a

Let them bless you forever.

¹⁶ Blessed are you because you have made me glad.
It has not turned out as I expected,
but you have dealt with us
according to your great mercy.

¹⁷ Blessed are you because you had compassion
on two only children.
Be merciful to them, O Master,
and keep them safe;
bring their lives to fulfillment
in happiness and mercy.”

¹⁸Then he ordered his servants to fill in the grave before daybreak.

8.1–18 For most of the characters in the story, the tension is unbearable: will Tobias suffer the fate of his kinsmen and Sarah's last hope be dashed? God, Raphael, and the readers know better. 8.2–3 Tobias's humorous fumigation ritual may reflect some actual exorcistic technique. 8.3 Binding is a technical term for incapacitating a demon (cf. Mt 22.13; 1 Enoch

10.4). 8.5 The doxological character of Tobias's and Sarah's prayer, expressed in the repeated blessed and bless, contrasts with Raguel's pessimism and ludicrous gravedigging (vv. 9–11). 8.6 Tobias and Sarah appeal to God's intention in creation (Gen 2.20). 8.15 When Raguel ascertains that Tobias is alive, he utters a blessing parallel to that of Tobias and Sarah (v. 5). 8.19–21 The

So they began to make preparations. ²⁰Then he called for Tobias and swore on oath to him in these words:^b “You shall not leave here for fourteen days, but shall stay here eating and drinking with me; and you shall cheer up my daughter, who has been depressed. ²¹Take at once half of what I own and return in safety to your father; the other half will be yours when my wife and I die. Take courage, my child. I am your father and Edna is your mother, and we belong to you as well as to your wife^c now and forever. Take courage, my child.”

The Money Recovered

9 Then Tobias called Raphael and said to him, ²“Brother Azariah, take four servants and two camels with you and travel to Rages. Go to the home of Gabael, give him the bond, get the money, and then bring him with you to the wedding celebration. ⁴For you know that my father must be counting the days, and if I delay even one day I will upset him very much. ³You are witness to the oath Raguel has sworn, and I cannot violate his oath.”^d ⁵So Raphael with the four servants and two camels went to Rages in Media and stayed with Gabael. Raphael^e gave him the bond and informed him that Tobit’s son Tobias had married and was inviting him to the wedding celebration. So Gabael^f got up and counted out to him the money bags, with their seals intact; then they loaded them on the camels.^g ⁶In the morning they both got up early and went to the wedding celebration. When they came into Raguel’s house they found Tobias reclining at table. He sprang up and greeted Gabael,^h who wept and blessed him with the words, “Good and noble son of a father good and noble, upright and generous! May the Lord grant the blessing of heaven to you and your wife, and to your wife’s father and mother. Blessed be God, for I see in Tobias the very image of my cousin Tobit.”

Anticipation and Anxiety at Tobias’s Home

10 Now, day by day, Tobit kept counting how many days Tobias^f would need for going and for returning. And when the days had passed and his son did not appear, ²he said, “Is it possible that he has been detained? Or that Gabael has died, and there is no one to give him the money?” ³And he began to worry. ⁴His wife Anna said, “My child has perished and is no longer among the living.” And she began to weep and mourn for her son, saying, ⁵“Woe to me, my child, the light of my eyes, that I let you make the journey.” ⁶But Tobit kept saying to her, “Be quiet and stop worrying, my dear;^c he is all right. Probably something unexpected has happened there. The man who went with him is trustworthy and is one of our own kin. Do not grieve for him, my dear;^c he will soon be here.” ⁷She answered him, “Be quiet yourself! Stop trying to deceive me! My child has perished.” She would rush out every day and watch the road her son had taken, and would heed no one.ⁱ When the sun had set she would go in and mourn and weep all night long, getting no sleep at all.

apprehension felt during the meal of welcome is replaced by joy. 8.20 Raguel’s invitation to eat, drink, and cheer up my daughter contrasts with 7.10. 8.21 Raguel’s twofold take courage, spoken to Tobias, parallels Edna’s words to Sarah (7.16). The sentence I am . . . forever reads almost like a formula of adoption. Cf. 10.12. 9.6 Gabael is welcomed as a member of the family and his meeting with Tobias parallels the scene in 7.1–8. 10.1–11.18 Tobias completes his journey, and Tobit’s healing solves the problem that led to the development of the plot. 10.1–7a In contrast to the joy of the wedding celebration, gloom pervades the Tobiad home. Unaware of events in Ecbatana, Tobit and Anna, last seen in 5.17–22, engage in an increasingly bitter dispute. Anna grieves and mourns over her son as if he were dead. 10.7b–13 This farewell scene between children and parents is a more extensive counterpart of 5.17. Family concerns govern the discourse. 10.7b–9 As in 6.15, Tobias expresses had sworn to observe for his daughter, Tobias came to him and said, "Send me back, for I know that my father and mother do not believe that they will see me again. So I beg of you, father, to let me go so that I may return to my own father. I have already explained to you how I left him."⁸ But Raguel said to Tobias, "Stay, my child, stay with me; I will send messengers to your father Tobit and they will inform him about you."⁹ But he said, "No! I beg you to send me back to my father."¹⁰ So Raguel promptly gave Tobias his wife Sarah, as well as half of all his property: male and female slaves, oxen and sheep, donkeys and camels, clothing, money, and household goods.¹¹ Then he saw them safely off; he embraced Tobias^j and said, "Farewell, my child; have a safe journey. The Lord of heaven prosper you and your wife Sarah, and may I see children of yours before I die."¹² Then he kissed his daughter Sarah and said to her, "My daughter, honor your father-in-law and your mother-in-law,^k since from now on they are as much your parents as those who gave you birth. Go in peace, daughter, and may I hear a good report about you as long as I live." Then he bade them farewell and let them go. Then Edna said to Tobias, "My child and dear brother, the Lord of heaven bring you back safely, and may I live long enough to see children of you and of my daughter Sarah before I die. In the sight of the Lord I entrust my daughter to you; do nothing to grieve her all the days of your life. Go in peace, my child. From now on I am your mother and Sarah is your beloved wife.^l May we all prosper together all the days of our lives." Then she kissed them both and saw them safely off.¹³ Tobias parted from Raguel with happiness and joy, praising the Lord of heaven and earth, King over all, because he had made his journey a success. Finally, he blessed Raguel and his wife Edna, and said, "I have been commanded by the Lord to honor you all the days of my life."^m

The Return of Tobias

11 When they came near to Kaserin, which is opposite Nineveh, Raphael said,² "You are aware of how we left your father.³ Let us run ahead of your wife and prepare the house while they are still on the way."⁴ As they went on together Raphaelⁿ said to him, "Have the gall ready." And the dog^o went along behind them.

⁵ Meanwhile Anna sat looking intently down the road by which her son would come. ⁶ When she caught sight of him coming, she said to his father, "Look, your son is coming, and the man who went with him!"

Tobit's Sight Restored

⁷ Raphael said to Tobias, before he had approached his father, "I know that his eyes will be opened.⁸ Smear the gall of the fish on his eyes; the medicine will make the white films shrink and peel off from his eyes, and your father will regain his sight and see the light."

⁹ Then Anna ran up to her son and threw her arms around him, saying, "Now concern for his parents. 10.10 Sarah's dowry is a down payment on the full inheritance of her family's wealth, which Raphael has predicted (6.12). 10.12 Honor . . . your mother-in-law, a paraphrase of the fourth (fifth) commandment, parallels 4.3. They are . . . your parents parallels 8.21, where Tobias is accepted as the son of Raguel and Edna. 10.13 With an allusion to the fourth (fifth) commandment, I have . . . my life, Tobias acknowledges that he is the son of Raguel and Edna.

11.1–6 Unlike the journey to Rages (6.1–9), the journey home is not described; the author focuses on the arrival in Nineveh and the events to come. 11.4 Tobias's dog has been mentioned previously only in 6.2, at the beginning of the journey. The significance of this narrative device framing the journey account is obscure; however, the detail here is reminiscent of Odysseus's dog's recognition of its master upon his return (Odyssey 17.290–327). Cf. note on 5.4–17 on the journey of Telemachus and Athena. The Bible does not generally describe dogs as pets (but cf. Mk 7.27–28) and often portrays them as carnivorous scavengers. 11.7–15 The problem that triggered the plot is now resolved. The scene has some striking parallels (and echoes?) in Lk 15.20–24. 11.9 Anna's speech momentarily delays the account of Tobit's healing and maintains narrative tension. On her words, cf. Lk that I have seen you, my child, I am ready to die." And she wept. ¹⁰Then Tobit got up and came stumbling out through the courtyard door. Tobias went up to him, ¹¹with the gall of the fish in his hand, and holding him firmly, he blew into his eyes, saying, "Take courage, father." With this he applied the medicine on his eyes, ¹²and it made them smart.^p ¹³Next, with both his hands he peeled off the white films from the corners of his eyes. Then Tobit^q saw his son and^r threw his arms around him, ¹⁴and he wept and said to him, "I see you, my son, the light of my eyes!" Then he said,

"Blessed be God,
and blessed be his great name,
and blessed be all his holy angels.

May his holy name be blessed^s throughout all the ages.

¹⁵ Though he afflicted me, he has had mercy upon me.^t
Now I see my son Tobias!"

So Tobit went in rejoicing and praising God at the top of his voice. Tobias reported to his father that his journey had been successful, that he had brought the money, that he had married Raguel's daughter Sarah, and that she was, indeed, on her way there, very near to the gate of Nineveh.

Rejoicing in Nineveh

16 Then Tobit, rejoicing and praising God, went out to meet his daughter-in-law at the gate of Nineveh. When the people of Nineveh saw him coming, walking along in full vigor and with no one leading him, they were amazed. ¹⁷Before them all, Tobit acknowledged that God had been merciful to him and had restored his sight. When Tobit met Sarah the wife of his son Tobias, he blessed her saying, "Come in, my daughter, and welcome. Blessed be your God who has brought you to us, my daughter. Blessed be your father and your mother, blessed be my son Tobias, and blessed be you, my daughter. Come in now to your home, and welcome, with blessing and joy. Come in, my daughter." So on that day there was rejoicing among all the Jews who were in Nineveh. ¹⁸Ahikar and his nephew Nadab were also present to share Tobit's joy. With merriment they celebrated Tobias's wedding feast for seven days, and many gifts were given to him.^u

Raphael Offered His Wages

12 When the wedding celebration was ended, Tobit called his son Tobias and said to him, "My child, see to paying the wages of the man who went with you, and give him a bonus as well." ²He replied, "Father, how much shall I pay him? It would do no harm to give him

2.29–30. 11.11–13 The cause and cure of Tobit's blindness make some anatomical sense. Acid on the cornea can discolor its epithelium, which sometimes can be peeled off like a film. Cf. Acts 9.18. The healing has a miraculous element; fish gall is effective where physicians failed (2.10). Of course, that failure facilitated both the recovery of Tobit's money and Tobias's marriage. 11.14 Tobit's ability to see the light of my eyes fulfills Raphael's prediction that he will see the light (v. 8). 11.14–15 Like Tobias, Sarah, and Raguel before him (8.5–7, 15–17), Tobit appropriately breaks into a doxology, which is a foil to his earlier prayer of lament (3.2–6). Cf. the contrast between the Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Jews. Tobit's reference to God's holy angels is to the point, though he does not know this. 11.15 The word pair afflicted (lit. "scourged") / had mercy recurs in 13.2, 5 with reference to Israel. These are technical terms for the manner in which God deals with the righteous. God will judge the wicked (or the nations) with full fury; in contrast, God scourges, chastises, or disciplines the righteous (or Israel), so that when they repent they will be shown mercy. Cf. 2 Macc 6.12–16; Psalms of Solomon 3, 13. 11.16–17 Elements in this scene—visible evidence of the cure, the people's amazement, and Tobit's acknowledgment of God's activity—recur in the later miracle stories in the Gospels. 11.17 Tobit now meets the wife he had hoped Tobias would find (4.12–13). The reference to the Jews (Judeans) is odd in a document about a Northern family in exile in Assyria, but note the close identification with Jerusalem in 1.3–7 and ch. 13.

12.1–22 Stories about epiphanies traditionally end with the divine being revealing its identity and suddenly disappearing. 12.1–5 Because half of the possessions brought back with me.³ For he has led me back to you safely, he cured my wife, he brought the money back with me, and he healed you. How much extra shall I give him as a bonus?"⁴ Tobit said, "He deserves, my child, to receive half of all that he brought back."⁵ So Tobias^v called him and said, "Take for your wages half of all that you brought back, and farewell."

Raphael's Instruction

6 Then Raphael^v called the two of them privately and said to them, "Bless God and acknowledge him in the presence of all the living for the good things he has done for you. Bless and sing praise to his name. With fitting honor declare to all people the deeds^w of God. Do not be slow to acknowledge him.⁷ It is good to conceal the secret of a king, but to acknowledge and reveal the works of God, and with fitting honor to acknowledge him. Do good and evil will not overtake you.⁸ Prayer with fasting^x is good, but better than both is almsgiving with righteousness. A little with righteousness is better than wealth with wrongdoing.^y It is better to give alms than to lay up gold.⁹ For almsgiving saves from death and purges away every sin. Those who give alms will enjoy a full life,¹⁰ but those who commit sin and do wrong are their own worst enemies.

Raphael Reveals His Identity

11 "I will now declare the whole truth to you and will conceal nothing from you. Already I have declared it to you when I said, 'It is good to conceal the secret of a king, but to reveal with due honor the works of God.'¹² So now when you and Sarah prayed, it was I who brought and read^z the record of your prayer before the glory of the Lord, and likewise whenever you would bury the dead.¹³ And that time when you did not hesitate to get up and leave your dinner to go and bury the dead,¹⁴ I was sent to you to test you. And at the same time God sent me to heal you and Sarah your daughter-in-law.¹⁵ I am Raphael, one of the seven angels who stand ready and enter before the glory of the Lord."

16 The two of them were shaken; they fell face down, for they were afraid.¹⁷ But he said to them, "Do not be afraid; peace be with you. Bless God forevermore.¹⁸ As for me, when I was with you, I was not acting on my own will, but by the will of God. Bless him each and every day; sing his praises.¹⁹ Although you were watching me, I really did not eat or drink anything—but what you saw was a vision.

Raphael has exceeded expectations, Tobit and Tobias, still acting in accordance with their misperceptions, offer the angel a 50 percent commission (cf. 5.15–16), an act of generosity consonant with the book's attitude about the use of money. 12.6–10 Raphael's self-revelation and instruction occur privately to the men of the story. Throughout the narrative, there has been no contact or proximity between the angel and the women (cf. 1 Cor 11.10; 1 Enoch 6–11). 12.6 The admonition to praise God in the presence of all the living anticipates ch. 13 and its universalistic tone (13.3–4, 11; see also 14.6–7). 12.7a Raphael's admonition that it is good . . . to acknowledge him presupposes Tobit's former position in the royal court and may presume God's status as king (see 13.6–7, 10–11, 15–16). 12.7b–10 Complementary proverbs in vv. 7b and 10 frame a section on almsgiving that reiterates 4.6–11. 12.8 The combined references to prayer, fasting, almsgiving, and laying up gold parallel Mt 6.1–21, which is based on Jewish wisdom teaching.

12.9 Almsgiving saves from death. In light of subsequent events, the truth of 4.10 is now evident, although Tobit's assertion there that almsgiving delivers from death seemed ironic. 12.11–22 Raphael reveals to Tobit and Tobias what the readers have known since 3.16–17. 12.12 On the notion that angels read the record of human prayers and deeds in God's presence, cf. 1 Enoch 8.4–9.11; 89.76; 97.3–6; 99.3; 104.1. 12.14 Raphael's having been sent to test Tobit may suggest divine initiative in the events described in 2.1–10. More likely, it reflects the widespread belief that Satan originates testing or tempting and that God witnesses human responses and provides help, sometimes through an angel; cf. Mt 4.1–10; 6.13; 1 Cor 10.13; Dead Sea Scrolls Rule of the Community (1QS) 3.20, 24; Jubilees 17.15–18.16. 12.16 This imagery and vocabulary are traditional in epiphany accounts; cf. Dan 10.1–12; 1 Enoch 14.24–15.1. 12.19 That angels do not eat human food is a traditional idea (cf. Lk 24.36–43; Testament of Abraham 4, recension A).

20 So now get up from the ground,^a and acknowledge God. See, I am ascending to him who sent me. Write down all these things that have happened to you.” And he ascended. 21 Then they stood up, and could see him no more. 22 They kept blessing God and singing his praises, and they acknowledged God for these marvelous deeds of his, when an angel of God had appeared to them.

12.20–22 The formula I am ascending to him who sent me recurs in Jn 16.5. John shares with Tobit the pattern of a descending and ascending savior figure. The command to write a book is also consonant with the commissioning function in such stories about heavenly messengers on earth; cf. Rev 1.9–20. It is to be a doxological book, and the commands to bless God (vv. 17–18) and acknowledge God's merciful activity resonate with the frequent blessing of God throughout the narrative and in the hymn that follows (see 13.1, 3, 6, 10, 15, 17).

13.1–17 Tobit's hymn of praise, a much-expanded counterpart to 11.14–15, epitomizes the book's many exhortations to praise God. Very possibly a version of a liturgical composition, it reflects real usage in the author's time and lends verisimilitude to this portrait of a pious Israelite. Although its vocabulary is reminiscent of the Psalter (especially Pss 92–118), its themes reflect the concerns of the author's time. 13.1–2 The introduction establishes the hymn's theme of divine justice and mercy. 13.1 An opening blessing and explication (“Blessed are you . . . because . . .”) is formulaic in prayers of this period (cf. Dead Sea Scrolls Thanksgiving Hymns [1QH] 5.20; 10.14). V. 1b implies the title King of the ages (vv. 6, 10). 13.2 On the word pair afflicts / shows mercy (see also v. 5), see note on 11.15. Tobit's situation is inseparable from the nation's; see note on 3.2–5. Sickness and healing were, in Israelite thought, descent to and return from Sheol (Greek Hades), the realm of the dead. The complex of ideas here echoes Deut 32.39; 1 Sam 2.6; Wis 16.13–15; 2 Macc 7.35. For death, Sheol, and resurrection as metaphors for exile and return, cf. Ezek 34; Bar 2.17; 3.4–8. 13.3–7 The first of two major sections of the hymn. Its vocabulary echoes Deut 30.2, and it presumes the importance of Deut 28–33 as a prediction of Israel's situation in exile and Diaspora. The Deuteronomic scheme of sin, punishment, repentance, and salvation predominates in Jewish literature of the Greco-Roman period. Cf. Baruch; 2 Macc 3–8; Jubilees 23.14–31. 13.3 This section of the hymn is addressed to the children of Israel . . . scattered in exile. Like the blessing in v. 1, “I acknowledge you O Lord . . . for . . .” is formulaic in contemporary hymns (cf. Dead Sea Scrolls Thanksgiving Hymns [1QH] 3.19; 4.5). 13.5 Return to the promised land is the solution for the Diaspora and exile faced by the author. 13.6 Such a restoration requires that Israel repent (turn to him [God] with all your heart and all your soul). Tobit's acknowledgment of God to a nation of sinners reflects a concern that the enemy not draw unwarranted conclusions about its power and the weakness of Israel's God, who is described throughout the hymn with titles

- to do what is true before him, then he will turn to you and will no longer hide his face
 from you.
 So now see what he has done and bless the King of the ages, so that his tent^j may be rebuilt in you in joy.

 May he cheer all those within you who are captives,
 and love all those within you who are distressed,
 to all generations forever.
 11 A bright light will shine to all the
 ends of the earth;

- many nations will come to you from far away,
 the inhabitants of the remotest parts of the earth to your holy name,
 bearing gifts in their hands for the King of heaven.
 Generation after generation will give joyful praise in you;
 the name of the chosen city will endure forever.
 12 Cursed are all who speak a harsh word against you;
 cursed are all who conquer you and pull down your walls, all who overthrow your towers and set your homes on fire.
 But blessed forever will be all who revere you.^k
 13 Go, then, and rejoice over the that emphasize the divine power, majesty, and sovereignty. On this concern, cf. Deut 32.27–31; Dan 1–6. 13.8–17 Although Tobit is a Galilean, the second major part of the hymn focuses on Jerusalem as the locus of salvation; cf. 1.6–8; 14.5–7. Like other contemporary texts influenced by Isa 40–66 (the chief source for the hope of Zion's restoration), these verses do not foresee a restoration of the Davidic dynasty. God will rule as King without an earthly agent. 13.16–17 Cf. Isa 54.11–14 and the even bolder allusion to the new Jerusalem in Rev 21.9–27.

Tobit's Testament

14 So ended Tobit's words of praise. 2 Tobitⁿ died in peace when he was one hundred twelve years old, and was buried with great honor in Nineveh. He was sixty-two^o years old when he lost his eyesight, and after regaining it he lived in prosperity, giving alms and continually blessing God and acknowledging God's majesty.

3 When he was about to die, he called his son Tobias and the seven sons of Tobias^p and gave this command: "My son, take your children⁴ and hurry off to Media, for I believe the word of God that Nahum spoke about Nineveh, that all these things will take place and overtake Assyria and Nineveh. Indeed, everything that was spoken by the prophets of Israel, whom God sent, will occur. None of all their words will fail, but all will come true at their appointed times. So it will be safer in Media than in Assyria and Babylon. For I know and believe that whatever God has said will be fulfilled and will come true; not a single word of the prophecies will fail. All of our kindred, inhabitants of the land of Israel, will be scattered and taken as captives from the good land; and the whole land of Israel will be desolate, even Samaria and Jerusalem will be desolate. And the temple of God in it will be burned to the ground, and it will be desolate for a while.^q

5 "But God will again have mercy on them, and God will bring them back into the land of Israel; and they will rebuild the temple of God, but not like the first one until the period when the times of fulfillment shall come. After this they all will return from their exile and will rebuild Jerusalem in splendor; and in it the

14.1–11a The final chapter centers on the events relating to Tobit's death, especially his second testament (vv. 3–11a), which, unlike the first (ch. 4), focuses on predictions about the future (vv. 4–7). 14.2–3a The narrative introduction contrasts with the setting of Tobit's first testament and affirms that Tobit's piety has been rewarded; his almsgiving and praise of God have led to a long, prosperous life. 14.4–7 Tobit supports his predictions by appealing to everything that was spoken by the prophets of Israel (v. 4); cf. 2.6; 14.5. These references attest the authority of the biblical prophetic corpus in at least some circles during the author's time. Vv. 4–5 are the earliest extant testimony to the belief that the events of history are fixed and must occur at their appointed times (v. 4) in accordance with prophetic predictions. Later apocalyptic speculation lays out detailed scenarios based on this idea; cf. Dan 10–12; 1 Enoch 85–90; 91.11–17; 93.1–10. A number of NT texts also presume that future events are fixed and must occur according to the prophetic word (Mk 8.31; 9.11; 13.7, 10; Rev 1.1; cf. Acts 1.7). Identifiable historical events in Tobit's scenario for the future begin with the destruction of Nineveh (612 B.C.E.), predicted by the prophet Nahum (v. 4), and end with the return from the Babylonian exile and the rebuilding of Jerusalem in splendor (515 B.C.E.; v. 5), as foreseen in Isa 40–66. In vv. 5b–7, the recitation of historical events gives way to a picture of the future that transcends the author's experience: a glorified temple, the conversion of the nations and their abandoning of their idols, the full return of the Diaspora, and the removal of sin from the earth. Elements in this scenario are predicted in the books of the temple of God will be rebuilt, just as the prophets of Israel have said concerning it. ⁶Then the nations in the whole world will all be converted and worship God in truth. They will all abandon their idols, which deceitfully have led them into their error; ⁷and in righteousness they will praise the eternal God. All the Israelites who are saved in those days and are truly mindful of God will be gathered together; they will go to Jerusalem and live in safety forever in the land of Abraham, and it will be given over to them. Those who sincerely love God will rejoice, but those who commit sin and injustice will vanish from all the earth. ^{8,9}So now, my children, I command you, serve God faithfully and do what is pleasing in his sight. Your children are also to be commanded to do what is right and to give alms, and to be mindful of God and to bless his name at all times with sincerity and with all their strength. So now, my son, leave Nineveh; do not remain here. ¹⁰On whatever day you bury your mother beside me, do not stay overnight within the confines of the city. For I see that there is much wickedness within it, and that much deceit is practiced within it, while the people are without shame. See, my son, what Nadab did to Ahikar who had reared him. Was he not, while still alive, brought down into the earth? For God repaid him to his face for this shameful treatment. Ahikar came out into the light, but Nadab went into the eternal darkness, because he tried to kill Ahikar. Because he gave alms, Ahikar^r escaped the fatal trap that Nadab had set for him, but Nadab fell into it himself, and was destroyed. ¹¹So now, my children, see what almsgiving accomplishes, and what injustice does—it brings death! But now my breath fails me.”

The Death of Tobit and Anna

Then they laid him on his bed, and he died; and he received an honorable funeral. ¹²When Tobias's mother died, he buried her beside his father. Then he and his wife and children^s returned to Media and settled in Ecbatana with Raguel his father-in-law. ¹³He treated his parents-in-law^t with great respect in their old age, and buried them in Ecbatana of Media. He inherited both the property of Raguel and that of his father Tobit. ¹⁴He died highly respected at the age of one hundred seventeen^u years. ¹⁵Before he died he heard^v of the destruction of Nineveh, and he saw its prisoners being led into Media, those whom King Cyaxares^w of Media had taken captive. Tobias^x praised God for all he had done to the people of Nineveh and Assyria; before he died he rejoiced over Nineveh, and he blessed the Lord God forever and ever. Amen.^y prophets, notably Isa 40–66, but the best parallel is 1 Enoch 91.11–14. 14.7 A return from the Diaspora to the land of Israel is a common topic in texts of the Greco-Roman period (cf. Sir 36.11; Bar 4.21–5.9; Psalms of Solomon 11; 1 Enoch 90.33). In keeping with a major emphasis in the patriarchal narratives (Gen 12.1; 13.14–18; 15.7, 18–19), Israel is identified as the land of Abraham. 14.8–11a Tobit's testament concludes with a summary of ethical instruction that reiterates motifs in ch. 4 and 12.8–10. Here Tobit's example is supplemented by those of Nadab and Ahikar (v. 10); on Ahikar's almsgiving, cf. 2.10. 14.11b–13 The honorable funeral of Tobit (v. 11b) and the reference to Tobias's inheritance (v. 13) are final reminders that this is a story about the wealthy. For this author, the pious rich deserve splendid burials. Cf. Lk 16.19–31; 1 Enoch 103.5–8. 14.13 Tobias's responsibility as a son extends to the burial of his parents-in-law. 14.15 The destruction of Nineveh guarantees the fulfillment of the other predictions in Tobit's testament. Not surprisingly, the book ends with Tobias blessing the Lord.

JUDITH

WRITTEN IN GREEK and found only in the Septuagint, Judith is excluded from the Hebrew canon as an “outside book.” Protestants regard Judith as part of the Apocrypha. Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox Christians designate Judith as one of the deuterocanonical books in the OT, listing it as one of the historical books.

The story is extant in four Greek recensions (Septuagint codices Vaticanus, Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus, and Basiliano-Vaticanus), four translations (Old Latin, Syriac, Sahidic, and Ethiopic), and other relatively late abridged and modified Hebrew versions. Despite Jerome’s claim in the Vulgate to have translated an Aramaic text, no ancient Aramaic or Hebrew manuscripts have been found. The oldest extant text of Judith is likely a third-century C.E. potsherd on which Jdt 15.1–7 is preserved.

Setting and Date

Judith is an anonymous book, likely written by a Palestinian Jew. Nothing is known about its author, except what can be surmised from the story itself, which is written in Greek that imitates Hebrew idiom and syntax. The story imaginatively intermingles references to well-known geographic sites with uncertain and even imaginary ones. Judith shows familiarity with Palestinian, Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian, and Greek history and geography, and most especially Jewish religious customs of the second and first centuries B.C.E.

Because Judith is replete with conflated details drawn from at least five centuries of real history, the exact date of its composition cannot be determined. There are historical references to Nineveh (1.1; 2.21), the Assyrian capital destroyed in the seventh century (612 B.C.E.); Nebuchadnezzar (1.1), a sixth-century Babylonian ruler (605/4–562 B.C.E.); the Second Temple (4.3), rebuilt by 515 B.C.E.; two characters with Persian names, Holofernes and Bagoas (12.10–11), who appear together in the fourth century in the campaigns of Artaxerxes III Ochus (358–338 B.C.E.); as well as references associated with the second century B.C.E. when Antiochus IV Epiphanes required that the Jews forsake their God (cf. 3.8) and when the Jews were governed by a high priest (cf. 4.6) with military and religious responsibilities (cf. 1 Macc 14.41–49).

A reference to Judith in the first letter of Clement of Rome in the first century C.E. makes it clear that the story was composed before this time. Most likely Judith was composed late in the second or early in the first century B.C.E., during the late Hasmonean period.

The story suits the reign of John Hyrcanus (134–104 B.C.E.), who served as both king and high priest of Jerusalem. Early in Hyrcanus's reign, after Jerusalem had been under siege for a year, he agreed to pay a heavy tribute to the Seleucid king Antiochus VII Sidetes. On the death of Antiochus in 129 B.C.E., Hyrcanus ceased paying the indemnity and expanded the borders of his territory. He forced the Idumeans (Edomites) to become Jews. Similar issues related to fear of military domination and contest over which God should be served figure in the story of Judith.

Narrative Character and Structure

There can be no doubt that Judith was meant as didactic fiction, not factual history. Not only are historical and geographical details of the story conflated but its most important scene and star character are otherwise unknown. Most of the story takes place during two fateful months in 587 B.C.E. in the little town Bethulia, described as strategically located to the north of Jerusalem in the region of Samaria, but otherwise unknown in Palestinian geography. For thirty-four days Bethulia is under attack (7.20); for four days Judith, the otherwise unknown courageous woman who delivers her people, is in the enemy camp (12.10); and for thirty days the Israelites go out from this town to plunder the Assyrians (15.11).

The sixteen chapters of Judith divide into two balanced and proportional parts. Each is structured internally by a threefold chiasmic pattern that repeats certain narrative components in reverse order.

Part 1 (1.1–7.32) narrates a military and religious struggle that begins in Persia and makes its way across the western nations to the little Israelite town Bethulia. Nebuchadnezzar's political sovereignty over all the nations of the western world and God's divine sovereignty over Israel come into direct conflict. Judging themselves guilty of some sin (7.28), the besieged Bethulians lose faith and declare that God has abandoned them (7.25). Crisis makes apostasy and slavery look appealing, and they ask their leaders to surrender. Uziah, a town official, suggests a compromise that gives God five days to deliver them. As Part 1 ends, the Bethulians, "in great misery" (7.32), have temporarily postponed what seems inevitable surrender, destruction of their sanctuary, and worship of Nebuchadnezzar.

Part 2 (8.1–16.25) tells how the God-fearing woman Judith destroys the enemies of Israel. This "beautiful" widow of Manasseh (8.7) lays aside the sackcloth of her widowhood in order to make herself "very beautiful, to entice the eyes of all the men who might see her" (10.4). The elders of Bethulia (10.7), the Assyrian patrol (10.14), the entire Assyrian camp (10.19), and most importantly Holofernes, the Assyrian general (10.23), marvel at her "beauty." Holofernes and his servants acclaim her as "beautiful" and "wise" in speech (11.21, 23). Holofernes is so aroused that he instructs his eunuch, Bagoas, to persuade her to eat and drink with them so that he might have an opportunity for sexual intercourse with her (12.13). Judith, who "fears God with great devotion" (8.8), proves more than equal to his seduction and the theological confusion that has brought her own community to the threshold of surrender.

Together Parts 1 and 2 show what it means to serve only one God, to turn to this God for an easing of life's plights, and to trust God without reserve. The book teaches that by vocation and God's design, the covenant people are free if they fear only God and rely wholeheartedly on the covenant. Toni Craven

Nebuchadnezzar's Campaign Against Arphaxad

1 It was the twelfth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who ruled over the Assyrians in the great city of Nineveh. In those days Arphaxad ruled over the Medes in Ecbatana. ²He built walls around Ecbatana with hewn stones three cubits thick and six cubits long; he made the walls seventy cubits high and fifty cubits wide. ³At its gates he raised towers one hundred cubits high and sixty cubits wide at the foundations. ⁴He made its gates seventy cubits high and forty cubits wide to allow his armies to march out in force and his infantry to form their ranks. ⁵Then King Nebuchadnezzar made war against King Arphaxad in the great plain that is on the borders of Ragau. ⁶There rallied to him all the people of the hill country and all those who lived along the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Hydaspes, and, on the plain, Arioch, king of the Elymeans. Thus, many nations joined the forces of the Chaldeans.^a 7 Then Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, sent messengers to all who lived in Persia and to all who lived in the west, those who lived in Cilicia and Damascus, Lebanon and Antilebanon, and all who lived along the seacoast, ⁸and those among the nations of Carmel and Gilead, and Upper Galilee and the great plain of Esdraelon, ⁹and all who were in Samaria and its towns, and beyond the Jordan as far as Jerusalem and Bethany and Chelous and Kadesh and the river of Egypt, and Tahpanhes and Raamses and the whole land of Goshen, ¹⁰even beyond Tanis and Memphis, and all who lived in Egypt as far as the borders of Ethiopia.

1.1-7.32 Part 1. 1.1-1.16 Introduction to Nebuchadnezzar and his campaign against Arphaxad. Arphaxad and his strongly fortified capital city, Ecbatana, are destroyed. Vassal nations who do and do not join Nebuchadnezzar are tallied. 1.1 Nebuchadnezzar (605/4-562 B.C.E.), the most famous Neo-Babylonian king, ruled from Babylon, not Nineveh, and destroyed Jerusalem in 587 B.C.E. (2 Kings 24-25). His father, Nabopolassar, together with Cyzaxes, the king of the Medes, destroyed the Assyrian capital Nineveh in 612 B.C.E. In the twelfth year (593 B.C.E.), Nebuchadnezzar is described as a military aggressor against the invented character Arphaxad in his Median capital. Ecbatana, modern Hamadan, three hundred miles northeast of Babylon and three hundred and twenty-five southeast of Nineveh, a favorite summer palace of the Persian King Cyrus; the city figures in Tob 3.7 as the home of Sarah, the daughter of Edna and Raguel, and in Ezra 6.2 as the place where the edict permitting the Babylonian exiles to return home was preserved. 1.5 Ragau, two hundred miles northeast of Ecbatana, mentioned in v. 15 as the place where Arphaxad is slain. 1.6 Chaldeans, ¹¹But all who lived in the whole region disregarded the summons of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, and refused to join him in the war; for they were not afraid of him, but regarded him as only one man.^b So they sent back his messengers empty-handed and in disgrace.

¹²Then Nebuchadnezzar became very angry with this whole region, and swore by his throne and kingdom that he would take revenge on the whole territory of Cilicia and Damascus and Syria, that he would kill with his sword also all the inhabitants of the land of Moab, and the people of Ammon, and all Judea, and every one in Egypt, as far as the coasts of the two seas.

¹³In the seventeenth year he led his forces against King Arphaxad and defeated him in battle, overthrowing the whole army of Arphaxad and all his cavalry and all his chariots. ¹⁴Thus he took possession of his towns and came to Ecbatana, captured its towers, plundered its markets, and turned its glory into disgrace. ¹⁵He captured Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragau and struck him down with his spears, thus destroying him once and for all. ¹⁶Then he returned to Nineveh, he and all his combined forces, a vast body of troops; and there he and his forces rested and feasted for one hundred twenty days.

The Expedition Against the West

2 In the eighteenth year, on the twenty-second day of the first month, there was talk in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, about carrying out his revenge on the whole region, just as he had said. ²He summoned all his ministers and all his nobles and set before them his secret plan and recounted fully, with his own lips, all the wickedness of the region.^c ³They decided that every one who had not obeyed his command should be destroyed.

⁴When he had completed his plan, Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, called Holofernes, the chief general of his army, second only to himself, and said to him, ⁵"Thus says the Great King, the lord of the whole earth: Leave my presence and take with you men confident in their strength, one hundred twenty thousand foot soldiers and twelve thousand cavalry. ⁶March out against all the land to the west, because they disobeyed my orders. ⁷Tell them to prepare earth and water, for I am coming against them in my anger, and will cover the whole face of the earth with the feet of my troops, to whom I will hand them over to be plundered. ⁸Their wounded shall fill their ravines and gullies, and the swelling river shall be filled with their dead. ⁹I will lead them away captive to the ends of the whole earth. ¹⁰You shall go and seize all their territory for me in advance. They must yield themselves to you, and you shall hold them for me until the day of their punishment. ¹¹But to those who resist show no mercy, but hand them over to slaughter and plunder throughout your whole region. ¹²For as I live, and by the power of my kingdom, what I have spoken I will accomplish by my own hand. ¹³And you—take care not to transgress any of your lord's commands, but carry

Neo-Babylonians. 1.11 The whole region of the west corresponds to Syria, Lebanon, Palestine, and Egypt; see note on 2.1. 1.12 The two seas, unclear, possibly the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. 1.13 In the seventeenth year (588 B.C.E.), without the help of the nations of the west, Nebuchadnezzar defeats Arphaxad.

2.1–13 Nebuchadnezzar commissions Holofernes to take vengeance on the disobedient vassal nations. 2.1 Most of the story (2.1–16.20) is imagined as having occurred in the eighteenth year, the catastrophic year 587 B.C.E., when Jerusalem actually fell to the historical Nebuchadnezzar. Revenge is planned against the whole region, meaning all the nations west of Persia as far as Egypt.

These nations are referenced nine times in Jdt 1–2: 1.7–10 specifies the nations; the whole region (or the region) appears again in 1.11; 1.12; 2.1; 2.2; 2.11; all the land to the west in 2.6; the whole face of the earth to the west in 2.19; and 2.23–28 details the ravaging of specific western nations. 2.2 Ironically Nebuchadnezzar fully recounts his secret plan . . . with his own lips, but in 8.34 Judith keeps her plan secret. 2.5–13 Calling himself the Great King, the lord of the whole earth, Nebuchadnezzar, in his only speech, declares that all the rebel lands must surrender. 2.10–13 Nebuchadnezzar specifically instructs Holofernes to seize the disobedient territory and hold it, killing only those who refuse to surrender.

them out exactly as I have ordered you; do it without delay.”

Campaign of Holofernes

14 So Holofernes left the presence of his lord, and summoned all the commanders, generals, and officers of the Assyrian army. 15 He mustered the picked troops by divisions as his lord had ordered him to do, one hundred twenty thousand of them, together with twelve thousand archers on horseback, 16 and he organized them as a great army is marshaled for a campaign. 17 He took along a vast number of camels and donkeys and mules for transport, and innumerable sheep and oxen and goats for food; 18 also ample rations for everyone, and a huge amount of gold and silver from the royal palace.

19 Then he set out with his whole army, to go ahead of King Nebuchadnezzar and to cover the whole face of the earth to the west with their chariots and cavalry and picked foot soldiers. 20 Along with them went a mixed crowd like a swarm of locusts, like the dust^d of the earth—a multitude that could not be counted.

21 They marched for three days from Nineveh to the plain of Bectileth, and camped opposite Bectileth near the mountain that is to the north of Upper Cilicia. 22 From there Holofernes^e took his whole army, the infantry, cavalry, and chariots, and went up into the hill country. 23 He ravaged Put and Lud, and plundered all the Rassisites and the Ishmaelites on the border of the desert, south of the country of the Chelleans. 24 Then he followed^f the Euphrates and passed through Mesopotamia and destroyed all the fortified towns along the brook Abron, as far as the sea. 25 He also seized the territory of Cilicia, and killed everyone who resisted him. Then he came to the southern borders of Japheth, facing Arabia. 26 He surrounded all the Midianites, and burned their tents and plundered their sheepfolds. 27 Then he went down into the plain of Damascus during the wheat harvest, and burned all their fields and destroyed their flocks and herds and sacked their towns and ravaged their lands and put all their young men to the sword.

28 So fear and dread of him fell upon

2.14–7.32 Holofernes attacks the western nations. The confrontation between the various nations who refused to aid Nebuchadnezzar is told in a threefold chiasmic structure—similar episodes are repeated in reverse order. Each unit is defined by a major shift of scene, alternation between the nations of Assyria and Israel, and a temporal clause. In the following notes, the scenes are labeled A, B, C, and their counterparts, C', B', A'. In domino-like fashion, the nations topple to Assyria as “terror” sweeps across the empire at large (2.28), then Judea (4.1), and finally Bethulia (7.4).

2.14–3.10 In Section A of the first chiasmic unit (see note on 2.14–7.32), Holofernes leads the campaign against the disobedient nations; the vassals surrender. The line of advance is from Nineveh to Damascus; all the vassals are ravaged, plundered, burned, and destroyed. 2.21 The plain of Bectileth, an unidentified plain opposite Upper Cilicia, a distance of three hundred miles from Nineveh, which would be impossible to cover in three days. 2.23 Put and Lud, Rassisites, Chelleans, unknown locations and peoples here in proximity to Cilicia (a large and important area in the southeastern coastal zone of Asia Minor, divided into western and eastern parts by the Lamus River). Ishmaelites, Arabs. 2.24 Then he followed the Euphrates, geographically impossible without backtracking. Abron, unknown. 2.25 Seized . . . Cilicia seems better after v. 21. Japheth, the youngest of Noah's three sons, ancestor of the Indo-European family of nations whose area stretched from the south coast of Europe to Persia (Gen 5.32; 10.2–5). Facing Arabia, facing the Syrian desert (1 Macc 11.16). 2.26 Midianites, nomads identified in the annals of Tiglath-pileser III (ca. 732 B.C.E.) as Haiappu, perhaps located in northwest Arabia. 2.27 Damascus, capital of Syria. 2.28 People who lived along the seacoast. Seven peoples are listed in the Phoenician maritime and commercial centers. Sidon, a city on the Mediterranean coast. Tyre, originally an island twenty-five miles south of Sidon, difficult to subdue because of its protected location. Nebuchadnezzar besieged Tyre for thirteen years; Alexander attacked it by building a mole half a mile long and 200 feet wide from the mainland. Sur, Ocina, both unknown. Jamnia, nine miles north of Azotus, about four miles inland. Azotus, formerly Ashdod, one of the five principal cities of the Philistines. Ascalon, also one of the five all the people who lived along the seacoast, at Sidon and Tyre, and those who lived in Sur and Ocina and all who lived in Jamnia. Those who lived in Azotus and Ascalon feared him greatly.

3 They therefore sent messengers to him to sue for peace in these words: ²"We, the servants of Nebuchadnezzar, the Great King, lie prostrate before you. Do with us whatever you will. ³See, our buildings and all our land and all our wheat fields and our flocks and herds and all our encampments^g lie before you; do with them as you please. ⁴Our towns and their inhabitants are also your slaves; come and deal with them as you see fit."

5 The men came to Holofernes and told him all this. ⁶Then he went down to the seacoast with his army and stationed garrisons in the fortified towns and took picked men from them as auxiliaries. ⁷These people and all in the countryside welcomed him with garlands and dances and tambourines. ⁸Yet he demolished all their shrines^h and cut down their sacred groves; for he had been commissioned to destroy all the gods of the land, so that all nations should worship Nebuchadnezzar alone, and that all their dialects and tribes should call upon him as a god.

9 Then he came toward Esdraelon, near Dothan, facing the great ridge of Judea; ¹⁰he camped between Geba and Scythopolis, and remained for a whole month in order to collect all the supplies for his army.

Judea on the Alert

4 When the Israelites living in Judea heard of everything that Holofernes, the general of Nebuchadnezzar, the king of the Assyrians, had done to the nations, and how he had plundered and destroyed all their temples, ²they were therefore greatly terrified at his approach; they were alarmed both for Jerusalem and for the temple of the Lord their God. ³For they had only recently returned from exile, and all the people of Judea had just now gathered together, and the sacred vessels and the altar and the temple had been consecrated after their profanation. ⁴So they sent word to every district of Samaria, and to Kona, Beth-horon, Belmain, and Jericho, and to Choba and Aesora, and the valley of Salem. ⁵They immediately seized all the high hilltops and fortified the villages on them and stored up food in preparation for war—since their fields had recently been harvested.

6 The high priest, Joakim, who was in Jerusalem at the time, wrote to the people of Bethulia and Betomesthaim, which faces Esdraelon opposite the plain near Dothan, ⁷ordering them to seize the mountain passes, since by them Judea could be invaded; and it would be easy to stop any who tried to enter, for the approach was narrow, wide enough for only two at a time to pass.

Ptolemy V of Egypt (203–181 B.C.E.) was the first king to present himself as "God Manifest." No Assyrian, Babylonian, or Persian king is known to have claimed divinity. 3.9 Esdraelon, the western portion of the Valley of Jezreel. Dothan, fifteen miles southeast of Scythopolis, is mentioned also in 4.6; 7.3, 18; 8.3, leading some to suggest that this was the author's home. 3.10 Geba, uncertain. Scythopolis, the only city in Judith given its Greek name, strategically guarded the eastern end of the Valley of Jezreel.

the scene shifts to Judea and what is happening there. Israel hears and is greatly terrified; Joakim orders war preparations. 4.3 Recently returned from exile, a reference to 539 B.C.E., inconsistent with 2.1. The issue is further complicated by the reference consecrated after their profanation, referring to the rededication of the temple, either sometime after 515 B.C.E. or even 164 B.C.E. 4.4 Of the eight cities listed, only Samaria, Beth-horon, and Jericho can be located. 4.6 The high priest Joakim (see also 4.8, 14; 15.8) exercises both military and religious authority (on this role of the high priest, see Jonathan in 1 Macc 10.18–21; on the name, see Neh 12.26). Bethulia. Bethel? Shechem? Betomesthaim, unknown. 4.7 Wide enough for only two at a time to pass, dramatic exaggeration. 4.8 Senate. A supreme Jewish council was not known until the Maccabean period (see and the senate of the whole people of Israel, in session at Jerusalem. ⁹And every man of Israel cried out to God with great fervor, and they humbled themselves with much fasting. ¹⁰They and their wives and their children and their cattle and every resident alien and hired laborer and purchased slave—they all put sackcloth around their waists. ¹¹And all the Israelite men, women, and children living at Jerusalem prostrated themselves before the temple and put ashes on their heads and spread out their sackcloth before the Lord. ¹²They even draped the altar with sackcloth and cried out in unison, praying fervently to the God of Israel not to allow their infants to be carried off and their wives to be taken as booty, and the towns they had inherited to be destroyed, and the sanctuary to be profaned and desecrated to the malicious joy of the Gentiles.

¹³ The Lord heard their prayers and had regard for their distress; for the people fasted many days throughout Judea and in Jerusalem before the sanctuary of the Lord Almighty. ¹⁴The high priest Joakim and all the priests who stood before the Lord and ministered to the Lord, with sackcloth around their loins, offered the daily burnt offerings, the votive offerings, and freewill offerings of the people. ¹⁵With ashes on their turbans, they cried out to the Lord with all their might to look with favor on the whole house of Israel.

Achior in the Council Against the Israelites

5 It was reported to Holofernes, the general of the Assyrian army, that the people of Israel had prepared for war and had closed the mountain passes and fortified all the high hilltops and set up barricades in the plains. ²In great anger he called together all the princes of Moab and the commanders of Ammon and all the governors of the coastland, ³and said to them, "Tell me, you Canaanites, what people is this that lives in the hill country? What towns do they inhabit? How large is their army, and in what does their power and strength consist? Who rules over them as king and leads their army? ⁴And why have they alone, of all who live in the west, refused to come out and meet me?"

⁵ Then Achior, the leader of all the Ammonites, said to him, "May my lord please listen to a report from the mouth of your servant, and I will tell you the truth about this people that lives in the mountain district near you. No falsehood shall come from your servant's mouth. ⁶These people are descended from the Chaldeans. ⁷At one time they lived in Mesopotamia, because they did not wish to follow the gods of their ancestors who were in Chaldea. ⁸Since they had abandoned the ways of their ancestors, and worshiped the God of heaven, the God they had come to know, their ancestors drove them out from the presence of their gods. So they fled to Mesopotamia, and lived there for a long time. ⁹Then their God commanded them to leave the place where they were living and go to the land of Canaan. There they settled, and grew very prosperous in gold and silver and very much livestock. ¹⁰When a famine spread over the land of Canaan they went down to Egypt and lived there as long as they had food. There they became so great a multitude that their race could not be counted. ¹¹So the king of Egypt became hostile to them; he exploited them and forced them to make bricks. ¹²They cried out to their God, and he afflicted the whole land of Egypt with incurable plagues. So the Egyptians drove them out of their sight. ¹³Then God dried up

2 Macc 11.27). The Greek term used here, gerousia, is also used in 11.14; 15.8. 4.10 Wearing sackcloth was a traditional act of mourning, penitence, and supplication. 4.13 The Lord heard their prayers, an important detail in the later development of the story when the people believe God has abandoned them (7.25).

5.1–6.13 In Section C (see note on 2.14–7.32) the scene shifts to the Assyrian camp outside Bethulia. Holofernes talks with Achior; Achior is expelled from the Assyrian camp. 5.2 Moab, Ammon. The Moabites, east of the Dead Sea, and the Ammonites, in Transjordan north of Moab, were Semitic peoples who were traditional enemies of Israel (see 2 Kings 24.2). 5.5 Achior, a righteous Gentile. His name may mean in Hebrew "brother of light" or may be derived from Achihud, meaning "brother of Judah." 5.5–21 Achior recites Israel's history from Abraham to the exile and defends God's special protection of the covenant people if they do not sin. 5.8 God of heaven, also in 6.19; 11.17 (cf. 7.28; 9.12; 13.18); the title is more common in Persian times (see Gen 24.3, 7; 2 Chr 36.23; Ezra 1.2; the Red Sea before them, ¹⁴and he led them by the way of Sinai and Kadesh-barnea. They drove out all the people of the desert, ¹⁵and took up residence in the land of the Amorites, and by their might destroyed all the inhabitants of Heshbon; and crossing over the Jordan they took possession of all the hill country. ¹⁶They drove out before them the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Shechemites, and all the Gergesites, and lived there a long time.

¹⁷ "As long as they did not sin against their God they prospered, for the God who hates iniquity is with them. ¹⁸But when they departed from the way he had prescribed for them, they were utterly defeated in many battles and were led away captive to a foreign land. The temple of their God was razed to the ground, and their towns were occupied by their enemies. ¹⁹But now they have returned to their God, and have come back from the places where they were scattered, and have occupied Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and have settled in the hill country, because it was uninhabited.

²⁰ "So now, my master and lord, if there is any oversight in this people and they sin against their God and we find out their offense, then we can go up and defeat them. ²¹But if they are not a guilty nation, then let my lord pass them by; for their Lord and God will defend them, and we shall become the laughingstock of the whole world."

²² When Achior had finished saying these things, all the people standing around the tent began to complain; Holofernes' officers and all the inhabitants of the seacoast and Moab insisted that he should be cut to pieces. ²³They said, "We are not afraid of the Israelites; they are a people with no strength or power for making war. ²⁴Therefore let us go ahead, Lord Holofernes, and your vast army will swallow them up."

6 When the disturbance made by the people outside the council had died down, Holofernes, the commander of the Assyrian army, said to Achior^j in the presence of all the foreign contingents:

² "Who are you, Achior and you mercenaries of Ephraim, to prophesy among us as you have done today and tell us not to make war against the people of Israel because their God will defend them? What god is there except Nebuchadnezzar? He will send his forces and destroy them from the face of the earth. Their God will not save them; ³we the king's^k servants will destroy them as one man. They cannot resist the might of our cavalry. ⁴We will overwhelm them;^l their mountains will be drunk with their blood, and their fields will be full of their dead. Not even their footprints will survive our attack; they will utterly perish. So says King Nebuchadnezzar, lord of the whole earth. For he has spoken; none of his words shall be in vain.

⁵ "As for you, Achior, you Ammonite mercenary, you have said these words in a moment of perversity; you shall not see my face again from this day until I take revenge on this race that came out of Egypt. ⁶Then at my return the sword of my army and the spear^m of my servants shall pierce your sides, and you shall fall among their wounded. ⁷Now my slaves are going to take you back into the hill country and put you in one of the towns beside the passes. ⁸You will not die until you perish along with them. ⁹If you really hope in your heart that they will not be taken, then do not look downcast! I have spoken, and none of my words shall fail to come true."

¹⁰ Then Holofernes ordered his slaves, who waited on him in his tent, to seize Achior and take him away to Bethulia and hand him over to the Israelites.

The inclusion of the Shechemites is unusual and perhaps anticipates the allusion to revenge on the Shechemites by Simeon in Judith's prayer (9.2). 6.2 Who are you? ... What god is there except Nebuchadnezzar? Holofernes asks important identity questions that constitute one of the corresponding symmetries in the two halves of the book. In 8.12, Judith asks the magistrates of Bethulia, Who are you to put God to the test today? 6.5-9 Holofernes declares that Achior will not see his face again until revenge is taken against the Israelites; this verse anticipates the reversal of 14.6.

¹¹So the slaves took him and led him out of the camp into the plain, and from the plain they went up into the hill country and came to the springs below Bethulia. ¹²When the men of the town saw them,ⁿ they seized their weapons and ran out of the town to the top of the hill, and all the slingers kept them from coming up by throwing stones at them. ¹³So having taken shelter below the hill, they bound Achior and left him lying at the foot of the hill, and returned to their master.

Achior in Bethulia

¹⁴ Then the Israelites came down from their town and found him; they untied him and brought him into Bethulia and placed him before the magistrates of their town, ¹⁵who in those days were Uz-ziah son of Micah, of the tribe of Simeon, and Chabris son of Gothoniell, and Charmis son of Melchiel. ¹⁶They called together all the elders of the town, and all their young men and women ran to the assembly. They set Achior in the midst of all their people, and Uz-ziah questioned him about what had happened. ¹⁷He answered and told them what had taken place at the council of Holofernes, and all that he had said in the presence of the Assyrian leaders, and all that Holofernes had boasted he would do against the house of Israel. ¹⁸Then the people fell down and worshiped God, and cried out:

¹⁹ "O Lord God of heaven, see their arrogance, and have pity on our people in their humiliation, and look kindly today on the faces of those who are consecrated to you."

²⁰ Then they reassured Achior, and praised him highly. ²¹Uzziah took him from the assembly to his own house and gave a banquet for the elders; and all that night they called on the God of Israel for help.

War Preparations

7 The next day Holofernes ordered his whole army, and all the allies who had joined him, to break camp and move against Bethulia, and to seize the passes up into the hill country and make war on the Israelites. ²So all their warriors marched off that day; their fighting forces numbered one hundred seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, not counting the baggage and the foot soldiers handling it, a very great multitude. ³They encamped in the valley near Bethulia, beside the spring, and they spread out in breadth over Dothan as far as Balbaim and in length from Bethulia to Cyamon, which faces Esdraelon.

⁴ When the Israelites saw their vast numbers, they were greatly terrified and said to one another, "They will now strip clean the whole land; neither the high mountains nor the valleys nor the hills will

6.14–21 In Section C', which begins the second half of the chiasmic structure for Part 1 of the book (see note on 2.14–7.32), the scene shifts back to Israel. From this point on, the narrative in Part 1 inverts its scenes and actions. Achior who was expelled from the Assyrian camp is now brought into Bethulia; conversation with the Assyrian Holofernes corresponds to conversation with the Israelite magistrates of Bethulia. 6.15 Uzziah . . . of the tribe of Simeon. The tribe of Simeon first settled in the general vicinity of Shechem (Gen 34; Deut 27.12) but later moved to the most southerly border of the cultivated land in the vicinity of Beer-sheba with the capture of the town Zephath/Hormah (Judg 1.17); it is not mentioned in the Song of Deborah (Judg 5) or the blessing of Moses (Deut 33). Judith is also from the tribe of Simeon (9.2). Chabris, Charmis, invented characters. 6.18 Then the people fell down and worshiped God. As in 4.12, the people turn to God in their distress. 6.19 God of heaven, see note on 5.8.

7.1–5 In Section B' (see note on 2.14–7.32) the scene shifts to the Assyrian camp (vv. 1–3) and then back to the Bethulia (vv. 4–5). Holofernes orders war preparations; Israel sees this and is greatly terrified. 7.2 The forces of Holofernes have grown from one hundred twenty thousand (2.5, 15) to one hundred seventy thousand infantry. 7.3 As in 6.11 Bethulia is described as atop a hill with its water supply below it. If the writer had Shechem in mind as a model for Bethulia, then perhaps the spring is the so-called Well of Jacob, first mentioned in the story of the Samaritan woman (Jn 4.6). Tradition supports identification of this ancient site with a deep cistern or spring located at Shechem, near the foot of Mount Gerizim, where a junction of roads from Jerusalem and the Jordan Valley join. Dothan. See note on 3.9. Balbaim, Cyamon, unknown. 7.4–5 Despair overcomes the Bethulians when they see the enormity of their enemy. bear their weight." ⁵Yet they all seized their weapons, and when they had kindled fires on their towers, they remained on guard all that night.

The Campaign Against Bethulia

6 On the second day Holofernes led out all his cavalry in full view of the Israelites in Bethulia. ⁷He reconnoitered the approaches to their town, and visited the springs that supplied their water; he seized them and set guards of soldiers over them, and then returned to his army.

8 Then all the chieftains of the Edomites and all the leaders of the Moabites and the commanders of the coastland came to him and said, ⁹"Listen to what we have to say, my lord, and your army will suffer no losses. ¹⁰This people, the Israelites, do not rely on their spears but on the height of the mountains where they live, for it is not easy to reach the tops of their mountains. ¹¹Therefore, my lord, do not fight against them in regular formation, and not a man of your army will fall. ¹²Remain in your camp, and keep all the men in your forces with you; let your servants take possession of the spring of water that flows from the foot of the mountain, ¹³for this is where all the people of Bethulia get their water. So thirst will destroy them, and they will surrender their town. Meanwhile, we and our people will go up to the tops of the nearby mountains and camp there to keep watch to see that no one gets out of the town. ¹⁴They and their wives and children will waste away with famine, and before the sword reaches them they will be strewn about in the streets where they live. ¹⁵Thus you will pay them back with evil, because they rebelled and did not receive you peaceably."

16 These words pleased Holofernes and all his attendants, and he gave orders to do as they had said. ¹⁷So the army of the Ammonites moved forward, together with five thousand Assyrians, and they encamped in the valley and seized the water supply and the springs of the Israelites. ¹⁸And the Edomites and Ammonites went up and encamped in the hill country opposite Dothan; and they sent some of their men toward the south and the east, toward Egreh, which is near Chusi beside the Wadi Mochmur. The rest of the Assyrian army encamped in the plain, and covered the whole face of the land. Their tents and supply trains spread out in great number, and they formed a vast multitude.

The Distress of the Israelites

19 The Israelites then cried out to the Lord their God, for their courage failed, because all their enemies had surrounded them, and there was no way of escape from them. ²⁰The whole Assyrian army, their infantry, chariots, and cavalry, surrounded them for thirty-four days, until all the water containers of every inhabitant of Bethulia were empty; ²¹their cisterns were going dry, and on no day did they have enough water to drink, for their drinking water was rationed. ²²Their children were listless, and the women and young men fainted from thirst and were collapsing in the streets of the town and in the gateways; they no longer had any strength.

7.6–32 In Section A', which completes the first chiasm (see note on 2.14–7.32), the scene shifts between the Assyrian camp (vv. 6–18) and Bethulia (vv. 19–32). Holofernes leads the campaign against Bethulia; the Bethulians want to surrender. 7.7 Holofernes seized the spring (7.3) that supplied Bethulia's water. 7.8 Edomites (mentioned here for first time) and Moabites propose a scheme to cut off the water supply so that thirst and famine will destroy the Bethulians. 7.10 The leaders point out that the Israelites depend on the height of the mountains where they live for protection. 7.12 Take possession of the spring is redundant, given that the springs were taken and put under guard in 7.7. 7.13 Thirst will successfully devastate the Bethulians, but the plan to surround the town in order to see that no one gets out of the town ultimately fails because it is not enforced to stop the two women—Judith and her female servant—from leaving the city (10.9b–10) and saving it. 7.16 Holofernes orders the town surrounded, but either his order is ignored or understood to refer to men only. 7.18 Egreh, which is near Chusi beside the Wadi Mochmur, is likely Acraba, near Sychar's well, twenty-five miles north of Jerusalem. 7.19–32 The final scene in Part 1 takes the people of Bethulia to the threshold of surrender. 7.20 After being surrounded for thirty-four days, the Bethulians lose heart. In Part 2, Judith spends four days in the Assyrian

23 Then all the people, the young men, the women, and the children, gathered around Uzziah and the rulers of the town and cried out with a loud voice, and said before all the elders, 24 "Let God judge between you and us! You have done us a great injury in not making peace with the Assyrians. 25 For now we have no one to help us; God has sold us into their hands, to be strewn before them in thirst and exhaustion. 26 Now summon them and surrender the whole town as booty to the army of Holofernes and to all his forces. 27 For it would be better for us to be captured by them." We shall indeed become slaves, but our lives will be spared, and we shall not witness our little ones dying before our eyes, and our wives and children drawing their last breath. 28 We call to witness against you heaven and earth and our God, the Lord of our ancestors, who punishes us for our sins and the sins of our ancestors; do today the things that we have described!"

29 Then great and general lamentation arose throughout the assembly, and they cried out to the Lord God with a loud voice. 30 But Uzziah said to them, "Courage, my brothers and sisters! ^p Let us hold out for five days more; by that time the Lord our God will turn his mercy to us again, for he will not forsake us utterly. 31 But if these days pass by, and no help comes for us, I will do as you say."

32 Then he dismissed the people to their various posts, and they went up on the walls and towers of their town. The women and children he sent home. In the town they were in great misery.

The Character of Judith

8 Now in those days Judith heard about these things: she was the daughter of Merari son of Ox son of Joseph son of Oziel son of Eliah son of Ananias son of Gideon son of Raphain son of Ahitub son of Elijah son of Hilkiah son of Eliab son of Nathanael son of Salamiel son of Sarasadai son of Israel. 2 Her husband Manasseh, who belonged to her tribe and family, had died during the barley harvest. 3 For as he stood overseeing those who were binding sheaves in the field, he was overcome by the burning heat, and took to his bed and died in his town Bethulia. So they buried him with his ancestors in the field between Dothan and Balamon. 4 Judith remained as a widow for three years and four months 5 at home where she set up a tent for herself on the roof of her house. She put sackcloth around her waist and dressed in widow's clothing. 6 She fasted all the days of her widowhood, except the day before the sabbath and the sabbath itself, the day before the new moon and the day of the new moon, and the festivals and days of rejoicing of the house of Israel. 7 She was beautiful in appearance, and was very lovely to behold. camp (12.10) and the Israelites plunder the enemy camp for thirty days (15.11). 7.25 In despair, the people claim we have no one to help us; God has sold us into their hands; cf. Esth 7.4. According to 4.13, God heard their prayers and had regard for their distress, but the people are not convinced. 7.27 Crisis and confusion make slavery to Assyria look appealing. 7.28 The people judge themselves guilty, for God punishes us for our sins and the sins of our ancestors. In 8.18–27 Judith will deny that their suffering is the result of sinfulness. 7.30–31 Uzziah urges courage, but does not address the theological confusion that has made the people believe their suffering results from sin. He asks for a compromise to give God five days more before surrender. 7.32 Part 1 ends on the bleak note that the people return to their various posts and homes in great misery. Surrender, destruction of the sanctuary, and worship of Nebuchadnezzar seem inevitable, granted the five-day wait.

8.1–16.25 Part 2. These chapters are organized by a threefold chiasmic pattern, in which narrative elements are repeated in reverse order (A, B, C, C', B', A'), with the climactic scene of Holofernes' beheading at its center (D).

8.1–8 Section A of Part 2 (see note on 8.1–16.25) introduces Judith. 8.1 Judith is named for the first time in the story in a genealogy that traces her as the daughter of a father, Merari, fourteen generations removed from Israel. The Greek name Judith (Hebrew yehudit) is the feminine of Jew or Judean. Now in those days Judith heard links Part 2 to all that has gone before. 8.2–3 Manasseh, Judith's husband, is dead as the result of sunstroke (cf. 2 Kings 4.19). For the last reference to Dothan, see note on 3.9. 8.4–8 No longer a wife, apparently never a had left her gold and silver, men and women slaves, livestock, and fields; and she maintained this estate. ⁸No one spoke ill of her, for she feared God with great devotion.

Judith and the Elders

9 When Judith heard the harsh words spoken by the people against the ruler, because they were faint for lack of water, and when she heard all that Uzziah said to them, and how he promised them under oath to surrender the town to the Assyrians after five days, ¹⁰she sent her maid, who was in charge of all she possessed, to summon Uzziah and ^qChabris and Charmis, the elders of her town. ¹¹They came to her, and she said to them:

“Listen to me, rulers of the people of Bethulia! What you have said to the people today is not right; you have even sworn and pronounced this oath between God and you, promising to surrender the town to our enemies unless the Lord turns and helps us within so many days. ¹²Who are you to put God to the test today, and to set yourselves up in the place of ^r God in human affairs? ¹³You are putting the Lord Almighty to the test, but you will never learn anything! ¹⁴You cannot plumb the depths of the human heart or understand the workings of the human mind; how do you expect to search out God, who made all these things, and find out his mind or comprehend his thought? No, my brothers, do not anger the Lord our God. ¹⁵For if he does not choose to help us within these five days, he has power to protect us within any time he pleases, or even to destroy us in the presence of our enemies. ¹⁶Do not try to bind the purposes of the Lord our God; for God is not like a human being, to be threatened, or like a mere mortal, to be won over by pleading. ¹⁷Therefore, while we wait for his deliverance, let us call upon him to help us, and he will hear our voice, if it pleases him.

¹⁸ “For never in our generation, nor in these present days, has there been any tribe or family or people or town of ours that worships gods made with hands, as was done in days gone by. ¹⁹That was why our ancestors were handed over to the sword and to pillage, and so they suffered a great catastrophe before our enemies. ²⁰But we know no other god but him, and so we hope that he will not disdain us or any of our nation. ²¹For if we are captured, all Judea will be captured and our sanctuary will be plundered; and he will make us pay for its desecration with our blood. ²²The slaughter of our kindred and the captivity of the land and the desolation of our inheritance—all this he will bring on our heads among the Gentiles, wherever we serve as slaves; and we shall be an offense and a disgrace in the eyes of those who acquire us. ²³For our slavery will not bring us into favor, but the Lord our God will turn it to dishonor.

²⁴ “Therefore, my brothers, let us set an example for our kindred, for their lives depend upon us, and the sanctuary—both the temple and the altar—rests upon us. ²⁵In spite of everything let us give thanks to the Lord our God, who is putting us to the test as he did our ancestors. ²⁶Remember what he did with Abra-mother, Judith is pious, beautiful, wealthy, and lives alone on her estate (cf. 16.21). 8.8 No one spoke ill of her, for she feared God. Notice about her effect on the people is repeated in the story's conclusion (16.25). Judith fears no one in the story save God.

8.9–10.8 Section B (see note on 8.1–16.25) tells how Judith plans to save Israel. 8.9–36 Judith and the elders. 8.9 When Judith heard. The narrative resumes with repetition of the opening words of Part 2 (8.1). 8.10 Judith's first act in the story is to send the unnamed woman (maid, lit. “graceful one”; see also 8.33; 10.2, 5, 17; 13.9; 16.23) who was in charge of all she possessed (cf.

Gen 15.2; 24.2; 39.4) to summon the town officials, Uzziah and Chabris and Charmis (see 6.15). 8.12 Judith reprimands the leaders for putting God to the test (cf. Deut 6.16); in 8.25–27 Judith will argue that to God alone belongs the right to test. 8.15 Judith defends God's freedom to deliver or destroy (cf. Job 1.21; 2.10). 8.16 God is not like a human being and cannot be won over by threat (cf. the actions of the Assyrians, 2.1–13) or pleading (cf. the actions of Israel, 7.23–29). 8.17 Faith is waiting for deliverance, calling upon God for help, and being heard if it pleases God. ham, and how he tested Isaac, and what happened to Jacob in Syrian Mesopotamia, while he was tending the sheep of Laban, his mother's brother. ²⁷For he has not tried us with fire, as he did them, to search their hearts, nor has he taken vengeance on us; but the Lord scourges those who are close to him in order to admonish them."

²⁸ Then Uzziah said to her, "All that you have said was spoken out of a true heart, and there is no one who can deny your words. ²⁹Today is not the first time your wisdom has been shown, but from the beginning of your life all the people have recognized your understanding, for your heart's disposition is right. ³⁰But the people were so thirsty that they compelled us to do for them what we have promised, and made us take an oath that we cannot break. ³¹Now since you are a God-fearing woman, pray for us, so that the Lord may send us rain to fill our cisterns. Then we will no longer feel faint from thirst."

³² Then Judith said to them, "Listen to me. I am about to do something that will go down through all generations of our descendants. ³³Stand at the town gate tonight so that I may go out with my maid; and within the days after which you have promised to surrender the town to our enemies, the Lord will deliver Israel by my hand. ³⁴Only, do not try to find out what I am doing; for I will not tell you until I have finished what I am about to do."

³⁵ Uzziah and the rulers said to her, "Go in peace, and may the Lord God go before you, to take vengeance on our enemies." ³⁶So they returned from the tent and went to their posts.

The Prayer of Judith

9 Then Judith prostrated herself, put ashes on her head, and uncovered the sackcloth she was wearing. At the very time when the evening incense was being offered in the house of God in Jerusalem, Judith cried out to the Lord with a loud voice, and said, ² "O Lord God of my ancestor Simeon, to whom you gave a sword to take revenge on those strangers who had torn off a virgin's clothing^s to defile her, and exposed her thighs to put her to shame, and polluted her womb to disgrace her; for you said, 'It shall not be done'—yet they did it; ³so you gave up their rulers to be killed, and their bed, which was ashamed of the deceit they had practiced, was stained with blood, and you struck down slaves along with princes, and princes on their thrones. ⁴You gave up their wives for booty and their daughters to captivity, and all their booty to be divided among your beloved children who burned with zeal for you and abhorred the pollution of their blood and called on you for help. O God, my God, hear me also, a widow.

⁵ "For you have done these things and those that went before and those that followed. You have designed the things that are now, and those that are to come. What you had in mind has happened; ⁶the things you decided on presented themselves and said, 'Here we are!' For all your ways are prepared in advance, and your judgment is with foreknowledge.

cludes herself in the solution she proposes. 8.27 Together they will model belief that God scourges those who are close to him (wisdom reminiscent of Ps 94.10, 12; Prov 3.12). 8.28 Uzziah responds and acknowledges her true heart (because of this verse, Judith has been the queen of hearts in French playing cards since the fourteenth century). 8.29 Uzziah claims that Judith is recognized for her understanding and that her heart's disposition is right, hollow flattery in light of the fact he did not think earlier to seek her counsel. 8.30 Uzziah argues that he was forced to take an oath that [he] cannot break (on other foolish vows, see Judg 11.30–31, 35; on the blaming of others, see Gen 3.12–13; Ex 32.22–24).

8.31 Pray for us, so that the Lord may send us rain. Uzziah wants a face-saving miracle. 8.32–34 Judith protests listen to me (notice the verbal modulation of the reported Judith heard in 8.1, 8 to the imperative listen to me in 8.11, 32 to the petition hear me in 9.4, 12), within the five days allowed by the compromise, the Lord will deliver Israel by my hand. Judith refuses to explain the details of what she will do to accomplish God's purpose (cf. Nebuchadnezzar's full explanation of his secret plan in 2.2) but asks the leaders to meet her and her maid that night at the town gate.

9.1–14 Alone, Judith prays that God grant her success by hearing her prayer (9.4), breaking the strength of the Assyrians (9.8), and defeating

7 “Here now are the Assyrians, a greatly increased force, priding themselves in their horses and riders, boasting in the strength of their foot soldiers, and trusting in shield and spear, in bow and sling. They do not know that you are the Lord who crushes wars; the Lord is your name. 8 Break their strength by your might, and bring down their power in your anger; for they intend to defile your sanctuary, and to pollute the tabernacle where your glorious name resides, and to break off the horns^t of your altar with the sword. 9 Look at their pride, and send your wrath upon their heads. Give to me, a widow, the strong hand to do what I plan. 10 By the deceit of my lips strike down the slave with the prince and the prince with his servant; crush their arrogance by the hand of a woman.

11 “For your strength does not depend on numbers, nor your might on the powerful. But you are the God of the lowly, helper of the oppressed, upholder of the weak, protector of the forsaken, savior of those without hope. 12 Please, please, God of my father, God of the heritage of Israel, Lord of heaven and earth, Creator of the waters, King of all your creation, hear my prayer! 13 Make my deceitful words bring wound and bruise on those who have planned cruel things against your covenant, and against your sacred house, and against Mount Zion, and against the house your children possess. 14 Let your whole nation and every tribe know and understand that you are God, the God of all power and might, and that there is no other who protects the people of Israel but you alone!”

Judith Prepares to Go to Holofernes

10 When Judith^u had stopped crying out to the God of Israel, and had ended all these words, 2 she rose from where she lay prostrate. She called her maid and went down into the house where she lived on sabbaths and on her festal days. 3 She removed the sackcloth she had been wearing, took off her widow's garments, bathed her body with water, and anointed herself with precious ointment. She combed her hair, put on a tiara, and dressed herself in the festive attire that she used to wear while her husband Manasseh was living. 4 She put sandals on her feet, and put on her anklets, bracelets, rings, earrings, and all her other jewelry. Thus she made herself very beautiful, to entice the eyes of all the men who might see her. 5 She gave her maid a skin of wine and a flask of oil, and filled a bag with roasted grain, dried fig cakes, and fine bread;^v then she wrapped up all her dishes and gave them to her to carry.

6 Then they went out to the town gate of Bethulia and found Uzziah standing there with the elders of the town, Chabris and Charmis. 7 When they saw her transformed in appearance and dressed differently, they were very greatly astounded at her beauty and said to her, 8 “May the God of our ancestors grant you favor and fulfill your plans, so that the people of Israel may glory and Jerusalem may be exalted.” She bowed down to God.

the enemy by the deceit of [her] lips (9.10; deceitful words in 9.13) and the hand of a woman (9.10). 9.10, 13 Twice Judith specifies deceit as her weapon for success. The law, which required that a person's public testimony have constancy and reliability, does not prohibit her request to win by deceit (see Ex 20.16; Deut 5.20). Lev 19.11 prohibits lying, but this text, like others that express negative sentiments about lying (Ps 15.2; Prov 6.17; 12.22), is overshadowed by the many biblical stories in which “private” lies are told for the preservation of the community (e.g., the lies told by Rebekah, Gen 27–28; Tamar, Gen 38; the midwives, mother, and sister of Moses and the princess, Ex 1–2; Rahab, Josh 2; and the woman of Tekoa, 2 Sam 14). 9.10 By the hand of a woman.

In this phrase the Greek word thēleia (“female”) is used rather than the more common gunē (“woman”); see also 13.15; 16.5. To be killed by a female was a special disgrace according to Judg 9.53–54.

10.1–8 Judith readies herself to carry out her plan. 10.3 That Judith bathed her body with water does not fit with the short supply of water in Bethulia. 10.4 Judith dresses beautifully to entice the eyes of all the men. Her motivation is not vanity—her plan is to smash the enemy. In Part 2, Judith's beauty influences all who meet her (8.7; 10.7, 14, 19, 23; 11.21, 23; 12.13). 10.5 Judith prepares ritually pure food for the journey (cf. Dan 1.8–16).

Judith Leaves Bethulia

9 Then she said to them, "Order the gate of the town to be opened for me so that I may go out and accomplish the things you have just said to me." So they ordered the young men to open the gate for her, as she requested. ¹⁰When they had done this, Judith went out, accompanied by her maid. The men of the town watched her until she had gone down the mountain and passed through the valley, where they lost sight of her.

Judith Is Captured

11 As the women^w were going straight on through the valley, an Assyrian patrol met her ¹²and took her into custody. They asked her, "To what people do you belong, and where are you coming from, and where are you going?" She replied, "I am a daughter of the Hebrews, but I am fleeing from them, for they are about to be handed over to you to be devoured. ¹³I am on my way to see Holofernes the commander of your army, to give him a true report; I will show him a way by which he can go and capture all the hill country without losing one of his men, captured or slain."

14 When the men heard her words, and observed her face—she was in their eyes marvelously beautiful—they said to her, ¹⁵"You have saved your life by hurrying down to see our lord. Go at once to his tent; some of us will escort you and hand you over to him. ¹⁶When you stand before him, have no fear in your heart, but tell him what you have just said, and he will treat you well."

17 They chose from their number a hundred men to accompany her and her maid, and they brought them to the tent of Holofernes. ¹⁸There was great excitement in the whole camp, for her arrival was reported from tent to tent. They came and gathered around her as she stood outside the tent of Holofernes, waiting until they told him about her. ¹⁹They marveled at her beauty and admired the Israelites, judging them by her. They said to one another, "Who can despise these people, who have women like this among them? It is not wise to leave one of their men alive, for if we let them go they will be able to beguile the whole world!"

Judith Is Brought Before Holofernes

20 Then the guards of Holofernes and all his servants came out and led her into the tent. ²¹Holofernes was resting on his bed under a canopy that was woven with purple and gold, emeralds and other precious stones. ²²When they told him of her, he came to the front of the tent, with silver lamps carried before him. ²³When Judith came into the presence of Holofernes^x and his servants, they all marveled at the beauty of her face. She prostrated herself and did obeisance to him, but his slaves raised her up.

11 Then Holofernes said to her, "Take courage, woman, and do not be afraid in your heart, for I have never hurt anyone who chose to serve Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth. ²Even now, if your people who live in the hill country had not slighted me, I would never have lifted my spear against them. They have brought this on themselves. ³But now tell me why you have fled from them and have come over to us. In any event, you have come to safety. Take courage! You will live tonight and ever after. ⁴No one will hurt you. Rather, all will

10.9–10 In Section C (see note on 8.1–16.25), Judith and her maid leave Bethulia. The order to open the gate begins a journey down the mountain and through the valley to the Assyrian camp, a journey that will be repeated in reverse in 13.10b–11.

10.11–13.10a In this climactic and central section (D), Judith overcomes Holofernes. 10.11–19 A patrol meets Judith and takes her to Holofernes. 10.12–13 Judith's first words to the patrol are a mixture of truth and lies: she is a daughter of the Hebrews, but she does not plan to give Holofernes a true report about how to capture the hill country without any loss. 10.14 The men observe that she is marvelously beautiful (see note on 10.4). 10.18–19 Judith's beauty causes the whole camp to marvel (as it will Holofernes and his servants in 10.23).

10.20–12.9 During their first meeting, Judith and Holofernes deceive each other. Only in 11.9–10; 12.2, 4 does Judith speak the whole truth; otherwise her statements are lies or at best mixtures of truth and lie or words with double meanings (as in 11.6). 11.1 Holofernes' first lie, given his destruction of the worship places of the nations who pledged they were servants of treat you well, as they do the servants of my lord King Nebuchadnezzar."

5 Judith answered him, "Accept the words of your slave, and let your servant speak in your presence. I will say nothing false to my lord this night. 6 If you follow out the words of your servant, God will accomplish something through you, and my lord will not fail to achieve his purposes. 7 By the life of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the whole earth, and by the power of him who has sent you to direct every living being! Not only do human beings serve him because of you, but also the animals of the field and the cattle and the birds of the air will live, because of your power, under Nebuchadnezzar and all his house. 8 For we have heard of your wisdom and skill, and it is reported throughout the whole world that you alone are the best in the whole kingdom, the most informed and the most astounding in military strategy.

9 "Now as for Achior's speech in your council, we have heard his words, for the people of Bethulia spared him and he told them all he had said to you. 10 Therefore, lord and master, do not disregard what he said, but keep it in your mind, for it is true. Indeed our nation cannot be punished, nor can the sword prevail against them, unless they sin against their God.

11 "But now, in order that my lord may not be defeated and his purpose frustrated, death will fall upon them, for a sin has overtaken them by which they are about to provoke their God to anger when they do what is wrong. 12 Since their food supply is exhausted and their water has almost given out, they have planned to kill their livestock and have determined to use all that God by his laws has forbidden them to eat. 13 They have decided to consume the first fruits of the grain and the tithes of the wine and oil, which they had consecrated and set aside for the priests who minister in the presence of our God in Jerusalem—things it is not lawful for any of the people even to touch with their hands. 14 Since even the people in Jerusalem have been doing this, they have sent messengers there in order to bring back permission from the council of the elders. 15 When the response reaches them and they act upon it, on that very day they will be handed over to you to be destroyed.

16 "So when I, your slave, learned all this, I fled from them. God has sent me to accomplish with you things that will astonish the whole world wherever people shall hear about them. 17 Your servant is indeed God-fearing and serves the God of heaven night and day. So, my lord, I will remain with you; but every night your servant will go out into the valley and pray to God. He will tell me when they have committed their sins. 18 Then I will come and tell you, so that you may go out with your whole army, and not one of them will be able to withstand you. 19 Then I will lead you through Judea, until you come to Jerusalem; there I will set your throne." You will drive them like sheep that have no shepherd, and no dog will so much as growl at you. For this was told me to give me foreknowledge; it was announced to me, and I was sent to tell you."

20 Her words pleased Holofernes and all his servants. They marveled at her wisdom and said, 21 "No other woman from one end of the earth to the other looks so beautiful or speaks so wisely!" 22 Then Holofernes said to her, "God has done well to send you ahead of the people, to strengthen our hands and bring destruction on those who have despised my lord. 23 You are not only beautiful in appearance, but wise in speech. If you do as you have said, your God shall be my God, and you shall live in the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar and be renowned throughout the whole world."

12 Then he commanded them to bring her in where his silver dinnerware was kept, and ordered them to set a table for her with some of his own delicacies, and with some of his own wine to drink. 2 But Judith said, "I cannot par-

Nebuchadnezzar (3.2). 11.5 Judith's words have a double meaning. Is my lord Holofernes or God? 11.11 Judith lies that a sin has overtaken her people (8.18–20 is her statement to the contrary). 11.17 Judith's plan (which is sealed in 12.5–7) to go out into the valley each night sets up her escape. 11.23 Holofernes' offer that your God shall be my God is unlikely given his insistence that Nebuchadnezzar alone is god (3.8); cf. Ruth 1.16.

take of them, or it will be an offense; but I will have enough with the things I brought with me.”³ Holofernes said to her, “If your supply runs out, where can we get you more of the same? For none of your people are here with us.”⁴ Judith replied, “As surely as you live, my lord, your servant will not use up the supplies I have with me before the Lord carries out by my hand what he has determined.”

5 Then the servants of Holofernes brought her into the tent, and she slept until midnight. Toward the morning watch she got up⁶ and sent this message to Holofernes: “Let my lord now give orders to allow your servant to go out and pray.”⁷ So Holofernes commanded his guards not to hinder her. She remained in the camp three days. She went out each night to the valley of Bethulia, and bathed at the spring in the camp.^z ⁸ After bathing, she prayed the Lord God of Israel to direct her way for the triumph of his^a people.⁹ Then she returned purified and stayed in the tent until she ate her food toward evening.

Judith Attends Holofernes' Banquet

10 On the fourth day Holofernes held a banquet for his personal attendants only, and did not invite any of his officers.¹¹ He said to Bagoas, the eunuch who had charge of his personal affairs, “Go and persuade the Hebrew woman who is in your care to join us and to eat and drink with us.”¹² For it would be a disgrace if we let such a woman go without having intercourse with her. If we do not seduce her, she will laugh at us.”

13 So Bagoas left the presence of Holofernes, and approached her and said, “Let this pretty girl not hesitate to come to my lord to be honored in his presence, and to enjoy drinking wine with us, and to become today like one of the Assyrian women who serve in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar.”¹⁴ Judith replied, “Who am I to refuse my lord? Whatever pleases him I will do at once, and it will be a joy to me until the day of my death.”¹⁵ So she proceeded to dress herself in all her woman's finery. Her maid went ahead and spread for her on the ground before Holofernes the lambskins she had received from Bagoas for her daily use in reclining.

16 Then Judith came in and lay down. Holofernes' heart was ravished with her and his passion was aroused, for he had been waiting for an opportunity to seduce her from the day he first saw her.¹⁷ So Holofernes said to her, “Have a drink and be merry with us!”¹⁸ Judith said, “I will gladly drink, my lord, because today is the greatest day in my whole life.”¹⁹ Then she took what her maid had prepared and ate and drank before him.²⁰ Holofernes was greatly pleased with her, and drank a great quantity of wine, much more than he had ever drunk in any one day since he was born.

Judith Beheads Holofernes

13 When evening came, his slaves quickly withdrew. Bagoas closed the tent from outside and shut out the attendants from his master's presence. They went to bed, for they all were weary because the banquet had lasted so long.² But Judith was left alone in the tent, with Holofernes stretched out on his bed, for he was dead drunk.

3 Now Judith had told her maid to stand outside the bedchamber and to wait for her to come out, as she did on the other days; for she said she would be going out for her prayers. She had said the same thing to Bagoas.⁴ So everyone went out, and no one, either small or great, was left in the bedchamber. Then Judith, standing beside his bed, said in her heart, “O Lord God of all might, look in this hour on the work of my hands for the exaltation of Jerusalem.”⁵ Now indeed is the time to help your heritage and to carry out my design to destroy the enemies who have risen up against us.”

Soon afterward she went out and gave Holofernes' head to her maid, 10 who placed it in her food bag.

Judith Returns to Bethulia

Then the two of them went out together, as they were accustomed to do for prayer. They passed through the camp, circled around the valley, and went up the mountain to Bethulia, and came to its gates. 11 From a distance Judith called out to the sentries at the gates, "Open, open the gate! God, our God, is with us, still showing his power in Israel and his strength against our enemies, as he has done today!"

Judith's Counsel to Bethulia

12 When the people of her town heard her voice, they hurried down to the town gate and summoned the elders of the town. 13 They all ran together, both small and great, for it seemed unbelievable that she had returned. They opened the gate and welcomed them. Then they lit a fire to give light, and gathered around them. 14 Then she said to them with a loud voice, "Praise God, O praise him! Praise God, who has not withdrawn his mercy from the house of Israel, but has destroyed our enemies by my hand this very night!"

15 Then she pulled the head out of the bag and showed it to them, and said, "See here, the head of Holofernes, the commander of the Assyrian army, and here is the canopy beneath which he lay in his drunken stupor. The Lord has struck him down by the hand of a woman. 16 As the Lord lives, who has protected me in the way I went, I swear that it was my face that seduced him to his destruction, and that he committed no sin with me, to defile and shame me."

17 All the people were greatly astonished. They bowed down and worshiped God, and said with one accord, "Blessed are you our God, who have this day humiliated the enemies of your people."

18 Then Uzziah said to her, "O daughter, you are blessed by the Most High God above all other women on earth; and blessed be the Lord God, who created the heavens and the earth, who has guided you to cut off the head of the leader of our enemies. 19 Your praise^b will never depart from the hearts of those who remember the power of God. 20 May God grant this to be a perpetual honor to you, and may he reward you with blessings, because you risked your own life when our nation was brought low, and you averted our ruin, walking in the straight path before our God." And all the people said, "Amen. Amen."

strikes his neck twice (13.8) with his own sword. 13.9–10a The reason for her actions, taking the head and pulling the canopy down, appear later (v. 15).

13.10b–11 In Section C', which begins the second half of Part 2 (see note on 8.1–16.25), Judith and her maid retrace their steps (see 10.9–10) to Bethulia through the valley and up the mountain. 13.11 Judith proclaims that God, our God, is with us, in contrast to the people's cry that God has abandoned them (7.25).

13.12–16.20 Judith plans the destruction of Israel's enemy. This section, B', repeats elements found in B of Part 2 (8.9–10.8; see note on 8.1–16.25). Both open with a meeting with Judith: she summons the town officials (8.10); the people assemble when they "hear" (13.12; cf. uses of this important verb variously translated as "hear" or "listen" in 4.1, 13; 5.5; 7.9; 8.1, 9 [twice], 11, 17, 32; 9.4, 12; 10.14; 11.8, 9, 16; 13.12; 14.1, 7, 19; 15.1, 5) her voice asking that the gate be opened (13.13). B and B' contain an instruction from Judith that begins with the words listen to me (8.11; 14.1). She prays for success in 9.1–14 and announces it in 13.14–16. Uzziah blesses her in 8.35 and again in 13.18–20. 13.12–14.10 Judith now speaks to the people of Bethulia. 13.15 By the hand of a woman. See note on 9.10. 14 Then Judith said to them, "Listen to me, my friends. Take this head and hang it upon the parapet of your wall. ²As soon as day breaks and the sun rises on the earth, each of you take up your weapons, and let every able-bodied man go out of the town; set a captain over them, as if you were going down to the plain against the Assyrian outpost; only do not go down. ³Then they will seize their arms and go into the camp and rouse the officers of the Assyrian army. They will rush into the tent of Holofernes and will not find him. Then panic will come over them, and they will flee before you. ⁴Then you and all who live within the borders of Israel will pursue them and cut them down in their tracks. ⁵But before you do all this, bring Achior the Ammonite to me so that he may see and recognize the man who despised the house of Israel and sent him to us as if to his death."

⁶ So they summoned Achior from the house of Uzziah. When he came and saw the head of Holofernes in the hand of one of the men in the assembly of the people, he fell down on his face in a faint. ⁷When they raised him up he threw himself at Judith's feet, and did obeisance to her, and said, "Blessed are you in every tent of Judah! In every nation those who hear your name will be alarmed. ⁸Now tell me what you have done during these days."

So Judith told him in the presence of the people all that she had done, from the day she left until the moment she began speaking to them. ⁹When she had finished, the people raised a great shout and made a joyful noise in their town. ¹⁰When Achior saw all that the God of Israel had done, he believed firmly in God. So he was circumcised, and joined the house of Israel, remaining so to this day.

Panic in the Assyrian Camp

¹¹ As soon as it was dawn they hung the head of Holofernes on the wall. Then they all took their weapons, and they went out in companies to the mountain passes. ¹²When the Assyrians saw them they sent word to their commanders, who then went to the generals and the captains and to all their other officers. ¹³They came to Holofernes' tent and said to the steward in charge of all his personal affairs, "Wake up our lord, for the slaves have been so bold as to come down against us to give battle, to their utter destruction."

¹⁴ So Bagoas went in and knocked at the entry of the tent, for he supposed that he was sleeping with Judith. ¹⁵But when no one answered, he opened it and went into the bedchamber and found him sprawled on the floor dead, with his head missing. ¹⁶He cried out with a loud voice and wept and groaned and shouted, and tore his clothes. ¹⁷Then he went to the tent where Judith had stayed, and when he did not find her, he rushed out to the people and shouted, ¹⁸"The slaves have tricked us! One Hebrew woman has brought disgrace on the house of King Nebuchadnezzar. Look, Holofernes is lying on the ground, and his head is missing!"

¹⁹ When the leaders of the Assyrian army heard this, they tore their tunics and were greatly dismayed, and their loud cries and shouts rose up throughout the camp.

rences are in B' (13.17; 13.18 [twice]; 14.7; 15.9; 15.10; 15.12). 14.1–5 Listen to me is used three times in this form; cf. the imperatives in 8.11, 32. Judith instructs the people to hang the head of Holofernes upon the parapet and to display themselves in ranks before the enemy at daybreak. Her strategy is that the Assyrians will then discover that Holofernes is dead and flee in panic. 14.5–6 Achior is brought to Judith so that Holofernes' head can be verified. Achior collapses at the sight. 14.7 Blessed are you in every tent in Judah, reminiscent of the praise of Jael in Judg 5.24. 14.10 So he was circumcised. The author is not concerned with the prohibition of Deut 23.3 that no Ammonite or Moabite shall enter the assembly, even to the tenth generation. Since Judith is more than ten generations removed from Jacob (8.1), so also is Achior and perhaps this law was not judged pertinent. Some suggest that this verse accounts for the exclusion of this book from the canon. Others argue that 14.5–10 is intrusive; the verses do stop the action, but with dramatic effect on this night before attack.

14.11–15.7 The effect of Judith's strategy against the Assyrian camp. 14.19 When the Assyrians hear Holofernes is dead, they are greatly 15 When the men in the tents heard it, they were amazed at what had happened. ²Overcome with fear and trembling, they did not wait for one another, but with one impulse all rushed out and fled by every path across the plain and through the hill country. ³Those who had camped in the hills around Bethulia also took to flight. Then the Israelites, everyone that was a soldier, rushed out upon them. ⁴Uzziah sent men to Betomasthaim^c and Choba and Kola, and to all the frontiers of Israel, to tell what had taken place and to urge all to rush out upon the enemy to destroy them. ⁵When the Israelites heard it, with one accord they fell upon the enemy,^d and cut them down as far as Choba. Those in Jerusalem and all the hill country also came, for they were told what had happened in the camp of the enemy. The men in Gilead and in Galilee outflanked them with great slaughter, even beyond Damascus and its borders. ⁶The rest of the people of Bethulia fell upon the Assyrian camp and plundered it, acquiring great riches. ⁷And the Israelites, when they returned from the slaughter, took possession of what remained. Even the villages and towns in the hill country and in the plain got a great amount of booty, since there was a vast quantity of it.

The Israelites Celebrate Their Victory

8 Then the high priest Joakim and the elders of the Israelites who lived in Jerusalem came to witness the good things that the Lord had done for Israel, and to see Judith and to wish her well. ⁹When they met her, they all blessed her with one accord and said to her, "You are the glory of Jerusalem, you are the great boast of Israel, you are the great pride of our nation! ¹⁰You have done all this with your own hand; you have done great good to Israel, and God is well pleased with it. May the Almighty Lord bless you forever!" And all the people said, "Amen."

11 All the people plundered the camp for thirty days. They gave Judith the tent of Holofernes and all his silver dinnerware, his beds, his bowls, and all his furniture. She took them and loaded her mules and hitched up her carts and piled the things on them.

12 All the women of Israel gathered to see her, and blessed her, and some of them performed a dance in her honor. She took ivy-wreathed wands in her hands and distributed them to the women who were with her; ¹³and she and those who were with her crowned themselves with olive wreaths. She went before all the people in the dance, leading all the women, while all the men of Israel followed, bearing their arms and wearing garlands and singing hymns.

Judith Offers Her Hymn of Praise

14 Judith began this thanksgiving before all Israel, and all the people loudly sang this song of praise. ¹And Judith said,

- 16 Begin a song to my God with tambourines, sing to my Lord with cymbals.
Raise to him a new psalm;^e exalt him, and call upon his name.

he sets up his camp among his people;

15.8–16.20 A victory celebration in Bethulia with Joakim, the high priest of Jerusalem (15.8–10); a thirty-day interlude (15.11); and a triumphal procession of dance and song to Jerusalem for a three-month long celebration (15.12–16.17). 15.11 The Israelites plunder the enemy camp for thirty days; added to the four days Judith spent in the Assyrian camp, the time balances the thirty-four days Bethulia was under siege (7.20). 15.13 The wearing of olive wreaths was a Greek custom. Judith led the women in dance (like Miriam in Ex 15.20).

15.14–16.17 Judith's hymn of praise is most likely modeled on the Song of Moses (Ex 15). This liturgical poem opens with a hymnic introduction in which Judith calls the people to worship and proclaims God victor and deliverer (16.1–2). There follows in 16.3–12 a narration of the epic event in which Judith describes the Assyrian threat (16.3–5) and another voice tells of

- he delivered me from the hands of my pursuers.
- 3 The Assyrian came down from the mountains of the north; he came with myriads of his warriors; their numbers blocked up the wadis, and their cavalry covered the hills.
- 4 He boasted that he would burn up my territory, and kill my young men with the sword, and dash my infants to the ground, and seize my children as booty, and take my virgins as spoil.
- 5 But the Lord Almighty has foiled them by the hand of a woman.^f
- 6 For their mighty one did not fall by the hands of the young men, nor did the sons of the Titans strike him down, nor did tall giants set upon him; but Judith daughter of Merari with the beauty of her countenance undid him.
- 7 For she put away her widow's clothing to exalt the oppressed in Israel. She anointed her face with perfume; she fastened her hair with a tiara and put on a linen gown to beguile him.
- 9 Her sandal ravished his eyes, her beauty captivated his mind, and the sword severed his neck!
- 10 The Persians trembled at her boldness, the Medes were daunted at her daring.
- 11 Then my oppressed people shouted; my weak people cried out,^g and the enemy^h trembled; they lifted up their voices, and the enemy^h were turned back.
- 12 Sons of slave-girls pierced them through and wounded them like the children of fugitives; they perished before the army of my Lord.
- 13 I will sing to my God a new song: O Lord, you are great and glorious, wonderful in strength, invincible.
- 14 Let all your creatures serve you, for you spoke, and they were made. You sent forth your spirit,ⁱ and it formed them;^j there is none that can resist your voice.
- 15 For the mountains shall be shaken to their foundations with the waters; before your glance the rocks shall melt like wax. But to those who fear you you show mercy.
- 16 For every sacrifice as a fragrant offering is a small thing, and the fat of all whole burnt offerings to you is a very little thing; but whoever fears the Lord is great forever.
- 17 Woe to the nations that rise up against my people! The Lord Almighty will take vengeance on them in the day of judgment; he will send fire and worms into their flesh; they shall weep in pain forever.
- 18 When they arrived at Jerusalem, they worshiped God. As soon as the people were purified, they offered their her triumph (16.6–10). In the hymnic conclusion (16.13–17) Judith praises God with a new song (16.13) and summons all creation to join her song burnt offerings, their freewill offerings, and their gifts. ¹⁹Judith also dedicated to God all the possessions of Holofernes, which the people had given her; and the canopy that she had taken for herself from his bedchamber she gave as a votive offering. ²⁰For three months the people continued feasting in Jerusalem before the sanctuary; and Judith remained with them.

The Renown and Death of Judith

21 After this they all returned home to their own inheritances. Judith went to Bethulia, and remained on her estate. For the rest of her life she was honored throughout the whole country. ²²Many desired to marry her, but she gave herself to no man all the days of her life after her husband Manasseh died and was gathered to his people. ²³She became more and more famous, and grew old in her husband's house, reaching the age of one hundred five. She set her maid free. She died in Bethulia, and they buried her in the cave of her husband Manasseh; ²⁴and the house of Israel mourned her for seven days. Before she died she distributed her property to all those who were next of kin to her husband Manasseh, and to her own nearest kindred. ²⁵No one ever again spread terror among the Israelites during the lifetime of Judith, or for a long time after her death.

16.21–25 Section A' (see note on 8.1–16.25), conclusion about Judith. The narrative closes with elements found in Section A (8.1–8). Both include the information that Judith was the widow of Manasseh (8.2; 16.22), that she lived alone in Bethulia on her estate (8.4; 16.22), and that she had servants and property (8.7; 16.21, 24). Both tell of a death: Manasseh dies and is buried (8.2–3); Judith dies and is buried (16.23–24). Both conclude with the public effect of Judith's faith (8.8; 16.25). 16.22 Many desired to marry her, but she gave herself to no man is perhaps better translated "many men wanted her, but no man had intercourse with her." Judith practiced celibacy. The motivations of the men are unclear. What is certain is that she chose to continue living in solitude for the rest of her life. 16.23 One hundred five years is the length of the Maccabean period (168–63 B.C.E.). She set her maid free. Judith's last act balances her first, in which she sent the maid to summon Uziah, Chabris, and Charmis (8.10). 16.24 Seven days is the customary period of mourning for the dead (1 Sam 31.13; 1 Chr 10.12; Sir 22.12). 16.25 No one ever again spread terror among the Israelites. Because of what Judith did for the people, they more fully understand their own identity as God's people.

ESTHER

(THE GREEK VERSION CONTAINING THE ADDITIONAL CHAPTERS)

NOTE. The deuterocanonical portions of the book of Esther are several additional passages found in the Greek translation of the Hebrew book of Esther, a translation that differs also in other respects from the Hebrew text (the latter is translated in the NRSV Old Testament). The disordered chapter numbers come from the displacement of the additions to the end of the canonical book of Esther by Jerome in his Latin translation and from the subsequent division of the Bible into chapters by Stephen Langton, who numbered the additions consecutively as though they formed a direct continuation of the Hebrew text. So that the additions may be read in their proper context, the whole of the Greek version is here translated, though certain familiar names are given according to their Hebrew rather than their Greek form; for example, Mordecai and Vashti instead of Mardocheus and Astin. The order followed is that of the Greek text, but the chapter and verse numbers conform to those of the King James or Authorized Version. The additions, conveniently indicated by the letters A–F, are located as follows: A, before 1.1; B, after 3.13; C and D, after 4.17; E, after 8.12; F, after 10.3.

The Two Books Compared

THE BOOK OF ESTHER AS FOUND IN THE GREEK BIBLE (the Septuagint) is significantly longer than the book of Esther in Hebrew. The Greek version contains blocks of material that are referred to as Additions to Esther. This designation suggests that the material was added to an earlier form of Esther, to deal with concerns of Jews whose sensibilities were disturbed by qualities of the older Hebrew story. It is better, however, to leave open the question of whether this material should be understood as corrective additions to an earlier Hebrew Esther or whether the Greek and Hebrew versions of Esther simply reflect different forms of a basic popular story. It is nevertheless useful to assess the impact of the Additions on the basic story and to compare the Greek with the Hebrew Esther.

Contention has surrounded the book of Esther and its canonical status. Perhaps most striking in the Hebrew is the absence of any direct mention of God, especially in a story about dangers confronting the Jews in an alien setting. Also striking is the apparent neglect, especially by Esther, of aspects of Jewish Torah that came to define what it meant to be a Jew. There are as well a number of points in the story that stretch historical credulity, and the strong note of harsh vengeance wrought by the Jews on their enemies has disturbed some readers. Noteworthy is the central role played by a woman, for spheres of influence and action for women in postexilic Judaism were quite circumscribed.

Additions A–F

God is very present from the opening of the Greek Esther as the author of Mordecai's dream (Addition A). Not only does the righteous nation cry out to God in its affliction, but we are told that what Mordecai saw was "what God had determined to do" (11.12). At the end of the story Mordecai recalls his dream, recognizes its point-by-point fulfillment, and attributes the rescue of his people to God (Addition F). This sense of providential shaping of events in human history, along with imagery envisioning a return of created order to chaos, envelops the story in an apocalyptic interpretative frame. This beginning and conclusion also highlight the importance of Mordecai, as does the account of how he uncovered a plot against the king, was rewarded with service in the court, but earned thereby the enmity of Haman.

Copies of the decrees written in the king's name (Additions B and E) provide historical verisimilitude. The first authorizes the pogrom planned by Haman (Addition B), while the second counters the first by allowing Jews to defend themselves and calls on Persians to support them against their enemies (Addition E). These appear to be the only Additions originally composed in Greek. They serve to characterize both the villain Haman and the malleable king in fine counterpoint. In the first Haman is lauded as "second father" (13.6) to the king, the Jews and their Torah are slandered, and the king's motives are said to be the peace of his kingdom. In the second Haman is vilified, the Jews and Torah are praised, the king's motives are defended, and credit for his enlightenment, Haman's defeat, and the Jews' salvation is attributed to "the living God" (16.16).

Prayers by Mordecai and Esther seeking divine aid (Addition C) assert God's power to save now as in the past. Mordecai is also able to justify his failure to bow before Haman by saying he would grant such respect only to God, and Esther is able to lament her marriage to a Gentile and her difficulties in observing Jewish dietary practices and to express her abhorrence of her present royal estate.

Esther's reception when she appears unbidden before the king (Addition D) is more dramatic than in the Hebrew Esther. The Greek version also attributes the king's change of spirit to God, and 6.1 states that "the Lord took sleep from the king," making the deity the force behind these climaxes on the road to salvation for the Jews.

The tone of vengeance is lessened by the absence in the Greek of any trace of Esth 9.5 in the Hebrew ("so the Jews struck down all their enemies . . ."). The number slain in the provinces is also reduced by sixty thousand in the Greek of 9.16. Thus in both the Additions and in other small variations, the Greek Esther represents a distinct story that differs qualitatively from the Hebrew. Originating in Jewish circles whose theology and praxis differed from those who produced and preserved the Hebrew Esther, the Greek Esther dates from the last two centuries B.C.E. Within Christian tradition the Additions took on something of a life of their own, being either set at the end of a translation of the Hebrew Esther or gathered separately in the Protestant Apocrypha.

The notes focus on the Additions and on differences between the Greek and Hebrew versions. For fuller notes on the common material, see Esther in the Old Testament. W. Lee Humphreys

ADDITION A

Mordecai's Dream

11^a ²In the second year of the reign of Artaxerxes the Great, on the first day of Nisan, Mordecai son of Jair son of Shimei^b son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, had a dream. ³He was a Jew living in the city of Susa, a great man, serving in the court of the king. ⁴He was one of the captives whom King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon had brought from Jerusalem with King Jeconiah of Judea. And this was his dream: ⁵Noises^c and confusion, thunders and earthquake, tumult on the earth! ⁶Then two great dragons came forward, both ready to fight, and they roared terribly. ⁷At their roaring every nation prepared for war, to fight against the righteous nation. ⁸It was a day of darkness and gloom, of tribulation and distress, affliction and great tumult on the earth! ⁹And the whole righteous nation was troubled; they feared the evils that threatened them,^d and were ready to perish. ¹⁰Then they cried out to God; and at their outcry, as though from a tiny spring, there came a great river, with abundant water; ¹¹light came, and the sun rose, and the lowly were exalted and devoured those held in honor.

¹² Mordecai saw in this dream what

11.2–12 Mordecai's dream (Addition A) provides a divine but cryptic preview of what will take place. 11.2 Artaxerxes, called Ahasuerus in the Hebrew Esther, is fully introduced in 1.1–9. Nisan (March–April) is the first month of the Jewish year. Mordecai, whose name is built upon "Marduk," the Babylonian deity, is introduced as a Benjaminite of the line of Saul, Israel's first king. For Shimei, see 2 Sam 16.5–14; 19.16–23; 1 Kings 2.8, 36–46; for Kish, Saul's father, see 1 Sam 9.1. Generations are telescoped, as son of can mean "descendant of." Mordecai is introduced again in 2.5. 11.3 In the Greek Esther Mordecai is an important figure in the royal court from the outset. Cf. the Hebrew, which says he "was sitting at the king's gate" (2.19; 3.2). 11.4 To have Mordecai exiled by Nebuchadnezzar in 597 B.C.E. along with Jeconiah (2 Kings 24.6–17), elsewhere called Jehoiachin, poses chronological problems, for Artaxerxes I reigned from 465 to 424 B.C.E. 11.5–6 A potential return of created order to chaos is tersely presented here. What in the Hebrew Esther is a conflict sparked by contention between court officials is in this dream transposed into a cosmic conflict between Israel and all other nations, indeed between righteous order and chaos. 11.7 The righteous nation is clearly Israel. 11.8 Comparison with Joel 2.2. 10–11 gives this dream an apocalyptic quality. 11.10 God. This is the first of many references to the deity in the Greek Esther, in marked contrast to the Hebrew which makes no direct mention of the deity. The tiny spring is Esther. 11.12 The general import of this dream, stressing God's shaping of human history, seems clear to Mordecai, but the details will be apparent only at the end (10.4–12).

God had determined to do, and after he awoke he had it on his mind, seeking all day to understand it in every detail.

A Plot Against the King

12 Now Mordecai took his rest in the courtyard with Gabatha and Tharra, the two eunuchs of the king who kept watch in the courtyard. ²He overheard their conversation and inquired into their purposes, and learned that they were preparing to lay hands on King Artaxerxes; and he informed the king concerning them. ³Then the king examined the two eunuchs, and after they had confessed it, they were led away to execution. ⁴The king made a permanent record of these things, and Mordecai wrote an account of them. ⁵And the king ordered Mordecai to serve in the court, and rewarded him for these things. ⁶But Haman son of Hammedatha, a Bougean, who was in great honor with the king, determined to injure Mordecai and his people because of the two eunuchs of the king.

END OF ADDITION A

Artaxerxes' Banquet

1 It was after this that the following things happened in the days of Artaxerxes, the same Artaxerxes who ruled over one hundred twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia.^e ²In those days, when King Artaxerxes was enthroned in the city of Susa, ³in the third year of his reign, he gave a banquet for his Friends and other persons of various nations, the Persians and Median nobles, and the governors of the provinces. ⁴After this, when he had displayed to them the riches of his kingdom and the splendor of his bountiful celebration during the course of one hundred eighty days, ⁵at the end of the festivity^f the king gave a drinking party for the people of various nations who lived in the city. This was held for six days in the courtyard of the royal palace, ⁶which was adorned with curtains of fine linen and cotton, held by cords of purple linen attached to gold and silver blocks on pillars of marble and other stones. Gold and silver couches were placed on a mosaic floor of emerald, mother-of-pearl, and marble. There were coverings of gauze, embroidered in various colors, with roses arranged around them. ⁷The cups were of gold and silver, and a miniature cup was displayed, made of ruby, worth thirty thousand talents. There was abundant sweet wine, such as the king himself drank. ⁸The drinking was not according to a fixed rule; but the king wished to have it so, and he commanded his stewards to comply with his pleasure and with that of the guests.

⁹ Meanwhile, Queen Vashti^g gave a drinking party for the women in the palace where King Artaxerxes was.

Dismissal of Queen Vashti

10 On the seventh day, when the king was in good humor, he told Haman, Bazan, Tharra, Boraze, Zatholtha, Abataza, and Tharaba, the seven eunuchs who served King Artaxerxes, ¹¹to escort the queen to him in order to proclaim her as queen and to place the diadem on her head, and to have her display her beauty to all the governors and the people of various nations, for she was indeed a beautiful woman. ¹²But Queen Vashti^g refused to obey him and would not come with the eunuchs. This offended the king and he became furious. ¹³He said to his Friends, 12.1-6 A plot against the king. 12.1 Eunuchs, men who had been castrated, were ever-present functionaries in the Persian court. 12.5 Cf. 2.21-23, where the events are noted but Mordecai is not rewarded. 12.6 Haman, the villain of this story, is motivated to act against Mordecai because of links with the executed eunuchs. The meaning of Bougean is not clear; the substitution of "Macedonian" in some Greek texts (see also 16.10) and the Hebrew's use of "Agagite" (3.1), linking him with Israel's enemies the Amalakites, suggest the term is derogatory.

1.1-9 Artaxerxes and his banquets, along with descriptions of the palace and extent of the empire, set an opulent stage for this story of court intrigue.

1.10-22 Dismissal of Queen Vashti. While summoned not only to display her beauty, as in the Hebrew version, but also to be proclaimed queen and crowned with the diadem, Vashti disobeys the king, sparking a potential crisis from the males' point of view.

"This is how Vashti^h has answered me.ⁱ Give therefore your ruling and judgment on this matter." ¹⁴Arkesaeus, Sarsathaeus, and Malesear, then the governors of the Persians and Medes who were closest to the king—Arkesaeus, Sarsathaeus, and Malesear, who sat beside him in the chief seats—came to him ¹⁵and told him what must be done to Queen Vashti^h for not obeying the order that the king had sent her by the eunuchs. ¹⁶Then Muchaeus said to the king and the governors, "Queen Vashti^h has insulted not only the king but also all the king's governors and officials" ¹⁷(for he had reported to them what the queen had said and how she had defied the king). "And just as she defied King Artaxerxes, ¹⁸so now the other ladies who are wives of the Persian and Median governors, on hearing what she has said to the king, will likewise dare to insult their husbands. ¹⁹If therefore it pleases the king, let him issue a royal decree, inscribed in accordance with the laws of the Medes and Persians so that it may not be altered, that the queen may no longer come into his presence; but let the king give her royal rank to a woman better than she. ²⁰Let whatever law the king enacts be proclaimed in his kingdom, and thus all women will give honor to their husbands, rich and poor alike." ²¹This speech pleased the king and the governors, and the king did as Muchaeus had recommended. ²²The king sent the decree into all his kingdom, to every province in its own language, so that in every house respect would be shown to every husband.

Esther Becomes Queen

2 After these things, the king's anger abated, and he no longer was concerned about Vashti^h or remembered what he had said and how he had condemned her. ²Then the king's servants said, "Let beautiful and virtuous girls be sought out for the king. ³The king shall appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, and they shall select beautiful young virgins to be brought to the harem in Susa, the capital. Let them be entrusted to the king's eunuch who is in charge of the women, and let ointments and whatever else they need be given them. ⁴And the woman who pleases the king shall be queen instead of Vashti."^h This pleased the king, and he did so.

⁵ Now there was a Jew in Susa the capital whose name was Mordecai son of Jair son of Shimei^j son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin; ⁶he had been taken captive from Jerusalem among those whom King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon had captured. ⁷And he had a foster child, the daughter of his father's brother, Aminadab, and her name was Esther. When her parents died, he brought her up to womanhood as his own. The girl was beautiful in appearance. ⁸So, when the decree of the king was proclaimed, and many girls were gathered in Susa the capital in custody of Gai, Esther also was brought to Gai, who had custody of the women. ⁹The girl pleased him and won his favor, and he quickly provided her with ointments and her portion of food,^k as well as seven maids chosen from the palace; he treated her and her maids with special favor in the harem. ¹⁰Now Esther had not disclosed her people or country, for Mordecai had commanded her not to make it known. ¹¹And every day Mordecai walked in the courtyard of the harem, to see what would happen to Esther.

¹² Now the period after which a girl was to go to the king was twelve months. During this time the days of beautification are completed—six months while they are anointing themselves with oil of myrrh, and six months with spices and ointments for women. ¹³Then she goes in to the king; she is handed to the person appointed, and goes with him from the harem to the king's palace. ¹⁴In the evening she enters and in the morning she departs to the second harem, where Gai the king's eunuch is in charge of the women; and she does not go in to the king again unless she is summoned by name.

of Mordecai's father, to go in to the king, she neglected none of the things that Gai, the eunuch in charge of the women, had commanded. Now Esther found favor in the eyes of all who saw her. ¹⁶So Esther went in to King Artaxerxes in the twelfth month, which is Adar, in the seventh year of his reign. ¹⁷And the king loved Esther and she found favor beyond all the other virgins, so he put on her the queen's diadem. ¹⁸Then the king gave a banquet lasting seven days for all his Friends and the officers to celebrate his marriage to Esther; and he granted a remission of taxes to those who were under his rule.

The Plot Discovered

¹⁹ Meanwhile Mordecai was serving in the courtyard. ²⁰Esther had not disclosed her country—such were the instructions of Mordecai; but she was to fear God and keep his laws, just as she had done when she was with him. So Esther did not change her mode of life.

²¹ Now the king's eunuchs, who were chief bodyguards, were angry because of Mordecai's advancement, and they plotted to kill King Artaxerxes. ²²The matter became known to Mordecai, and he warned Esther, who in turn revealed the plot to the king. ²³He investigated the two eunuchs and hanged them. Then the king ordered a memorandum to be deposited in the royal library in praise of the goodwill shown by Mordecai.

Mordecai Refuses to Do Obeisance

3 After these events King Artaxerxes promoted Haman son of Hammedatha, a Bougean, advancing him and granting him precedence over all the king's Friends. ²So all who were at court used to do obeisance to Haman,^m for so the king had commanded to be done. Mordecai, however, did not do obeisance. ³Then the king's courtiers said to Mordecai, "Mordecai, why do you disobey the king's command?" ⁴Day after day they spoke to him, but he would not listen to them. Then they informed Haman that Mordecai was resisting the king's command. Mordecai had told them that he was a Jew. ⁵So when Haman learned that Mordecai was not doing obeisance to him, he became furiously angry, ⁶and plotted to destroy all the Jews under Artaxerxes' rule.

⁷ In the twelfth year of King Artaxerxes Hamanⁿ came to a decision by casting lots, taking the days and the months one by one, to fix on one day to destroy the whole race of Mordecai. The lot fell on the fourteenth^o day of the month of Adar.

⁸ Then Hamanⁿ said to King Artaxerxes, "There is a certain nation scattered among the other nations in all your kingdom; their laws are different from those of every other nation, and they do not keep the laws of the king. It is not expedient for the king to tolerate them. ⁹If it pleases the king, let it be decreed that they are to be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the king's treasury." ¹⁰So the king took off his signet ring and gave it to Haman to seal the decree^p that was to be written against the Jews. ¹¹The king told Haman, "Keep the money, and do whatever you want with that nation."

¹² So on the thirteenth day of the first month the king's secretaries were summoned, and in accordance with Haman's instructions they wrote in the name of King Artaxerxes to the magistrates and the governors in every province from India to Ethiopia. There were one hundred

This is a second plot, not a repetition of 12.1–6. 2.20 Unlike in the Hebrew, Mordecai's instructions to Esther include that she is to fear God and keep his laws (see 2.10; 14.17). 2.21–23 Mordecai's previous advancement sparks this plot by the chief bodyguards. 3.1–15 Mordecai's disobedience endangers the Jews. 3.1 The villain Haman was first met in 12.6, allied with those involved in the first plot against the king. 3.2–4 Mordecai's refusal is explained in his prayer in 13.12–13; later Jewish tradition said it was because Haman wore idols. 3.8–13 Just as the king did not earlier investigate the case of Vashti, so now he accepts Haman's presentation of the situation without inquiring into his charges.

The King's Letter

13^q This is a copy of the letter: "The Great King, Artaxerxes, writes the following to the governors of the hundred twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia and to the officials under them:

2 "Having become ruler of many nations and master of the whole world (not elated with presumption of authority but always acting reasonably and with kindness), I have determined to settle the lives of my subjects in lasting tranquility and, in order to make my kingdom peaceable and open to travel throughout all its extent, to restore the peace desired by all people.

3 "When I asked my counselors how this might be accomplished, Haman—who excels among us in sound judgment, and is distinguished for his unchanging goodwill and steadfast fidelity, and has attained the second place in the kingdom—⁴pointed out to us that among all the nations in the world there is scattered a certain hostile people, who have laws contrary to those of every nation and continually disregard the ordinances of kings, so that the unifying of the kingdom that we honorably intend cannot be brought about. ⁵We understand that this people, and it alone, stands constantly in opposition to every nation, perversely following a strange manner of life and laws, and is ill-disposed to our government, doing all the harm they can so that our kingdom may not attain stability.

6 "Therefore we have decreed that those indicated to you in the letters written by Haman, who is in charge of affairs and is our second father, shall all—wives and children included—be utterly destroyed by the swords of their enemies, without pity or restraint, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, of this present year, ⁷so that those who have long been hostile and remain so may in a single day go down in violence to Hades, and leave our government completely secure and untroubled hereafter."

END OF ADDITION B

3 ¹⁴Copies of the document were posted in every province, and all the nations were ordered to be prepared for that day. ¹⁵The matter was expedited also in Susa. And while the king and Haman caroused together, the city of Susa^r was thrown into confusion.

Mordecai Seeks Esther's Aid

4 When Mordecai learned of all that had been done, he tore his clothes, put on sackcloth, and sprinkled himself with ashes; then he rushed through the street of the city, shouting loudly: "An innocent nation is being destroyed!" ²He got as far as the king's gate, and there he stopped, because no one was allowed to enter the courtyard clothed in sackcloth and ashes. ³And in every province where the king's proclamation had been posted there was a loud cry of mourning and lamentation among the Jews, and they put on sackcloth and ashes. ⁴When the queen's^s maids and eunuchs came and told her, she was deeply troubled by what she heard had happened, and sent some clothes to Mordecai to put on instead of sackcloth; but he would not consent. ⁵Then Esther summoned Hachratheus, the eunuch who attended her, and ordered him to get accurate information for her from Mordecai.^t

⁷ So Mordecai told him what had happened and how Haman had promised to pay ten thousand talents into the royal treasury to bring about the destruction of the Jews. ⁸He also gave him a copy of what had been posted in Susa for their destruction, to show to Esther; and he told him to charge her to go in to the king and plead for his favor in behalf of the people. “Remember,” he said, “the days when you were an ordinary person, being brought up under my care—for Haman, who stands next to the king, has spoken against us and demands our death. Call upon the Lord; then speak to the king in our behalf, and save us from death.”

⁹ Hachratheus went in and told Esther all these things. ¹⁰And she said to him, “Go to Mordecai and say, ¹¹‘All nations of the empire know that if any man or woman goes to the king inside the inner court without being called, there is no escape for that person. Only the one to whom the king stretches out the golden scepter is safe—and it is now thirty days since I was called to go to the king.’”

¹² When Hachratheus delivered her entire message to Mordecai, ¹³Mordecai told him to go back and say to her, “Esther, do not say to yourself that you alone among all the Jews will escape alive. ¹⁴For if you keep quiet at such a time as this, help and protection will come to the Jews from another quarter, but you and your father’s family will perish. Yet, who knows whether it was not for such a time as this that you were made queen?” ¹⁵Then Esther gave the messenger this answer to take back to Mordecai: ¹⁶“Go and gather all the Jews who are in Susa and fast on my behalf; for three days and nights do not eat or drink, and my maids and I will also go without food. After that I will go to the king, contrary to the law, even if I must die.” ¹⁷So Mordecai went away and did what Esther had told him to do.

⁹ He said, “O Lord, Lord, you rule as King over all things, for the universe is in your power and there is no one who can oppose you when it is your will to save Israel, ¹⁰for you have made heaven and earth and every wonderful thing under heaven. ¹¹You are Lord of all, and there is no one who can resist you, the Lord. ¹²You know all things; you know, O Lord, that it was not in insolence or pride or for any love of glory that I did this, and refused to bow down to this proud Haman; ¹³for I would have been willing to kiss the soles of his feet to save Israel! ¹⁴But I did this so that I might not set human glory above the glory of God, and I will not bow down to anyone but you, who are my Lord; and I will not do these things in pride. ¹⁵And now, O Lord God and King, God of Abraham, spare your people; for the eyes of our foes are upon us^w to annihilate us, and they desire opens with praise of the deity as King, Creator, able to save Israel, one whom none can resist. 13.12–14 A confession of innocence follows in which Mordecai explains why he did not bow down to Haman. Esther's Prayer 14 Then Queen Esther, seized with deadly anxiety, fled to the Lord. ²She took off her splendid apparel and put on the garments of distress and mourning, and instead of costly perfumes she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she utterly humbled her body; every part that she loved to adorn she covered with her tangled hair. ³She prayed to the Lord God of Israel, and said: "O my Lord, you only are our king; help me, who am alone and have no helper but you, ⁴for my danger is in my hand. ⁵Ever since I was born I have heard in the tribe of my family that you, O Lord, took Israel out of all the nations, and our ancestors from among all their forebears, for an everlasting inheritance, and that you did for them all that you promised. ⁶And now we have sinned before you, and you have handed us over to our enemies ⁷because we glorified their gods. You are righteous, O Lord! ⁸And now they are not satisfied that we are in bitter slavery, but they have covenanted with their idols ⁹to abolish what your mouth has ordained, and to destroy your inheritance, to stop the mouths of those who praise you and to quench your altar and the glory of your house, ¹⁰to open the mouths of the nations for the praise of vain idols, and to magnify forever a mortal king.

Esther Is Received by the King

15 On the third day, when she ended her prayer, she took off the garments in which she had worshiped, and arrayed herself in splendid attire. ²Then, majestically adorned, after invoking the aid of the all-seeing God and Savior, she took two maids with her; ³on one she leaned gently for support, ⁴while the other followed, carrying her train. ⁵She was radiant with perfect beauty, and she looked happy, as if beloved, but her heart was frozen with fear. ⁶When she had gone through all the doors, she stood before the king. He was seated on his royal throne, clothed in the full array of his majesty, all covered with gold and precious stones. He was most terrifying.

⁷Lifting his face, flushed with splendor, he looked at her in fierce anger. The queen faltered, and turned pale and faint, and collapsed on the head of the maid who went in front of her. ⁸Then God changed the spirit of the king to gentleness, and in alarm he sprang from his throne and took her in his arms until she came to herself. He comforted her with soothing words, and said to her, ⁹"What is it, Esther? I am your husband.^y Take courage; ¹⁰You shall not die, for our law applies only to our subjects.^z Come near."

¹¹Then he raised the golden scepter and touched her neck with it; ¹²he embraced her, and said, "Speak to me."

¹³She said to him, "I saw you, my lord, like an angel of God, and my heart was shaken with fear at your glory. ¹⁴For you are wonderful, my lord, and your countenance is full of grace." ¹⁵And while she was speaking, she fainted and fell. ¹⁶Then the king was agitated, and all his servants tried to comfort her.

5^a ³The king said to her, "What do you wish, Esther? What is your request? It shall be given you, even to half of my kingdom." ⁴And Esther said, "Today is a special day for me. If it pleases the king, let him and Haman come to the dinner that I shall prepare today." ⁵Then the king said, "Bring Haman quickly, so that we may do as Esther desires." So they both came to the dinner that Esther had spoken about. ⁶While they were drinking wine, the king said to Esther, "What is it, Queen Esther? It shall be granted you." ⁷She said, "My petition and request is: ⁸if I have found favor in the sight of the king, let the king and Haman come to the dinner that I shall prepare them, and tomorrow I will do as I have done today."

Haman's Plot Against Mordecai

⁹So Haman went out from the king joyful and glad of heart. But when he saw Mordecai the Jew in the courtyard, he was filled with anger. ¹⁰Nevertheless, he went home and summoned his friends and his wife Zosara. ¹¹And he told them about his riches and the honor that the king had bestowed on him, and how he had advanced him to be the first in the kingdom.

^a In Greek, Chapter D replaces verses 1 and 2 in Hebrew.

15.1-5.8 Esther is received by the king. The Greek Esther presents this initial climax in a much more dramatic manner than the Hebrew, contrasting Esther's inner fear with her outer calm and radiance and her vulnerability with the terrifying splendor of the king. 15.7 In the face of the king's initial anger Esther's fainting need not be a clever act on her part to change his attitude (see v. 15). 15.8 God ... to gentleness. As earlier in the Greek form of the story, God is the ultimate mover of events and even the hearts of kings (cf. 11.12). 15.9-14 The king's willingness to accept and align Esther with himself provokes her laudatory praise of him, echoing what one might say of a deity. Cf. what she said in her prayer (14.10). Several times David is said to be "like an angel of God" (1 Sam 29.9; 2 Sam 14.17, 20; 19.27). 5.3-8 The motive for Esther's delay in requesting that her people be saved, even though she clearly has won royal favor, is not clear, but it heightens the tension and allows space for further complications.

5.9-14 Haman's plot against Mordecai. The apparent honor of being included in Esther's dinner clouds Haman's judgment, causing him to seek to hasten Mordecai's destruction and later to ¹²And Haman said, "The queen did not invite anyone to the dinner with the king except me; and I am invited again tomorrow. ¹³But these things give me no pleasure as long as I see Mordecai the Jew in the courtyard." ¹⁴His wife Zosara and his friends said to him, "Let a gallows be made, fifty cubits high, and in the morning tell the king to have Mordecai hanged on it. Then, go merrily with the king to the dinner." This advice pleased Haman, and so the gallows was prepared.

Mordecai's Reward from the King

6 That night the Lord took sleep from the king, so he gave orders to his secretary to bring the book of daily records, and to read to him. ²He found the words written about Mordecai, how he had told the king about the two royal eunuchs who were on guard and sought to lay hands on King Artaxerxes. ³The king said, "What honor or dignity did we bestow on Mordecai?" The king's servants said, "You have not done anything for him." ⁴While the king was inquiring about the goodwill shown by Mordecai, Haman was in the courtyard. The king asked, "Who is in the courtyard?" Now Haman had come to speak to the king about hanging Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared. ⁵The servants of the king answered, "Haman is standing in the courtyard." And the king said, "Summon him." ⁶Then the king said to Haman, "What shall I do for the person whom I wish to honor?" And Haman said to himself, "Whom would the king wish to honor more than me?" ⁷So he said to the king, "For a person whom the king wishes to honor, ⁸let the king's servants bring out the fine linen robe that the king has worn, and the horse on which the king rides, ⁹and let both be given to one of the king's honored friends, and let him robe the person whom the king loves and mount him on the horse, and let it be proclaimed through the open square of the city, saying, 'Thus shall it be done to everyone whom the king honors.'" ¹⁰Then the king said to Haman, "You have made an excellent suggestion! Do just as you have said for Mordecai the Jew, who is on duty in the courtyard. And let nothing be omitted from what you have proposed." ¹¹So Haman got the robe and the horse; he put the robe on Mordecai and made him ride through the open square of the city, proclaiming, "Thus shall it be done to everyone whom the king wishes to honor." ¹²Then Mordecai returned to the courtyard, and Haman hurried back to his house, mourning and with his head covered. ¹³Haman told his wife Zosara and his friends what had befallen him. His friends and his wife said to him, "If Mordecai is of the Jewish people, and you have begun to be humiliated before him, you will surely fall. You will not be able to defend yourself, because the living God is with him."

Haman at Esther's Banquet

¹⁴ While they were still talking, the eunuchs arrived and hurriedly brought Haman to the banquet that Esther had prepared. 7 ¹So the king and Haman went in to drink with the queen. ²And the second day, as they were drinking wine, the king said, "What is it, Queen Esther? What is your petition and what is your request? It shall be granted to you, even to half of my kingdom." ³She answered and said, "If I have found favor with the king, let my life be granted me at my petition, and my people at my request. ⁴For we have been sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, plundered, and made slaves—we and our children—male and female slaves. this thing?" ⁶Esther said, "Our enemy is this evil man Haman!" At this, Haman was terrified in the presence of the king and queen.

Punishment of Haman

7 The king rose from the banquet and went into the garden, and Haman began to beg for his life from the queen, for he saw that he was in serious trouble. ⁸When the king returned from the garden, Haman had thrown himself on the couch, pleading with the queen. The king said, "Will he dare even assault my wife in my own house?" Haman, when he heard, turned away his face. ⁹Then Bugathan, one of the eunuchs, said to the king, "Look, Haman has even prepared a gallows for Mordecai, who gave information of concern to the king; it is standing at Haman's house, a gallows fifty cubits high." So the king said, "Let Haman be hanged on that." ¹⁰So Haman was hanged on the gallows he had prepared for Mordecai. With that the anger of the king abated.

Royal Favor Shown the Jews

8 On that very day King Artaxerxes granted to Esther all the property of the persecutor^c Haman. Mordecai was summoned by the king, for Esther had told the king^d that he was related to her. ²The king took the ring that had been taken from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai; and Esther set Mordecai over everything that had been Haman's.

3 Then she spoke once again to the king and, falling at his feet, she asked him to avert all the evil that Haman had planned against the Jews. ⁴The king extended his golden scepter to Esther, and she rose and stood before the king. ⁵Esther said, "If it pleases you, and if I have found favor, let an order be sent rescinding the letters that Haman wrote and sent to destroy the Jews in your kingdom.

⁶How can I look on the ruin of my people? How can I be safe if my ancestral nation^e is destroyed?" ⁷The king said to Esther, "Now that I^f have granted all of Haman's property to you and have hanged him on a tree because he acted against the Jews, what else do you request? ⁸Write in my name what you think best and seal it with my ring; for whatever is written at the king's command and sealed with my ring cannot be contravened."

9 The secretaries were summoned on the twenty-third day of the first month, that is, Nisan, in the same year; and all that he commanded with respect to the Jews was given in writing to the administrators and governors of the provinces from India to Ethiopia, one hundred twenty-seven provinces, to each province in its own language. ¹⁰The edict was written^g with the king's authority and sealed with his ring, and sent out by couriers. ¹¹He ordered the Jews in every city to observe their own laws, to defend themselves, and to act as they wished against their opponents and enemies ¹²on a certain day, the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is Adar, throughout all the kingdom of Artaxerxes.

The Decree of Artaxerxes

16^h The following is a copy of this letter:

7.7-10 Punishment of Haman. 7.8 Ironically, Haman's intent is here misunderstood by the king. 7.9-10 Ironic reversal of intent and result continues as measure-for-measure justice is executed when Haman is hanged on the gallows he had prepared for Mordecai.

8.1-17 Royal favor shown the Jews. The reversals are completed as Mordecai assumes the position and estate of Haman, and, in language that recalls 3.12-14, a decree allowing the Jews to defend themselves counters the decree issued by Haman.

16.1-24 The decree of Artaxerxes (Addition E). The earlier decree lauded Haman and vilified the Jews; this decree reverses this characterization of each. 16.2-6 The decree opens of their benefactors, the more proud do they become,³ and not only seek to injure our subjects, but in their inability to stand prosperity, they even undertake to scheme against their own benefactors.⁴ They not only take away thankfulness from others, but, carried away by the boasts of those who know nothing of goodness, they even assume that they will escape the evil-hating justice of God, who always sees everything.⁵ And often many of those who are set in places of authority have been made in part responsible for the shedding of innocent blood, and have been involved in irremediable calamities, by the persuasion of friends who have been entrusted with the administration of public affairs,⁶ when these persons by the false trickery of their evil natures beguile the sincere goodwill of their sovereigns.

7 "What has been wickedly accomplished through the pestilent behavior of those who exercise authority unworthily can be seen, not so much from the more ancient records that we hand on, as from investigation of matters close at hand."⁸ In the future we will take care to render our kingdom quiet and peaceable for all,⁹ by changing our methods and always judging what comes before our eyes with more equitable consideration.¹⁰ For Haman son of Hammedatha, a Macedonian (really an alien to the Persian blood, and quite devoid of our kindliness), having become our guest,¹¹ enjoyed so fully the goodwill that we have for every nation that he was called our father and was continually bowed down to by all as the person second to the royal throne.¹² But, unable to restrain his arrogance, he undertook to deprive us of our kingdom and our life,^j ¹³ and with intricate craft and deceit asked for the destruction of Mordecai, our savior and perpetual benefactor, and of Esther, the blameless partner of our kingdom, together with their whole nation.¹⁴ He thought that by these methods he would catch us undefended and would transfer the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians.

15 "But we find that the Jews, who were consigned to annihilation by this thrice-accursed man, are not evildoers, but are governed by most righteous laws¹⁶ and are children of the living God, most high, most mighty,^k who has directed the kingdom both for us and for our ancestors in the most excellent order.

17 "You will therefore do well not to put in execution the letters sent by Haman son of Hammedatha,¹⁸ since he, the one who did these things, has been hanged at the gate of Susa with all his household—for God, who rules over all things, has speedily inflicted on him the punishment that he deserved.
